The Trial To-Morrow.

William Burk, who was recently arrested at Bound Brook, on the charge of assaulting Justice Brampton of that place, and who was indicted by the Somerset county grand jury at the present term of court has retained Lawyer W. A. Coddington of this city to defend him. The case is to come up to-morrow.

PLAINFIELD HAS A GHOST.

The Light-Weight Visitor "Appears" at a House in the Boulevard.

New Brunswick has had its ghost scare and now there is one in this city and some of the residents of West Third street are very much excited over the appearance of the spook.

A short time ago the family of Mr. James Day were alarmed by what they say was a ghost. Mrs. O'Flaherty, who reside on the same thoroughfare are now the victims of the scare. Mr. O'Flaherty says he was sitting in his house Saturday when he was greatly alarmed by seeing an apparition appear before him. His wife was sitting in the same room with him but she did not see the supposed ghost. Mr. O'Flaherty says he said nothing to his wife of what he say, thinking he had been mistaken.

Sunday evening they were both seated in the same room, when, they allege, a ghost, in the shape of a headless man passed through the apartment and disappeared. Both ran into the street, almost frightened to death. They would not sleep in the house that evening and a friend named Canfield gave them shelter for the night.

During the night Mrs. O'Flaherty became hysterical and she has not yet recovered from her fright. Monday morning Mr. O'Flaherty leased a house further up the thoroughfare and immediately transferred his household goods from the supposed haunted building. Persons of a superstitious nature are very much inclined to believe the house is "hoodooed."

Have You Your Share?

The secretary of the Treasury has prepared a pamphlet in regard to the volume of money in circulation. It shows that the amount in circulation July 1, 1865, was $714,705,000. Of this amount $689,702,995 was paper money. During the calendar year 1865 the average market price of gold was 157. So it required $157 in currency to purchase as much of commodities as could be purchased with $100 in gold. The $714,702,995 then in circulation was, therefore, equivalent as an average for the year to only $646,301,270 of the money which has constituted the currency of this country since January 1, 1879. This was an amount per capita of $18.36. The following is a recapitulation of the tables referred to:

1865	ex. $646.06	$18.85

COLD WATER MEN ALERT.

The Union County Prohibitionists will open the campaign this evening with a mass-meeting in Temperance Hall, Broad street, Elizabeth.

Speeches will be made by Theodore W. Burgen, of Cranford; Walter W. Winans, of Plainfield, and others.

The Prohibitionists have put Assembly candidates in the field in the various districts, and claim they will make a respectable showing at the next election.

Forgetful People.

During the storm Saturday evening Liberty street in the vicinity of the railroad bridge was flooded to the depth of several feet. A man who was under the influence of liquor, attempted to wade through, but he slipped and received a ducking. The police saw the mishap. The next morning the victim inquired of his wife how his clothing had become so wet.

A young girl, when she arrived at the miniature lake, sat down, took off her shoes and stockings, put them near a grocery store and waded through the water. She then went home forgetting to take her shoes with her and she did not recover them until the next morning.

"Janauschek" To-Night

The great artist, Janauschek, with a company of selected players will inaugurate the regular dramatic season at Music Hall this evening in her new play, "The Harvest Moon." Janauschek, who has always been a favorite in this city, will not appear in any other play this season. She has decided on this course on account of the great success that has attended this production wherever it has been presented.

C. L. S. C.

The Crescent avenue church C. L. S. C. will hold a preliminary meeting in the church parlors Saturday evening of this week. The Chatauqua course for 1891-'92 is essentially American, and hence the present is a most appropriate time to join the Circle. The officers of the Circle extend an invitation to any who may be interested to be present on Saturday evening.

NEW JERSEY FIREMEN.

The Convention at Atlantic City To-day.

The visiting firemen spent the morning yesterday mostly in parading about Atlantic City, and serenading. At ten o'clock the fourteenth annual convention of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association convened in the Grand Opera House, presided over by President Bird W. Spencer, Passaic. Almost all the delegates were present. Speeches of welcome were made by Mayor Hoffman and Chairman T. A. Byrnes, of the tournament committee. President Spencer responded. The rest of the morning was consumed in the appointment of committees and reading of reports.

Miss Florence Cuff of West Third street and Mr. Robert J. Terrill of New York, both colored, were married by the Rev. J. W. Mitchell Tuesday evening. After the ceremony a reception was tendered the happy couple at the bride's residence. Mr. and Mrs. Terrill left on the 1.17 a. m. train on their wedding tour to Washington, D. C. Mr. Terrill is studying for the ministry.

Mr. U. B. Crane's charming niece, Miss Cassie J. Williams, of Collinsville, Pa., was married to Mr. Clarence Kellogg of Mt. Pleasant, N. J., at her uncles residence, No. 66 East Second street, this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, by the groom's grandfather, Rev. Mr. Kellogg, of Mt. Pleasant. The numerous friends of the happy couple sent many beautiful presents. A wedding tour, to include the principal eastern cities, followed the ceremony.

I have recommended Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" to many in Shelton and Birmingham, and I have yet to find one who has not been benefited by it.—C. L. Seaver, Birmingham, Conn.—Adv.

THE MISHAP TO A COACHING CLUB.

The Four-in-Hand Club of Fanwood met with a serious accident at Rahway Tuesday. One woman was seriously if not fatally injured, while the entire party were badly frightened. A deep trench had been dug nearly across the street, leaving but a narrow passage for vehicles. The Four-in-Hand Club owns a handsome stage, built after original designs. It is high and long, with seats arranged along the sides. A top extends over all, supported by ash uprights. The stage-driver is a careful man, and the four horses are gentle, to which fact the party probably owe their lives.

As the driver attempted to pass through the narrow passage he was so intent on keeping his wheels out of the *trench that he failed to notice an elec*tric light pole, which hung over at the top from the weight of the wires and lamps, and without warning the top of the stage crashed into the pole, tearing away the supports of the top and careening the stage to one side. Several women were thrown out on the stone pavement, among them Mrs. George F. Carter, who, when assistance reached her, was found unconscious. She had fallen on her head, causing an ugly scalp wound, six inches in length. The injured were carried into Dr. Holmes' office, directly in front of which the accident occurred. Mrs. Carter was found to be injured on the back, and it was feared her thigh was dislocated. Miss Thomas escaped with some slight bruises.

The party consisted of L. E. Kennedy, of Miss Kennedy, Miss F. L. Tuzo, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Carter, L. Carter and daughter, Mrs. F. A. Van Dyke, Miss Thomas and Mrs. Cutler. They are members of the Fanwood club, and have made many trips during the Summer to various parts of the State. They were on their way yesterday to Boynton Beach, on Staten Island Sound. Fanwood is about eight miles from Rahway. In the afternoon Mrs. Carter was sufficiently improved to be removed to her home in an ambulance.

DURING SATURDAY'S STORM.

John Taylor Johnston's Greenhouse Struck by Lightning.

During the storm Saturday evening lightning struck the greenhouse on the property of ex-President John Taylor Johnston of the Central Railroad, and badly shattered the building. A number of the panes of glass were knocked out and it is reported that some of his most valuable plants were destroyed by the electric fluid. Mr. Johnston's beautiful home is situated on East Front street.

Salt Cures Diphtheria.

In nearly every paper one picks up he sees reports of local epidemics of diphtheria. This is a most malignant disease. Couple this with the fact that many of its victims are very young children who may not only refuse but resist the efforts of relief, and you have a reasonable explanation of the fearful mortality of the disease. When this trouble is known to prevail the very first symptoms—sore throat—should receive immediate attention. Call the doctor forthwith and pending his coming administer small quantities of common table salt every twenty minutes. The rational of this is simple. Diphtheria is caused by the lodging in the throat of the disease germ, technically and the diphtheretic microbe. This plant or animal as the fact may be, is killed by chlorine and this substance is produced readily, cheaply and pleasantly by using table salt as above noted. Try it, and stick to it, no matter what the doctor says, for the medicine man don't live who can gainsay the matters here set forth.—Exchange.

Laughing an Index of Character.

According to an ingenious French savant, persons who laugh with the sound of "a" in "father" are frank and loyal, fond of noise and movement, and free quantity of a versatile and changeable character. Those who laugh with the sound of "a" in "ape" are phlegmatic, with a turn toward melancholia. The laugh in "e" is that of children, and of those who are simple, pliant, timid and irresolute. The laugh in "o" signifies generosity and robust boldness. "Look out," says the French observer, "for those who laugh in 'u,' because they are the misanthropes."

The Reedy Case.

The case of John Reedy, who is charged with interfering with a Bound Brook marshal while the latter was making an arrest, is to be argued in the Somerset county courts to-morrow. Reedy, it will be remembered, was shot in the leg by the marshal. He was but recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital. Mr. Wm. A. Coddington of this city is defending him.

—In the 6,000,000 letters that reached the Dead Letter Office last year, there was money amounting to $26,862, and notes of the value of $1,471,971.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

CHIEF DOANE HONORED.

He is Elected a Member of the State Board of Engineers.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1st, (Special.)—Over thirty thousand people are here to-day, the occasion being the annual convention of the exempt firemen of the State. Gen. Bird W. Spencer was elected President of the Association for the fourteenth time. Chief T. O. Doane of this city was elected one of the Board of Engineers.

THE LARGEST YET.

The Inter-State Fair Crowded To-day.

TRENTON, Oct. 1st, (Special.)—The attendance at the Inter-State fair which is being held here to-day is the largest that was ever present at any fair in one day. Last year at Thursday noon 42,000 persons were in attendance. The attendance this year at that time far surpasses that number and there are still thirty-one trains to hear from.

Here is a Valuable Hint,

Now that the Board of Commissioners of Flemington has taken to the correction of certain evils in our town, such as abating fast driving on the streets, the abolishment of bicycles from the sidewalks, and the imposition of a license fee upon itinerant hucksters and showmen, auction men, etc., we have a suggestion to offer:

What sort of a scheme would it be to make the forty or fifty gaping young men who line the sidewalks in front of our churches every Sunday night either take out a license or else get out of that? It seems to us that such a course has wisdom to recommend it. Possibly no considerable sum of money would find its way into the town treasury by the levying of a tax upon these church-door idlers, for such fellows are usually as short of funds as they are of brains, but if the rule is adopted—pay or "git"—it is certain that the crowd would be dispersed, greatly to the relief of church goers.

Should the board conclude to act upon this practicable and worthy suggestion, let some wisdom be shown in, grading the licenses. The more privileges asked for by the applicant the higher should be the tax. Let us illustrate a little:

A license to allow a young man to stand on the curb and gape into the faces of the ladies passing out of the door, at per night; if he chews to squirt tobacco juice on the sidewalk and assume a fool's sickly smile upon his face, at an increase of $ dollars, to make silly remarks as the ladies pass by; 25 cents less than the amount it would cost to walk home with the lady, 75 cents each motion, or thirty days in the county jail —at the option of the mayor, to pollute the air and sicken the whole congregation by puffing cigarette smoke in their faces, all over the neighborhood.

This schedule is hastily written and it may be imperfect. It can be revised at trifling cost by the commissioners, who make no charge for it.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

"ITALY" FINDS IT HARD WORK.

Trying to Dig Through the Bridge.

The leader of the gang of Italians who are making a trench for the Water Company's pipe along Somerset street reached that portion of the road covering the bridge this morning, and started to continue the excavation at the usual depth.

It was "mucha-harda worka." Brick, cement, hard mortar and macadam were not easy to dig through, but he would probably have made a hole in it, but for the interference of the overseer who talked Hillingsworthy at him for awhile, and set him right.

How to Keep Vegetables.

An old farmer, who is well versed in storing away vegetables and fruit, gives this as the result of his experience. Before storing fruit, potatoes or other crops in the cellar, have it thoroughly cleaned, white-washed and put in the best condition, as the temperature, moisture and condition of the cellar largely affects the keeping. An excellent and cheap mode of disinfecting the cellar is to close tightly and burn sulphur therein, ventilating the cellar well after using the sulphur.

Mr. Douglass' Mishap.

Mr. W. J. Douglass of West Second street met with a painful accident Tuesday evening. He is employed as a bookkeeper in a flour and feed store on East Fourth street. After dark last evening he entered the building and came in contact with a truck used in carry bags of grain. He pushed it forward and it rebounded striking him in the left side right below the heart. He is still suffering from the effects of the blow.

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH

He Is There to Stay, Editor Cohen Says.

HIS CHILDREN MUST BE EDUCATED.

RALEIGH, Oct. 1.—In an address at the opening of the Southern exposition here at noon today, Octavus Cohen, editor of the Charleston World, said:

Nature has done much for the south; man has done but little. Instead of employing our remarkable advantage of soil and climate as steps to lead to the pinnacle of material progress, we have, I regret to say, simply made use of them to a sufficient extent to enable us to exist in scant comfort.

Right here in North Carolina, and next door, to my native state, South Carolina, to say nothing of the others, which are also greatly blessed, do you not know, and are you not willing to admit, that if New Englanders, with their feverish push and keen financial instincts, and it must, therefore, be of benefit.

You all know as well as I do that the argument advanced in nearly every southern state against the school tax is that you will be helping to educate the negro's children.

Of course you will; and why should you not, pray? The correct theory is that property should provide educational facilities, inasmuch as property finds its greatest protection and its best material value from, an enlightened populace.

Give all of your people in this state reasonably good common school education in the value of property before the close of this exposition would be almost startling. I think every one will admit the correctness of this statement.

A Negro Exodus a Great Calamity.

Now, if it be true, why should we desire to keep any portion of our population in ignorance?

I say to you now, my friends, in all earnestness and with a full appreciation of the importance of the statement, that the negro is with us to stay, and the sooner we come to a realization of that fact the better.

And further, I wish to express it as my honest conviction that if this were not so, the future of the south at large, especially for the next thirty or forty years, would appear to us as dark as midnight. Any great negro exodus means untold loss to our people.

Agriculture Almost Impossible.

The negro is docile and gives a better grade of field labor for a given amount of money than any other nationality. In many portions of the south, even in my own state, agriculture is next to impossible without the negro. He wants to live with us and continue to ride along with us and prosper, and prosper we must, or make it possible for him to do so. Climatically, this is his only proper home in North America, but we are fast approaching the Twentieth century, and we must not shut our eyes to the fact that no sentient being is now willing to have his children grow up without some education. Therefore, let us be ready to have it as well as your own children. Give lots of it to both of them and you will merit the "well done" of the civilized world, and your own offspring will receive the direct benefit of this liberal policy.

The Colored Man's Political Status.

On the other hand, the negro must bear in mind that his place in the political economy of the south is clearly defined.

He must not hope to rule here. He is incompetent to do so. He has once tried the experiment, and will himself admit that it was a terribly disastrous one for the south, coming, too, as it did, close upon the decade of the

LIVE POLITICAL NEWS.

Mr. Harrison's Alleged Gift to Fassett's Campaign Fund.

ANXIOUS TO CARRY NEW YORK.

One Newspaper Claims That the President Gave $5000 and Another Says the Alleged Contribution Was $25,000 and That Halford Delivered the Check.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Advertiser and The Sun both state that Secretary Halford who visited the Republican campaign headquarters last Saturday, was the bearer of a contribution from the president to the campaign fund. The amount donated was $5,000 according to The Advertiser and $500 according to The Sun.

Anxious About New York.

Mr. Halford informed Executive Chairman Husted that the president believed that it was absolutely necessary that the Republicans should carry the state this fall.

An Alleged Circular Issued.

The Sun also alleges that the following circular, signed by James W. Wadsworth, treasurer of the Republican state committee, has been sent to various federal employes:

NEW YORK, Sept. 28, 1891.

DEAR SIR—The Republican state committee respectfully invites from you such contribution as you may be willing to make toward defraying the legitimate and necessary expenses of the important campaign now in progress in this state.

The clear and explicit platform unanimously adopted at Rochester, and the worthy and unexceptionable candidates placed in nomination fairly represent all that is sound and good in the political life of our state, and, it may be confidently assumed, meet the cordial approval of the 700,000 Republicans of the state of New York.

When the beneficent policy established by the result of the great national contest of 1888 shall be supplemented by the restoration to power of the Republican party in this state, and by the triumph of the reforms for which it has so persistently labored, intelligent and patriotic citizens will find ample reward for all their energies in that behalf. To this ends a united and harmonious party is bending its energies. A full vote will insure success, and we invoke such material aid as will enable this committee to conduct the campaign throughout the state in a manner to secure the attendance at the polls on Nov. 3 of the vast body of Republican electors.

Checks may be drawn to the order of the Treasurer of the Republican state committee and transmitted in the inclosed envelope addressed to James W. Wadsworth, treasurer, Fifth Avenue hotel, New York. Very truly yours, J. W. WADSWORTH, Treasurer.

P. S. We venture to request that you will also write us your views of the political situation in your locality and such suggestions as you may be pleased to make as to the needed measures to insure success in the pending campaign.

Democratic Clubs Meet.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—The Democratic state club convention here placed T. J. Maloney in the chair. The first speaker was devoted to a grilling of John Bardsley, blaming the condition of affairs upon the Republican system in Pennsylvania.

The report of the committee on resolutions indorsed candidates Tilden and Wright, scored the Republican party and eulogized Governor Pattison for calling an extra session of the legislature.

The death of Hon. W. L. Scott was deplored. The committee on permanent organization named Chauncey F. Black for president, W. J. Brennan, S. S. Huff, W. T. Sheppard, C. R. Robinson, J. A. Wood, vice presidents, J. D. Worman secretary, and E. F. Kline treasurer. The executive committee consists of eighteen persons. Scranton was decided upon as the place for holding the next meeting and the convention adjourned.

Today the delegates are passing the time in a boat excursion on the Ohio and Monongahela rivers.

Flower and Sheehan Received.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Manhattan club tendered a reception to Roswell P. Flower and William F. Sheehan, respectively candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, last night. Many of the most prominent Democrats in the vicinity were in attendance. Resolutions indorsing the principles affirmed in the Democratic platform and pledging hearty support to the Democratic nominees were adopted, after which Mr. Flower and Mr. Sheehan shook hands with friends and others in the parlor of the club.

Fassett at Malone.

MALONE, N. Y., Oct. 1.—After stops at Madrid, Norwood, Winthrop and North Lawrence, Mr. Fassett, the Republican candidate for governor, arrived here with candidates for lieutenant governor, Woodsam, Senator George Z. Erwin and Hon. Archibald Baxter. Mr. Fassett denounced Governor Hill, who he said was not content with running this state, but he had taken upon himself the powers of the supreme court of Connecticut and pardoned criminals.

Want Harrity to Succeed Scott.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 1.—There is a strong movement in this city in the direction of securing the appointment of William F. Harrity to the place on the Democratic national committee made vacant by the death of William L. Scott. A meeting of leading Democrats was held last night at which it was resolved to recommend Mr. Harrity's selection.

A Senatorial Deadlock.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Republican senatorial convention for the twenty-third district met here. The candidates are Titus Sheard, John F. Smith and David Foster Wilcox. There were 154 informal ballots taken, the respective candidates receiving six votes apiece on each. A recess was then taken.

Mr. Lodge Writes a Letter.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—Henry Cabot Lodge has written the Democratic state committee that he trusts Governor Russell and himself will meet in joint debate Oct. 23.

Tried to Drown His Sweetheart.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 1.—Maggie Carroll, a beautiful young girl, lies at the Emergency hospital hovering between life and death. While out rowing last night with William Wyncoop, who has been keeping her company for a year, Wyncoop threw her overboard because she said another young man was "very nice." She was rescued by a yachting party. Wyncoop was arrested.

To Mark the Rebellion's High Tide.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Oct. 1.—Colonel Bachelder, government historian of the battle, is here to superintend the erection of the tablet at the copse of trees on Cemetery Ridge, which has been designed to mark the "high tide" of the rebellion. The dedication will take place this fall.

PENNSYLVANIA BANKS FAIL.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Oct. 1.—The First National bank of Clearfield, of which William H. Dill is president, has closed its doors. President Dill says: "An unprecedented run on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday on the First National bank of Clearfield, amounting to nearly $40,000, made it impossible to continue business, and therefore the bank suspends payment."

A continuous run has been made on the bank since last December, occasioned by the failure of A. Reynton, formerly vice president of the bank, sold his stock. As a brother-in-law of the president this, of course, created distrust and caused the run. It is thought that the depositors will get dollar for dollar.

The Crash at Houtsdale.

HOUTZDALE, Pa., Oct. 1.—The Houtsdale bank has closed its doors. W. H. Dill, of Clearfield, owned the bank and was its president, with John B. McGrath, of Houtzdale, cashier. W. H. Dill is also president of the First National bank of Clearfield, Pa., which has failed. Individual deposits range from $13,000 down, while many secret and beneficial associations, the borough and township treasurers were depositors in various sums aggregating many thousands of dollars. The savings of Hungarian and Swedish miners that are locked up in the bank aggregate $70,000. Deposits were received as late as the morning of the failure. The excitement is intense, and were it believed that any considerable amount of money were in the bank nothing could prevent the excited Slavs from breaking in its doors.

Each Claims Her as His Wife.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Oct. 1.—Frank Van Horn, of East Bangor, Pa., came to Hoboken a few days ago and said his wife had eloped with Joseph Bidden, a boarder, taking $600 and some furniture. Bidden was arrested. He claims the woman is his wife.

The C. H. Northam Aground.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The big sidewheel sound steamer C. H. Northam, which left this city for New Haven yesterday afternoon, was reported late last night to be high on Black Rock in the sound, a short distance below College Point.

PRESENCE OF MIND IN THE HOME.

Presence of mind is never more essential than in the home. Small catastrophes which may lead to most grievous results are frequent. Given a cool head and a deft hand and all is well, but the woman or the girl or the woman who expends her energies by screaming over slight mishaps may easily bring on dire disaster from slight causes. In case of fire it is especially necessary to have some one about who is possessed of a cool head and is capable of acting promptly and wisely.

The most convenient and ready way in which to put out a small fire is to smother it in any thick woolen article which may be at hand. Lace curtains and light wrapping are quite liable to catch fire from gas jets, when the latter are unprotected by shades, and for that reason a gas jet near a curtain should always have a shade over it, as the slightest gust of wind may blow the inflammable material against the light, when it will instantly break into a blaze. In such cases the only thing to do is to tear down the curtain without the least delay and smother it with any woolen material at hand.

It is useless to specify or multiply instances, for each case is an emergency of its own and brings its own difficulties, which only coolness and promptness can solve. Where there has been but a slight fire there frequently are serious burns on the person, and to the treatment of these it is well to pay attention, for prompt action is of the greatest necessity.

Where there has been a serious case of burning, the absence of pain often is a serious one, as a bad sign, as it shows that the nerves have been seriously shocked. Severe pain on the other side is not always an indication of a dangerous case. Where a burn appears to be serious a physician should be summoned at once. In the meantime an external remedy which shall subdue the air should be used.

Wet a piece of old linen with equal parts of lime water and olive oil, shaken well together, and apply it to the injured part, covering it with a layer of cotton wadding. Where lime water and oil are not at hand, a layer of dry flour or of olive oil alone may be applied. An application of equal parts of hot water and milk with a little bicarbonate of soda in it is another preparation recommended. If you have nothing else at hand, use warm water applied on a linen rag and covered with another rag or with cotton wadding. The use of stimulants to support the system of a person suffering from a severe burn is essential.

In case of burns from alkalies, lime or potash, weak vinegar or diluted acid will frequently soothe the suffering. In case of burns from strong acids, like oil of vitriol, carbonate of soda and water or lime water should at once be applied, or often a thick mixture of soda and water. After this olive oil may be used. It is a good plan to keep lime water always on hand in case of slight burns, such as are received in work about the premises.—New York Tribune.

The Garden Hose.

It is the woman who sets about unpacking the mosquito net who accurately takes upon herself the heavy burdens, and very often life burdens, whose lives prove so pathetic that even angels must weep over their end and over their sorrow. Misfortune per se is the head of the family. The sole shield and comforter may be found with children, daughter, daughter-in-law, aunt, stands in the breach. She is a tradition, a general, a committee of ways and means, a commissioner and sympathizer all in one.

Death does not disarm the woman who bears the burden of the family; she forthwith herself shows and pursues her path sensibly, without making a sign. Disgrace that is her household worse than death may crush her in secret—outwardly she wears and bears the burden of a family in as composed and contented a manner as though her head had not bled in the very bitterness of hopelessness. The old are honored, she deals plainly with them, while the babies find their most confident. Knowing why they cry are cared for with the consideration only angels could feel. The motherless ones—what they owe to her household—are not overlooked, for there may be pastes, sparts, plays, new carts, marrying and giving in marriage, but none of these are for the family. Hers is the sister's place. She looks to the welfare and personal comfort of elder and younger brothers, and the latter she charges conscientiously the duties sweetly assumed by a mother.

On her shoulders all burdens fall. God only knows why. If is not because she is strong, for she is frail in body. But the accumulation is borne uncomplainingly, until at last life can bear no more. Then, when the woman's hands are folded in eternal peace and rest, it dawns upon all who should have assisted her that she has been overlooked, that there have been, moreover lies, the one that bore the burdens of the family.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Jenny Lind.

Jenny Lind, the woman, was greater than Jenny Lind, the singer. "I would rather hear Jenny talk than sing—wonderful as it is," wrote Mrs. Stanley, the wife of the bishop of Norwich, in whose palace the great singer was a guest while in that city. The bishop's son, subsequently Dean Stanley, who had no "ear for music," and of whom, therefore, her singing was wholly lost, wrote that she had "the manners of a princess with the simplicity of a child and the goodness of an angel." Her character showed itself, he added, "through a thousand traits of humility, gentleness, thoughtfulness, wisdom, piety."

She looked upon her natural faculty as a gift of God, and never sang without reflecting that it might be for the last time.

This feeling was no fine sentiment, but a religious principle. While she was the bishop's guest she begged Mrs. Stanley to allow her to take three of the maids to a concert where she was to sing.

At a service in the cathedral she was moved to tears by the singing of the boy choristers, and had places reserved for them at her concert the next morning. When she came on the platform she greeted them with a smile of recognition which the boys never forgot.

She gave to charitable objects thousands of pounds gained by her wonderful voice. While singing in Copenhagen, such was the excitement that night and hours around her to give them one silver day of mine. A gentleman of musical enthusiasm, with a wife and family of children, parted one day with only a sovereign to support him and his. When she came to his ear, on a sick bed, Jenny Lind heard of his desire, and found time to go to his house and sing to him and his wife.

When she went to London Mendelssohn asked her to sing to a friend of his who had long lain upon a bed of sickness. She went and showed by her words, the remembrance of which are still cherished by the family.

Again and again, when the opportunity offered for such an act of kindness, she sang to invalids who could not be present at her concerts. The gift of God within her was a trust to be administered for the good of others.—Youth's Companion.

Sterilized Milk for the Baby.

Nearly every physician now advises the use of sterilized milk when the child is not fed from the breast. A sterilizer costs little money, and the printed directions are too plain to be lost sight of, but it is not enough to give the food to the child in the right way.

A new born baby will need to be fed from one to three days, or even to two hours, except when sleeping. A measure recommended for an infant is five-drachs barley water and one-third milk, with a little bit of milk sugar to sweeten the whole. The barley water must be boiled well and then kept simmering at the back of the stove. The reason need for it should be of the best kind ground, and cannot serve for any other purpose.

The simplest way is to sterilize enough bottles of milk to last one entire day and keep them on ice until they are needed. A bottle must never be opened until it is to be used, then put in into warm water to bring it to the right temperature and add the barley water and sugar.

Borax may be added to the boiling water in which baby's bottles are cleaned, and the bottles should be in hot water until they are thoroughly cleansed. If any bowel trouble arises prepared oatmeal may be substituted for the barley. When the child is a few months old it may be necessary to add a teaspoonful of cream to each bottle of milk. A quart of cream will be sufficient for a week, and it must of course be sterilized immediately. It is then mixed with the milk each day and sterilized a second time. When the child is six months old two-thirds milk and one-third barley water is a better proportion, and when older yet nothing but milk will be taken.—New York Recorder

Do All Housekeepers Agree?

The old saying, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well," is taken altogether too literally by some of the famous housekeepers. "Teach women to slight their work" is a rule which might be as aptly applied as the former one, especially when women are built to last 100 years and die at forty as a result of too much stove blacking, fine laundrying, etc. What is the use, because one is a housekeeper, of forgetting the outside world and spending all of the time polishing kitchen aprons which would be just as well unstarched, of rolling out cookies when the hungry children would relish it as well if the batter were laid in a loaf?

How many ambitious housekeepers are up Monday mornings at 5 and 6 o'clock in the morning in order to have their wash ing on the line before daylight. In the first place it is only a matter of custom that washing happens on Monday. Because our ancestors always washed Monday is no more reason that we should than that we should wash our eyes every morning. The dirt comes off the eyes quite as readily during the day. On Sunday the eyes usually become more or less scattered about, and so Monday is invariably the day for straightening out and washing up for work on Tuesday.

Then the work may be divided up for the rest of the week proportionately, and by the end of the week the work is done and the week has only one or one busy housekeeper, perhaps it is a fact, but I think there is too much obstinacy shown in clinging to old fashioned notions of house work.—Cor. Louisville Journal.

Training Children.

Disorder in a child is inherent. It is just as natural for a boy when he comes into the house to throw his hat on one chair and his coat on another as it is for him to eat when he is hungry. The only way to get him out of this bad habit is to make him stop whatever he is doing, when the misdemeanor is discovered, and pick up the hat and coat and put them in place. He will not like to perform the duty when he comes in.

Girls are quite as disorderly as boys, but being more continually under the eye of the mother they are more quickly trained into thoughtful ways. The habit of taking care of things should early be instilled in children. It has a good effect upon the mind.

One often hears an indolent individual say: "Oh, don't bother the child. Let her have her own way." Let her have it! Such a method carried out is completely wrong, for it gives the child so much suffering later in life. Self control, trained early, smooths over many difficulties.

There is no more serious work in the world than that of training children. All mothers do not LOVE the job. There was a time when the birch rod did the work. Now it is seldom resorted to. Patience and loving kindness are more effective weapons. As for the former, there should be no end of it; the latter comes naturally.—Chicago Herald.

Weakness of the Stomach.

Weak digestive organs are best treated mechanically. The patient lies down on a cot or bed and an attendant works over the stomach by kneading and percussion, particularly the latter for twenty minutes, with intervals of rest as may be agreeable. The clothing is removed excepting one garment, if there is soreness or tenderness the operator adapts his treatment to it so as not to give pain. It is better that part of the time the muscles over the abdomen be relaxed and then contracted when the percussion is applied.

The lungs may be partly filled and the breath held during a moment also. The treatment is very agreeable when rightly done, digestion is promoted and the strength of the organs augmented. The best time is about two or three hours after meal time. If the patient has no one to assist him he can do the work himself with nearly as good results.—Exchange.

Where the Most Kid Gloves Are Sold.

New York city is considered the best market for kid gloves in the world. London, Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago women buy gloves by the million dozen in a year, but they are not all kid. A very little Broadway shop boasts the sale of 100,000 pairs of suede gloves in a year, and a big Sixth avenue dry goods house disposes of 40,000 dozen "kids" during the spring and fall.—New York World.

HISTRIONIC REFLECTIONS.

In other plays than "Hamlet," "To be or not to be" often depends on the ghost walking.

A Few Rules for Mothers.

It would seem that there are no rules to be laid down for the discipline of children. One must study their children, and take their heaven given tact for a guide, sacrificing no principles, yielding to no artifice to obtain their ends, but always remembering that we are dealing with small editions of ourselves, frail as we were and are frail, and that while we may bring improved methods to bear upon the minds of the children even there may be, and probably are, large sized beams in our own. "Children are quickly spoiled by harshness as by overmuch petting," says Miss Mulock, and it is true. Avoid nagging children. Be as blind as possible to their little faults.

Never hold one child's virtues up to another child as a contrast to her own faults.

And be patient and long suffering always. —L. E. Chittenden in Ladies' Home Journal.

Excellent Toast for Invalids.

The usual slice of toast, brown on each side and soft in the middle, healthful enough for those who have strong digestion, may be much improved for dyspeptics and delicate persons by having slices of bread in the oven until a delicate even brown. In this twice baked bread, which is the German way of making toast, the bread is thoroughly partly digested, as the starch in the flour is by the heat changed into dextrine.

Stale bread used in this way may be put away without danger of molding and used at any time for milk toast, or cut into small squares for eating with soup.—New York Post.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The special offer at Edsall's to give dress linings free of charge with each dress pattern sold, will close on next Saturday night.

—A number of small boys enjoyed themselves last evening by setting off large packages of red fire. Their antics attracted a large number of people.

—The bowling alleys and billiard parlors will be reopened for the season to-night at the Elkwood. The alleys have been put in perfect condition as well as the pool and billiard tables.

—A team of horses belonging to a farmer ran away on West Front street this morning. The frightened animals broke loose from the wagon to which they were attached. One was caught near Laing's Hotel and the other near Boehm's dry goods store.

—As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday one of the Water Company's mains on Front street, near Peace, bursted. While men were engaged repairing it, it was necessary to open one of the hydrants, thereby flooding the gutters along Front and Somerset streets. The water is cool and clear.

—Januaschek was warmly received by a large audience at Music Hall last evening. "The Harvest Moon" enabled the show to speak accumulated rows have not in the least affected her great ability as an actress. The music, under the leadership of Prof. Guttman was also very good.

—The Somerset County Democratic Convention is to be held in the Court House in Somerville Monday, October 12th at 10 o'clock a. m. North Plainfield is entitled to five delegates. The North Plainfield primary will be held Friday evening next at eight o'clock in the basement of the school house.

—A peach grower, near Flemington exchange, bought some drugs at one of our druggists a few days since and tendered a check for eighty-five cents in payment for the same. As the clerk gave him a few cents change the farmer exclaimed, "That check was the receipt for fifty baskets of nice peaches."—Westfield Leader.

—One of the prominent members of the Fraternal Circle of this city requested us to contradict the statement published in the New York Tribune and re-published in THE NEWS to the effect that the Plainfield Circle was connected with the Baltimore Circle. It is independent, he said, and that the Plainfield Circle is on a solid basis as the members are assessed according to liabilities. A number of prominent Plainfield people are members of the local Circle.

"Gep" Got $50.

Mr. Gershom Frazee, the well-known Plainfielder, was last evening presented with $50, by the New York State Repub. lican Committee, for composing the best campaign song for the New York Republicans. The presentation was made at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. We clip the following verses from a leading New York paper:

Hurrah for Sloat Fassett!
He's honest and bright, too.
He is up for Governor.
And we are bound to put him through.
He will make the Tammany Tigers dance
To a tune they never knew!
And make them pull their colors down
With faces rather blue.

CHO.

Turn on the Fassett,
Swash old Tammany out!
Turn on the Fassett,
And drown the Tigers out.
Fassett will be Governor.
He knows he's about.
He will turn on the Fassett
And turn the rascals out.

Turn on the Fassett, let purity now flow.
Some like cold water,
Some lager beer, you know.
If up your pipes boys,
Drink boys, drink your fill.
Work and vote Fassett,
And do it with a will.

CHO.

Our Chauncey, he is with us.
He is to the fore.
His voice will ring like Clarion notes
From Lake Erie to the Atlantic shore.
Shout and sing for Fassett,
His name ever and ever
Work and vote for Fassett
As you never worked before.

JEWISH NEW YEAR.

It Commences This Evening. How It is Observed.

This evening ushers into existence the beginning of the year 5652, according to the Mossic Faith. It is customary to observe its entrance by a feast of two days, which is called Rosh Hashanna or the New Year. It falls on the 1st and 2d day of Tishrue, which according to the Jewish calendar is the seventh month of the Mosaic year, and ever since the time of Moses has been strictly observed as days of solemn worship and a total abstinence from all servile labor.

The Feast begins the evening preceding the first day of Tishrue, by Divine services in the Synagogue and fasting until the close of the morning services the next day. The services in the morning are called Shahrue and Musaaph and consists of the regular prayers and psalms of the Sabbath and a reading from the five books of Moses, appropriate for the day. The afternoon services are called Minehah and Marove. The same services are repeated the second day.

In ancient times these days were observed by bringing wheat and offering sacrifices in the temples.

The first day of Rosh Hashanna is also the beginning of the ten days of penitance, which culminates in the great fast day—the day of atonement. All Hebrews are commanded to repent of their sins and turn over a new leaf for the new year.

The Israelites of this city will hold services in their synagogue and will strictly observe the Mossic law.

A Few Corrections.

The New York Herald of yesterday published an article in reference to a suit brought against John and Charles K. Moore for a $15,000 interest in the Jumel estate. Col. C. K. Moore said to a reporter yesterday about the matter as follows:

"John Moore, my brother, never resided at Fanwood, but I do. John Moore was not sued by Stephen M. Chester, but I was. The suit is not for fifteen thousand dollars, but for the assigned interest in the estate. There was no $1,450 loan as the assignment was absolute and purchased. The suit was not brought into the United States Supreme Court as Mr. Chesterton was taken there by me. Mr. Clarke of the firm of Clarke & Culver did not show a reporter the original documents. The Moore's did not pay $5,250 of liens. Well the article is so farcical, in fact I do not deem it worthy of an answer."

"Oh! by the way. The Press published the article last night as original and did not think it worth while to correct the above-mentioned errors."

Woodruff Wins the Pigeon Shoot.

A pigeon shoot for $25 a side took place yesterday afternoon on the Elizabeth Gun Club grounds between William Dackerman and Aaron Woodruff, two crack shots of the club. The conditions were that both men should shoot at fifteen birds each, 21 yards rise, 30 yards boundary, Hackingham rules, either or both barrels to be used. Woodruff won by two birds, killing eleven to Dackerman's nine. A number of local sports from this city and vicinity witnessed the "shoot."

An Accident at the Depot.

Travel was delayed on the Central Railroad for about half an hour last evening. The 8:08 train pulled into the depot, but when it started to leave it was unable to do so. An examination of the machinery revealed the fact that the eccentric strap had been broken and before the train could move it was necessary to remove the broken piece of steel. Several trains were delayed by the accident.

Too Much Work.

For the past year the Potter Printing Press Works have had such a surplus of work that the works were run nights as well as day in order to fill all orders as promptly as possible. The foundrymen were unable to get the work out fast enough to employ the night "gang" of machinists, and in consequence thereof until further notice the shop will not run nights.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. E. E. Dorman and family of Central avenue left yesterday for a month's stay at Chicago.

Mr. A. S. Daly of North avenue has returned to his home from a pleasant stay at Pasque Island.

Mr. W. A. Lord and family are again at their Netherwood home from their usual Summer outing.

Mr. Warren R. Clark, aged 58 years, a prominent resident of Piscataway, died suddenly at his residence there to-day.

Mr. Lawrence Myers and family returned to their West Front street home yesterday from an extended stay at Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Lawrence O'Reilly, formerly of this city but now of Denver, Col., is visiting her brother-in-law, Mr. Eugene A. Laing, of East Second street.

There will be a praise service at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening. Mrs. Ass Collier, the popular vocalist will sing in place of Miss Fellows, who is ill.

Mr. J. Blunt Bacon, a well-known resident of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, died last night after a protracted illness. He was in the forty-fourth year of his age.

Mr. G. F. Ely and family, who have been occupying Mr. Stephen Cahoone's residence on Broadway during the past Summer, returned to their home in New York yesterday.

Mr. Henry VanNane and Miss F. Adelle Weeks both of this city were united in marriage yesterday afternoon by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor of the Trinity Reformed church.

Miss Carrie, daughter of Mr. William Rose, entertained a number of her friends at a birthday party at her home on East Second street last evening. An enjoyable evening was spent.

Mr. William B. Earl and Miss Hattie Barnett both of Summit were married yesterday by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, at the parsonage in this city.

Mr. M. M. Dunham, the insurance and real estate agent, has sold the property belonging to the estate of the late W. L. Jones to Dr. Endicott. The property is situated at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh streets.

Mr. E. B. Clark of Waynewood Park has recently erected two handsome dwellings on his property. Waynewood Park is situated on West Front street and is so named in honor of the brave General Wayne, who was the cousin of Mr. Clark's grandmother.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cadmus have returned to their home in North Plainfield. They have been Summering at Mt. Tabor. During their stay there Mr. Cadmus lost the top of one of his index fingers while hunting by the premature discharge of a gun which he was carrying.

Julian Scott, among the great American artists, returned to his home in this city last evening on the 11:28 train after a two months' stay in Arizona, where he went in the interest of the Government. The Colonel appears to be in the best of health and his face is as brown as an English walnut.

Yesterday the clergymen of Elizabeth held an adjourned meeting to discuss the question of inviting Rev. B. Fay Mills, the great revivalist, to visit this city for three weeks' services. The matter has been under consideration some time, and it is the expectation that Mr. Mills can give dates in April next. The result of the meeting yesterday was the passage of a resolution extending the invitation.

Base Ball Notes.

[From the Westfield Leader.]

It is hoped that the Crescents will be prevailed upon to give our boys another game or two as players, if not as an organization. We are not satisfied yet.

The championship question is course left undecided. No one of the clubs has beaten the Crescents in the other two, and therefore no one club can be said to be entitled to assume the championship of the State. The Crescents have beaten the Westfields, but tied only with the West Ends; the West Ends have tied with both the Westfields and the Crescents; and the Westfields while losing to the Crescents have tied with the West Ends.

The Crescents and the West Ends did not play off their tie on Saturday and for the reason known, if report is to be believed, beats wholly with the Crescents. At the last moment they interposed a lot of conditions unworthy either of themselves or of their antagonists. The idea of asking a team to play for one-eighth of the gate receipts, or finally to come up and play for nothing! They felt probably that any further monkeying of the ball was rather out of a business, and being ahead with the Westfields and even with the Somerville, they did not choose to any chances. Perhaps their caution is to be commended, but it does not give outsiders a very exalted idea of the confidence they have in their own prowess.

SUCH IS FAME.

What a Blow to Vanity.

"Great Scott! wife, Boulanger's committed suicide," said a Plainfield business man as he laid down his NEWS at the tea-table.

"What! Boulanger of Fifth street" said his son. "Wonder what he did it for?" "What y' laughin' at?"

Wheelmen Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday with the clerk of Union county by the Westfield Wheelmen. The incorporators are Dr. Fred. A. Kinch, Rufus B. Whitehead, John Gluck, and Charles H. Darsch, the trustees of the club.

FIREMEN IN ATLANTIC CITY.

Twenty-Nine Companies at the Grand Tournament.

For a Fire Department of 120 active members the Atlantic City organization is, for its size, one of the best in the State. Last evening the whole Department, under Chief Engineer Jacob Young and Marshal John E. Mehrer, gave a public parade independent of the visitors. Atlantic avenue was crowded with people. The display of fireworks all along the route was beautiful.

There were four steamers. Daniel S. Wherly, foreman of United States Engine Company, No. 1, headed the line; third followed Atlantic City Fire Company, George Chaire, foreman; Neptune Hose, Joseph C. Clements, foreman; Good Will Hook and Ladder, No. 1, S. F. Lillig, foreman.

The hose-chart race was won by the Alfred Hose Company, of Cohoes (#200). Much dissatisfaction was expressed over the appearance of the runners in athletic tights—a suit never worn by a fireman. It was the general expression of the delegates from every section of the State that it was about time professional runners were ruled out of all contesting races. The Cohoes boys, it is said, have made it a business to enter all such races and have for the past few years taken home many prizes.

In this race Continental Hose of Danville, Pa., Wallace Hose, of Wallingford, Conn., and Water Witch Hook and Ladder company, refused to run.

The Hook and Ladder race was also won by Leroy Hose runners, but they were forced to put on their uniform, or street dress. This was for a purse of $100.

A large number of companies arrived yesterday to take part in the grand parade, among them the Hope Engine Company of Harrisburg, Pa., which is a well-drilled company.

There are twenty-nine visiting companies from the several States. They were to-day in line. Among the many guests are John J. Gardiner, State Senator; Mayor Simon Kelly, of Weehawken chief of the Weehawkin Fire Department; Abraham Hull, Superintendent of the entire Fire Insurance Patrol of New York city; Chief I. D. Applegate, Jr., of Hoboken; Chief John Sykes, of South Amboy, and Chief Frank Tantum, of Ocean Grove. At the banquet given the delegates last evening in Morris Guards Hall over six hundred sat down, presided over by T. A. Byrnes, chairman of the committee. Addresses were made by Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic; Harry H. Poston, of Atlantic City; M. A. Pickering, John Toley and others.

Last evening open air concerts were given in front of every engine-house in the city from 9 o'clock until midnight, while the members of the several companies kept open house. Not less than fifty thousand persons lined the streets to witness the parade.

The New Jersey State Firemen's Association elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic; Vice Presidents, David S. Stetson, of Merchantville; R. M. Morrell, of Palmyra; J. W. Hulz, of Freehold; C. H. Van Sciver, of Lambertville; Robert Sneider, of West Hoboken, and Hugh Kirman, of Hoboken; Chief Engineers, J. O. Applegate, of Hoboken, and T. O. Doane, of Plainfield; Treasurer, John W. Kiernan, of Paterson; Recording Secretary, H. W. Brown, of Newark; Financial Secretary, George F. Everett, of Hackettstown; Sergeant-at-Arms, Chief Lambert, of Dover.

A DANGEROUS SPORT.

W. A. Cadwell, a student of Lehigh University, at Bethlehem, Pa., was so seriously injured in a cane rush on Saturday that he cannot live until morning. He is suffering from peritonitis. His home is in St. Louis.

Officers Installed.

At a meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held last evening, the following newly elected officers were installed:

Past Councillor—C. W. Taynor.
Councillor—H. G. Adams.
Vice Councillor—E. R. Pope, Jr.
Assistant Recording Secretary—C. S. Greer.
Warden—J. W. Poole.
Conductor—J. P. Reed.
Inside Sentinel—H. D. Pangborn.
Outside Sentinel—Geo. Van Ness.

The Benefit Game.

The Crescent team have been playing good ball during the past Summer and their grounds have attracted thousands of people. Next Saturday the members of the team are going to have a benefit game and they hope to see all their friends present to witness the game. The New Brunswick team, with John Hawkins as pitcher, will be the opponents and a good game is expected. It will be the last game in this city this year.

Tom's Assailants Ready for Trial.

Cook and Walker, the men who almost killed John Toms near New Brunswick last Winter, were before Judge Bartine Tuesday at Somerville. They declared their intention to stand trial. They have already pleaded guilty to the charge of robbery, but declare that they are innocent of any intent to kill. They have secured Senator Adrain as their counsel. The case has been set down for Monday, Oct. 12.

HOW DO YOU TRAIN YOURS?

This is How the Kaiser Trains His Boys.

It seems that the Emperor of Germany has a great deal of the old Spartan feeling about him—at all events, with reference to the training of his children. His six little sons are subject to a severe regimen by their father. They sleep in a plain, bare room, upon iron cots, with hard mattresses and scant bed clothing. At seven every morning they take a cold bath, and are then put through vigorous gymnastic exercises.—Philadelphia Record.

Don't Point a Pistol.

In a case of "didn't know it was loaded" in a Brooklyn court, a day or two ago, Judge Moore charged the jury that if one aims a pistol at another even with no intention of shooting, and the weapon goes off, killing the one aimed at, the person holding the weapon is guilty of manslaughter. The jury, acting upon this charge, found the accused person guilty of manslaughter in the second degree, the penalty of which is imprisonment from one to five years. This was a righteous charge and a righteous verdict, and if followed up by judges and juries would go far towards breaking up the silly and criminal practice of pointing firearms in sport. The law should go further and make it a misdemeanor, punishable in all cases with imprisonment, even to point firearms, whether loaded or not, at any person. Any one not having sense enough to know that firearms are not used in that way should be given sufficient time in jail to meditate upon the subject and to get the fact well hammered into his head.

Study of the Weather in Public Schools.

Copies of the government weather chart were issued recently to the Normal College, the College of the City of New York and to fifteen grammar schools in order that pupils in the schools of New York should receive some general instruction in meteorology.

The idea is a good one, and it should be adopted in the public schools of all cities where daily weather charts are issued by the government Weather Bureau. For out of the elements of geography and physiography a knowledge of atmospheric laws and movements is indispensable. But this knowledge can be obtained only in a vague and fragmentary way without the use of charts showing the actual daily progress of cyclones and anti-cyclones across the continent, and to some extent over the adjacent oceans.

His Finger Taken Off.

Mr. Johnson Wilson, an employe of the Scott Printing Press Works, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. He was engaged running a lathe, when one of his fingers was caught in the back gears and the top of the digit was cut off. A physician dressed the wound.

A Realism.

"At last we are alone!"
It was the man who spoke.
The woman trembled and lifted her eyes to his face.
They were beautiful eyes, but they were tremulous eyes—eyes which look out from a heart which is irresolute, fearful.
He stamped with his heavy foot upon the floor of the room.
The echoes brought back in their invisible arms the sound, and let it ripple out again until it struck the walls once more and fell into the vast void of silence.
A bat, disturbed by the unusual activity, darted from a corner and blindly dashed its eccentric gyrations about the dusty building.
Great ropes of cobwebs hung down from the ceiling, and the remnants of the old room dead flies swung lightly in the hammocks the spiders had fastened there.
The dust rose in listless clouds from the chest of the man's boots, and sank again, overcome by its own inertia.
Even the air was resting.
The spirit of the desolation seemed to pervade the place.
The woman looked furtively around upon her dim surroundings and shivered.
The man laughed.
"Alone, I said," he growled.
"Yes," she murmured.
A faint light struggled in through the grimy cobwebs in front, thick with dust.
"Where are we?" she whispered, and shivered as the bat dashed into her hair.
"Listen," he replied hoarsely, "we are in a scene which does not advertise."—Detroit Free Press.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What Makes the Difference?

Canadian bred horses have the name of being superior to those of the United States. So has Canadian cheese. Canada has a larger wheat growing territory than the United States, and much of it is not yet under cultivation. The mother country has done all in her power to send immigration to Canada instead of the United States. So has Canada herself. The mines of Nova Scotia and some of the other provinces are rich in gold, coal and iron. The government has just cut $3,000,000 in the last ten years to aid emigration to Manitoba and British Columbia.

The Canadian provinces were empowered to unite into a confederation in 1867. They entered in one after another till the union was finished in 1873. In 1871 the total population of the consolidated provinces was 3,686,256. Now, twenty years later, with all the favoring natural advantages named, the total population of the United Dominion of Canada is 4,823,343. In twenty years Canada has added less than a million and a quarter to her population. If the population of Canada could keep up with the boom of the national debt the Dominion would now be a teeming country, for in the twenty years named she has added over $150,000,000 to her national indebtedness, increasing it from $21 per capita to $50. In the same time the United States national debt has gone down from $60 per capita twenty years ago to $12.87 per capita at present.

The wide gap cannot be explained by difference of climate or weather or intellect. Although cold weather is said to be more conducive to mental activity than warm, the people of the states they are what the stage coach is to the lightning express train.

What makes the difference, anyhow?

Herbert Spencer's Views.

Herbert Spencer lives in a quiet, charming way among his books and friends in London. He still has "views," in fact his seventy years of life seem to have made these views somewhat more pronounced than ever. Possibly the effects of advancing age may be seen in his inclination to take the dark side of things.

Mr. Spencer has lately expressed his apprehension that society was going to the dogs. He believes state socialism is the alarming danger that now threatens mankind. State socialism will be the destruction of individual liberty. When individual liberty of thought and action goes, all is gone that makes life worth living. From state socialism mankind will drift into military despotism. It is the next step. Then will come the downfall of nations and pandemonium will be let loose. There will be a terrible struggle, from which America cannot hope to escape.

In our republic, as elsewhere, Herbert Spencer sees the state absorbing more and more the individual activity of man, and "intermeddling in all manner of ways in what should be private enterprise." Some day the people will awake to the fact that the state has absorbed the individual utterly. It is then that the struggle will begin, the terrific struggle of the individual to regain his lost rights.

Mr. Spencer is the world's champion of individual liberty, such liberty as few men, even in a republic, have any conception of, and at present he thinks he sees that the drift is entirely away from the freedom of the individual. He says the American believes he is free, but that he is not at all so.

Worth noting is the address of the colored Bishop Turner in Boston. He urges the people of his race to migrate to Africa. He says from 10,000 to 150,000 might go in a body and set up a government of their own. There they could demonstrate their administrative ability. But why should they not go to Liberia? There is a government already founded; there they can secure free lands. They will be adapted to the climate and with the fertile soil they can do something which is better even than demonstrating their administrative capacity politically—they can demonstrate their capacity industrially. Half a million of the negroes that swarm, ragged and unemployed, around some of the southern and central cities might go to Liberia and become prosperous farmers. Migrating to better their condition, according to the early white settlers to America. The same motive would not be an unworthy one in prompting black men to go to Africa.

We call it states' rights doctrine in the United States. In Germany they call it particularism, which is not half so good a name. But that is what is the matter with Bavaria. The Bavarians are as jealous of any interference with them on the part of the general government as a moonshine whisky distiller in the mountains of Tennessee.

Joe Howard declares that the greatest man on earth has somebody to love him. Doubtful. There are men so mean and miserly that even a dog would run away from them.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

Speedy Settlement of Connecticut's Muddle Probable.

CANDIDATE FASSETT'S CHARGES.

He Alleges That an Improper Use Has Been Made of New York State's Refunded $2,000,000 Direct Tax Money.

Campbell and the Keystone Peach.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—Attorneys Charles J. Cole, of Hartford, and William C. Case, of this city, representing the Republicans, and Attorneys Henry B. Stoddard, William Hamersley and Lucon B. Morris, representing the Democrats, met in this city and agreed to present the quo warranto proceedings to the supreme court instead of the superior court.

Simply a Question of Law.

By the terms of the agreement the controversy is stripped of its voluminous consideration of facts and given up to the supreme court simply on a question of law. This question is whether the legislature has the right to correct the election returns, or, in other words, to reverse the decisions of the moderators. The supreme court sits in this city on Oct. 20, and it is probable that a decision will be reached by Nov. 1 and a session of the legislature held.

Mr. Fassett Makes Charges.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 2.—In the course of a speech at the opera house last night Mr. Fassett, Republican gubernatorial candidate, charged that a conspiracy had been framed for the purpose of utilizing the two million and a quarter dollar fund which was awarded to New York in accordance with the direct tax bills provisions to make the triumph of the Flower-Sheehan ticket certain.

Cleveland, when president, vetoed the bill, which gave back to the states the money advanced by them to suppress the rebellion. At the extra session of the Republican Fifty-first congress, was passed and signed by President Harrison.

"Where Is It?" He Said.

Continuing, Mr. Fassett said:

So a check was sent to Albany from Uncle Sam's treasury for a little over $2,000,000. Senator Sheehan had a talk to the last night, and if we had been permitted to see that bill you would have had the lowest rate you ever had or will ever be likely to have. Now, what has become of that money? That is a subject which the governor did not tell you anything about. I am informed from witnesses sufficiently credible for me to believe, although I cannot vouch for it from the records, that this magnificent sum, which belongs to the whole state, has been farmed out in little lots to favorite bankers at 1 and 2 per cent interest, with the agreement that the officers of the state should divide up the difference between the 1 and 2 per cent. Now, I ask, where is the fund for which it is loaned by the bankers. You will see that they have in view a campaign fund. Now I don't know that this is so. I only know that I had very creditable information to this effect, and if it is not so, Controller Wemple, who would see that it is published, will give the facts to the people. It will be very interesting to know where that $2,000,000 is. I submit to you whether you are Democrats or Republicans, if you do not think that is a fair lot of question to be answered. I would like to have heard from Governor Hill on that subject.

Campbell on Pennsylvania's Tariff.

Governor Campbell was in a most happy mood. When he stepped to the front of the platform he held in his hand a handsome, large peach, which had been presented to him by a Pittsburg admirer. The governor exhibited the peach to the audience and said: "Here is the fruits of protection in the state of Pennsylvania. When I was a boy, during the days of Democratic low tariff, the peaches were small and hard. Now we have a high tariff and big peaches."

The governor put the au lience in a good humor, and as he jumped from one comparison to another showing the alleged inconsistencies of the high tariff orators he carried the close attention of all. "I am tired of hearing these high sounding platitudes about America for the Americans, I am in favor of America for Americans, but I am also in favor of the American voters doing a little for themselves. This cheap style of gush no longer obscures the real issues."

The Syracuse Deadlock.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 2.—At the Republican convention for the nomination of a candidate for justice of the supreme court thirty-four additional ballots were taken without result, and the convention adjourned for the day. The candidates are M. I. Wright, A. M. Killer, H. E. Turner, W. M. Rogers, W. E. Scripture and W. A. Matteson. The situation seems so much complicated as ever. The Democratic judicial convention was also held here this afternoon. No nomination was made.

Factions Fight at Red Bank.

RED BANK, N. J., Oct. 2.—The Abbett, Budgett faction of the Democracy of Shrewsbury township have each elected delegates to the assembly convention of the Third district to be held in Red Bank on Monday. The delegates will go prepared to H. Hoyer for the assembly nomination, while the opposing faction will stand by Dr. O. G. Bogardus.

A People's Party Candidate.

HURON, S. D., Oct. 2.—W. H. Smith, of Minnehaha county, has been nominated for congress by the Independents. The platform pledges allegiance to the principles of the National People's party and urges the appointment by the next legislature commission to adjust the details of the tariff.

The Deadlock at Utica.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The 326th ballot in the Republican senatorial convention for the candidate to succeed Hon. Warren Hooker was taken last night, but without a decision.

Cleveland and Hill Will Speak.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A big Democratic mass meeting will be held at Madison Square garden Oct. 27. Ex-President Cleveland, Governor Hill, John G. Carlisle and Senator Gorman will be among the speakers.

Senator O'Connor Renominated.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Senator Edmund O'Connor has been renominated by the Republicans of the Twenty-fourth district.

Senator Deane Renominated.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Gilbert A. Deane has been renominated for state senator by the Republicans of the Fifteenth district.

NATIONALISTS IN CHICAGO.

Discussing the Question of Leadership at the Irish Convention.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—At the convention of the Irish National League 200 delegates were present. Patrick Egan, Alexander Sullivan, John Dewry and P. O'Connor are not here. President Fitzgerald and Vice President Patrick Martin, of Baltimore, are the only two of old men.

The subjects informally discussed by the delegates were Minister Egan and the charges of misappropriation of Irish funds by Sullivan; the $60,000 locked up in Paris by Parnell and harmony among Irishmen in America. It is probable that Minister Egan will be given some sort of an indorsement, but how this is to be accomplished is not as yet apparent.

So far as Parnell is concerned, no mention of him is to be made in the convention if the present plan is carried out. In regard to the leadership in Ireland, a resolution will undoubtedly be adopted calling on Irishmen the world over to work in harmony, and pledging the support of the Irish in America, as represented in the convention, to any man whom the Irish parliamentary delegation chosen at the next general election might select as the Irish leader or as chairman of the Irish party.

Two Bodies.

IN PONDS SILK. IN ANY TWO MATERIALS.

Fine silk is suitable for ponjee silk, or any soft material, trimmed velvet bands. Full bodice, with fancy vest, the fullness being invisibly up the centre, and ornamented with straps of velvet, representing a Swiss belt. Gigot sleeves, finished by a cuff at the wrist. Medici collar. Pointed basque, back and front.

The other is made up in any two materials, trimmed with bands of Fall bolice, gathered into the neck and waist, and fastened invisibly up the centre, over which the deep corselet bolleros is arranged, laced up the centre to a point, the sleeves ornamented with a full puff at the elbow.

In the Presidential Class Now.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The following fourth-class post-offices were raised to the presidential class Oct. 1: William E. Gates, Glastonbury, Conn.; John Harper, Colchester, Conn.; William Spurling, Brewer, Me.; Jonathan F. Jefferds, Livermore Falls, Me.; John Singer, Jr., Melrose Highlands, Mass.; Silas Gifford, Derry Depot, N. H.; Frank Wemple, Dansville, O.; Jerome F. Flint, Derbyline, Vt. Appointments have been made at the following offices, also raised to the presidential class: Edmond D. Rice, East Providence, R. I.; David S. Allen, Dover, N. J.; Francis B. Butts, East Providence, R. I.; James H. Walsh, Volneyville, R. I.

The Intercontinental Railway Schema.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Messrs. Casatt, Davis and Kerens, the commissioners appointed to represent the United States on the international railway question, have reported to Secretary Blaine that the reports of the different surveying parties have been very satisfactory, and judging from the satisfactory conference of the delegates from other republics and the cordial manner in which the surveying parties have been received the commissioners believe that the five republics arehearally give substantial aid toward the construction of the contemplated railway.

Daring Attempt of Amateur Life Savers.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—News has been received here from St. Ives, Cornwall, near Penzance, of an act of heroism upon the part of a crew of volunteer lifeboat men, composed of London lawyers and lawyers' clerks, a stock broker and a Welsh curate, who went out to rescue a schooner's crew, after the professional life savers had refused to face the fierce sea. The amateurs did not rescue the crew, but reached St. Ives in safety, after a whole night at sea.

Profits of the Methodist Book Concern.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 2.—At the session of the Central New York Methodist conference this morning the report of the Methodist book concern, said the concern was in a high state of prosperity and was clearing $600,000 a year. One hundred and forty-three thousand dollars had been donated to superannuated preachers and the widows of such.

She Loves Blowers No Longer.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 2.—Morris Blowers, proprietor of the Blowers hotel at Corinth, N. Y., has been in the city two months at Lake City, near here. He found her with Ed Osborne. Blowers is trying to persuade his wife to return, but she refuses and says Osborne is the only man she loves.

Funeral of Dr. Burchard.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The funeral of the late Rev. Samuel D. Burchard, pastor of the Thirteenth Street Presbyterian church for forty years, was held in the church late Thursday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles S. Robinson officiated. Dr. Henry Butterfield, of Washington, conducted the services.

Count Kalnoky Tries Suicide.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Alphonse von Kalnoky, a Polish count, aged thirty-five years, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the left breast. He lies at Bellevue hospital in a critical condition. He lives at 130 East Twelfth street, where his wife keeps a small boarding house.

Big Fire in Halifax.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A private dispatch from Halifax this morning says that a big conflagration is raging there, and that the militia have been called out to blow up buildings to prevent the flames from spreading.

Nancy Hanks Nears Maud S.

RICHMOND, Ind., Oct. 2.—The phenomenal five-year-old mare Nancy Hanks trotted here in 2:09, reducing her record from 2:10¾, and approaching within a quarter of a second of the best on record of Maud S.

Cheers for Governor Abbett.

TRENTON, Oct. 2.—At least 30,000 people attended the state fair Thursday afternoon. Governor Abbett was heartily cheered upon his appearance.

The Robber Still at Large.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The express robber who held up the train between Little Falls and Utica has not yet been arrested.

LONG LIVE THE REPUBLIC

That Was Boulanger's Parting Cry to France.

FRANCIS JOSEPH'S CLOSE CALL.

The Deliberate Attempt to Blow Up the Train Bearing Austria's Emperor Was Frustrated Only by the Premature Explosion of the Bombs Under the Bridge.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 2.—Messrs. Rochefort, De Laure, Dumoutelt and Castelain have arrived at the late residence of the late General Boulanger. The outer casing of the coffin in which the body rests is, by the general's own desire, an exact replica of that of Mme. de Bonnemain. At a private meeting of Boulanger's friends his political testament was read, as follows:

His Political Testament.

This, my political testament. I desire published after my death. I shall kill myself tomorrow. I am convinced of the future of the party to which I have given my name. I cannot bear the frightful misfortune which befell me two and a half months ago. I have tried to get the better of it, but without success. I am persuaded that my followers, so devoted and so numerous, will bear me no anger for disappearing the moment of a sorrow so great that all work has become impossible.

"Too Avaise Non Deficit Alter."

Let them remember the old maxim, "Too avaise non deficit alter." May they continue to act against those who, in scorn of all law, force me to die far from my country. Tomorrow I shall be a dead man. Today I have nothing for which to reproach myself. All my life I have done my duty, and nothing but my duty.

My death is no shame to myself, but is a shame to my prosecutors, for those who have sought to kill me by order by the judgment of a political tribunal. I desire to recall the fact that many a time I have afforded to constitute myself a prisoner if they would accord me common law judges. The holders of power in France have always refused the request, and thus an acquittal was made impossible.

"Vive France! Vive Republique!"

In quitting life I have but one regret, and that is that I have not died on the field of battle, fighting for my country. That country will at least permit one of its children, at the moment of returning into nothingness, to give himself to the memory of all lovers of the "patrie."

Vive France! Vive Republique! Done and signed under my hand on the eve of the day of my death. ERNEST BOULANGER.

The Attempt to Kill Austria's Emperor.

the arrival of the train containing Emperor Francis Joseph has discovered that thirteen bombs were deposited there with the evident object of destroying the imperial train. The fuse acted before the imperial train passed over the bridge. The explosion destroyed the masonry work above the tunnel and disturbed the roadbed. The bridge structure itself, however, was not harmed. A large force of workmen was speedily procured and the roadbed was promptly repaired, and the train passed the point where the explosion had occurred without its august passenger or any of his party being aware of what had occurred.

The sensation caused is very great, and the people of Vienna are preparing a grand demonstration of loyalty for the kaiser's return.

Liberals at Newcastle.

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 2.—The formal opening of the new liberal federation of Northumberland congress occurred here. The platform includes a plank to abolish the law of entail and the house of lords. Mr. John Morley said Ireland had vindicated the confidence the Liberals had placed in her by refusing to follow a leader the Liberals could not conscientiously work with.

When Mr. Gladstone arrived he received an ovation.

Though the weather was cold Mr. Gladstone, who was in an open carriage, remained with his head uncovered, bowing and smiling to the cheering multitude. The crowd closed in behind the carriages and followed in procession, giving the police some trouble.

A Plot Unearthed in Spain.

MADRID, Oct. 2.—A conspiracy has been discovered at Barcelona to surprise the guard of the prison, liberate all the prisoners and then proclaim a republic. A major, accused of being at the head of the movement, an apothecary and an innkeeper have been arrested.

She Left Boulanger Rich.

When Mme. Bonnemain died she left to Boulanger 3,000 francs income. He therefore did without debts or pecuniary difficulties.

Pittsburg's Big Printers' Strike.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 2.—Three hundred job printers and pressmen are on a strike against the wage scale submitted by the proprietors. Nearly every job printing office in the city is idle. The employers say that if the printers do not sign the scale there will be 300 in the city to take the strikers' places this noon.

Convict Labor Prosecutions.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Joseph M. Loucroft and Joseph Petit have been indicted for alleged violation of the contract labor law. Loucroft is in the brickmaking business at Dridgewater, and is charged with having induced a large number of Canadians to come to this state to work. Petit is foreman at Loucroft's works.

Monaghan Was Seen Last Friday.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—B. Jones Monaghan, the missing lawyer, was seen last Friday by W. Morris, a medical student, in this city. It is the general impression that he is wandering about in a temporarily insane condition, and that he may possibly have gone off on an ocean voyage.

The State Out on Bail.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 2.—The Chilian steamship Itata was released upon a bond of $60,000 for the vessel and a bond of like amount for her cargo of arms. It is expected that the Itata will leave today for Chili.

A Mine Sold for a Million.

DENVER, Oct. 2.—The Grand Central silver and lead mine at Kingston, N. M., was sold in this city by Thomas O'Neill, its owner, to an English syndicate for $1,000,000 cash.

Patton Succeeds Roney.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—Mayor Smart has appointed Abraham M. Beitler director of the department of public safety, vice George Roney resigned.

PRESIDENT DILL NEARLY MOBBED.

HOMESTAKE, Pa., Oct. 2.—This town is still feverish with excitement over the Homestake bank failure. All day long angry crowds thronged the streets in the vicinity of the closed bank, and at times an outburst was feared. President Dill was implicated in the affair from the first.

Cashier McGrath and Dill have both been arrested. Dill was arrested on a charge of embezzlement preferred by Elisabeth Dill, a depositor in the Homestake bank. Dill gave bail in $2,000. As Dill was leaving the court house a half drunken Hungarian, whose money is locked up in the bank, grabbed him roughly by the arm. Five other Hungarians jumped into the fray, quickly followed by as many officers. Dill was roughly handled before he escaped to his house. The house is guarded by police officers, who are kept busy in driving the half drunken Huns away. An order has been issued to close all saloons in order to prevent the furious Huns from obtaining liquor.

Cashier McGrath estimates the liabilities at about $200,000, and says there will be nothing from Clearfield they will be able to pay fifty cents on the dollar. The following statement was dictated by Bank President Dill this afternoon: "Foul treachery on the part of my brother-in-law, A. F. Boynton, was the cause of the assignment and failure. At the time I was elected president of the bank I found that J. B. Nevling, former teller, later cashier, was a traitor to the business interests of the bank. I demanded his resignation, and since that time have been under a persistent run on the bank, and on Tuesday last I considered it unwise to keep the bank open. Depositors in both banks will be paid in full." Bank Examiner Miller is in charge of the bank.

THE FIRST DEFENDERS HONORED.

POTTSVILLE, Oct. 2.—When President Lincoln issued his first call for 75,000 volunteers, April 15, 1861, the National Light Infantry and Washington artillery, two Pottsville companies, responded, with 200 men in line. They were the first defenders, along with the Ringgold artillery, the Logan guard and the Allen rifles, and today they turned out together in their history by the dedication and unveiling of a massive and magnificent soldiers' monument in Garfield square.

Of the original first defenders but 165 remain. Five of this band of survivors —William Burns, W. B. McIlrath, George W. Rose, Caleb Kline and Irving W. Tyson—unwound the silken tricolored cord and gently the folds of white fluttered to the earth. General Horace Porter came on from New York to act as the adjutant.

The memorial cost the townspeople $18,000. Governor Pattison presented medals of silver to the first defenders and General D. McM. Gregg, of Reading.

A parade began the day's exercises. Governor Pattison was cheered again and again throughout the parade. He was ordered a public reception, in which thousands took part.

FITZSIMMONS BECOMES FUNNY.

He Sends $1,000 to His Wife and Laughs at Her Action.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 2.—The murderer Fitzsimmons, who shot Detective Gilkinson, and who recently escaped from the county jail here, has sent $1,000 to his attorney, Thomas M. Marshall, to obtain a new trial for his wife, who was found guilty of murder in the second degree. The following is the letter which Fitzsimmons sent, which is unquestionably that of Fitzsimmons:

Sept. 29, 1891.

Thomas M. Marshall, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—Please obtain a new trial for Mrs. Fitzsimmons. She is innocent. What else may be published as to Nations or Fitzsimmons I am innocent good wife. Fitzsimmons is an innocent good wife. Get the new trial. Then things will come out all O. K. Have not been drinking. Paddy Murphy has it about the prison—Hotel Bastile. It is cosy here; fresh eggs, cow's milk and bacon. Fresh meat is short; twice a week when the wagon comes around. I can't go the city until you get a new trial. I will pay $1,000. Money no use here. Send receipt by boy. Answer quickly, my dear sir and lawyer.

Prisoner FRANK C. FITZSIMMONS.

N. B.—Not Napoleon Bonaparte, but the little man you laughed at. I can get out of a hole. How are the wives. Hotel Bastile on Tuesday morning. Goodby.

Henry Watterson Bereaved.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 2.—The Hon. Harvey M. Watterson, father of the Hon. Henry Watterson, died last night in this city. He was born in Bedford county, Penn., Nov. 23, 1811. In 1839 he succeeded James K. Polk in the Twenty-sixth congress, and was the only surviving member of that body. He served in the Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth congresses, and in 1845 was sent by President Tyler to South America on an important diplomatic mission. He declined the cabinets of Presidents Pierce, Buchanan and Johnson. He was a strong Union man during the late war.

Noble Recommended the Dismissals.

WASHINGTON, Oct. —There is little doubt that Secretary Noble will approve the recommendation of Commissioner Raum that the three pension office employes and the one connected with the affidavits charging Green B. Raum, Jr., with accepting a money consideration for securing promotions in the pension office be dismissed. It is generally understood that the secretary, who investigated young Raum, suggested to the commissioner that Engel, Howard and Taylor be recommended for dismissal.

Missing Expert Cox Sued.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Oct. 2.—All efforts to find James Cox, the expert accountant of South Brooklyn, have failed. Cox owns a farm at Richland worth $15,000. George Cramer, his employee, has sued Cox for $800 wages. Miss Catharine Casserly, housekeeper for thirteen years for Cox, sued for $800 money loaned to Cox.

Killed by a Colored Pupil.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 2.—At Hunts ville, Ala., Professor Renfro, a white teacher, in a colored normal school, attempted to chastise Ebenezer Kahn, a colored pupil. Kahn seized a 5-inch steel chisel and struck Renfro in the teacher's brain, killing him. Kahn is under arrest.

Three Killed on a Crossing.

LEOMINSTER, Mass., Oct. 2.—A carriage containing four men was struck by a train last night on the Fitchburg railroad at Harris Crossing. Fred Miller, of Grafton, and Simon Worden and George Quint, of this city, were instantly killed. J. F. Gallagher arrived himself by jumping.

A Woman Sued for Slander.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 2.—George S. Turner, proprietor of the Bridgeport Business college, has brought suit for $10,000 against Miss Annie Heister for alleged slander.

TEN THOUSAND ARE OUT.

A Long and Bitter Struggle Probable in the Pittsburg District.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 2.—A general strike of railroad coal miners of the Pittsburg district has been inaugurated, and it is estimated that nearly 10,000 men have stopped work. They are firm for the three and a half cent rate, and declare that "they will remain out until it is conceded by all the operators. A long and bitter struggle is probable.

The Eight Hour Day.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 2.—The national executive board of the United Mine Workers was in executive session all day, and has under consideration the eight hour question. The eight hour day was to have been enforced May 1, but for various reasons was declared off for a time.

It is believed that the time deemed opportune for demanding an eight hour day in the mines throughout the country is now very close, and that the present conference will definitely settle the date. Every district president in the country has been summoned to appear here Saturday and meet the board for instructions.

Maggie Is Out of Danger.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 2.—Maggie Carroll, whom William Wyucoop attempted to drown by throwing her out of a boat, is out of danger. Wyncoop and the girl were lately inmates of the county jail, he for disorderly conduct and she for street walking.

Admiral Lee's Son Weds.

READING, Pa., Oct. 2.—Miss Annie Clymer Brooke, of Birdsborough, this county, and Blair, the son of Admiral Lee, of Washington, were married in St. Michael's Episcopal church, Birdsborough, shortly after noon by Bishop De Wolf Howe.

Kellogg's Shortage $30,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—A shortage of $30,000 in Edgar H. Kellogg's account with the Home Life Insurance company of Brooklyn was discovered by an audit begun in the United States circuit court by the insurance company.

I have used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for constipation and acknowledge it is worthy of all that can be said of it for dis orders of that kind.—Nellie A. McQuade, 250 Main street, Amsterdam, N. Y.—Adv.

Queen's Farmer's Field Glass is constructed to meet the wants of those who require a very powerful glass at a moderate outlay. JAY GOULD A SICK MAN.

Wall Street in a Flutter Over His Condition.

HE CRIED LIKE A CHILD RECENTLY

Sensational Scene Said to Have Occurred at the Meeting of the Missouri Pacific Directors a Few Days Ago—His Cheeks Sunken and His Step Uncertain.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Persistent rumors were circulated in Wall street that Jay Gould was a very sick man. At one time it was said that he had been stricken with apoplexy and this report materially affected the market, but a prompt denial brought the market back to its normal state. The fact, however, can no longer be disguised even by his relatives and friends that he is really a very sick man. The nature of his ailment is best described when it is called mental and physical collapse, and his best friends fear that a total collapse in the near future cannot be avoided.

He Cried Like a Child.

Mr. Gould's condition was first made plain ten days ago at the meeting of the directors of the Union Pacific company in when, in the heat of discussion, he sank in his chair, and in an attempt to hide the physical agony depicted on his features, threw his handkerchief over his face.

This and scene was re-enacted at the meeting of the Missouri Pacific directors Wednesday. He again during the debate sank back in his chair, covered his face with his handkerchief and cried like a child.

His Step Slow and Uncertain.

Mr. Gould was seen on the street and the reports of his condition were not belied by his looks. His step was slow and uncertain, his cheeks sunken and his eyes dull and lusterless. The excitement incidental to a rising market when the Goulds were on the bear side, the trouble with the Union Pacific plan of taking care of the floating debts, the desertion by friends in the Missouri Pacific clique when friends were most needed to help him in the consummation of one of the most gigantic stock jobbing schemes ever conceived and partially carried out since the remarkable "Black Friday" day, have had their effect.

A Hysterical Attack.

The attack was of a hysterical character. It was what his physicians had always said, that Mr. Gould was particularly disposed toward at intensely nervous state, resulting from lifelong mental tension and imperfect digestion. Mr. Gould was first afflicted by these severe nervous attacks in 1884, at the time of the downfall of the Metropolitan bank, the Marine bank, and Grant & Ward and other startling developments.

The Scene Described.

The Missouri Pacific scene is thus described by one of the men present: "Russell Sage had made a speech advocating the payment of a quarterly dividend of one-half of 1 per cent. Mr. Gould had had very little to say. We all noticed that he looked paler and weaker than usual. Mr. Gould, instead of leaning back in his chair, began to speak, opposing Mr. Sage's proposition to pay a half per cent. dividend.

"After he had said a few words his voice sank, his words became slurred and unintelligible, and a moment later he sank back in his chair, covered his face with his handkerchief and remained motionless. I think he had a sort of fainting fit. Then we spoke to him he mumbled something. Presently, after a moment or so, he removed his handkerchief from his face and we saw that he had been weeping. His eyes were filled with tears and his voice was broken. He said, as nearly as I can remember:

"'Gentlemen, you must excuse me. I have been so harassed and worried lately and have passed through an ordeal so far beyond my strength that I am physically unable to make a speech in protest against the dividend.' He gradually recovered himself and remained throughout the meeting, which soon thereafter adjourned."

Grand Cross Masons Meet.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The grand chapter of the grand cross, the highest and most ancient Masonic body in the world, is in annual session here. Business of the greatest importance to the order will be transacted. The sovereign grand council of the United States of the Order of Constantine elected the following officers for three years: Charles K. Francis, Philadelphia, sovereign grand master; William H. Whiting, Rochester, deputy grand master; Jerome B. Borden, New Jersey, grand viceroy; Charles A. DeLaney, Vermont, first lieutenant; Sextus Bowen, Boston, second lieutenant; Charles E Myer, Philadelphia, grand registrar general; Rev. William Oreville Doty, Rochester grand prelate.

He Left Twenty Million Dollars.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 2.—Edmund H. Schermerhorn, of New York, died here Oct. 1, aged seventy-three years. He had been a summer resident here for thirty years He left a fortune of about $20,000,000.

CABLE BREVITIES.

Mr. Gladstone insists that there shall be no weakening in supporting home rule in the Liberal party.

The dire distress of 25,000,000 Russians unable to pay their taxes has caused a deficiency of 13,000,000 rubles in the budget.

While the Hessian artillery were practicing with shrapnel near Rossdorf a gun burst, killing the gunner, Blatte, and seriously wounding four others, two more being less severely hurt.

The refusal of Russia to take a hand in coercing China is attributed to the dread with which Russia has always regarded China's capacity for injuring Russia's interests in the interior of Asia.

A coachman attached to the Hotel Rautenkranz, at Ilmenau, shot and killed his betrothed in a dancing saloon, because she had chosen another partner. He then retired to the stables, and, after shooting his favorite horse, committed suicide.

A tourist from Chicago named Solomon Schmidt inscribed his name and address on the famous Niederwald monument at Rudesheim. The guardian made him fetch a bucket of water and some soap and scrub off the marks, his fellow tourists deriding him meanwhile.

Mr. Gladstone's powerful defense of the Church of England has occasioned a good deal of surprise in Tory ranks, is having been supposed that the Liberal chieftain was more in accord with the disestablishment feeling in the Liberal ranks.

BOSTON GETS THE FLAG.

The Race for the National League Pennant Practically Over.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—The race for the championship of the National league practically came to an end yesterday, and on the face of the returns the Bostons are the victors. The only way in which they could be beaten would be through the throwing out of some of the double games won by Boston, and as the managers of the latter team secured the consent of two-thirds of the League clubs, there is not the remotest possibility of any game being thrown out. Therefore Captain Nash and his skillful players will hoist the pennant in Boston next spring.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

The adhesion of the Australasian colonies to the Universal postal union, which has been for years anxiously sought by the commercial nations of the world, became operative Oct. 1.

There is a pest of fleas overrunning Middletown, Conn., and much annoyance has been caused.

Abram Tuttle, eighty-two, a pioneer, in the anti-slavery movement, died at Brisco, Tenn.

The game law is off in Connecticut, and hunting has begun. There is an unusual abundance of game.

Libeled Prince George.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—Richard Neil O'Brien has been convicted of libel in having sent to various American newspapers dispatches asserting that Prince George of Wales was mixed up in a street row in a questionable section of the city during his visit to Montreal. The judge suspended sentence, but intimated that if the young man continued talking the judgments of the court would not long be deferred.

The Stanford University Opened.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—The Leland Stanford, Jr., university, at Palo Alto, was opened here with imposing ceremonies. The first class that matriculates will be much larger than is usual with new institutions, students having come from all parts of the Union. The Stanford university is to the west what Lehigh university is to the east.

Schurz Will Not Resign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Mr. Carl Schurz has withdrawn his resignation as American director of the Hamburg-American Packet company. Mr. Schurz's resignation was qualified by the provision that he would stay if it was desired that he should. This was desired. President Nissen urgently requested that he remain.

She Ran While He Held "Ma."

GREENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 2.—A married man named Wick, of Salina, ran away with a sixteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ferris, of that place. The mother objected to his attentions. Going to the house, Wick held Mrs. Ferris while the girl, at his command, packed her clothes and fled.

Secretary Blaine Criticised.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A special to The Post from Philadelphia says at the second day's session of the Baptist ministers convention a resolution was passed censuring Secretary of State Blaine for extending the sale of beer in the South American republics.

Consul Osborne Married.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—John Ball Osborne, of Pawling, Duchess county, United States consul at Ghent, and Miss Bertha J. Grinnell, of this city, were married here last evening. Mr. Osborne is a Yale graduate of the class of '76.

Fatally Injured in a Cane Rush.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 2.—W. A. Caldwell, a student of Lehigh university, was so seriously injured in a cane rush here that he cannot live. He is suffering from peritonitis. His home is in St. Louis.

"FA'S IT OS."

Wendell Phillips' Idea of Some Shade of Blackness Should Be Used

After the close of the civil war the North was filled with Southern negroes, many of them delicate women and men, from affluence to poverty, and compelled to earn a living for themselves and their children, says the Youth's Companion.

One of these was Mrs. Mary Richmond Davis, a woman of unusual cultivation, who found a sensitive and proud-spirited daughter by giving an evening reception before a country audience in Southern life. Sheltered and shielded as she had always been, the ex-queen was now the victim of "Northern prejudice." Frightened to appear on the public platform, and she was unknown and friendless, but bravely she worked on asking aid from no one.

It was a cold, blustering, January day in 1866, when, cold and shivering from an early morning drive in the rain, and with her little weak dripper, Mrs. E. entered the Boston train at a way station. All the seats were occupied, some with parcels, some with bags, needles and overcoats.

Trembling from weakness and weariness, Mrs. E. supported herself against the back of the seat as the train moved off.

At that moment a gentleman chanced to lower his newspaper and caught sight of the black-robed woman. With a quick exclamation he sprang to his feet, removed a valise from the seat beside him and invited her to occupy it. As she sank down exhausted, he carefully wrapped his traveling rug about her.

She thanked him for his kindness, and he, turning, said:

"Pardon me, madam, but are you not a southerner?"

"Yes," she answered. "I am. I suppose you know it from my speech. I may people have done so."

"The accent is unmistakable," he replied, "but pardon me again, are you not a long way from home?"

"A long way, indeed," she replied, and encouraged by his sympathetic voice and manner she added: "I lost my all during the war, and as there is no money in the South I came North to try if I can obtain employment for my two children."

"And have you done so?" he asked in a kinder manner.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3. 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

REGULAR MEETING LAST EVENING FOR OCTOBER.

A Queer Democratic Protest Considering.—Fines Received, Street Committee's Disbursements.—Special Marshals.—The Water Company's Refusal.

The Borough Council met in regular session last evening at eight o'clock.

Mayor Place and Councilmen Buckle, Hummer, Needham, Powell and Sebring responded to roll call. Councilman Hegeman was absent.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Democratic Executive Committee sent the following communication to Council:

To the Common Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Complying with the request of the Borough Clerk and in conformity with the law providing for the selection by each of the great political parties of its own election canvassers and inspectors, who shall be appointed to guard the interests of their respective parties at the polls, the executive committee of the Democratic party in North Plainfield, designated and appointed the following able and efficient gentlemen to act in that capacity for the Democratic party, to wit: E. C. Morse, A. E. Kenney, Benj. Gavin, John Schroppe.

Contrary to every rule and precedent, and in defiance of the law, your honorable body has attempted to controvert the wishes of the Democratic party as expressed through its accredited representatives, by the arbitrary appointment from your midst, of two gentlemen not designated by this committee, and who have signified their unwillingness to accept their appointments from the Council. Such action on your part is beneath the contempt of fair-minded men of whatever political faith.

No pretext for the non-compliance of the Mayor and Common Council with the request of this committee can have any weight or validity, except in the event that it can be clearly shown that the confirmation of the names that we have presented to you would injure the welfare or endanger the success of the Democratic party. As we are more than skeptical about the ability of the Council, as at present constituted, to judge impartially on this point, we solemnly and firmly declare and insist that the Common Council shall confirm the appointments of Democratic inspectors and canvassers as selected by the Democratic party of North Plainfield through its executive committee.

Very respectfully,
A. E. KENNEY, Chairman.
IRA F. RIKER,
B. LUKESSEY,
ABRAM H. ENO,
CHARLES DRESSLET,
GEORGE DEMLER, JR.
WM. PANGBORN.

Attest:
GEO. H. NEAL, Secretary.
North Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 30, 1891.

Mr. Powell moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances to investigate and report at a future meeting. The motion prevailed.

The report of the Borough Magistrate showed that $62 in fines had been collected during the past month. The report was ordered filed.

Mr. Needham reported that a number of the special marshals did duty on the occasion of the Knights of Pythias parade, and that they were paid by the Knights. The report was ordered filed.

Mr. Buckle from the Street Committee reported that $1,872.64 had been expended on Greenbrook road; $688.60 on Somerset street; $247.94 for cleaning the streets, and $100 for the Crescent avenue, and that the subscriptions collected amounted to $472.10. Mr. Buckle stated that the subscriptions were coming in very slowly, and hoped that those who had subscribed would pay up as Council needed the money. The report was received and ordered filed.

Mr. Sebring offered a resolution ratifying the election of Mr. J. M. Bettman as a member of Warren Engine Company, No. 1. The resolution was adopted.

Borough Counsel Reed stated that the Plainfield Water Supply Company had refused to enter into contract with the borough according to the terms dicta ted by Council. The Council at a previous meeting authorized the Mayor and Clerk to execute a contract with the company for four hydrants to the mile. Mr. Reed further stated that at the first meeting the company said they would put in no less than six hydrants to the mile, but they had finally consented to put in ten, and that they will not agree to furnish any less than ten. They claim the rate $15 per hydrant per year, is a very low one. Somerville pays $95, Morristown $60 and Orange $85. The average charge is about $80. They expect to charge the borough about $1,000 per year for water. If Council took eight to the mile it would cost the borough as much as if they took ten. The company would raise the rate. Council will not be compelled to pay for the hydrants until July 1st, 1893. Council can now take four providing they guarantee to take ten within two years. The Council will put in but six hydrants now, but will charge the borough for the use of only four until July, 1893.

Mr. Buckle thought that the borough should be protected against fire by having a good water supply.

Mr. Sebring said he did not think it would be to the way to go, as there was said Atlantic City had two Water Companies and that it was getting its water for 3½ cents per 1,000.

Mr. Buckle reminded Mr. Sebring that Atlantic City also had a natural Water Supply.

Mr. Needham thought it would be wise to have the matter referred back to the Special Committee for further consideration as the company may extend their pipes and then instead of charging us with $1,000 for hydrants it may cost $5,000 a year.

Mr. Sebring thought it would be well for Council to compel the Water Supply Company to lay their pipes in and through Liberty street, as there is where most of the fires have been for several years past.

After some further discussion on motion of Mr. Needham, the matter was referred back to the special committee.

A motion prevailed that when the meeting adjourned it would be until next Friday evening.

The meeting then adjourned.

COUNTY LEGISLATORS.

Over a Year Since the Morris Avenue County Road Contract was Finished.—A Sewage System at Summit.

The Union County Board of Freeholders were in session Thursday afternoon only a short time. The business was mostly routine.

Mr. Kelly representing the township of Summit was in attendance with a request for permission to construct a sewer from the county road beginning at Springfield avenue and extending to Florida avenue, a distance altogether of 1,000 feet. The petitioners said the sewer would be laid at the edge of the road, and would cross the road four times. It was pledged on part of the township to restore the road in as good condition as it was before being disturbed.

Carroll Bassett signed the petition, and the specifications were also read.

Freeholder Roll advised that the work be done under the supervision of the county engineer. He said Mr. Bassett would probably be dead before he crossed, but in putting down some water pipes on Springfield avenue he filled up a trench laid down the road so that the drainage is imperfect.

Freeholder Briant said the Summit people would be responsible, and spoke of the sewage system proposed. He offered a resolution referring the matter to the committee on the Morris avenue county road, city attorney and city engineer, giving to them full power to grant or to refuse the request of Summit, and to impose such conditions as they saw fit.

The resolution was adopted.

County Engineer Dunham reported that the power by which Bernard Mahon had contracted to keep the Morris avenue county road in repair, has expired, and recommended that the board renew the observe of the contract price of the improvement be paid to Mahon.

The report was laid on the and on resolution of Mr. Roll the final payment, amounting to $2,254.07, due Mr. Mahon, was ordered paid.

The newly adopted county roads, Newark turnpike and Newark avenue, were finished, and the report of the county surveyor directed to make map, etc.

Mr. Trahon offered a resolution that $500 be expended on the Morris avenue road for repairs.

The question of the legality of appropriating the amount before the map was filed was raised and referred to County Attorney Ward.

Mr. Ward said the act was very specific, and the money could not be expended until the map was filed and bids for the work advertised for.

Mr. Trahon said he introduced the resolution for an expression of opinion. It was necessary that something be done to save the road. There were repairs required which if done now would make the costs of the improvement in the future less. Under the decision of the attorney, however, he withdrew his resolution.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Several North Plainfield young ladies are showing a great fondness for riding horseback—that most invigorating of exercises.

Mr. T. B. Penton of Rockview avenue has a tandem team that would win first prize almost any where, and he evinces the utmost skill and dash in the way he handles the ribbons when taking an outing.

There are probably few towns in this country having more lady bicyclers than Plainfield. Nearly all ride their wheels gracefully, and merry groups of them think nothing of a run of fifteen miles on a pleasant afternoon.

Rev. Charles B. Mitchell has a pet pug dog. Not an ordinary pug, however, but an imported, beautiful cream and brown tinted, brown-nosed animal, with two curls in its tail. It is named "Max," and is extremely affectionate.

Dr. G. W. Endicott, one of Plainfield's prosperous physicians and also a prominent citizen, recently purchased the property corner Seventh street and Park avenue. The handsome residence on the spacious grounds he proposes to greatly improve and will then make it his home. The purchase price is said to be $18,000.

New Officers Elected.

At a meeting of the Somerset Lodge, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. Mechanics, held Tuesday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Past Councillor—J. D. Anderson.
Councillor—Wm. R. Dunham.
Vice Councillor—Walter B. Thorn.
Inside Sentinel—Frank Wyckoff.
Outside Sentinel—H. B. Smith.
Conductor—H. B. Delehant.
Warden—Joseph Newman.

At the conclusion of the election Past Councillor Anderson and Councillor Dunham made speeches.

Dunellen Notes.

The Annual Convention.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union county Sunday school Association held at Elizabeth last evening the time fixed for the regular annual convention on Thursday, November 5th, which is to be held in Plainfield.

Elizabeth's Street Road Not Sold.

The rumored deal between the Elizabeth Railroad Company and the Newark Street Railroad Company, by which the latter was to purchase the former plant, was denied yesterday by Supt. Ackerman, of the Newark Company.

MERCHANTS ORGANIZE.

TO PROTECT THEMSELVES AGAINST DEAD BEATS.

Officers Elected and An Agreement Entered Into.—To Forfeit $20. If a Listed Dead Beat Is Given Credit.

Plainfield business men to the number of thirty-nine met in the Republican Association rooms last night to organize a branch of the Merchants' Retail Commercial Agency with headquarters at Philadelphia.

The following were elected officers:
President—Geo. W. Rockafellow.
Vice President—J. A. Smith.
Secretary—L. B. Woolston.
Treasurer—A. D. Cook.
Executive Board—G. Q. Packer, J. W. Van Sickle, E. M. French.

This Agency uses no dishonorable means to force collections or settlements, but the members propose to exercise their legal right to refuse credit to a person who gains the reputation of not treating a member of the Agency honorably.

There is no law compelling merchants to sell their goods on credit. There is no law forbidding merchants refusing credit to any person they see fit, and when a merchant sells his goods on credit it is as an accommodation to the consumer, and if such consumer has no appreciation of the favor extended and willfully neglects to make a reasonable and honorable adjustment of his indebtedness, then he should be compelled to pay as he buys. It is better for him and much more profitable for the merchant. Many a poor worthy man has been refused credit for the necessities of life because of the merchant's unpleasant experience with bad debtors, but this system will tend to obviate all that, because the man who does respect his credit will be known and have a standing among merchants while the "dead beat" and others of his kind will also be known to the members of this Agency and be absolutely refused credit; no matter if he moves to another town or State his reputation as poor pay will follow him and the merchants in such new place or residence will also refuse him credit. This Agency issues a regular and legal abstract of unsettled accounts. Each member agrees to forfeit twenty dollars to his branch as penalty in case he extends credit to a person whose unsettled account appears in the abstract, and no account can appear therein until the debtor has had a full and fair opportunity to go to the merchant to whom he owes and in some way arrange such indebtedness. The man who can pay and won't pay and the man who cannot pay, but will not go to the merchant and state his condition and make effort to arrange, is the person this Agency is after.

This Agency does not interfere with the credit of men who deal honorably, no matter if they are slow; neither does it in any way regulate prices. Its sole object is to compel men to be honest with merchants or to pay spot cash for goods purchased. Something of this kind has been needed for a long time and this system will work. "In combination there is strength." The members have the success or failure of this system in their own hands. Similar merchants have properly combined, the system has proven a great success. The United States is being carefully covered by this Agency, and the merchants in all small towns are visited and solicited to join the bounty branch.

TALK OF THE TOWN

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Observations on Various Matters Political and Otherwise.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1, 1891.—Campbell says that sugar is free trade. Why then did the Democratic party oppose it in the Mills bill—their own free trade measure, and why did they vote against it last Winter.

"I have just returned from New York," said Mr. Charles J. Gould, brother of General Gould, of West Virginia, at the Ebbitt, "and it looks as though everyman, woman and child in that region was shouting for Fassett. Greater enthusiasm for a gubernatorial candidate was never seen. St. Lawrence county, which is a Republican stronghold and gave 8,000 majority any time will give 10,000 majority for Fassett. He is going to down Roswell P. Flower and knock Tammany silly."

The continuation of 4½ per cent. bonds at 2 per cent. was closed with yesterday's transactions, viz.: $141,850 continued and $233,250 redeemed. Secretary Foster says that he is perfectly satisfied with the result for the reason that he never expected to continue more than half of the loan, and also because he had redeemed over $18,000,000 of bonds payable in cash with a reduction of only $500,000 of the gold balance.

The Colden Club, of London, England, have selected Mr. Kline to be defeated. The Colden Club is not snaring work or money to defeat McKinley. It has an agent in Ohio though whom it can work in the Democratic party—the party of calamity and hard times, the party of Cleveland and Carlisle.

Third Assistant Secretary John Moore has formally retired from the Department of State to accept the professorship of international law in Columbia College. New York. Mr. Moore has held the position of Third Assistant Secretary since Mr. Bayard's accession to the office of Secretary of State.

He has taken a prominent part in the Bering Sea negotiations, and is the author of many standard works on international law. He was the literary executor of the late Dr. Francis Wharton, who held the position of Solicitor to the State Department, and completed the valuable edition of the writer's last great legal work.

"The war between President Polk, of the Alliance, and the Democrats of North Carolina is on," said Hon. Thomas B. Keogh, of Greensboro, at the Ebbitt yesterday, and it is getting hotter hotter all the while. It will be desperate, but my idea is that Polk will come out winner. I would advise the Democrats to have Polk and his followers support a third party ticket in 1892. They think they control the State, because many Alliance men would be loth to vote against the Democratic nominee.

"What they need is to have Col. Polk keep his people inside the Democratic party and thereby capture the machinery. They know, in that event, that an anti-Cleveland delegation will go to the National Convention, and they control it. then, in the event that Cleveland should be chosen and elected, they know that, as they would have fought his nomination, he wouldn't remember them when the loaves and fishes were distributed."

An accident to the lock of the inner door of the vault in the cash room of the United States treasury caused a temporary suspension of operations in that office yesterday morning. The vault contained about $18,000,000 in loose funds necessary for the transaction of current business of the department. Efforts were made and had been spent in vain efforts to remove the refractory door and the creditors in the outer office were becoming in numbers and impatient. Finally a new comer took hold of the door-knob, and, by a vigorous shaking, pulled open the combinations in a moment. Secretary Foster was absent at the time.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If you cannot talk anything but personalities, don't converse at all.

The irrigation congress at Salt Lake City closed its labors by memorializing the United States congress to make an appropriation for irrigating the arid lands of Montana, the Dakotas, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, that the desert may be changed to fertile farms.

General Schofield has approved the army tactics. They will go into operation when they have also been approved by the secretary of war. The main departure in the new system will be in the skirmish drill. In future there will be no "drawing in the skirmish line" so familiar to our soldiers during the war. Instead, the skirmish line is to stand its ground and be strengthened cumulatively as the opposing force increases its attack. Thus the skirmish line is not to retreat at the first signal of attack, but to continue advancing steadily, and to be strengthened steadily from the rear until the whole army is engaged.

The Great American Novelist

It is a fact that never before were so many stories by American writers poured upon book publishers and into the newspaper offices. It seems indeed as if every fourth person in the land, and particularly every fourth woman, were writing novels or short stories. They are mostly love stories, and the old opinion that the field of fiction can have a reasonable excuse for being unless it deals with the grand passion.

This is the first part of the statement. The second part is that the one in twenty of the stories is worth putting into print. They are nearly all the work of amateurs, those just trying their infant wings on the atmosphere of authorship. Almost without exception the stories are commonplace, and show not a spark of talent in this field.

There is yet another point to be mentioned. It is that never before probably was there such a demand for purely American stories. The fact that a romance is a translation from another language, or even that it is an English tale is against it in the popular mind. The novel reading public now wants purely American tales. The short stories which we have appropriated so long from English magazines have failed at length on the American taste. Where is the native writer who will charm his thousands of readers with purely American fiction, short stories and long? The country waits for him.

Solving the Money Question.

It would be solved for the majority of mankind if the financial doctors would only show them how to get a sufficient amount of the money. Silver "of the present weight and fineness," or gold or greenbacks, or anything would do. But this is exactly what the financial scientists are unable to accomplish.

Mr. Charles S. Ashley, however, believes he has found out a way to prevent farm lands and other valuable property from losing "sometimes up and sometimes down," in the way in which they fluctuate with the money standard in our generation. Mr. Ashley considers that we should cease to think that the government has power to make a dollar, and educate ourselves to the view that the function of government should be to coin the precious metals and certify to the weight and quality of the money made. The government is to undertake this only, making a slight charge for making the metal into coins, then there would be nothing to hinder the free coinage of gold and silver.

To prevent mad fluctuations in the relative value of gold, silver and paper money, in all contracts there should be an agreement to pay, not in so many dollars, but in coins of a given weight and fineness. Banks might begin this method by agreeing to pay deposits in coin of a specified kind. Railroad mortgages and all contracts of magnitude could be worded in the same way. When A buys a farm he would obtain possession of it by inserting in his mortgage the promise to pay B in dollars of the standard value at the time he purchased it.

Thus Mr. Ashley believes the currency question could be taken out of the realm of politics altogether, and that in time the conception of money would become that of a commodity which furnished a convenient medium of exchange. The value of the metals would then be governed, like that of every other commodity, by the market demand and supply—in fact, just as it now is; but in that case business would be protected from ups and downs by the insertion into contracts of the clause mentioned, specifying the weight and fineness of the coins in which payment was to be made.

As a matter of fact, this clause is already being inserted in many long time contracts. If it was done in all cases business would readily adapt itself to the new conditions. The Toledo and North Michigan railway promises to redeem its bonds in gold coin of the present weight and fineness. Hon. John Warner testified before a congressional committee that since the passage of the last silver coinage act banks, corporations and insurance companies in great numbers had inserted in their reinvestment and new loan contracts a gold clause.

READY FOR RECIPROCITY

That Is Uncle Sam's Position Toward Canada.

BUT SHE MUST WAIT FOR BLAINE.

The President Believes the Canadian Commissioners Should Treat Directly With the Secretary of State When He Returns to the Capitol.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The report from Ottawa that the reciprocity conference set for Oct. 12 between Secretary Blaine and representatives of the Canadian government has been indefinitely postponed, is confirmed at the executive mansion and at the state department.

The President's Reason.

The reason given for the postponement is that the president deems it best that the Canadian commissioners should deal directly with Mr. Blaine, and Mr Harrison, therefore, asked for a postponement until Mr Blaine's return to Washington, when a time for meeting could be arranged.

Our Government Ready.

The state department is in active state department that this government is ready to meet Canada now in regard to reciprocity, but Mr Blaine's great personal interests in the matter make it best that he should conduct the negotiations on the part of the United States.

The date for the postponed conference, Oct. 12, was agreed upon last spring when the Canadian representatives came to Washington to discuss the reciprocity subject, but Mr Blaine was not quite ready to meet them.

NINETEEN DEAD AT SEA.

The Ships Parsee, Amazon, Blossom and Cassnelia Have Gone Down.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Oct. 3.—Two vessels, the Parsee and the Amazon, fish laden, returning from Labrador, were caught in the recent violent storm, and completely wrecked on the coast. The Captain and his crew of ten or eleven men were all drowned.

The Blossom, another vessel returning from Labrador with fish, was also caught in the same gale and struck on Gull Island, Notre Dame bay, and went to pieces. Her crew of eight men were all rescued.

Nine Lost on the Frank Perew.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The loss of the schooner Frank Perew off White Fish Point, Lake Superior, with all on board is conceded. She carried nine men and was commanded by Captain J. Marquely, of Bay City.

ANSWERING FASSETT'S CHARGES.

A New York Paper's Statement Concerning the Direct Tax Money.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A Albany special from Albany says. J. Sloat Fassett's speech at Poughkeepsie, wherein he insinuated that Comptroller Wemple had been using the $2,000,000 direct tax fund by "farming it out" to favorite banks at a low rate of interest, does not meet with much credence where the true facts are known.

Mr. Wemple is back at his post go to Wemple, but to Governor Hill, and the state treasurer on March 19 deposited it in the National Commercial bank of Albany, whose president, cashier and several others of its officials are Republicans. The Commercial bank is one of the institutions designated by law for the deposit of state moneys. This answers Mr. Fassett's question of "Where is that two million?"

Monaghan Still Missing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The search for Lawyer R. Jones Monaghan, of Pennsylvania, which his friends are continuing so unitedly in this city, had up to last night been utterly barren of results. Detective Jefferis, of West Chester, Pa., and Detective Newcombe, of this city, are convinced that he is either out of the country and beyond the reach of the newspapers or dead.

A Female Bunchalist Missing.

The Park Place Disaster.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The grand jury brought in a presentment censuring Liebler & Maier for not taking steps to prove the strength of their floors in the Park place building, and calling for new legislation.

Warner Miller for the Ticket.

LYONS, N. Y., Oct. 3.—At the Fassett meeting last night a catching campaign War-ner Miller in Dresden was read in which Mr. Miller hopes all his friends will loyally support the Republican nominees.

Malcolm Ford Very Ill.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 3.—Malcolm W. Ford, the famous amateur athlete, is seriously ill with typhoid fever at his home, 97 Clark street.

CABLE BREVITIES.

It is hinted in Vienna that Russia may have had a hand in the attempt to blow up Emperor Francis Joseph.

Several French pilgrims, who were afraid to have touched the memory of Victor Emmanual at Rome, were nearly mobbed by an Italian mob. Not for many years has the anti papal and anti Italian feeling of the Romans been so strongly exhibited before.

Ore with 80 per cent. lead, is of copper the figures amazing, which was discovered near Badenweiler on the Rhine.

H. M. Stanley and Jephson are at Ostend on a week's visit to King Leopold.

The proposition that is to reduce the full term of military service in Germany to two years has been received with favor by the emperor and the press.

A special prayer has been prepared on behalf of the Russian Jews, which will be offered in all the synagogues in England on the day of the atonement.

The Russian foreign office attaches no importance to Russia's threat of hostility in Asia, and believes it simply a ruse to clear the field for a descent on Constantinople.

Moorish tribesmen attacked a Spanish fort at Callerizas, Africa, but were repulsed. The Spanish government has made a demand upon the sultan of Morocco for reparation.

The czar and czarina returned to Schloss Fredensburg to celebrate their silver wedding.

PRESIDENT DILL'S SHORTAGE.

He Is Charged with Having Made a False Entry of $45,000.

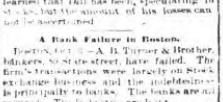
CLEARFIELD, Pa., Oct. 3.—The way is being gradually paved for President Dill's transit to the penitentiary. Bank Examiner Miller has made information before Justice of the Peace McCullough charging Dill with falsifying the bank's books by making a false entry of $10,000 on July 14. Bail will not be fixed until the extent of the crookedness is discovered. It is stated on undisputable authority that $25,000 additional to the $10,000 has been found to be missing. The bank examiner admitted that the amount is $25,000 and may run as high as $40,000 over as part of the books. Dill's house is furnished in palatial style and the floor is carpeted with luxurious rugs. Paintings on the wall are of value and from outside of a gallery. Until now all but a few hotheaded depositors have believed him not guilty of premeditated dishonesty. Before Mr. Dill entered financial circles he was a Methodist minister. He claims he knows nothing about the books being falsified.

Dill was re-arrested from his residence to jail at midnight. Mrs. Dill accompanied her husband to jail and was given permission to stay with him all night.

A report that Deputy Sheriff Davis attempted to serve a warrant on Dill late last night charging him with the embezzlement of $45,000 from the Montgomle bank, which was the amount withdrawn by Dill for use in the First National bank. Dill being already under arrest the warrant was not served until morning. It is rumored that Dill has been speculating in stocks, but the amount of his losses can not be ascertained.

A Bank Failure in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—A. B. Turner & Brother, bankers, 60 State street, have failed. The firm's transactions were largely on Stock exchange business and the indebtedness is principally to banks. The banks are not secured. The liabilities are light.



"WOMAN'S GLORY"

Is Her Hair. How She Has Dressed It During This Century.

NINETEENTH CENTURY COIFFURES.

Here is how our mothers-grandmothers, great and greater fixed up their hair. How much more sensible is the method of the primeval aborigines in the central back in the group herewith.—Though of course our fathers, grandfathers, great and greater thought that their sweethearts method of fixing their hair was just perfection. And who is to judge whether their taste was not equal to ours.

The Rush at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—The revenue cutter Richard Rush has arrived from Behring sea with special Agent J. Stanley Brown from the Seal islands; Dr. Shelton, government agent for education in Alaska, and the McGrath party, who have been two years in upper Alaska surveying the United States boundary line. The Rush reports that she seized only one seal pirate, the British schooner E. B. Marvin.

It Is Gambling in Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 3.—The supreme court has decided in the case of Osen Mohr et al vs. Anton Meissen that contracts in form for future delivery of grain or other commodities not intended for present actual transactions, but merely to pay and receive the difference between the agreed price and the market price at a future day, thereby in nature of wagers on the future price and void.

Two More Grade Crossing Victims.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 3.—At noon Isaac Randall, of this place, and Isaac Randall, Jr., of Manlius Centre, were instantly killed at a crossing on the New York, Syracuse, Ontario and Western railroad, about a mile north of Fayetteville. The Randalls were crossing the track on a lumber wagon loaded with potatoes. Both bodies were found on the cowcatcher of the engine. Both men were dead.

Jay Gould Not Driving.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Jay Gould did not visit his offices in the Western Union building yesterday. He remained at Lyndwington with his physician, Dr. Munn. All visitors in quest of information as to Mr. Gould's health were informed that he had recovered from his temporary indisposition and was out driving.

Murderer Wayman's Life Saved.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—Governor Hill has commuted the sentence of Samuel E. Wayman to imprisonment for life. Wayman was convicted in Livingston county in September last of having murdered Emory Thayer, in the town of Avon, in October, 1888. He was to have been executed at Geneseo next Tuesday.

Poured Vitriol on Her Husband.

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 3.—Mrs. Cora Frey of Newville was arraigned for throwing vitriol in the face of her husband, George Frey. They had quarreled, and while he was asleep the wife poured vitriol on his face. He is horribly burned along the face and neck. The woman has been placed under bail.

A Divorced Man at Eighty.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Nelson G. Burr, eighty years old, a lineal descendant of Aaron Burr, was divorced from the twenty-year-old wife, Mary A. Burr, and the latter has gone to New York to go on the stage. Burr is worth $150,000, but lives like a miser.

Mr. Wanamaker's Salesgirls in Black.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—All the saleswomen and cash girls in the Wanamaker store reported for duty in the morning in black attire. This was the result of an order to that effect issued several days ago. There was much feminine excitement and indignation.

GLADSTONE AND LABOR.

He Hails Its Advancement with Great Pleasure.

THE TORIES AND IRISH HOME RULE

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 3.—Gladstone's oration at Newcastle last evening shows the depth of the affection entertained for him by the Liberal masses of Great Britain. Mr. Gladstone has greatly disappointed the Tories by regaining his health. One reason for deferring the general election to as late a date as possible was well understood to be that the government might have to face Gladstone and his popularity. The signs now indicate, however, that the "grand old man" will be in excellent trim for the contest, which will probably be the last of his life, and one of the most momentous. He never had a more attentive audience than last night, and this is all the more significant for the reason that Newcastle is the hotbed of radicalism, and the Tories have been building hopes on Radical defection.

Mr. Gladstone's Speech.

After a vote of confidence in Mr. Gladstone had been passed Mr. Gladstone began in tones as clear and audible as he had used, expressed his profound gratitude for the reception accorded to him and to Mrs. Gladstone.

Making a survey of the public situation he would first allude to the arrears of legislation which, he said, would grow in proportion as the life of the Tory party prolonged. The Liberal party was in favor of shortening the period of parliament and would propose it at the earliest opportunity that could be justly and wisely chosen.

He criticised the increase of public expenditures for civil and naval purposes. The Liberals, he said, had tried to make the present administration in its foreign policy easy. Because they thought that, as far as the information went, the spirit had undergone a beneficent change. Appeals to passion and pride were no longer sent broadcast over the country.

To Get Out of Egypt.

I would, indeed, rejoice if before the day comes for the present administration to give up the ghost laughed and cheered, it will be possible for Lord Salisbury to make an effort to relieve us of the burdensome and embarrassing occupation of Egypt, which, so long as it lasts, must be a cause of weakness and a source of embarrassment. We all entirely to engagements contracted by a former Tory government, and which I fear the present government may, if it continues on its foreign policy without change, hand over to Liberal successors to deal with. (Cheers.)

Duty on Corn Question.

In regard to the liquor question he congratulated the country on the defeat of the publicans's bill, which disposes for all time of the monstrous and monstrous claims for compensation on the part of the publicans which the present government had acknowledged. Had the government been successful in carrying the second reading of the bill, with these claims established in it, they would have proved an impenetrable fort against every attempt to effectually deal with the drink traffic.

These approaching my period of life may not witness many reforms, but the great majority of them will see the application of effective reforms laws connected with the traffic in alcohol with the acknowledgment of the right of the local population to say whether within their borders public houses shall exist. (Cheers.)

The House of Lords Warned.

Mr. Gladstone concluded a note of warning to the house of lords and said it must not listen to Lord Salisbury's counsel, or public sentiment would find out whether there should be a fight between the throne and the people able to stop the action of the constitutional machine, which now has been perfected by the labors and wisdom of many generations. In regard to registration reform, Mr. Gladstone said this portion of the Liberal work would not be perfected without the adoption of the principle of one man, one vote, and the reform of the lodger franchise, which now worked against the laboring man.

The Labor Question.

On the subject of labor Mr. Gladstone spoke as follows:

Another question is undoubtedly forcing itself. It can be summed up in the single word, labor. (Cheers.) The great enfranchisement which we admire and of which we are consistency. But much remains to be done. Labor representation in parliament must be much further extended. So far as it has gone it has been thoroughly satisfactory, and has done enormous good. I can hardly say that it adds of much practical force. Additional numerical force is not only desirable, but in the highest degree urgent. (Cheers.) Nothing proves more distinctly the soundness (heart) of mind of the people of England than the choice made of labor representatives. (Cheers.) Let us give them the scope to show a few more men of the same kind—but a few, but a good many more—charged with the central management of affairs of the Liberal party will exhibit the utmost disposition to assist wherever a constituency has found favorable to the claims of labor candidates.

The Laborer and the Land Question.

Mr. Gladstone believed the necessary expenses of elections ought not to be drawn from the pockets of the candidates, but charged upon the ratepayers as a public function. The cause justly appertains to the public purse, and the labor members should not be fined for conferring the boon of their service upon the public. He also favored district and parish councils so that self-government would be brought to the door of the laboring man.

I boldly add that it is a duty to enact compulsory powers enabling municipalities to acquire land, in order to place the rural population in nearer relation to the use and profit from land, that they have so long failed to benefit others. But for themselves almost in vain. (Cheers.) Reform of the land laws, with abolition of entail, and facilities of transfer are absolutely necessary to do anything like justice to those inhabiting rural parishes.

The Irish Question.

Regarding the hours of labor, I view with sympathy and the liveliest pleasure the large reduction in the number of hours exacted from my fellow citizens, achieved within the past twenty years, and I wish well to all farther reductions that are possible to secure without violating the rights of any man. (Cheers.) In according to the principle of a compulsory law, binding laborers to reduce labor to a certain number of hours daily, I am glad to be assured that those who now receive for long hours low wages are to receive at least in full those wages for shorter hours. It is but an act of common humanity to caution our fellow countrymen that it will require more than a mere majority of all trades over the country to bind the minority to accept the standard hours proposed to be imposed upon them. I recommend much circumspection and much careful examination before proceeding to steps that may prove irretrievable, and therefore ought not to be precipitately adopted.

The Irish Question.

Concerning Irish affairs the speaker said: Our opponents say that they are going to impose a local government bill for Ireland and

GOVERNOR PATTISON'S REQUEST.

He Wants All the Papers that May Throw Light on the Matter.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—Mayor Stuart has received a letter from Governor Pattison requesting him to send to the governor copies of all books, papers, letters and other documents in the mayor's possession which will throw any light upon the management of the affairs of the auditor general and state treasurer.

In reply the mayor forwarded to the governor a list of all books, documents, etc., which are now or have been in the possession of the committee of experts appointed by the mayor to examine the accounts of the department of the city treasurer. All these documents, the mayor says, have been turned over to District Attorney Graham of this city, to whom the mayor will refer the governor's request.

GANNON FOR PRESIDENT

Irish Delegates Choose Him to Succeed Fitzgerald.

PARNELL AND THE PARIS FUNDS.

The Convention Is Against Home Worship in Ireland, and Warns the Warring Faction That the Evicted Tenants Fund Must Be Put to Its Proper Use.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The indications are that Alexander Sullivan is quite as powerful in this Irish National League convention as he was in that of 1886, when the Conservatives withdrew and left the field to the Radicals. It is openly stated that fully half the delegates are self appointed. The committee on resolutions is distinctly favorable to Parnell, but many of the Irish ex-leader's friends here hope the committee will not go to the length of indorsing him. They are afraid of the effect among the Conservatives in Ireland. A powerful faction, however, headed by Secretary Sutton, is not favorable to Parnell, and a bitter fight is expected should good words be said for the fallen champion.

Father Cusack's Warning.

The Radicals on the committee advocate a resolution condemning clerical or priestly interference in Irish politics, and demanding that the priests in Ireland take no part in the elections. Unless the convention make concessions to the conservatives there will be trouble. Then the priestly element proposes to make a fight. Father Cusack, of Cincinnati, says: "There is a movement on foot to run this convention to suit the purpose of the dangerous people in the Clan-na-Gael. These men will not be restrained by the influence of the Catholic clergy, but if they do not heed the warnings of the clerical party they will find themselves in the same position as those who in Ireland have set themselves up in opposition to the hierachy and have invited destruction. It will not be wise for this convention to indorse Parnell. He would have credit for what he has accomplished, but his present conduct is an index of his past insincerity."

M. V. Gannon, for President.

M. V. Gannon, of Omaha, last night succeeded John Fitzgerald as president of the league. The convention, notwithstanding a spirited struggle, adopted an attitude of absolute independence for the organization from any of the factions in Ireland. Secretary John P. Sutton was reelected and William Lyman chosen treasurer.

Gleason, of Cleveland, chairman of the committee on constitution, submitted a plan which made no mention of a parent body in Ireland, thus divesting the American body from subjection to the control of diverse organizations existing in Ireland. The plan was adopted without question, and the salaries of the president and secretary to be chosen were fixed at $1,000 each per year. The real fight of the day occurred when the report of the committee on platform was read by Chairman Gannon. It was adopted with a hurrah. The minority (or McCarthyite) report was unanimously adopted.

Concerning the Paris Fund.

The platform, after regretting the fight in Ireland, declares that force should only be employed in seeking freedom for Ireland after peaceable methods have proved futile, says:

We call upon those who are mainly responsible for the locking up of over $230,000, mainly contributed by the people of this country for the support of evicted tenants, to distribute it as originally intended by the subscribers, and we pledge ourselves that until this request is complied with we are resolved to owe no tribute another dollar to and those who have withheld this money from its legitimate beneficiaries.

Sympathy is expressed toward President Fitzgerald and First Vice President Martin, and the attention of America is called to "the case of American citizens suffering penal horrors in British dungeons because of evidence plainly manufactured and the fact that they dared to express themselves in favor of a free Ireland," and representatives in congress are asked to press the matter upon the attention of the state department.

Sutton's Startling Report.

Probably no more sensational document was ever submitted to a public gathering of Irishmen than the report of John P. Sutton, the secretary of the organization. The secret correspondence of the leaders, which is revealed in the report, and the structure of affairs under which the League would appear to have existed were surprising. The report says that after the convention in 1886 President Fitzgerald returned to his western home in the full belief that a great organized body of Irish-Americans stood behind him, united like brothers in the cause of Irish liberty. Then the report says that certain conspirators renewed, under cover of secret plots their attempts to demoralize and disrupt the League.

One peculiar disclosure is in effect that during October, 1888, Parnell, finding himself bound by agreement to turn over to his lawyers the full amount of the Times' defence fund, then unexpectedly large, begged of President Fitzgerald, through James J. O'Kelly, that, while pushing the collections, a fund be retained in America. Parnell's wishes were heeded and very soon there was a howl from the hagdful of fanatics in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, who charged that Rev. Dr. O'Reilly was retaining money for improper purposes. Their only object was to burst up every Irish organization in America.

The climax of Mr. Sutton's document is a letter dated House of Commons, London, May 31, 1890, from John Dillon to President Fitzgerald, marked "strictly confidential," saying:

Mr Parnell suggests that the executive should address a communication to him (Parnell) regarding the difficulties created by American party complications and advising that he (Parnell) should take steps to reconstruct the present organization in such a manner as would allow the various branches to communicate direct with Dublin.

If the executive can see their way to act upon the suggestion Mr Parnell will undertake to say that he will himself write, thanking them for their great services to the Irish cause, strongly disapproving of the attacks that have been made upon them, and stating that, having inquired into the charges made against the executive of the league, he is satisfied that they are utterly without foundation.

President Fitzgerald's Reply.

President Fitzgerald, replying, said the members of the executive could not conceal their astonishment at the tenor of the communication to them; denied that American politics interfered with the league; refused to follow Parnell's suggestions, and said that he was not "seeking a certificate of character from any one for having acted in every instance in conformity with Mr. Parnell's express desires."

The convention then adjourned sine die.

Outdoor Freedom.

Colonel Percy Yerger is one of the most popular criminal lawyers in Austin. He has an immense criminal practice and usually succeeds, with either a plea or from the jury, in acquitting his clients, no matter how atrocious their crime or overwhelming the evidence of their guilt. Last Sunday Colonel Yerger's little boy, Tommy, was asked by his Sunday school teacher:

"Tommy, the man who is good in this world goes to heaven; now what becomes of the bad men who disobey the laws of God?"

"Papa clears them," was the response.—Texas Siftings.

Close of Trenton's Fair.

TRENTON, Oct. 3.—The Interstate fair has closed. The attendance for the week was 38,278, a gain of 10,000 over last year. The races were all closely contested. The 2:17 class pacing purse was won by Lady Sherrilad. The 2:40 class trotting purse went to Mogul. The 2:27 class trotting purse was won by Misty. Dandy B captured the 2:30 class trotting purse, and the 2:50 class trotting purse was won by Parker J.

Hawke's Cricketers Win.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—Lord Hawkes' eleven won the second cricket match from All Philadelphia team by two runs, with four wickets to spare. The Philadelphians made a grand total of 175. The English men then started their second inning, and after the loss of six wickets scored the winning runs. At the close of the match an exhibition game was started.

The Norwood Disabled.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 3.—The indications are that there will be no race between the Vamoose and Norwood today, as the latter was kept here for some time owing to the accident to her blade caused by running on the Renfield reef. The Vamoose is here and ready for the race.

DR. BROOKS' ENEMIES SCORED.

Bishop Potter Says the Means They Used Were Very Questionable.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Bishop Potter in his "charge to the clergy," delivered privately on Wednesday at the Diocesan convention, referred to the agitation over the church standards caused by Herbert Newton's quarrel with the Apostles' Creed. The bishop spoke disparagingly of a clergyman's remaining in a pulpit of a church whose essential tenets he openly disavows.

Referring to the elections of Dr. Brooks to the episcopate the bishop said the effort to defeat the confirmation and to defeat it by methods which in the judgment of all Christian people ought to redound to the lasting dishonor of those who employed them, was an effort ostensibly to compass that defeat on grounds of doctrinal unsoundness, but really because the individual selected did not happen to hold a prevailing view of the apostolic succession.

Referring to the trial of Dr. Newton he said that if the clergy want their brethren tried they must shoulder the responsibility of bringing those accusations, which the many of them are ready enough to repeat, but cannot or will not themselves prove. When they do that they will discover that the machinery of the law will be set in motion quite as promptly as they could desire.

SUFFICIENCY.

A little love, of heaven a little drop,
And I have enough to make my cup o'erflow where,
Or when, or how, none may determine know,
Nor if doubt stomach, none but fools fear sorrow
Send on a hand his herald of Disdain.

On this gray life Love lights with golden glow,
Reflected from The Source, his bright wings
Spread
Its glory on us. If Fate grant our prayer—
A little love!
—Malcolm Douglas.

A little; 'tis as much as we may bear,
For Love is compassed with such fragile air
As the bright flakes in fitful dies, and wingeing so
Through all wisely but a taste; below
For little lives, a little while thereupon
A little more.
—Gleeson White.

MY FRIEND SLAUGHTER.

It was when I was an office clerk.

Every day, from 10 to 4, I was a voluntary prisoner in a weary turret hung with yellow portfolios and reeking with the sickening odors of old papers. There I lunched on Italian cheese and potatoes that I cooked in the open nickelled stove; there I read the newspapers, even the advertisements; rhymed sorry verses, and there I even transacted affairs of state, in order, at the end of the month, to get hold of a sum of money which just kept me from dying of hunger.

One of my companions in captivity I remember well.

His name was Achilles Slaughter, and certainly from his ferocious aspect and his great height he was worthy of the name. Slaughter was a devil of a fellow about forty years old. He had neither great breadth of chest or shoulders, but he dressed himself as if he had. He wore a wide brimmed felt hat, pea jacket ample and short, capacious, checked trousers and red cravats under a turn down collar. He had a full beard, bushy hair—I mean little gray—and he was very proud of his hairy hands.

The only affectation of Slaughter—for he was the greatest and best of companions—was his pretension to an athletic constitution, of possessing the biceps of a Discobolus, and, as he himself phrased it, of not really knowing what fear was. Indeed, I never made the slightest gesture, even in the exercise of his peaceful profession, which was not intended to convince the street was standing by of his prodigious vigor. When he had to take down a portfolio, even if it was almost empty, he walked toward the shelf with the pondered step of a porter, seized the portfolio with a tight grip, arm extended, and carried it to the nearest table, with raised shoulder-guard a frowning brow worthy of the Crotonian Milo. He carried this so fiercely that he never raised the lightest object except in the same manner. Once, when he was carrying out a basket of old papers, I saw him extend his left arm horizontally, as if to balance the mighty burden.

I must say that his strength inspired me with great respect; nor was the conversation of Slaughter of a nature to lessen the admiration I felt for him.

Above all, Monday morning, he could scarcely wait to tell me of his deeds of valor, his feats of strength. After having hung up his hat, his coat and his waistcoat, and having unbuttoned his shirt collar and cuffs, in order to hint at his fiery, inflammable temperament, he would plunge his hands in his pockets and, posting me in an attitude superb in its cool assurance, would begin a recital in this style:

"My dear fellow! Such a Sunday! Ver vy there was no sort of fatigue that I did not encounter. Fancy this. Yesterday was the regatta at Joinville-le-Pont. As 6 o'clock in the morning rendezvous at Bercy, 'Sign of the Ship,' for the crew of the 'Mousmée.' Nobody such a sort! A glass of white wine; jump into our suits of ticket, cotton trousers; seize an oar. Lay hold now! One—two—three. We are at Joinville. Arrive—at halt before breakfast. Hein! Quick, some trunks, a leap overboard, now the shell. When I had taken my turn I had the appetite of a demon. Good. I lay hold of the boat with one hand, and said to the coxswain, 'Charpentier, hand me a little ham.' One, two, three mouthfuls; I had nearly devoured it. 'Charpentier, pass me a flask of brandy.' Two swallows and it was drained. Now some more measures for digestion."

Thus the description continued, das sling. Homeric.

It was the hour for the regatta. It was noon; the sun streamed down. The canoes placed themselves in line in the river, sparkling with sunbeams and in front of a tent gay with fluttering pennons. One saw on the bank the mayor in his scarf, the police in their yellow shoulder belts, a swarm of summer toilets, of open parasols and straw hats. Poum! Off goes the rocket; it is the signal. The launch, driven by like an arrow, wins offhand and carries away the prize.

Fatigued? not a bit. Round the tower at Marne and return to dinner at Creteil. The night comes on cool. In the shadowy arbor the lighted pipes show like constellations. At the end of dessert, served here, there, where you will, the sound of the cornet at the ball at Willis's. In place for the quadrille! But hold! a rival crew, vanquished that very morning, had secured all the prettiest laundresses. To the rescue! Now for broken teeth, black eyes, broken bones, blows on head, below the belt—in a word, a whole poem of bodily enthusiasm, of brawling joy, of overflowing health, not to speak of the return at midnight, of crowded stations, of women heisted into the cars, of friends separated and calling to one another from one end of the train to the other, and the horns of the guard on the top.

Patient! as it is to avow it, I must confess that my admiration of Slaughter was tempered with regret and bitterness. Perhaps there was in it even something of envy. But never did the recital of his most marvelous exploit awaken in me the least suspicion of incredulity, and Achilles Slaughter only found a place in my mind between heroes and demigods, between Roland and Pirithous.

At this same time I wandered much about the suburbs, spending my idle summer evenings in solitary walks in these far off regions, as unknown to the Parisian of the boulevard as the country of the Caribees, and of which I hope later to celebrate in verse its melancholy charm.

One hot and dusty evening in July, just as the gas lamps were beginning to shine through the twilight mists, I returned, walking slowly from the outskirts of Vaugirard. I chose one of the long and weary streets of the Faubourg, framed in by houses of unequal height, where the concierges sit in the doorway in shirt sleeves and short gowns, fanc ying they are taking the air. At long distances a mason, white with plaster, passes by; a policeman or a child with a loaf of bread longer than itself, or, perhaps, a young girl hurrying along, in bonnet and waterproof, with a leather bag on her arm, and every quarter of an hour a half empty omnibus returning to the station to the dull trot of its weary horses.

Walking in the middle of the street, for the asphalt footpaths were as yet not an object of luxury in the city parts, I wandered along in the street tasting the small but sweet joys of the amateur. Sometimes, I stopped before an empty lot, peering through the dancing fence bars in the greenish sky the afterglow fade behind the black silhouette of some tall factory chimney. Then sometimes a glance of the eye would reveal through an open window a picturesque and familiar interior here a fine buxom laundress holding her iron up to her cheek, and there some work men at table in a wineshop, before them an old street singer, with long gray locks, his voice quavering on the word "Liberty," and accompanying himself on a guitar the color of greasy soup—Chardins, Van Ostades, all.

Suddenly I stopped. One of these domestic interiors in an instant won my attention by its charming air of simplicity and comfort.

She was so happy and contented in her little faded parlor, this good old lady in her black dress and widow's cap, seated in the depths of an easy chair covered with greenish Utrecht velvet, her hands peacefully clasped across her knees. Everything around her was old and modest, and seemed to be preserved, less through economy than from love. Even a flower, a souvenir, doubtless of her honeymoon, passed with the gentleman in the coat a la Goethe, the flowered waistcoat and complexion a little browned by time, whose oval pastel adorned the wall.

The two lights on the mantel were sufficient to permit me to distinguish the oddbits of furniture in the room—the clock mounted on a painted fish carved out of marble; the upright piano of forgotten form, on which young women, in mutton leg sleeves and hair a la Greek, used to play airs that were doubtless from Romagnesi.

I was confident that a child, an only one and well beloved, had finally remained unmarried to care tenderly for the old widow. It was she who had so carefully seated the old mother, who had put the cushion under her feet, who had wheeled near her this little marquetry table and placed on it that saliver and those two cups; I waited to see her come in, bringing the evening coffee—this daughter, sweet and calm, who would be dressed in mourning like the old lady, and who would greatly resemble her in the enjoyment of a scene so sympathetic and in the grandeur of lineaments this humble poem, I was standing before the open window, confident I would not be perceived in the dark street, when I saw a door open in the back of the old fashioned room and suddenly appear—oh how far from my thoughts!—my companion Slaughter himself, the hero of all the cliffs on the river and of numerous struggling wrestling matches.

A swift doubt crossed my mind. I felt that I was on the point of discovering a secret.

It was he, sure enough! His terrible hairy hand held a little silver coffee pot that was accompanied by a poodle which played around his legs—a brave and classic poodle, the poodle of the blind men who play clarionets, the poodle of the "Cinq des Pauvre" of Vigneron, the poodle shaved like a lion, with cuffs of hair on his four legs and a mustache as large as that of a staff general.

"Mamma," said the giant, in a voice in effably sweet, "here is your coffee. I think you will find it very nice this evening. The water had thoroughly boiled, and I poured it drop by drop."

"Thanks," answered the old lady, rolling her easy chair toward the table with the movement of enfeebled old age.

"Thanks, my little Achilles. Your dear papa often told me I had no rival in making coffee. He was so indulgent, so good; poor, excellent man. But I am neglecting to think that you made it still better than I."

At this moment, as Slaughter pounced out the sugar, and gently as a young girl thinking about getting married, the dog by his discovery of the sugar bowl placed his two fore paws on his mistress' knees.

"Down, Medor!" she cried with indignation. Did you ever see such a provoking dog! Come, sir, you know very well that your master never forgets to give you the bottom of the cup. Be quiet a moment if you can. By the way," she turned to her son, "you have taken this poor creature out to walk today."

"Certainly, mamma," he answered in a voice almost infantile. "When I went to the dairy for the morning's milk I put Medor's leader and collar on and took him with me. And he feels now quite comfortable. Don't fear, mamma, he's all right."

Reassured on the important point of the dog's health, the good lady drank her coffee with the air of an epicure, watched with inexpressible tenderness by both her son and the poodle.

It was needless to hear and see further I knew already what sort of family life—peaceful, narrow, pure, resigned — my friend Slaughter led under his fanciful bravado. But the view that chance had given me was at the same time so humorous and so touching that I could not resist the pleasure of carrying it a few minutes and this indiscretion was sufficient for me to learn the real truth.

Yes, this type of a vulgar man about town, which seemed to have escaped out of one of Paul de Kock's novels, this dealer of wine shops and public houses per formed simply, courageously, in this poor home in the outskirts of the town, the sublime duties of a sister of charity. This dashing carsman had made no longer voyages on the journey to mass or vespers on Sunday with his mother. This professor of billiards could only play bezique this breaker in of bulldogs was enslaved by a poodle. This Ralph Royster Doyster was an Antigone.

The next morning when I went to the office I asked Slaughter how he had spent his evening. Without the least hesitation he spun for me the story of a bloody affair which took place at 2 o'clock that morning in the boulevard d'Enfer, when he had knocked down, with one blow of the fist and his thumb passed through his key ring, one of the dangerous prowlers around the outskirts of Paris.

I listened with an ironical smile, and I meant to confuse him; but, remembering how prudent worthy is goodness which hides itself, even if it has a funny side, I struck him in friendly fashion on the shoulder and said to him, meaning it too:

"Slaughter, you are a hero."—Translated from the French of Francois Coppee for Romance.

Copper and Aluminium.

Copper fused with tin forms bronze, an alloy known from remote antiquity. Bronze into which aluminium enters as an element takes on a variety of new properties. It is as strong as steel, and because it resists corrosion is an admirable material for propeller blades and rudder frames in ship building. Its high price has hitherto restricted its use, but as aluminium grows constantly cheaper, and economies are introduced in the production of the electric current by which the alloy is made, its applications are steadily increasing.—Youth's Companion.

VARIOUS VERSES.

Happy Ideas Put Together in Motion Rhyme.

Owned a pair of skates and "ll—traded
For 'em—swapped 'em on, and traded
Up—got them back—with a vengeance
Tit she'd frame up fit for skatin.
Mildest winter I ever—
Mere like spring than winter weather—
Didn't front bal 'bout December—
Git us airly, ketch a feather
Of it, maybe, 'round the winder—
Sunshine swinges it like a cinder!

Well! I waited!—And kep' waitin!
Couldn't see my money's worth in Them air skates and wax and wax shatin,
Nor no hint o' ice nor nothin!
So, one day—along in airly
Spring—I swopped 'em off—and barely
Closed the dicker. 'Fore the weather
Natcherly jest slipped the ratchet!—
And—crick—tail face—all together—
Frose so tight cat couldn't scratch it!
—James Whitcomb Riley, in Indianapolis Journal.

A Spoiled Romance.

I took her hand,
She did not blush, nor hang her head,
But looked right up at me instead;
'Twas in a little euchre game,
She didn't understand the name
Of any card, and went astray,
And just to show her how to play—
I took her hand.
—Brooklyn Eagle.

Her Ma Does Le Washing

A witching maid
At tennis played,
In a gown all frills and laces;
Her hands were neat,
Her feet petite,
Her form was full of grace,

But sad to confess,
When that white dress
Needs washing, there comes a stealin
O'er the maid so sweet,
With hands pellite,
That dreadful "tired feeling."
—New York Herald.

Marguerites.

When Reginald with Marguerite
One morning through the meadow strolled,
He found a blossom at her feet,
With petals white and heart of gold.
Within her hand the bloom he laid,
And said, "The yours, what is it sweet?
Then, laughingly, replied the maid,
"My daisy is a marguerite."

Then Reginald to Marguerite
A sweet, old fashioned story told;
And all his fortune at her feet,
He offered for her heart of gold.
The maiden promised him to wed,
Then in half mischief, half in bore,
From face so flower glanced, and said,
"My Marguerite's a daisy."
M. Thayer Rouse in Boston Transcript.

Sweet Things

"There's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream."
Especially when love is fed

Theory and Practice.

A pessimist was tired of life,
"If some one came to strike me dead,
I wouldn't move to help myself.
This earth is such a bore," he said.

"Confound the flies! They do beat all."
And the life tired man didn't rest until
He'd smashed that buzzer 'gainst the wall.

The Mountain Ale.

When to the mountains last I went
To breathe the reviving air,
I was convinced that nowhere else
Its needed more than there.
For when its clerk brought his account
With many a flourish writ,
I gasped and panted for fresh air,
And cubic yards of it.
—New York Herald.

The Reason Why.

The day had passed in happy play
And twilight comes anon,
And fruitiness asserts her sway
When candles are gone,
And mother lays her work away
And holds out her arms for one—

Her baby boy, who always found
Within that sheltering nest,
When childish troubles most abound,
A refuge and a rest.
He does not come, although his eyes
His willingness confessed.

"Come, darling!" Mother's cooing tone
Woos softly, but in vain.
"I've lost my baby," does she moan
In simulated pain.
"No, no, mamma, but I have grown
And I'm a man, I am not that baby."

"But yesterday," his mamma said,
"Upon my lap you sat;
We read of 'Toddlekins' and 'Fred'
And the 'Boofer pussy cat;'
Of Baby Bunting's ways we read
And the mischief he was at."

The little head drooped very low
And rested on my knee;
I am not that baby," does she moan
In a confidential key:
"But yesterday, mamma, you know,
I wasn't in pants, you see."
—Babyhood.

As Good as Dead.

One Thing Sure.

She (coin spirit)—No, sir, it won't—not it won't scrub either; but if you want it to play the piano, it's yours, George.—Life.

Singular.

A fourteen-year-old Boy at school wrote this sentence in an exercise, "Ten men and four woman." His teacher pointed out to him the sentence with the remark:

"Is it possible that you do not know after all these years of school that the plural of woman is women?"

The boy scratched his head in a somewhat disconcerted way.

"Anyway," he said, "I've often heard my father say that woman is a singular creature."—Youth's Companion.

Really So.

There is no end to fish lying stories. One comes from Yellowstone Park that it is possible to land a trout from the shore of one of the noted rivers there and with a single curve of the wrist to drop the fish into a hot spring, from which it may be taken in a few minutes fully boiled.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Lawyer Outwitted.

An old whitewasher stood before the court as a witness. The lawyer for the defendant tried to confuse him.

"You are Friedrich Muller?"

"Yes."

"Are you the Friedrich Muller who was sentenced under mitigating circumstances for robbery?"

"No, I am not that Muller."

"You are, perhaps, the Muller who was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for theft?"

"No, I am not that Muller, either."

"Were you ever in prison?"

"Yes, twice."

"How long the first time?"

"A whole afternoon."

"An afternoon? And the second time? You must make truthful statements, for you are sworn. If you were in prison for so short a time, what did you do?"

"I only whitewashed a cell for a lawyer who had cheated his clients."

The lawyer did not ask any more questions on that subject.—From the German.

THE FOUR GOSPELS.

DESCRIBED IN A SERIES OF LECTURES BY REV. MR. MITCHELL.

Answering Four Pertinent Question as to Who Wrote Them, When and Why they Were Written, and What Do They Contain.

During the past four Sunday evenings Rev. Mr. Mitchell repeated a series of lectures in the Methodist church, on the four Gospels, delivered originally before the Black Hills' Chautauqua Assembly at Hot Springs, South Dakota, last August.

The subjects were treated in Mr. Mitchell's usual style, and attracted more than usual attention.

The following is a brief outline of the four discourses. In the first discourse Mr. Mitchell said that he would ask and answer four questions concerning each of the Four Gospels. He termed his questions the "Four W's," who, when, why and what. Who wrote the Gospel? When was it written? Why was it written? and what does it contain?

In the case of the First Gospel he showed that Matthew was the undoubted author, and by references to his history and by delineation of his character, showed that as a Jew he was admirably adapted to write the Gospel for the Jews. In response to the second inquiry, he showed that the Gospel must have been written prior to 70 A. D., and that it must have been written before the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus.

In response to the third inquiry he showed that Matthew's object was to show forth Jesus as the promised Messiah. The key to his Gospel is found in the words "That it might be fulfilled." Matthew argued from the prophet that Jesus was the long promised Messiah.

In the last part of the discourse he showed how admirably the contents of the Gospel met the object the evangelist had in view. What Matthew wrote prior to 70 A. D. Why? to show forth Jesus as the Messiah. What? The whole narrative is so presented as to magnify Jesus as the Jewish Messiah.

In the second discourse on the Second Gospel the same questions were asked. Who wrote the Second Gospel? Mark, an earnest spirit, fired and elaborately outfitted by his Roman characteristics and wide knowledge of the empire to write a Gospel which could commend Jesus to the Roman.

When was the second Gospel written? Like Matthew's Gospel it was shown to have been written before the Fall of Jerusalem. Why was the Gospel written? To show forth to the Roman world Jesus Christ as the Mighty Conqueror. What does the second Gospel contain? It was shown that Jesus was presented to the Roman, who delighted in power and control, who had a genius for government, that the Man of Power is Jesus Christ, the all-conquering son of God. The need of the Roman was fully met by just that kind of a presentation of Jesus as would commend him to the Roman Soul.

In the third lecture, following the same method as before Mr. Mitchell answered and answered the two-fold inquiry: Who wrote the third Gospel? Luke, the cultivated Greek physician, the only one of the writers possessing that culture which qualified him for writing a Gospel adapted to the refinement and culture of the Greek world. When was the Gospel written? Before 70 A. D. Why was the third Gospel written? To present Jesus to the Greek world as the Perfect Man. The Greeks were in search of the ideal man. They had already had produced the greatest men of history, but they were conscious of serious defects in the moral training of their system, and they were longingly searching for a type of manhood which would surpass them all. That Greece's soul produced—Luke shows forth Jesus in the perfection of his manhood, Jesus the Son of Man. What does the third Gospel contain? Just such a presentation of the humanity of Jesus which would commend him to the Greek Soul as the one "altogether lovely"—the acme of human aspiration and hope.

Last evening the last lecture, the one on the fourth Gospel, was delivered. In response to the first inquiry who wrote the fourth Gospel, it was shown that the testimony of the Fathers in regard to John's authorship was yet unsuccessfully rebutted, modern German critics to the contrary, notwithstanding. Some time was given to the second inquiry, when was the third Gospel written? Evidence was given to show that the modern efforts to bring down the date to a later period than that generally accepted by the church were ineffectual—that it was written about 90 A. D. when John was an old man and after his apostolic contemporaries had passed away. Why was the fourth Gospel written? To give the Christian church at that time a perfect portrait established in the place of Judaism, a True Spiritual revelation of the character of Jesus. He would show forth Jesus as the Eternal Word, Co-equal with the Father. John's own design was quoted: "These signs are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." What does the Fourth Gospel contain? Not mere matter supplementary to the other Gospels, but new revelation of the feast of Christ as was revealed to him who leaned on the Master's bosom. Here are found the individual discourses in which Christ makes the highest claims of His Divinity.

In closing, the speaker said: "As I look at Jesus from one angle of vision, I see, with Matthew, the promised Messiah. As I look at Him from another angle of vision, I see, with Mark, the Conquering Christ. As I look at Him from still another angle of vision, I see, with Luke, the Perfect, the Holy One—the Son of Man. But when I take my stand by John, I look no longer at angle, but gaze with rapturous vision into the full face of Jesus Christ—the Son of God, my Lord and my God!"

New Officers.

At a recent meeting of the Junior Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months:

President—Charles Dalliver.

First Vice-President—John H. Van Winkle.

Second Vice-President—Sarah Holmes.

Corresponding Secretary—Olive Wyckoff.

Treasurer—Theodore Hazell.

Arrested for Stealing a Watch.

Saturday in response to a dispatch from Pennsylvania Acting-Captain of Police Lynch, arrested Harry Moncton, a resident of North Plainfield, on the charge of stealing a watch. Moncton was held until this morning when a telegram announcing that the watch had been returned was received and Mr. Lynch released the prisoner.

A FAMILY FIGHT.

One Brother-in-Law Broke the Other One's Jaw.

Cornick Canfield and Dominick Duffy are relatives. Duffy married Canfield's sister. At about seven o'clock Saturday evening the peace and quietness of that section of the city known as the boulevard was disturbed by a family row. The principals in the affair were Canfield and Duffy.

Duffy was "worsted" he came out of the fracas with a compound fracture of the jaw. A bystander says that Duffy was under the influence of liquor at the time and that he was getting the best of Canfield, when he slipped and fell and that Canfield grabbed a stone and hit him (Duffy) in the face with it thereby fracturing his jaw as above stated. No arrests have as yet been made.

SHOT BY A FARMER.

While Gathering Chestnuts Several Young Men Were Shot at.

Mr. John Stevens, a resident of East Second street, gave permission to John Yose, Mr. Theodore Smith, Mr. John Smith and another young man from this city to gather chestnuts from trees on some property of his near Dog Corner.

The young men yesterday visited the farm and gathered about twenty-five quarts of chestnuts, but unknowingly trespassed on another farmer's property and without warning the farmer shot at them. Some of the shot struck Mr. Yose on the arm and one penetrated his head. The other members of the party escaped unhurt but the shot rattled in close proximity to their heads.

THE HARVEST HOME.

A SONG SERVICE AT THE PARK AVENUE CHURCH.

A Fine Display — Fine Singing, led by the New Leader, Mr. Roe, with Mrs. Tylee of Paterson, Soloist, Rev. Mr. Pills' Remarks.—A Large Congregation.

HOWING gratitude in the old days, when the Jews were the Chosen People of God, they were accustomed to gather together, at the close of the harvest, for the feast of Tabernacles to thank God for His bounty and goodness. Not in commemoration of that custom, but with a like sense of God's providence and blessing, the people of the Park Avenue Baptist church were gathered together last evening to thank the great Giver of all good, in a song service of prayer and thanksgiving, for the bountiful harvests of the year. The church was most tastefully decorated with fruits of the harvest. Around the platform like great horns of plenty stood full baskets showing corn, rosy-cheeked apples, carrots, red tomatoes, turnips and potatoes. In front of the pulpit leaned twin big pumpkins flanked on either side by purple egg-plants. Heads of cabbage, Spanish onions, mammoth beets, tiny radishes, and bunches of celery were showing over and under and between the baskets. Nothing was out of place. All together made a beautiful picture. Tall corn-stalks, with yellow ears, half-husked; vines of lima-beans and sheaves of golden wheat made a back-ground, while great sheaves of rye framed the pulpit. On the left of the pulpit hung great branches of chestnuts. Corn-stalks and wild-flowers made a novel trimming for the organ-loft. Pink and white dahlias added to the general beauty, while down in front of the lower platform stood a row of graceful palms and potted plants.

When the service began not only the sweet-toned organ, but every heart prompted the great congregation to rise and sing: "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." The service was a beautiful one. The two anthems by the choir under their new leader, Mr. Roe, were well rendered. Mrs. Tylee, who came from Paterson to be at the service, sang two solos. In the second her voice was especially clear and sweet, and all hearts were touched as she sang the beautiful verses of "Nearer My God to Thee." One of the most beautiful hymns was the first on the programme, "What Shall the Harvest be?" Miss Runyon, who took the solo part, sang with all her heart, and the congregation were so interested in listening to the choir that they forgot to join in the chorus. The pastor talked for fifteen minutes on thoughts suggested by the harvest. First the temporal, material harvest. Never had this land known a year of such plenty. God had greatly blessed our land and to him we ought to return thanks. The harvests are so abundant that every poor man ought to be the richer for them, richer because it should take less money out of his scanty purse to buy food. When God has made food so plentiful, shame be to the man who would for his own private gain make the price of breadstuffs unnaturally dear.

"There are harvests morals and harvest spiritual," he continued, "And in order to reap bountifully in the latter we must sow bountifully. If we would have a part in the great harvest home song service at the end of the world we must have Christ for our leader, for He will lead that greatest and perfect of all services of song. "God grant that you and I may have a glad voice in the song the redeemed shall sing, "the song of Moses and the Lamb."

The Jury Disagreed.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Bird sued the Postal Telegraph Company for a sum of money alleged to be due on poles furnished the company by her, through the company's agent, William Slifer. The case was tried before Justice Nodyne and a jury. The taking of testimony occupied several hours, a recess of one o'clock the jury retired. After deliberating several hours the members claimed that they could not agree and the Justice discharged them.

Boys' Club Notes.

The average attendance per evening, during the last month was fifty four. Number of visitors belong sixty three.

All members of the Edwards' Zouaves are requested to appear for drill on Wednesday evening of this week at 8:30 o'clock.

A New Hall Dedicated.

The Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society went to Perth Amby to-day to participate in the dedication of a new singing hall, which is to take place there this afternoon. Societies from New Brunswick, Newark, Jersey City and other places will also be present.

Mrs. Ellis at the Mission.

The popular evangelist, Mrs. Ellis, was at Warren Union Mission last evening. A large congregation was present and took an active part in the services. Mrs. Ellis will hold a service every evening.

SPORTING NEWS

"REPUTATION" WON THE RACE.

Speedy Horses at the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

There was one race only on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday. It was between Mr. J. W. Johnson's (Colonel M. Hays' "Andy," Dr. F. C. Herbert's "Reputation."

The race was very exciting. After the judges gave the word to go, the bay colt, Reputation made a break and was thought by the spectators to be out of the race, but Mr. C. C. Brower, who was driving, brought him to his feet with his usual skill and trotted the mile in 2.09½, winning the heat, with Mr. Hays' "Andy" second.

The second trial was a dead heat, between "Reputation" and "Andy."

The third heat was won by "Reputation," with "Colonel" second.

SUMMARIES.

Reputation, (C. C. Brower.)	1	D. H. 1
Andy, (Mr. Hays)	2	D. H. 3
Colonel, (J. Osborne)	3	2

Time, 2.39½, 2.42, 2.42½.

Mr. C. C. Brower drove Mr. M. Quinn's gray, "George C," an exhibition mile in 2.32.

BASE BALL.

The last base ball game of the season was played between the Crescents and New Brunswicks Saturday afternoon on the Crescent grounds. It was a benefit game and the receipts were given to the players. The playing of both teams was good. Up to the sixth inning not a run was made. In that inning the New Brunswick team scored three runs. They scored three more in the next inning, making a total of six runs.

The Crescents did not score until the ninth inning, and then only one run. The score by innings is as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
New Brunswick	1	0	0	0	0	3	2	0	*	—6

Next Saturday the Crescents will visit New Brunswicks and play a return game. The club will then disband for the season.

The Racquet Club Defeated.

The "continued" tennis match between the Rockview Avenue Club and the Racquet Club, both of North Plainfield, played on the Rockview Avenue Club's courts Saturday afternoon was very interesting. The score, although all the games were strongly contested, was overwhelmingly in favor of the Rockview Avenue Club. The players from the Racquet Club, while not denying the ability of their opponents as tennis players think the score would be reversed in their favor if the games were played on the Racquet Club's court. Another match may be arranged. The score was:

Mr. J. Stillwell Brewster beat Mr. G. W. Morrison—6-1—1-6—6-4.

Mr. H. D. Morrison beat Mr. H. Townsend—6-1—6-5.

Mr. G. Cooley beat Mr. W. McClymont 6—2—6-0.

The final double, postponed on account of darkness was then played off and Messrs. J. R. VanDeventer and G. Cooley beat Dr. V. W. Baker and Mr. H. Patton—6-3—6-5.

The Dunellen Jr. O. U. A. M. will hold a meeting in the new school house Wednesday evening, when the newly-elected officers will be installed. NEMO.

C. Y. M. L.

The Progress Made by a Virtually New Organization.

Owing to the efforts of the Rev. Father Stafford, the assistant pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum has become one of the strongest Catholic organizations in this city. Father Stafford has been untiring in his efforts to build the society up and the point which it has attained must be most gratifying to him.

A short time ago the society purchased the building known as the Dearing building, situated at the corner of Liberty and Sixth streets.

At a recent meeting the members of the Lyceum decided were model it. They propose to build an extension with a hall to accommodate three hundred people. There will be bowling alleys, a billiard and pool room, a library, and a parlor. It is thought that the new building will be ready for occupancy about the middle of November, when the members of the organization propose to give a grand opening.

The society is officered as follows: Spiritual Director—Rev. J. A. Stafford. President—Thomas Carty. Vice-President—John J. Kenney. Recording Secretary—Frank McInerny Financial Secretary—Michael Mack. Treasurer—Michael Whalen. Trustees—Rev. E. E. Smythe, Thos. Carty and John J. Kenney.

The Union County Republican League

A meeting of the Union County Republican has been called for Thursday evening, Oct. 8th, at the office of Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, First National Bank building, Elizabeth.

The meeting is to elect delegates to the convention of Republican clubs to be held at Trenton on Oct 15, and to transact any other business that may come up.

It is to be hoped that the members of the League will turn out in full force, and not only renew the old and pleasant associations of the successful campaigns of '87 and '88, but make some arrangements toward effective organization for the campaign of '91 and '92.

The League has a splendid record, and only a little energy and activity is needed to put it in position to renew its former triumphs.

Injured His Leg.

Robert Marriner, an employe of Mr. Frank Day of West Fourth street, met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon. While he was working with a hay fork he slipped and one of the tines of the fork penetrated the calf of his left leg.

—The Union County courts will begin its October term to-morrow.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Don't put the national guard under control of the war department, says Captain G. S. Wilson of the Twelfth United States infantry. The better class of young men would not then belong to it. The result would be to recruit loafers, and the cost would be a paid militia. That would be as bad as a standing army out and out.

A new source of prosperity has come to the south, and that is the winter tourist. Each year the number of rich people who can afford to flee from a rigorous climate becomes greater, and these find nowhere at once so much comfort and beauty as in the southern part of their own land. Florida has increased more rapidly in wealth than any other southern state, and the reason is simply oranges and tourists.

There is a naturalization mill in Havre, France, which supplies fraudulent naturalization papers ready stamped and sealed to emigrants who will buy them, although the fellows never saw America and cannot speak a word of English. It would be interesting to know whether it is a native born American who is at the head of this nefarious business. The man who would thus foist the scum of Europe upon his native land is worse than a murderer and meaner than a horse thief.

Colored Officeholders.

The colored brethren of Ohio, like other Ohio men, generally get their share of what is going, not excepting political offices. Ohio was one of the first states to elect colored men to her legislature. This fall five colored voters required something of a pledge from the Republican party that in the distribution of "them 'ere offices" they would not be forgotten.

Meantime it may not be out of place to mention that at present, in the District of Columbia alone, 2,895 colored persons, mostly men, hold office under the United States government. These colored officeholders draw annually from the United States treasury in salaries $1,370,663, which is not to bad.

The negroes are mostly employed as messengers, janitors, porters, etc. Comparatively few have arrived at the dignity of a clerkship, not so much perhaps because of want of capacity as because of the greater fluency of the white man and brother in gaining the ear of the appointing power. John M. Langston, the colored ex-congressman of Virginia, has compiled a table of the colored officeholders at Washington, with their salaries, as follows:

Civil service commission	1	$ 3,000 00

The Boomers' Territory.

Twenty-nine months ago the territory of Oklahoma, in the heart of the Indian territory, was settled in an hour. This September the presidential proclamation opened to settlers other than Indians 820,000 acres more on the eastern border of Oklahoma. They, too, were settled in an hour. The new landside between the Cimmarron river on the north and the Canadian on the south. They are divided by the new settlers into two counties, one occupying the northern the other the southern portion of the newly ceded lands. The county seats were selected by the United States government beforehand, so that in these cases there can be no county seat war.

The northern county seat is called Chandler, the southern Tecumseh. Each site is forty miles from Guthrie, O. T. It may be mentioned that the lawyers' shingles were waiting to be hoisted upon tents before the government survey of these sites was completed. It is there fore no use for any young lawyers from the states to go out there and grow up with the country. The unique feature of this new last boom was the number of negroes who entered with the rest, determined to fight for homesteads.

While the government lands of this country were first opened to settlement the United States was glad to give them away to anybody who would take and till them. Even then some of the most fertile remained fifty years before they were occupied. That day has gone forever. If we had a dozen more territories all would be settled with a boom. Just as Oklahoma has been. In this generation we have a younger people, ever drawing higher for whatever they can get.

Well, luck to the 25,000 Septembor boomers who went in and made homes and farms in a night on the lands sold to the government by the Iowa, Sacs, Foxes and Pottawatamies. Luck to the postmaster of Tecumseh, who got his appointment before the town was laid out. All of you, men, women and children, black and white—each one of your rooms proves a homestead.

SHE IS MRS. WILDE NOW

Frank Leslie's Widow Has Changed Her Name.

EX-SENATOR PLATT'S SON MARRIED

A Quiet Wedding at Norwood, N. J., Makes Miss Harriet Colt, a Washington Society Belle, His Bride—The Event Will Be a Surprise to Their Friends.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—A notable journalistic alliance which will greatly interest literary and social circles was formed last night. It was, above all, a matrimonial alliance, and the contracting parties were William C. Kingsbury Wilde, M. A., of London, and Mrs. Frank Leslie, whose name has been made a household word by the journals that bear her name.

When Mr. Wilde stepped from a transatlantic steamship last Wednesday and took apartments in the Brunswick there were not half a dozen in this country who knew he intended to wed Mrs. Leslie. All his friends thought him a confirmed old bachelor, and charming London mammas had for years angled for him in vain. He met Mrs. Leslie for the first time in London three years ago, and since then has been paying her attentions, but no one imagined that the couple contemplated matrimony.

Few People Were Present.

It was a quiet wedding. Only the contracting parties and four others were present. Dr. Charles F. Deems, of the Church of the Strangers, performed the ceremony. Marshall P. Wilder, the humorist, who has been a personal friend of the bride, stood up with her, and Mr. Cramer, who is connected in an editorial capacity with Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly, and Mrs. Cramer were the only other witnesses. After the clergyman had given the new married pair his blessing the party of six sat down to supper.

The Honeymoon Trip.

This evening Mr. and Mrs. Wilde will start on a bridal tour to Niagara Falls. When they return they will take up their residence in this city, probably at the Gerlach, where Mrs. Wilde has for some time made her home. Mrs. Leslie never looked better than she did when she placed her right hand in that of Mr. Wilde and replied in a clear voice to Dr. Deem's questions. She wore a Worth gown of pearl gray cashmere trimmed with lace of the same color and cream colored satin. Her dainty bonnet matched her dress.

The Groom Oscar Wilde's Brother.

Mrs. Leslie has often said that if she ever married again she would marry a journalist, and she has kept her word, for Mr. Wilde is a journalist in the true sense of the word. He is the eldest son of Sir William and Lady Wilde, and was born in Dublin about forty years ago. Oscar Wilde, who set society circles agog when he visited this country in 1884, is the groom's brother.

Mr. Wilde was graduated from Trinity college, Dublin, in 1876, with honors, receiving the senior moderator and gold medalist of his class. In 1879 he was called to the Irish bar and practiced with success in the northeast circuit.

Finding the world of an Irish barrister too circumscribed for him, he determined to go to London and take up journalism, for which he was well fitted. He soon made an enviable reputation as a contributor to such journals as Punch, Vanity Fair and The World. For four years he was the leading and as an article on The Daily Telegraph. In this department of journalism he is probably best known. He has also written many poems and essays.

Mrs. Leslie's Career.

Mr. Wilde is tall, with a fine presence. He has dark hair and piercing bright eyes, and wears a closely cropped beard. In all probability he will take his wife's place in the management of her interests. Mrs. Wilde is chiefly known through the journals which her first husband, Frank Leslie, founded. When he died his affairs were left in a sadly tangled condition, and his young widow soon untangled the skein and put affairs to rights.

It was several times announced that she was to marry sundry noble personages, but the reports always proved unfounded. Some time ago the Marquis de Leuville was a most persistent suitor and announced that he had captured the prize, but somehow he was mistaken.

Ex-Senator Platt's Son Marries.

NORWOOD, N. J., Oct. 5.—There will be a burst of surprise in society in New York and Washington today over the news that Mr. Edward T. Platt, oldest son of ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, to Miss Harriet J. Colt, of Washington, were quietly married on Saturday at Norwood. No one but the immediate members of Mr. Platt's and Miss Colt's families were present at the wedding, and there has been no announcement of it to friends.

The engagement, it is said, was not known in Washington, where Miss Colt was a society belle, and Mr. Platt's relatives in New York were not informed of it until four weeks ago. Miss Colt's father is the wife of the Rev. Henry M. Ladd, of Norwood.

Sued His Former Pupil.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 5.—Principal George H. Tanner, of the Bridgeport Business college, has brought suit against pretty Miss Lula Meisler for $10,000 damages for slander. Turner alleges that the girl, who is only fifteen years old, has slandered him by charging that he attempted to take improper liberties with her.

A Rumor About Ex-Speaker Reed.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The Herald's Washington special says it is reported that ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed will tender his resignation and retire from the house before congress meets in order to accept a responsible position with an important corporation in New York city.

Burned Her Baby's Body.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Irvin has been arrested on the startling charge of burning her new born baby to death. She admitted that she had burned the child, but said the babe was dead and she wished to get it out of the way.

Mme. Dorlos Took Laudanum.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—Mme. Dorlos, late professor of French at Vassar Female institute, New York, attempted suicide with laudanum at Jamaica Plains. She will recover. She has been unable to make a living and decided to end her life.

Is Mr. Jones Becoming Blind?

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 5.—It is announced here that Lieutenant Governor Edward F. Jones is becoming blind. The report is not given much credence.

MONAGHAN STILL MISSING.

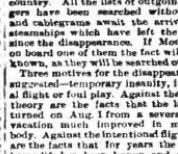
So Close Yet to the Pennsylvania Lawyer's Whereabouts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Detective Robert R. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, has been telegraphed to by friends of R. Jones Monaghan, the missing lawyer of West Chester, Pa., asking him to do anything to help solve a mystery. Since Thursday, Sept. 24, at about 3 p. m., when Lawyer Monaghan walked out of the Grand Union hotel, after settling accounts with his partners in West Chester, not one clew has been discovered. When last seen he wore a steel grey derby hat, a light gray sack coat and vest and dark steel grey trousers with a narrow black stripe.

Detective Jefferis, of West Chester, Pa., who has known Lawyer Monaghan for years, and Detective L. A. Newcome, of this city, are at work on the case, and will keep at it until the object of the search is found, dead or alive.

There are now at the Gilsey House, from which Lawyer Monaghan disappeared, his partner, J. R. Hause, Associate Judge Joseph Hemphill, of the Fifteenth judicial district of Pennsylvania, and A. M. Holding, of West Chester, Pa. They will probably remain here until news is received of Lawyer Monaghan in Philadelphia. The opinion is growing that he has left the country. All the lists of outgoing passengers have been searched without avail, and detectives await the arrival of all steamships which have left the country since the disappearance. If Monaghan is on board one of them the fact will soon be known as they will be searched on arrival.

Three motives for the disappearance are suggested—temporary insanity, intentional flight or foul play. Against the insanity theory are the facts that the lawyer returned on Aug. 1 from a several weeks' vacation much improved in mind and body. Against the intentional flight theory are the facts that for years the lawyer's home life has been happy, and also that an examination of his accounts show that he had no financial trouble.



A Traveling Costume.

WARM AND COMFORTABLE.

Here is a neat and sensible traveling costume, suitable for tweed or serge, trimmed in fall. Fitting double-breasted bodice, cut with three-quarter tabbed basque, and edged braid. Leg-of-mutton sleeves, finished by a cuff at the wrist. Straight tunic, bordered with a band of velvet at the bottom, and trimmed buttons up the right side. Full back drapery, pleated flat to the waist.

DR. BRIGGS ON TRIAL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The burning Briggs issue came up again today in the semi-annual meeting of the New York Presbytery. The committee appointed last May to formulate charges against Briggs, will announce today the results of its labors in a regular indictment.

The committee consists of the Rev. Dr George F. Nelson, of Bethany church; the Rev. Dr. J. J. Lampe, of the Brick church, the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Sample, of West minster church; Professor J. J. Stevenson and Mr. John J. McCook. Of these Dr Birch, Dr. Lampe, Professor Stevenson and Mr. McCook were on the committee which examined Dr. Briggs' sermons at last spring and found them heretical The report of the present committee will indeed repeat this finding, in the shape of formal charges, but it is said that Briggs has not yet framed the Confession of Faith as three points—

First—By saying in his inaugural address that there were three sources of authority—the Bible, the Church and the reason. This is the celebrated passage in which Dr. Briggs couples reason with inference of Cardinal Newman and Martineau.

Second—By saying there were errors in the Scriptures and generally denying the theory of verbal inerrancy.

Third—By supporting a theory of progressive sanctification after death.

Celebrating German Day.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Sunday the Germans of this city celebrated the 250th anniversary of the arrival in America on the Rhine bank of German settlers by holding a festival. The orator of the day was Hon. Carl Schurz.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—An assemblage of over 20,000 persons began the celebration of German day in this city Sunday. There were tournaments of all kinds, dancing, singing, allegorical processions and a sham battle. The celebration will be continued till Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—German day will be generally observed by the Germans of the District of Columbia tomorrow. The grand military and industrial parade will be formed on Pennsylvania avenue, and will pass in front of the executive mansion. In the evening orations will be delivered at the Schutzen park.

Mantgz's Silver Wedding.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 5.—Joseph Manley and wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding Sunday. Secretary and Mrs. Blaine, ex-United States Senator Dawsbury, ex-Governor J. H. Williams, ex-Attorney General O. D. Bailey Colonel W. S. Choate, Thomas Lansing and other distinguished persons were present.

IRON RAINED UPON THEM

Bystanders Killed by a Terrific Tug Explosion.

THE DEAD ARE EIGHT IN NUMBER.

The Roller of the Charles Parker Blows Up in the Chicago River, Wiping the Crew Out of Existence and Destroying the Lives of Many Onlookers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Eight persons were almost instantly killed and a dozen others injured in the afternoon by the explosion of the tug Charles Parker in the south branch of the river, near the Archer avenue bridge. Three of the dead belonged to the crew of the boat, while the others were bystanders, who were killed by flying debris. The Parker, together with the tugs Van Schaack, Perry and Shields, had been working all day endeavoring to free the propeller H. S. Pickands, which had grounded in the south draw of the bridge.

Eight Were Dead.

They had puffed and pulled away almost incessantly a long time, when, with comparatively little noise, the boiler of the Parker exploded. Columns of water were thrown in the air, descending and blinding the crews and bystanders. A moment later the debris showered upon the ground on the other side of the river. Pieces of iron fell upon the dock and the street.

At the time Archer avenue, near the scene of the accident, was crowded. The noise of the explosion and the falling wreck caused a terrible panic. When the spectators partially recovered their senses it was discovered that eight persons were dead, while many more were injured, some of them probably fatally. The dead are:

A List of the Killed.

Mrs. Mary Rice, aged twenty-three, of 301 Archer avenue; head crushed by falling debris. Barbara Rice, eighteen months old, daughter of Mrs. Rice, head crushed. Samuel Simon, aged forty-seven, switchman for the Illinois Steel company. John Bartholomew, aged ten years, of 3,129 Paulina street; struck on the head by an iron bolt. John B. Carter, captain of the tug; married. John C. Moore, of Highland park, engineer of the tug. Samuel Armstrong, colored; name unknown, killed by a piece of the furnace door.

Rescued, but Parboiled.

As the air cleared Parker was seen rolling and settling in the water. A moment later Joseph Cullen and Henry Bell were seen struggling in the water. Life lines were thrown them and they were helped on board one of the tugs. Cullen's flesh was parboiled, and in clinging to the life lines the skin was torn from his hands. The explosion was a peculiar one. Many of the fatalities occurred some distance from the boat. Persons on the docks where the victims would seem to have been in perfect safety.

The injured are Joseph Cullen, 309 Maxwell street, fireman of the Parker; terribly scalded; will die. Henry Bell, linesman of the Parker; badly scalded. Frank Wagner, 12 South Green street; arm broken. Josh Bomerask, 809 South Ashland avenue; skull fractured; may die. Seven others were painfully hurt.

Sad Fate of Mother and Child.

Before the explosion Mrs. Rice had been standing on the south side of Archer avenue, holding the baby in her arms, and while endeavoring to escape when the crash came her skull was crushed by a piece of iron. At the same moment her little daughter was struck on the head by a piece of iron and killed.

Richard Powers, aged ten, was standing watching the tugs. He was struck on the head by an iron bolt and fell to the ground. His skull had been cut open, and the brains were oozing out when he was picked up.

Train Wreckers Foiled.

MATTOON, Ills., Oct. 5.—About 11 a. m. a farmer living near the Big Four road between this city and Windsor discovered several men wedging ties in a culvert in an attempt to wreck the heavy eastbound express train. He hurried westward toward the approaching train and finally succeeded in attracting the attention of Engineer Huffman. The train was stopped just in time but the culprits had fled.

Petroleum for Fuel.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The experiment of using petroleum for fuel on the Oroya railroad in Peru has proved successful. The locomotives were made in Paterson, N. J. The oil used is not crude petroleum, but refuse from the oil wells. In the trial the average consumption was 36.88 pounds per mile, while with coal it was 79.30 pounds.

Cleveland Will Preside.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Arrangements have now been completed for the big ratification meeting to be held in the Cooper Institute Thursday night. Ex-President Grover Cleveland has accepted an invitation to preside, and Governor-Senator David B. Hill will be the orator. Many other prominent speakers will be present.

Sutton Will Not Resign.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—There is no truth in the report that John P. Sutton intends resigning his position as secretary of the Irish National league. Mr. Sutton says he doesn't mind being abused as a "boss" or a "triangler." As long as his friends respect him he cares nothing for the general public's opinion.

Deacons of the Newcastle Congress.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—At a meeting in Hyde Park, attended by several thousand workingmen, resolutions were passed denouncing the Liberal federation at Newcastle for having suppressed free speech and neglected the interests of the labor element in order to give precedence to Irish home rule.

Drowned Himself and His Daughters.

COURTS CHATEAU, Tex., Oct. 5.—The bodies of Horace Hamlin and his daughters, Bowena, aged seven, and Helen, aged thirteen, have been found in Corpus Christi bay. Business between unbalanced Hamlin's mind and he threw the girls into the water and drowned himself.

Gladstone's Great Vitality.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Mr. Gladstone, accompanied by Mrs. Gladstone, walked to church at Hawarden, Sunday, with fresh color in his cheeks and the springing step of youth and vigor. He met with an unusual ovation from the villagers.

Fell to Their Death.

LIMA, O., Oct. 5.—Emanuel Rink and F. C. Goss were seated on a threshing machine and driving across a bridge when the flooring gave way and the men and the machine fell a distance of thirty feet. Both men were crushed to death.

THE NEW IRON CLEVELAND.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The happiest man in the city of New York today is probably ex-President Grover Cleveland, for he is now the proud father of a sweet little girl and his beautiful wife has passed through the ordeal in safety. The little stranger arrived Saturday, and all day Sunday Mr. Cleveland was busy answering the congratulations of his friends. It is said that the young woman weighs eight pounds, has blue eyes and looks like her father.

When Mr. Cleveland was informed of his heirs' arrival he took it very quietly, saying, "Thank you."

When the newspaper men heard the news they sought out Dr. Bryant, the family's physician. He put on his wisest, most mysterious, most important air, and announced shortly that he would say nothing. He would not even affirm or deny the report that a child had been born to Mrs. Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland received the newspaper men in his drawing room. There were dark half moons under his eyes, but the happiness he felt was unmistakable.

"Yes, it is quite true," he said, before any question was asked him. "Both the mother and the child are doing splendidly Mrs. Cleveland has rested quietly all day and I hope she will be up soon. She needs it. The child is strong and healthy. As its birth is weighed eight pounds."

Mr. Cleveland then intimated that it was likely that they would go out of the city as soon as Mrs. Cleveland was strong enough to travel. Mrs. Folsom, Mrs. Cleveland's mother, and Miss Rose Cleveland were among those who sent tele grams.

The city home of the Clevelands is at 815 Madison avenue. The exterior is a mingling of Moorish and English designs. It is of pressed yellow brick, with brownstone trimmings. It has four stories and a basement. Mrs. Cleveland designed all the furnishings.

The birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland will cause almost as much interest as their marriage, which took place in the White House on June 2, 1886, when Mr. Cleveland was president of the United States.

The wedding took place in the blue room of the White House. Rev. Dr. Byron Sutherland, of Batavia, N. Y., officiated.

Congratulations from Kansas.

ATCHISON, Kan., Oct. 5.—The Democratic county convention has sent the following telegram to Mr. and Mrs. Grover Cleveland: "The Democracy of Atchison county, in convention assembled, congratulate you upon the birth of your daughter."

TWO HUNDRED MASSACRED.

Men, Women and Children Slaughtered by Mexican Indians.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 5.—John H. Parton, an American, who for the past two years has been engaged in the mining business near Metatillo, in the state of Hidalgo, Mexico, has arrived here, bringing information of a bloody Indian outbreak, which has for some time been in progress in the Tarrick district in that state. The trouble is an outgrowth of a dispute between several colonies of Spaniards and Germans and Indians, the colonists attempting to settle on the Indian lands.

The Indians resisted their attempts to evict them and much bloodshed has resulted. Mr. Parton says that a few days before his departure a settlement of 200 whites was attacked by the Indians and nearly 200 men, women and children were massacred. Several battalions are on their way to the scene of the trouble.

A Trace of Utica's Train Robber.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 5.—The American express company is clearing up the train robber only got $250, but Sunday two young men found three canvas bags and seven jewelry boxes near an old distillery. One bag was labeled "Jefferson County National bank, Watertown, $5,000," and another "Watertown National bank bonds, $3,340." The bags were found on which were marks indicating that they had contained sums ranging from twenty to fifty dollars. The jewelry boxes had contained diamond rings.

A Rich Chicago Woman's Suicide.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Julia R. Seaver, a wealthy widow fifty-three years old, living at 538 West Adams street, committed suicide by shooting herself through the heart. Some years after her husband's death, which occurred fifteen years ago, she is said to have engaged herself to a man who had a wife living. The shock of this announcement is said to have led to her suicide.

Fatally Shot by Tramps.

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 5.—Charles Sturgis and Edward O'Hare started last night for Erie. When a short distance from Dunkirk they were attacked by tramps, who demanded their money. O'Hare resisted, and one of the tramps shot Sturgis through the abdomen, and his companion, O'Hara, while attempting to rescue him, was stabbed in the back. Both may die.

Detective Norris Arrested.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—John T. Norris, a detective of almost national reputation, has been arrested on a charge of blackmail. His accuser is John Sheasty, alias Jack Forbes, who was supposed to have robbed Thomas Hanlon, of Jefferson county, of $7,500. It is alleged that Norris and Sheasty arrested knowing him to be innocent.

Photographer Dixon's Body Found.

GRAVESHURST, Ont., Oct. 4.—The body of S. J. Dixon, the photographer and celebrated wife walker, who was drowned in Woodlake, Muskoka, while attempting to swim across on Friday last has been recovered.

Mayor Truman Selects.

ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 5.—Mayor Henry H. Truman, of Orange, has signed an emergency note for $30,000 for sewerage account. He had previously refused to sign the note, and serious complications were feared.

Rochefort on Boulanger's Death.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 5.—Henri Rochefort believes that the death of Boulanger will rather improve the prospects of the revindicists, who can no longer be accused of aiming at a dictatorship.

A $600,000 Grain Elevator Fire.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5.—Fire destroyed elevator A of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company's system at locust Point, together with 125,000 bushels of wheat. Loss, $600,000.

Killed by the Ghost Train.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 5.—Basil Drew, a war veteran, was killed by the ghost train at Bridgeport, yesterday. He was employed by the Consolidated company.

The American Association Pennant Goes to the Hub.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The close of the American Association championship season Sunday made Boston a double pennant winner, for both the League and Association flags will fly here. Tangled up with this great fetching is the annoying thought that, owing to the strained relations of the National League and American Association, these two champion teams will be unable to play for a "world's pennant." The dazzling thought of a world's championship struggle at home doubtless makes the Boston clubs wish they had not been so fierce for war at the recent meetings.

In this emergency the Boston League champions will be compelled to play a series with the champions of the Western association, while the Association champions might get up a series with the champions of the Eastern league.

The closing games of the season will be found below.

ULSTER COUNTY SMASH

Another Kingston Bank Will Not Open for Business.

AT LEAST $663,000 EMBEZZLED.

Bank Directors Censured by Indignant Depositors Who Had Been Led to Return Their Money by Statements That the Institution Was Perfectly Sound.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Groups of excited people have all day been discussing the financial calamity which came with the suspension of the Ulster County Savings Institution.

Persons against whom a shadow of suspicion rests are being kept under close surveillance. Their houses are carefully watched by day and night. The bank stockholders and its depositors have secured the aid of detectives to assist in ascertaining what has become of the stolen money and who were directly or indirectly implicated in the plundering of the institution.

The Management Censured.

Had the trustees of the institution immediately upon ascertaining that Treasurer Ostrander was a heavy defaulter placed the bank's affairs in the hands of the state banking department and asked for an immediate investigation by expert accountants, and had they refused to accept any deposits or transact any further business, but little odium would have been cast upon the management. As it was the statement made by the board of trustees, backed up by many of the leading business and professional men, restored the utmost confidence in the time honored institution, and hundreds of depositors continued their business as before.

Must Have Known Its Condition.

Many who had withdrawn their accounts during the two days' run returned their deposits. This was done up to the very closing hour of the bank on Friday, when the persons in charge must have known of its rotten condition. It is this more than anything else that has exasperated many of the depositors. It is stated by one of the officials of the institution that nearly a year ago there were certain evidences that all was not right, but that the trustees were desirous of fixing the responsibility where it properly belonged, and for this reason watched the matter up secretly.

When they became fully assured that Ostrander was guilty of using the funds they deposed and arrested him. This they also did in the case of his assistant, Matthew T. Trumpbour.

Preparing to Escape.

The wonder is, however, why Trumpbour to-day found the iron bars, as he had every opportunity to escape. That he was preparing to escape was evident at the time of his arrest, for his trunk was partially packed, and had he not been apprehended just in the nick of time would undoubt be enjoying himself on Canadian soil today. The supposition is that he did not hasten his departure on Friday for lack of ready funds and did not wish to excite suspicion by undue haste.

Notwithstanding the statement made by the officials to the effect that no complies in crime have been extravagant and high livers. On all sides it is asserted that wine, women and stock speculation have been their vices. Both Ostrander and Trumpbour have been twice married, and their later matrimonial events have been the subject of much scandalous gossip. For some reason Ostrander's oldest son took his departure from the parental roof immediately after the father's second marriage to a sister of Trumpbour.

Over $463,000 Is Missing.

Expert examiners have found already that over $463,000 has been stolen by Treasurer Ostrander and Matthew T. Trumpbour, assistant treasurer, and it is feared that the stealings will exceed that amount.

Ostrander was arrested about two weeks ago for embezzling $75,000, and was under bonds of $80,000. His bondsmen last night turned him over to Sheriff Dill and he was locked up. When Ostrander was arrested there was a run on the bank, but other banks came to its rescue and the trustees made a statement, showing that there was a surplus of $247,000.

Another Bank to Close.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Kingston Savings bank it was decided to take a recess of ten or sixty days' notice and that institution will also not open for business today. This will greatly intensify the excitement and runs on the Rondout Savings bank and other money depositories are feared. Meeting were held by bank officials, lasting until a late hour, and consultations are being had to devise plans to meet a panic. Messengers have been dispatched to New York and other places to obtain sufficient cash to meet the prospective runs.

Chief Rylands' Time Book Gone.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 5.—The police now presided over a novel feature when it was discovered that the time book had been stolen during the day and put in possession of the old board of police commissioners. The board at present is enjoined from interfering with Chief Rylands whom they ousted by abolishing the office but who still exercises control by order of the superior court.

Back to Wed the Other's Daughter.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—Colonel Forsyth formerly of General Sheridan's staff, has just succeeded in winning the hand of the daughter of his old friend, Dr. Dallas Bache, a Philadelphian, also in the gilt key service, and Miss Forsyth, the colonel's daughter, has become engaged to Dr. Bache. Each of them is sixty years of age. Neither of the young women is much over twenty years of age.

Ingalls Charged with Plagiarism.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The Herald says that in his recent copyrighted articles on "The Cabinet of the United States," the Hon. John J. Ingalls has taken in large sections from the Congressional Directory, a government publication which is copyrighted by its compiler, W. H. Michael, clerk of the United States senate committee on printing.

Osmonde's Double Crime.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—John Osmonde, aged twenty-right years, shot and killed his wife at their home on Third avenue and also shot and fatally wounded John Burchell, a boarder in the house, because his wife had sued for divorce and because he believed Burchell was intimate with her.

Gone with Her Money.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 5.—Mrs. Weimen complained to the Newark police that her husband, William, had deserted her, taking with him $800 of her money.

"This animal, ladies and gents," said the showman, "is the chimpanzee. The remarkable thing about the chimpanzee, ladies and gents, is that it comes nearest to bein a human person of any speesby of the monkey tribe. This here is the chimpanzee, ladies and gents," he continued, "the one inside the cage. Please stand a little further back, sir! You'll get mixed."

And he glared at a young dude from Jersey City who was poking the animal with his cane.—Chicago Tribune.

AT LEAST EIGHT DEAD.

Seven Men Still Entombed at the Richardson Mines.

GLENCARBON, Pa., Oct. 5.—Of the twelve miners who were entombed by an explosion of fire damp at the Richardson mines eight are undoubtedly dead and the others either fatally or seriously injured. There was intense excitement when the news was circulated that twelve men were entombed.

Rescuing parties were immediately formed, and on entering the mines the body of Michael Grant was found on the gangway. He was found to be fatally injured. Then John McGaskie, Poland, dead; Thomas Conville and James Brennan, seriously. Also Martin Kelly, mine foreman, slightly injured. These were the only bodies found before reaching the inclosed gangway, inside of which seven other men were entombed, with no hope of their recovery alive.

Their names are John Purcell, fire boss, married, wife and three children. John Salmon, single. John Lawler, wife and three children. James Simons, single. Michael Welsh, married, two children. John Cusick, Polander, single, and Thomas Clancy, widower, with seven children. The company and the med are doing all possible for the speedy recovery of the entombed dead or alive. The Richardson colliery is situated in the Hocksenville valley, and is operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company. The gangway in which the accident occurred is a new opening, but twelve breasts are in working order at present. The accident has cast a gloom over the valley. There is little hope of recovering the men alive, as the gas has in all probability already done its deadly work.

Rescued from Several Ruffians.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 5.—Lawyer William H. Conover and several others rescued Mrs. Catherine Pittinger, of 30 Colden street, from the clutches of a lot of ruffians at Sixth avenue and Fifth street, a lonely part of Newark, late last night. Conover and James Trow heard the woman and a child found her in a vacant lot surrounded by four men. Philip McMann, twenty-nine years old, of 14 Dey street, and Joseph Daniel Corrigan, twenty-two years old, of 229 New street, ran into the canal and was dragged out almost drowned.

Masons Plead for Mrs. Maybrick.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—It is said the members of the Masonic fraternity will sign a petition for the release of Mrs. Maybrick in England. Prince Albert Edward is a Mason, and a petition to the queen through the crown prince would be presented by him directly to the queen. Although more than 50,000 British subjects and Americans have brought a fair trial for this unfortunate woman, it is doubtful if the queen has ever heard of the "Maybrick" case.

The Wanamakers Return.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Mrs. John Wanamaker, the Misses Minnie and Lillie Wanamaker, Mr. Theodore B. Wanamaker and Mrs. Wanamaker returned from Europe on the steamer Paris. The revenue cutter went down the bay to meet the steamer Postmaster General Wanamaker was on board and at Quarantine he was transferred to the steamship.

Commiskey's New Pitcher.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—Commiskey unearthed a "phenom" Sunday in the person of Breitenstein, an amateur, whom he put in to pitch against the Louisvilles. Not a man made a base hit and but twenty-seven came to the bat during the nine innings. The 400 spectators were amazed at the amateur's marvelous work.

Marsh Still a Spiritualist.

ORSET, Mass., Oct. 5.—Luther R. Marsh, the New York lawyer whose connection with the notorious Dime Debat is so well known, announces that he has given up the practice of law. He says that he will hereafter devote his life to lecturing in defense of spiritualism. He dedicated his first lecture in Boston Sunday.

Bad Water at Orange.

ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 5.—A dearth of water is threatened in Orange. The supply is exposed to the rays of the sun, and decomposing vegetable matter in the brates makes it unfit for drinking purposes. If the drought continues the condition of things will soon become serious.

SOCIETY TO CHORES.

Name and Pretty Minnie Washburn to Appear on the Stage.

MINNIE BRADFORD WASHBURN.

The home of Lansing C. Washburn was a handsome and spacious mansion at Montclair, N. J., in the shadow of the Orange Mountains. Mr. Washburn came into it as the sorrowful day and transacted his business as a stock broker.

Years ago he was a member of the firm of Whittington & Washburn; then the firm name became Townsend, Washburn & Caldwell, of No. 6 Wall street. Finally it was changed to Washburn & Caldwell.

The blow came last January. The troubles of the Baring Brothers carried Mr. Washburn down. In one brief week he found himself plunged from affluence to poverty.

The house, the furniture, the horses and carriages were sold, and the family moved to a flat in New York. Mr. Washburn began to look around for work, and through friends secured a position at Toledo, O., with an electric light company.

Miss Minnie Washburn is the only daughter. She determined to help her part to support the family, and recently it was announced that she had accepted an engagement to sing in the chorus of the Carleton Opera Company. She will make her first appearance in Baltimore, where she has many friends.

She will don tights and make her debut as an actress in the opera "Indigo," and as she is a pretty young woman, having an abundance of glossy tresses and sparkling black eyes with arching eyebrows, she will create a furor. Miss Washburn's figure is of the model that is popular upon the stage. She is tall, compactly built, and of agreeable presence. She makes her venture with the full consent of her mother, who is rather proud of her daughter's courage and self-reliance and who hopes to see her succeed.

The Worst Boy Saved Her.

Ruth McDougal, the prettiest schoolma'am in Hartford co., Conn., has on a little spot at her Burnside home—her cheeks pallid, great dark circles under her eyes, and an ugly, greenish-yellow spot on her right forearm. She passed through a very unpleasant experience recently. She was bitten by a rattlesnake, then made very drunk on whiskey, and carried to her home in a springless wood wagon. Miss McDougal is blue-eyed and nineteen, and began teaching the young people who attend the "Hottentot district" school in the village of Burnside, on September 2 last, when the fall term was begun.

Naturally, while the day was yet on the grass she started from her home to walk to the schoolhouse. While passing through the meadow she got down her little lunch basket, in order to gather some flowers. The pretty schoolma'am gathered the flowers, placed them in her belt, picked up her lunch basket, and continued her journey to school.

HE GRASPED THE SNAKE BY THE TAIL.

The morning session being over, she seated herself at her desk and prepared to eat her luncheon. There were several small boys in the room, who remained indoors by their luncheon also. Miss McDougal reached for the basket, raised the cover, and put one white hand into the receptacle. Then the small boys were startled by a loud scream. Looking up they saw their pretty teacher standing in her chair, while coiled about her right arm they saw a yellow-brown thing that squirmed and hissed and shot out a long red tongue. Willie Phelps, the best fighter and the best speller in the school, ran forward. He grasped the snake by the tail and tore it from the teacher's arm. Then, with a quick toss about his head, he dashed it to the floor and stamped on its head until it was dead. Then Willie looked at Miss McDougal. She was lying prostrate on the floor. He dashed water in her face, and seeing a drop of blood just above the wrist of her right arm, he put his mouth to it and sucked at it vigorously. Then, being a boy of action, he called upon one of his schoolmates to run to Meadow's drug store, half a mile away, get a pint of whiskey, and, on his way back, inform Dr. Childs of what had happened. In less than half an hour the schoolmate returned with the whiskey, which Willie forced down his still unconscious teacher's throat. Not long afterward Dr. Childs reached the schoolhouse and ordered her removed to her home. Farmer Steugton was passing on his wood wagon at this time, and volunteered to transport her. This he did. In the mean time the teacher had regained her senses, but she was drunk. To-day she is sober, and the physician thinks that, owing to Willie's prompt measures, she will live. The snake, probably attracted by the smell of cold meat or boiled eggs, evidently entered her lunch basket while she was picking wild flowers. It measured 4 feet 2½ inches and had eight rattles.

Two Years Blank.

Fred. B. Benton, a well-known young man of New Haven, Conn., mysteriously disappeared from his home on Aug. 3, 1889. On Sept. 17, after an absence of two years, he just as mysteriously reappeared at his home.

A CRACK RUNNER.

Harry Jewett, of Detroit, of Whom Great Things are Hoped.

At the time for the National championship athletic contest next spring, speculation is rife as to who will win the several events. As usual, great interest is centred in the 100-yard dash. This event promises to be as close and exciting as it was last year, when John Owens, Jr., of the Detroit Athletic Club, beat L. H. Curry, of the Manhattan Athletic Club by six inches, breaking the world's amateur record of 10 seconds by 1-5 of a second.

HARRY JEWETT.

Owens having declared that he would not take part in the games this year, the Detroit Athletic Club has selected Harry Jewett to represent the club in the 100-yard dash. If reports as to his speed are at all true, they have found a worthy successor, and one who may be depended on to give Cary a close race and who may, possibly, defeat him. Jewett is twenty-one years old, 5 feet 10 inches high and weighs in running costume 160 pounds. He has a wonderful amount of natural speed, and there can be little doubt that under the able tuition of Mike Murphy, his trainer, he has learned to start fast. If he has mastered that knack he will give Cary a very close race.

GREAT RIFLE SHOOTING.

William Rigden, the rifleman who broke the world's snap shooting record with a 22-calibre ball twenty pennies out of a possibly twenty-five thrown in the air, is, without question, the finest shot in his line in the United States. He discovered his remarkable talent as a rifleman through an accident in killing swallows on the wing and at once commenced practising at snap shooting. For nearly five years his work was done spasmodically, but about four years ago he began regular practice, shooting not less than 500 shells a day. He has no favorite target, but shoots glass balls, pennies, pebbles, white beans and other small objects.

WILLIAM RIGDEN.

Rigden considers the use of shot cartridges dangerous, and will not use them under any circumstances, preferring the small, 22-calibre ball, as it is the most difficult. He exercises great care in selecting his guns, and has several splendid weapons which he holds priceless. Truly philosophical was the answer with which he met a friend who asked how he was able to hit with twenty-two short ball cartridges out of a possible 500, while over one hundred and fifty balls were broken before he struck. He has frequently broken 480, 490 and 495 glass balls out of a possible half-thousand, and expects in a short time to add to the list without a miss. One of his favorite shots, and one requiring great skill, is the double. He has his thrower select a pebble about the size of a glass ball and toss it into the air at a regulation height and distance, and will strike the pebble twice before it touches the ground, breaking the pebble into fine second shot. This is a wonderful feat, but he seldom fails of performing it at the first trial. Here is another favorite shot: He faces the thrower, gives the order to throw, turns completely around, and breaks a glass ball before it has fallen half way to the ground.

HORSE NOTES.

Jimmy Tompkins, the jockey, has bought the Oakdale Stable. Von Tromp, Millie Whittaker and Harpy, for $8,000.

The Driving Association of Salt Lake City has received eighty acres of land, and they propose to lay out a first class mile track which with other improvements will cost about $80,000.

The coming season Nelson, 2:15¾, have challenged the owner of the stallion Charlestown, 2:15, by Bourbon Wilkes, for a match at $5,000 a side, to be trotted over the Independence track at a time this fall.

Mr. S. A. Brown, owner of the Kalamazoo Stock Farm, who is just recovering from a long and severe illness, has decided to sell his auction in December all of his horses now in training and those he intended to train next year, and do away entirely with the training department of his farm.

The Bicycle Racing.

The race at Springfield between Windle and Zimmerman is generally conceded by all who saw it to have been the finest ever run in this country. Very few probably stop to think that to Zimmerman is due the extra quality of the racing this year. Last season Windle had no one on the path who could compete successfully with him. But now he has a competitor very nearly his equal. The results of the events in which they have to compete are always somewhat in doubt.

Not the least remarkable of Zimmerman's performances is that of his appearing on a safety-type wheel. When a man can in the one day ride a race on the starpattern wheel, with its up-stairs motion, and then change to a wheel with cranks, whose every principle is different, and not only win but create records on both, his performance as an all-round rider is established beyond doubt. This is just what Zimmerman did and he deserves mention of the fact.

Two Peculiar League Teams.

The Cleveland team has not made a successful trip this season. It is well at home and invariably falls down abroad. Explanations have been asked for time and again but no satisfactory one can be given. Tebeau said, before the team left on its present trip, that he could not explain why Cleveland lost so many games away from home. "We play just as good and careful base ball," said he, "but can't win; that's all." Philadelphia is another peculiar team, but in a different way from Cleveland. A majority of the team's winning games have been played away from home.

FOR PAGE TWO FIRST.

Gay Life of Mrs. Luders, Who Went Over the Falls.

Mrs. Bessie Luders was scarcely twenty when she married. She was shapely and pretty, fond of gaiety and pleasure. Her husband was Gustave Luders, composer and musical director, and in spite of the preoccupations of his profession he was himself offended by husbands. That was five years ago. The wife was of a lively temperament and soon became known among the jolliest of spirits in Mr. Luder's calling.

Matters went well for a time. Then there were frequent quarrels and reconciliations. Recently Mrs. Luders left New York. The next learned of her was in San Francisco. There her life was gay. Through in all the reality affectionate natures of this erratic woman often asserted itself. Then she wrote to her husband. He was always forgiving.

About a year ago Mrs. Luders left San Francisco and started East. She stopped in Denver, where she lived pretentiously and had many admirers.

Her letters to her husband soon became full of contrition and he consented to take her back. So in May she left Denver for New York. Luders had become musical director of Leavitt's "Spider and Fly" company. She sent a telegram telling the time of her arrival, but neglecting to say at what station. Luders went to the Grand Central Station the morning of June 2 last. He waited several hours, but did not meet his wife.

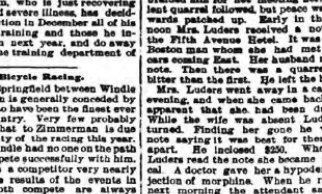
His, however, found her in the Coleman House. She had been drinking and upbraided him for not meeting her. A violent quarrel followed, but peace was afterwards patched up. Early in the afternoon Mrs. Luders received a note from the Fifth Avenue Hotel. It was from a Boston man whom she had met on the cars coming East. Her husband read the note. Then there was a quarrel more bitter than the first. He left the hotel.

Mrs. Luders went away in a cab in the evening, and when she came back it was apparent that she had been drinking. While the wife was absent Luders returned. Finding her gone he wrote a note saying it was best for them to be apart. He inclosed $250. When Mrs. Luders read the note she became hysterical. A doctor gave her a hypodermic injection of morphine. When he returned next morning the attendant said that Mrs. Luders had not once closed her eyes. She was quiet, though, and was inclined to talk about herself.

EXPLAINS HIM FOR NOT SLEEPING HER.

"What a thing [illegible] to have a wife who [illegible] to talk

Made From Horse Chestnuts.



ANY BOY CAN MAKE THESE.

Now, boys, you know that you have a failing for gathering horse chestnuts. You stuff your pockets with them until the pockets can't stand the strain and bust. And for what purpose? Here are some uses you can put them to, beside those you already know. The upper figure in the picture herewith shows a basket which is simply made. The three quaint heads were carved by a boy of twelve years. It will be excellent practice for you to endeavor to copy them. The chestnuts can also be strung by the girls and used as a necklace as shown in the illustration.

The Autumn Veil.

The Jane Hading veil without its elborate border is back again for autumn wear. It is drawn by a shir above the front brim of the hat, and again, under the chin. The two ends are shirred and fastened at the back. The ordinary veil-lace is used, and white or black is equally fashionable. The light gray veils are again brought round and tied under the chin. The day of the mask veil seems to be over.

Married Her Father's Enemy.

Mrs. Daly made a complaint to Justice Ryan, in the Tombs police court, against Allen Carr, who is a son of Thomas Carr, a wealthy resident of Jersey City. Mrs. Daly is a widow, and lives at No. 1,000 Second avenue. She says that Carr has been paying her attentions for some time, and that he has been in the habit of calling on her frequently. Mrs. Daly's husband was killed in a fight with Thomas Carr, and the latter was tried for the murder, but was acquitted. Mrs. Daly says that Carr knew of the enmity between her husband and his father, and that he has been warned to keep away from her house. Carr was discharged.

Her Letters to Her Husband.

Mrs. Daly, who claimed that she would horsewhip Allen. She was backed up in this resolution by Mrs. Streeter, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Mohr, Mrs. Giles, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Hampstead, Mrs. Dorner, Mrs. Peterson and Miss Lizzie Johnson, all of whom, it is said, have suffered insults in one way or another from Switchman Allen and his partner Carr.

One night the women, headed by Mrs. Daly, confronted Allen and accused him of being the author of the scandalous stories. The women first gave Allen a severe tongue lashing. Then Mrs. Daly began to pound Allen with her umbrella. The other women of the party urged Mrs. Daly on, some even taking a hand in. Allen escaped from the indignant women as soon as he could possibly do so.

Told Her Future.

"Not only about your future, but about your past and present."

"He wonderful, incomprehensible. Good morning, madam."

"Hold on, there. A dollar if you please," said the female wizard, holding out her hand.

"Well, that is strange. You know everything about the past, present and future, and you didn't know I left all my money with the check at the hotel before I started out to have my fortune told. It's wonderful, incomprehensible," remarked the colonel, as he passed out just in time to avoid fainting at a cuspidor which struck the back of his head.—Texas Siftings.

The New Panniers.

The new panniers are unwearying in their endeavors to find favor among tall, slim ladies. Their invaded purpose of setting off a slender waist to advantage is greatly aided by pannier and corsage completed by a full blouse. 1864—Desperate fighting at Allatoona Pass, Ga., and bloody repulse of the Confederates.

Casting His Horoscope.

Colonel Sumpter McBride, of Austin, while in New York on a visit, read the advertisement of a clairvoyant in a morning paper.

He went to the female fortune teller to have his horoscope cast. She cast horoscopes with a dirty pack of cards, which she spread on the table.

"You will marry an unusually wealthy lady and be very happy. Everything in your past, present and future is an open book to me."

"I suppose you know everything about my future?" said the colonel.

"Not only about your future, but about your past and present."

"He wonderful, incomprehensible. Good morning, madam."

"Hold on, there. A dollar if you please," said the female wizard, holding out her hand.

"Well, that is strange. You know everything about the past, present and future, and you didn't know I left all my money with the check at the hotel before I started out to have my fortune told. It's wonderful, incomprehensible," remarked the colonel, as he passed out just in time to avoid fainting at a cuspidor which struck the back of his head.—Texas Siftings.

—What has become of the U. S. Grant Republican Club of North Plainfield? It is about time some movement was made toward organizing, to conform with the action of similar clubs in other parts of the State, who are to send delegates to the convention of Republican clubs at Trenton as announced yesterday.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MEETING FOR OCTOBER HELD LAST NIGHT.

Peace Street Widening.—Measures Toward Soldier Alien—More Claims Than Money to Pay Them, Because of Reckless Extravagance. —A Slap at Chief Croasdale by the Street Committee Spending Public Money Without Consulting Council—Other Business.

The city Common Council met in regular session last evening. It was 8:15 o'clock when President Smith called the meeting to order and he took it upon himself to announce that the meeting was called to order "a little earlier than usual."

The minutes of the previous meetings were read and approved.

Several petitions for licenses were presented.

Mr. J. A. Smith petitioned Council to grant him permission to erect a wagon shed in the rear of his residence on Central avenue. The petition was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings with power.

Fisher & Monfort wanted permission to erect a show case in front of their place of business. The communication which they presented to Council stated that they would erect the structure on the outer side of the sidewalk. The communication was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Commercial Navigation Company of New York requested permission to withdraw their application for a street railway franchise, as they understood that Council had granted a previous franchise. Their request was granted.

On recommendation of the Board of Engineers H. W. Beebe was confirmed as a member of Albert Hose Company.

In a communication Mayor Gilbert nominated Chas. J. Noel as a special police and treasurer were read and referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Rushmore from the Committee on Laws and Ordinances requested Council to grant him permission to present the ordinance in relation to the opening and widening of Peace street. In explanation he said that the committee were unable to present it at the last meeting because it was not in a proper form. Continuing he said, "even if we had presented it nothing would have been accomplished or nothing will be accomplished this year. I have an ordinance in my possession looking to the opening and widening of Peace street. I also have another ordinance—two separate ordinances, one for opening Peace street to Green Brook and the other for widening the same thoroughfare. I will present them to Council together or separately."

Mr. Hetfield moved that it lay on the table.

Mr. Ackerman called for the ayes and nays.

The motion to lay the ordinance on the table was carried by a vote of 6 to 4.

The consideration of licenses was next taken up.

Mr. Smith moved that each license be acted on separately. The motion prevailed.

The licenses of Messrs. Michael A. Higgins, M. H. Closiner, and the Kendall Manufacturing Company were taken up and granted.

When Council considered Mr. E. K. Allen's application Councilman Roberts moved that the clerk be instructed to grant any more licenses as there were at least forty hackmen at the depot at the present time.

Mr. Ackerman inquired as to the object of refusing Mr. Allen a license. He wanted to know why it was that it was not for the accommodation of the public that Mr. Allen carried on the stage business. He thought because of Mr. Allen had carried on his business in any other borough or township.

Mr. Smith replied that Council had no objection to the man but that there was an oversupply of hacks and stages at the depot.

On motion Mr. Allen's application for a license was refused by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Ackerman reported that the bills presented amounted to $6,900, that there was $423 in the general fund but nothing in the Fire Department fund, and he moved that the sum of $700 be transferred from the general fund to the Fire Department fund. The motion prevailed.

The same gentleman offered a resolution to the effect that the mayor and clerk be authorized to borrow $6,000 in anticipation of taxes, this notwithstanding all the money the combine has got out of the people of Plainfield. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Ackerman also stated that a note of $8,000 would be due Oct. 8th, and he moved that mayor and clerk be authorized to borrow $8,000 for the payment of the same. It was so ordered.

An amendment to the Peace and Morris ordinance prohibiting the hacking or pasting of any sign or piece of paper on any tree in the city under a penalty of $5, was, on the first and second times, ordered engrossed and advertised. This seems to be intended as a slap at Chief Carey.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the rules were suspended to allow the Fire and Building Committee to report.

Mr. Hetfield offered an ordinance in relation to the opening and widening of Peace street. The ordinance was read the first and second times, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Ackerman inquired if it was different from the ordinance in the hands of the Law and Ordinance Committee.

Mr. Hetfield said that it was not.

Mr. Ackerman said he understood that it was all right and moved that Council did not see why the original should not be presented.

Mr. Rushmore said the minority had the matter at heart. They would like to see it brought up in its original form.

Mr. Hetfield said they would drive the horses used for drawing the engines to fires were being paid out of the fire department fund and that the Street Committee were getting the benefit of their labor and he moved that $217.19 be transferred from the street fund to the fire department fund.

Mr. Ackerman said Council should have the opinion of the Corporation Counsel before acting in the matter, and moved that it lay on the table. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Ackerman said he noticed on the monthly statement of the City Treasurer an item of $497.16 for crushed stone.

Mr. Gimm—"Has it not always been the custom of Council to ask for bids for the furnishing of crushed stone?"

Mr. Gallup—"The Committee advertised for bids, and awarded the contract to the lowest bidder. We purchase crushed stone at $1.25 per ton."

Mr. Gimm inquired if the bid had been submitted to Council and accepted.

Mr. Gallup replied that it had not.

Mr. Gimm said he did not wish to reflect on the Committee but he denounced their action as illegal.

Mr. Spangenberg said that the Committee had done the same thing last year.

Mr. Gimm—"I am not questioning the precedent, but no Committee should have purchased stone without the permission of the Council.

Mr. Smith stated that last year the Committee were authorized to do so and that the Committee, this year did the same.

Mr. Spangenberg stated that previous to 1890 there is a hill of gravel for which there are no delivery receipts.

Mr. Smith stated that the present method was the best for the city.

Mr. Gimm stated that he may be in error, but that he thought such matters should be brought before the Council. Continuing he said he wanted it distinctly understood that he did not wish to cast any reflections on the Committee, but simply as to their method of doing business, and whether or not they are not drifting away from former methods. Mr. Gimm called attention to the dangerous condition of North avenue at the depot.

Mr. Gallup remarked that the work had to be stopped for the want of funds.

Mr. Gimm said it was in a dangerous condition and that if the Railroad Company were not in a position to complete the work it would be economy for the city to do it.

Mr. Spangenberg stated that men were working on it yesterday.

Mr. Gimm said there was not enough to do there to keep an active man going half an hour.

A communication from the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company agreeing to furnish the city with streets lights for the ensuing year was read and referred to the Committee on Public Lights.

Mr. Hetfield moved that when the Council should adjourn it would be to meet again in two weeks. The motion prevailed.

The Auditing Committee reported the bills correct and they were ordered paid.

The meeting then adjourned.

FRATERNITY NEWS.

NEW OFFICERS—JR. O. U. A. M.

Installed at New Market Last Evening.

New officers for Friendship Council, No. 81, Junior Order United American Mechanics, were installed at New Market last evening, as follows:

Councilor—Charles S. Dey.
Vice Councilor—David Lawson.
Assistant Recording Secretary—Richard Pope.
Conductor—James Day.
Warden—John Stelb.
Inside Sentinel—John Taylor.
Outside Sentinel—William G. Giles.

More Small Business

Mr. E. K. Allen, an old soldier, and a poor, but industrious and respectable man, a couple of years ago started a stage line from the depot to different parts of Plainfield, and has ever since run the route regularly to the great convenience of the people of that section. He makes a charge of but five cents per passenger to points within the borough limits or ten cents beyond.

Last night he applied for a license from the Plainfield Common Council and was refused, the combine voting against him, Mr. Roberts, a member thereof, remarking that he had nothing against Mr. Allen, but that there were enough hacks at the depot already—"enough" when there isn't even one on the route referred to.

Mr. Roberts has a livery stable and charges twenty-five and fifty cents for the same service Mr. Allen performs for a dime, the latter working very hard at that to make a living. But, what are you going to do about it? The combine are in control, though their term will end within the next three months—just three months too long.

Excitement on Front Street.

Considerable excitement was caused on West Front street yesterday afternoon by what was supposed to be a mad dog. It appears that the canine had injured its back in some way, and ran into Edsall's dry and fancy goods store and laid down on the floor near the counters. One of the clerks espied it and started the alarm of "mad dog." The other clerks immediately jumped up on the counters and sought other places of safety. Policeman Giese finally appeared on the scene and succeeded in getting the dog out of the store. The affair caused a large crowed to congregate.

Drunk and Disorderly.

A man named Barnett who resides in the vicinity of Sterling was arrested yesterday afternoon by Policeman Giese on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He had a team of horses which he was driving recklessly on the streets. He was arraigned before City Judge Codington, pleaded guilty and a fine of $5 and costs imposed. A few weeks ago Burnett was arrested on a similar charge and paid a similar fine.

A Small Fire.

The roof over the foundry of the Pond Machine Tool Works caught fire yesterday afternoon. A few sheets of tarred felt covering the same was burned before the flames were discovered. A few pails of water extinguished the blaze. The damage is slight.

Mr. Comstock Will Make an Address Here.

Anthony Comstock of New York will speak to men under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the First Baptist church next Sunday at 4:15 p. m.

—Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, headed by the Plainfield Cornet Band, took their apparatus to Somerville on the 2:47 train this afternoon.

A NARROW ESCAPE ALL AROUND.

A Heedless Bicyclist Runs Under a Horse.

A bicyclist while riding on Somerset street this afternoon, and looking down to discover the cause of a clicking in his wheel, ran into expressman Coddington's horse, which was standing attached to a wagon, in the road. The front wheel ran under the horse, which, thus rudely aroused from its after-dinner meditations, promptly bolted. The bicycle, tangled somehow, was drawn, end over end, for about forty feet. And it only had the "coaster" snapped, and a lamp holder bent, when picked up by the scared owner, who by an instinctive backward spring at the moment of the collision escaped unhurt, except for a bruised finger.

The horse was stopped before any damage was done.

Scotch Plains Public Library.

Attention is called in another column to a Bazaar which is to be held this week at Scotch Plains, for the benefit of the Public library, free reading room and game room. This popular institution was established two years and-a-half ago; its pleasant rooms, consisting of the library and reading room proper, and two smaller rooms well equipped with all the popular games, are open to the public on three evenings and two afternoons of each week. The game rooms take the place of a Boys' Club.

Most of the boys who patronize the library are well and comfortably clad, but there are few little urchins whose bare feet and poor clothing show that the wolf of poverty is not far from their door. But they are quite as eager to avail themselves of the literary feast spread upon the library table, as the boys who are better off in a worldly point of view.

Mr. David F. Hall, the faithful guardian and friend of the library, and the man to whom its growth, present and constant vigilance it largely owes its success, is anxious to have the rooms open every evening, should funds be forthcoming to meet the necessary expense of doing so. Mr. Hall visits the library every evening when it is open. He says that when for any reason, it is necessary to close the library temporarily, the little boys run after him in the village street saying "Mr. Hall—will the library be open to-night? When will it be open?"

To the generosity of Excelsior Fire Company the library owes the fact that it is practically rent free.

The fair will be held in the hall of Excelsior Engine Company, and guests visiting it will have an opportunity of visiting the library also. The ladies of all religious denominations in the village are working for the success of this undertaking. It will open under the best possible auspices. Quick sales and small profits will be the motto of the occasion. The managers are experienced and competent ladies and gentlemen, who intend, to make the fair not only profitable, but pleasurable to all who may visit it.

A New Paper.

The publication of a new paper named the Plainfield Courier, was begun yesterday by Mr. F. W. Runyon, editor of The Times, which he purchased a year ago, but which does not satisfy his ambition. The new paper will eventually absorb The Times in all probability, just as the Courier absorbed the Communicator, of which it was the outgrowth. The Courier is a six column paper, set in large type to begin with, and has a home being fifty per cent. more matter in each local column than The Times, other two dailies, and it starts out with scarcely 300 subscribers. It is run by handpower, and has no steam plant, and yet claims a liberal amount of advertising patronage, at rates if reports are true, larger than the other local dailies with from four to five times the circulation. Mr. Runyon is a well-bred gentleman, and in his salutatory expresses sentiments which lived up to can do him no harm if they do not do him any good. They are the same as all well-meaning publishers start out with and stick to as long as they are willing, usually, but are oftentimes switched off from by the course of events over which the best meaning have occasionally to bow.

The matter from the Courier is to be republished in The Times so that such of the Courier readers who do not wish the news in daily installments at $5 per year, will continue to receive it weekly at $1 per year. Mr. Runyon has modeled his office management as closely as possible after THE NEWS, and, like the other daily, has a gentleman educated in THE NEWS office in local newspaper work filling one of the most important positions.

THE BROTHER-IN-LAW FRACAS.

Duffy More Seriously Injured Than at First Reported.

Dominic Canfield, the young man who engaged in a fight with his brother-in-law on West Third street at about seven o'clock Saturday evening and which resulted seriously for his brother-in-law, was arraigned yesterday afternoon by Policeman Giese on the charge of violating the city ordinances by fighting and disturbing the place and quietness of the neighborhood. City Judge Coddington held him in $200 bail to appear when wanted.

It appears that the affair is more serious than was at first reported. An examination of the injured jaw bone had been fractured in three places and that it was necessary to set it in plaster of Paris. It was then that bail in the amount is administered to Duffy through a silver tube. Dr. Boone is attending him.

Candidly speaking, the only bit of Duffy's thumb's and the doctors are afraid that blood poisoning will set in.

A Driver's Mistake.

A few days ago the foreman of Gazelle Engine Company No. 1, told George Moore, the hose carriage driver, to put the steamer "in oil," preparatory to polishing it for the parade which is taking place to-day. Moore undertook the job, but instead of using sperm oil and rotten stone he used kerosene oil and whiting. When the men started to polish the engine they found it impossible to do so and it took two men over a half a day to get the kerosene and whiting off the engine. When the steamer left for Somerville to-day it fairly glistened and was as bright as a new penny.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Laura Blanche VanArsdale of Crescent avenue started to-day on a sketching tour up the Hudson.

Mrs. Wm. Paine of Somerset street has a night blooming cereus of which she is justly proud. It recently bloomed and was greatly admired by her friends.

Mr. Mattie C. Brown, wife of Mr. Geo. F. Brown, died at the residence of her father, Mr. L. L. Smalley, of Crain place, to-day. This will be sad news to her many friends. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown were active workers in the First Baptist church and their popularity makes doubly grievious the great misfortune that has befallen Mr. Brown in death of his wife.

Sam's "Hen" was a Rooster.

Sam Hedden, a quaint and very well-known character of North Plainfield, was passing along Somerset street Saturday afternoon, carrying a plucked hen, such as is sometimes used to set hens.

"What are you doing, Sam?" called out an acquaintance, "raising chickens?"

"No p'! answered Samuel," was gointer, but he ain't got ready. I found my hen was a rooster."

Was the Dog Mad?

Michael Refferan, an employe of Mr. John H. Blimm, of East Third street, saw a dog which he thought was mad on East Second street yesterday morning and he secured a club and fought the canine. He says that it snapped at every passing object and Michael says it eventually escaped from him but he still is of the opinion that the dog was mad.

A New Lodge.

The residents of this city who propose to organize a new lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows held a meeting last evening and formed a temporary organization. Mr. T. C. Smith was chosen chairman, Mr. Lewis R. Blackford, secretary and Mr. Charles Randolph, treasurer.

A Horse Injured.

Miss Blimm of Somerset street and Mr. Dalbert of New York were driving down the mountain road yesterday afternoon when the horse stumbled and fell. The occupants of the carriage jumped out and thus escaped injury. The horse was badly cut on the knees.

Injured His Fellow-Workman.

While working on Peace street Friday afternoon one of the Italians, employed by the Plainfield Water Supply Company, in digging trenches for their pipes, accidentally struck a fellow-workman in the head with a pick. The wound inflicted was not a serious one.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The master mechanic of the Philadelphia and Reading road is ready to state all he has and hopes for in this life that his newest locomotive engine will travel 100 miles an hour.

All Americans will be glad to hear that Grover Cleveland is recovering her health and is once more able to take the platform, not only with her old time magnificent and ringing voice, but with some of her old time lectures.

With all due deference to his emperor and the plan of insuring state insurance for workingmen, Professor Geffcken is doubtful of its utility. It is not old age that troubles workingmen, but the want of work to do. If the state or any other agency could guarantee them work throughout their lives they would ask for no old age insurance, from the fact they would seldom become too old to labor.

Campaign Songs.

It is a fact that a political party has often floated itself into power by simply happening to hit upon a good campaign song. The old stirring strains of "Dixie" once and Tyler too," in 1840, are well remembered yet by many a veteran who trained with the ancient Whig party.

During the war, "Rally Round the Flag, Boys," caused many a doubting young hero to enlist. So did "Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." Above all, Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" fired the patriotic soul.

But great occasions produce great songs and great men. We have not had since the war any political or patriotic song that stirred the soul as the old ones used to do.

In Ohio there has been much marching to and fro under the Republican banner to the tune of "Uncle Sam is doing business at the same old stand." This air has a swing and a rhythm to it that are very catching indeed.

In New York the Republicans have got hold of something almost equally taking, a song set to the music of "Marching Through Georgia," and are making it ring up hill and down dale. It is true that General Sherman was so tired of this air that he called it "that blasted old tune," or words to that effect, and hoped he would never hear it again. But with the multitude it never can wear out. It rings to the popular ear sleeping or waking.

The New York Democracy have a royal opportunity, which they have not yet properly utilized, in the name of their candidate for governor, Roswell P. Flower. But in many of the states it is safe to say that party could win which could get a composer to make for it a magnificent campaign song.

Fact and Fancy as to Australia.

For some years Australia has been regarded as having the most wealth per capita of any country on the globe. The latest figures are not at hand, but it is likely that the United States, with its $1,000 per head of the population, will push Australia very close. The next Australian property census will be looked for with much interest.

David Christie Murray declares there is more material comfort to the square inch in the far southwestern continent than anywhere else on the globe, a statement which Americans will be inclined to question. The future of this strange realm of mingled romance and hard fact is one that peculiarly interests the student of social and economic science. Australia was settled by two generations ago by British penal settlements, men and women, who left to their posterity, along with material accumulations, the heritage of dark histories of crime.

The convicts often become rich and respectable men. Their children and grandchildren frequently occupy today the highest places of honor in that new world. The question is therefore partially solved as to whether crime and pauperism are to be eliminated out of the blood. The factors to be considered therefore in summing up the characteristics of the Australians as a people are their ancestry, the effect of the climate on them, and finally, the effect of the sudden and extraordinary opportunities for gaining wealth.

The climate is extremely hot for the Anglo-Saxon race. In the southern part of the continent the temperature is nearly on a level with that of southern France. Going northward of course it grows hotter, till after Queensland is passed it is tropical altogether, and in the extreme north the white man who lives and thrives will have to be a different person from the American and European of the present. A native Australian prophesies that the Australian white man of the coming race will be tall, thin, greedy and grabbing, as well as he goes, carrying all before him and enriching himself. He will be talented intellectually to a degree, hard way, and will be an expert rider and swimmer. In 500 years the white race in Australia will have run out altogether.

The toughest statement made by Mr. Murray, however, in regard to the strange, rich country is that it is the wickedest country on the globe in respect to crimes against person and property, and in respect to drunkenness. In the latter shortcomings we are told, that it beats even Switzerland. New South Wales contains the most rascals from the business standpoint and Queensland the most drunkards.

OELRICHS STEPS DOWN

Antipathy to Tammany Hall Prompts the Move.

TREASURER WADSWORTH RESIGNS

He Thinks the Signing of His Name to the Republican Circular Requesting Contributions May by Some Be Deemed Unlawful Because He Is a Congressman.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Herman Oelrichs last evening tendered his resignation as a member of the Democratic national committee to Chairman Calvin S. Brice. He his letter of resignation Mr. Oelrichs gives as his reason for withdrawing that the action of the New York Democratic state convention in having indicated by its nominations that Tammany Hall was to be the ruling spirit in the state does not coincide with his views. Mr. Oelrichs is in Europe.

Mr. Oelrichs' letter follows:

NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1891.

Hon. Calvin S. Brice, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee:

MY DEAR SIR—I hand you herewith my resignation as the member of the National Democratic committee for the state of New York.

It is with regret that I take this step, as my relations with the have been most pleasant, and I have a lively recollection of your never failing courtesy during the arduous labors of the last presidential campaign. I can not, however, reconcile it with my idea of right to retain a position to which I was elected by the representatives of the Democratic party in the state in convention assembled at St. Louis in 1888, when a large and representative portion that body is arbitrarily denied admission to the councils of the party, as was the case at the recent Democratic State convention held at Saratoga last month.

Tammany Hall was admitted to the councils prior to my election, and I have since been content by seating its seventy-two delegates and declaring none others to be entitled to places in the convention. This is my interpretation of the declaration by the Democratic party of the state through its convention, that Tammany Hall is the only Democratic party entitled to be recognized by its delegates in the democratic councils. It is equivalent to a declaration that there is and can be no Democratic outside of Tammany, and that the standard of Democracy is the appeal of Tammany's men and Tammany's methods.

I have never been a member of any political organization, but I consider Hall is the only representative in New York city of the Democratic party, then I, not being a member of it and not sympathizing in its methods, should not continue to act as the representative of my party in the national committee, and being in honor as a party man bound and entitled in carrying out the late Samuel J. Tilden, I resign the very honorable position to which I was elected by the representatives of the Democratic party of the state of New York. Yours very truly,

HERMAN OELRICHS.

James W. Wadsworth Steps Out.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—James W. Wadsworth, treasurer of the Republican state committee, sent his resignation to the committee last evening. A. C. Cheney president of the Garfield National bank has accepted the office.

The Circular the Cause.

Hon. William Brookfield, Chairman Republican State Committee:

DEAR SIR—The attachment of my name to a circular inviting contributions to the state campaign purposes may be considered a violation of law by me, as I am a congressman-elect from New York state, and may be held to have sent to it, and as this may embarrass the committee I resign the treasurership. Very truly yours, J. W. WADSWORTH.

Fassett at Auburn.

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Senator Fassett was welcomed by a large audience on his arrival here. After paying a tribute to William H. Seward, whose home was here, he said the contest of the campaign was for good government. Mr. Fassett went on to say that Tammany Hall had killed the World's fair for New York and had then charged him with doing it. Tammany Hall had opposed every measure for ballot reform, and yet it had the cast iron, burglarproof cheek to cry out that the Republican party had tied up against manhood suffrage. Mr. Fassett renewed his charge that the direct tax money had been loaned to banks by the Democratic party for the purpose of using it for campaign purposes. Continuing, he said:

Tammany Hall Criticised.

Tammany is not an American institution. In Tammany the people have no organization. The power is all centered in the chief sachems. Years ago it was Tweed, Sweeny and Connolly. Now it is Sheehan, Croker and Connolly. I give their names, but will leave their record untold. These men are the masters of Tammany, and that organization stands for personal, partisan, political and pecuniary benefit of its members.

Its purpose is public plunder. Tell me one noble act, tell me of a philanthropic act, tell me of one grand thing that has been done itself by this organization. On the other hand, tell me of any great robbery or jobbery in the history of New York city that Tammany has not a sharer and a participant. Her history is marked by great blots on the fair fame of New York. The never need ask, like Flaccus, of Texas, "What are we here for?" Every one understands that they are here for all there is in it. They have been struggling for years to be recognized as the only Democrats in New York city. This year they succeed. They achieved the fulfillment of their hopes. Tammany is no call low youth. It is no small task to talk of beating her. Such beating can be attained by the aroused intelligence and the combined virtue of the state of New York. To that I put my hope for election.

Sherman at Zanesville.

ZANESVILLE, O., Oct. 6.—Senator Sherman spoke at the opera house here last night to a large and attentive audience. His remarks were in support of Major McKinley and protection and said upon the silver question. He goes from here to Washington Court House, O.

A Farmers' Alliance Candidate.

Bradley Made Receiver.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Judge Furman, of Troy, has appointed Nicholas E. Brodley temporary receiver of the Ulster County Savings bank. He was for many years cashier of the Kingston National bank and was vice president of the defunct institution. The appointment gives great satisfaction.

A Forger Sentenced.

MARION, Ind., Oct. 6.—Edward A. Cantley, the Chicago forger, has received a sentence of three years in the penitentiary. Cantley held policies in eight different accident insurance companies to the extent of over $30,000 and by forged papers secured an income of over $300 a week.

TAMMANY HALL ATTACKED

Lieutenant Governor Jones Makes a Statement to the Public.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Lieutenant Governor E. F. Jones, who has come here for the purpose of having his eyes treated, has given out the following statement to the public:

There seems to be a disposition among party Democrats, who believe that the party should be supported through thick and thin, right or wrong, by Democracy because I am in favor of defeating the ticket nominated at Saratoga.

All such I would say that my opposition to the Tammany ticket is in full accord with Mr. Tilden's expressed views in relation to Tammany Hall. He was opposed to its admission to the Democratic convention held at Rochester in 1871, when it was proposed to eject from the convention Governor Seymour.

Tilden on Tammany Hall.

"I still think that on such an occasion the honest and manly thing for the party would have been the highest wisdom, and in the long run the most consummate prudence. For myself I am as time hesitated to sever as my conviction of duty and my rule of action that a million of people were not to be given over to pillage to serve any party expediency or to advance any views of state or national politics."

His Views Unchanged.

I am fully in accord with the Democratic principles on which the party was founded, as enunciated by Jefferson, and have not changed my views since the adoption of the platform of the last national convention. But as previously expressed by me, I am most decidedly convinced that the people whose interests I have always endeavored to advance would be greatly injured were the control of our state government put into the hands of the men who now manage Tammany Hall, which would be the result of the election of the Saratoga ticket.

History Repeats Itself.

We well know that the predecessors of these men in Tammany Hall, during the term Mr. Tilden spoke as "a local organization, which held the influence growing out of the employment of a large number of persons, independent of party divisions a year, which has possession of all the machinery of local government, dominated the Democratic State convention held at Saratoga last month.

Tammany Hall was admitted to the exclusive representation of the Democracy of the city by seating its seventy-two delegates and declaring none others to be entitled to places in the convention. This is equivalent to a declaration by the Democratic party of the state through its convention, that Tammany Hall is the only Democratic party entitled to be recognized by its delegates in the democratic councils. It is equivalent to a declaration that there is and can be no Democracy outside of Tammany, and that the standard of Democracy is the appeal of Tammany's men and Tammany's methods.

I have never been a member of any political organization, but I consider Hall is the only representative in New York city of the Democratic party, then I, not being a member of it and not sympathizing in its methods, should not continue to act as the representative of my party in the national committee, and being in honor as a party man bound and entitled in carrying out the late Samuel J. BUT SHE'S NOT A VOTER

IN HIS FIRST SPEECH HE ENTERS NEW YORK'S CAMPAIGN.

In His First Speech at the Democratic Club He Praises the Saratoga Ticket and Declares That the Fight This Fall Will Be a Clean One.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The reception at the Democratic club rooms, 617 Fifth avenue, in honor of Roswell P. Flower, last evening, marked the re-entrance of Grover Cleveland into the political arena. After a silence unbroken since the opening of the present campaign in this state he made a speech, clearly defining his position and his desire for the success of the state ticket.

Cummings Arraigns Fassett.

Hon. Amos J. Cummings made the longest speech of the evening. He charged that Mr. Fassett had by his acts denied himself of all claim to the support of Democrats in the state. He stated that Mr. Fassett was the owner of $50,000 of stock in the Elmira Advertiser; that it had been mutilated a few days after his nomination for governor run as a non-resident office; that several years ago a delegation of Typographical union No. 19 of Elmira called on Mr. Fassett and urged him to place union men at the case. He refused the request. Two years ago another committee waited on him and to their demands Mr. Fassett turned a deaf ear. After he was nominated the committee waited on him the third time, and two days afterward the manager made the office a union office. In short Cummings said Mr. Fassett's record in Congress. He has throughout championed the cause of organized labor.

Mr. Cleveland's Speech.

At this juncture there was a commotion near the entrance which deepened into enthusiastic cheers when Grover Cleveland, leaning on the arm of F. Lynde Stetson, entered the club house by the door directly to where Mr. Flower was standing and the cheers broke out once more. Mr. Cleveland spoke as follows:

Miss Cleveland Not a Voter.

GENTLEMEN—I find that you members of the Democratic club are the greatest gourmands for speech-making and speech-hearing. I have visited you I have been asked for a speech before I have got anything out of you. You may be surprised at getting me here tonight, as for the past few days I have been more interested in nominal politics. (Cheers and laughter.) I can say that I am more interested in politics, although the subject of that solicitude on my part will never be of any special benefit to the Democratic party (laughter) since there is a time when the woman's suffrage bill passes.

When, however, I enter this Democratic house it arouses in me an unbridled love for Democratic success. (Applause.) We are now entering upon a most important conflict, and I assure you that I do not want to be left out. (Laughter.) At this time, which in my mind is one of the most important campaigns which we have yet entered, it is a time when all who call themselves Democrats should do their utmost for the success of Democratic principles. Let it be known when that no greater necessity for united action in the empire state existed than now, and that it is the earnest and enthusiastic purpose of the Democratic party to elect their nominees.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I say to you that the ticket you have nominated deserves the most hearty, honest and warmest support of the party, and any Democrat who fails in giving this will regret it. (Cheers and long continued applause.) You are assembled to hear me issuing notes of warning, but I wish to utter another tonight. In order to secure votes enough to succeed, they will be by the most systematic work. You will have to work harder this fall to win than ever before, and it needs the most earnest sentiment and most active action to insure success. I hope that when the sun sets on the 3d day of next November a glorious victory, but it will not be won without effort. I am confident that the right spirit will prevail and that the Democratic club will have good cause for congratulation.

Tammany Leaders Absent.

Not a word about Tammany Hall was spoken, and the prominent members of that organization were nearly all absent. Richard Croker, Commissioner Gilroy and other district leaders did not appear.

Ohio Democratic Rally.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—Much enthusiasm was manifested at the Mills mass meeting at Music hall last night, literally the opening gun of the Democracy in the notable state campaign now on. Half of the hall was occupied by the 1,100 invited guests and the campaign clubs, who marched gayly in with stirring music and banners flying. Ex-Congressman Crain, of Texas, attacked Mr. McKinley and the tariff bill, which he said was a bill to make the burden of the wage earner greater and the cost of his necessities more. "Let us look at the claims of protection."

Mr. Mills Speaks.

Ex-Congressman Mills, of Texas, was ardently welcomed, the chairman introducing him as "the intellectual leader of the next congress." Mr. Mills said:

I am to speak to you on the natural rights of citizens. The Democracy stands for the rights of free speech, of free thought, of free locomotion, of free labor and of free trade. When there was a surplus in the national treasury Democracy demanded that the revenues be reduced and the accumulating of vast funds be retained to the injury of the people. To-day the Republican party immediately upon its returning to power proceeded to waste the immense sum of money and to increase the debt of the people. And now my distinguished friend, William McKinley, Jr., tells us that the tariff is not a tax on the people. A certain paragraph which he has copied from the works of Alexander Hamilton, who says:

"The tariff upon a commodity is incorporated in the cost thereof." There is not a merchant in Cincinnati, there is not a man in the Union or in the world but who will tell you that every charge in production, every change in transportation, every tax or duty is added to the price and is paid by the last consumer. The tariff of the world is carried on for profit, not for love or sentiment. I don't care how much money you coin or how much you print and place in circulation the people can buy no more than they can earn. Taxation has its firm in their pocket to the shoulder.

Democracy's Time to Die.

In closing let me speak of the argument that I have noticed to the extent that I have scarcely referred to Campbell in some of my tariff speeches. He has been the favorite Republican party will think that there is a Campbell under every cloud. Poor fellow! He has been dead, has outlived his usefulness and his time has come to die. When the Alleghenies and the Rockies shall fade from the face of the earth and become seas upon which fleets will float, then will it be Democracy's time to die.

Railroad Trainmen Meet.

GALESBURG, Ills., Oct. 6.—The national convention of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has opened here and will continue in session for the entire week. The most important question to be decided are the recent switchmen's strike on the North western road and the authority of Grand Master Wilkinson for removing the board of trustees and appointing a new one.

FASHIONS

THE USE OF CRAPE.

The French Woman Makes Much of It in Gowns and Bonnets.

It's rather odd, but it's true, that the more sombre material is the cheaper they are, and this especially applies to crape. A good crape may be worn for a long time, dressed and redressed, and recrossed and turned, and it always looks as good as new, while a cheap quality of crape has the unpleasant fashion of growing rusty before it is worn out, and looking like mitigated woe and suggesting nothing so much as grief that will not survive a rainy day.

French women thoroughly understand the art of mourning, as they do every other art of dress, and they realize that the Spanish lace veil which was worn a huge veil over her face and extending far down her back may be a monument of woe, but is really also a blot upon the face of the wearer. Indeed, the Paris veil has arranged on her street gown a full front of crape, and by full one means covering the entire front, a bodice with sleeves and jacket fronts of crape, and then the tiniest of small bonnets, on which is arranged the heavy crape veil turned back.

There are several reasons why a veil worn off the face is recommended. First, crape, when it is worn on the face, seems to shut out all the sunshine and goodness of life, whereas when it is properly draped it is distinguished looking, and, most important of all, it is becoming

DRESS REFORM.

An Incident When Dress Reformers Have Their Way.

"I THINK IT'S TOO MEAN FOR ANYTHING, THE WAY MY—ER—YOU KNOW, BAG AT THE KNEES!"—Life.

A World's Fair Report Denied.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Director General Davis denies that a report has been made to be solicited with inscriptions showing the amount paid to workmen for producing the same for the purpose of making a contrast with the pay given to Europeans for similar work.

Soon to Reach the Esteemed Miners.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 6.—An air current has been established in Richardson colliery and it is thought the entombed men will soon be reached. The work progresses slowly on account of the limited number of men who can work in the gangway.

The World's Greatest Oil Well.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 6.—The Greenlee and Forest well on the Meuy farm at McDonald is the wonder of the world. It is now doing 600 barrels an hour, or 14,000 barrels per day. It is the greatest oil producer the world has ever known.

Jay Gould at Work Again.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Jay Gould has recovered sufficiently from his collapse of last week to be able to attend to business again. George Gould ridicules the idea that his father's health is in a critical state.

TO TRY DR. BRIGGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The New York presbytery decided to proceed with the trial of the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs for heresy, the indictment to be found on his inaugural address.

The seven ministers and elders who were to heal the Briggs breach and bring the church to blissful harmony again made their peaceful appearance yesterday, but their olive branch was not worthy of any acrimonious debate, which lasted out the day, ended in a decision definitely committing the local presbytery to the trial of Dr. Briggs.

The vote by which the ministrations of the peacemakers were rejected stood 62 to 54, and strangely it was the laymen who decided it by that narrow margin. A majority of the clergymen were in favor of dropping the whole subject.

Now will come the actual trial, beginning ten days hence, on the ponderous indictment submitted by the committee yesterday, in which is specified wherein and to what extent Dr. Briggs has transgressed the fundamental law of Presbyterianism. With all the avowed friends of Dr. Briggs, many voted yesterday for the abandonment of proceedings by a mere quibble, and in the final trial, so that judging from the general temper of the Presbytery his chances do not look bright.

SHE DIED IN HIS ARMS.

A New York Fireman Rescues His Enperiling Wife and Perishes in the Flames.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Four and possibly five fatalities were the result of the tenement house fire at 262 Hudson street. The dead are:

Katherine Dunn, twenty-three years old, a dressmaker.

Mrs. Annie Murphy, thirty-two years.

Martin Touhey, eleven years old, another son, lies on a cot in St. Vincent's hospital suffering terribly from internal burns. He has a badly broken hip.

The house of Hook and Ladder company No. 8 is on North Moore street, just off West Broadway. One of the firemen is Matthew Murphy, a powerful young Irishman. He and comely Annie Touhey the widow of John Touhey, were only married on Sept. 13 last.

When Murphy left for Sunday evening to go on duty she was well and strong and happy in his love. When again he saw her she was unconscious and dying. He it was who found her. He carried through stifling smoke to where she lay. He carried her to the fire escape and held her in his arms when she died.

ELECTIONS IN CONNECTICUT.

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 6.—There was dismay among the Republicans when they left after the voting for town officers had begun they discovered that their ballots were similar to those declared illegal under the new ballot law at the September election, instead of bearing simply the designation "town clerk," they were printed "town clerk and registrar." The Democrats discovered this error on their ballots and had it remedied.

The Republicans decided to go on voting their ballots, however, but if any of their candidates are defeated the Democrats will appeal to the courts.

MERIDEN, Oct. 6.—The town elections have resulted in victory for the Democratic ticket.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 6.—The Democrats carried Ansonia and Derby and the Republicans Huntington.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 6.—Every town in Windham county went Republican and nearly all of them voted against license. South Norwalk elected Will iam B. Reed, Democrat, mayor.

In Hartford the Democrats carried most of the town offices, although the Republican treasurer, Charles Strong was re elected.

Moore Practically Under Arrest.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Express Messenger H. A. Moore, who says he was held up in his car on the Auburn express special train, is practically under arrest. After the robbery Moore turned over a package of bonds to the amount of $12,000. These bonds were identified and Moore said the bonds had escaped the thief. An examination disclosed the fact that the package had been opened and the bonds sorted over. The failure to find any bullet marks in the car—which should have been there, according to Moore's story—has not so far caused Moore to show any weakness.

Rev. Philip Garrett Sentenced.

READING, Oct. 6.—Rev. Philip H. Garrett, a well known United Brethren minister, has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment. He was previously convicted of defrauding an insurance company. He broke down completely as he was led from court and wept bitterly.

Fatally Stabbed His Brother.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 6.—Edward and Richard Scott, brothers, were playing billiards in Harry Davis' hall on Diamond street. After a slight quarrel Edward, aged twenty-three, drew a dirk and plunged the blade first into Richard's neck, then into his left lung, inflicting a fatal injury.

To Investigate the Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The management of the New York Ball club has at last taken official notice for the universal demand for an explanation of the series of five games in which the club resulted in as many defeats for the Giants. An investigation has been ordered.

Typhoid's Ravages at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 6.—The Newark health officers report for the week ending Saturday shows that thirty-three cases of typhoid fever have been under their surveillance of the department and that twelve persons have died from the disease.

Six Years for Defaulter Sitter.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 6.—Judge Wood, of the federal court, has sentenced Charles Ritter, the defaulting teller of the First National bank of this city, to six years in the penitentiary at Michigan city. His defalcation amounted to $26,000.

Boston's Big Blaze.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—John P. Squire & Co.'s immense packing establishment in East Cambridge and Somerville was partly burned last night, causing a loss of about $150,000. The buildings cover several acres of ground.

Eight Children Poisoned.

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Eight children, from three to ten years of age, were poisoned yesterday by eating the berries of the wild parsnip and are not expected to recover.

BAD FOR THE GOLD FISH.

French Merchants Will Not Send Exhibits and They Will Not See the Theater Paris, Oct. 6.—The replies of French manufacturers to the government circulars relative to the Chicago World's fair indicate a lack of confidence. They generally regret Algeria's invitation, following upon the McKinley tariff, as a mere mockery. The chambers of commerce of Bordeaux, Lille and Roubaix report that not a single industrial exhibitor has applied. Lyons, St. Etienne and Rouen have had one applicant each. The majority of the chambers merely note the absence of applicants. About a hundred Parisian manufacturers have announced their intention to exhibit.

Another Bank Closed.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Oct. 6.—President Dill is still in jail. The Phillipsburg (Centre county) bank has closed. Jonathan Boynton, father-in-law of President Dill, is president of this bank. Cashier McGrath, of the Houtzdale bank, says the liabilities of that concern amount to $185,000. The assets are $105,000. As there is every reason to believe that the depositors are well protected.

The Pillsbury Hospital Opened.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 6.—The Margaret Pillsbury General hospital, donated to the Hospital association for the city by Hon. George A. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis, who was mayor of Concord in 1876 and 1877, has been dedicated. Mr. Pillsbury made the presentation in an interesting address.

Dies Debut's Western Career.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—The chief of police of San Francisco has written Chief Dietsch a letter concerning the Vera Ava mystery. He has seen her picture and says she is the same woman who has worked the western coast as a spiritualist and massage doctor under the name of Mme. Isabel.

Kicked His Wife to Death.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 6.—Patrick Brady, a stalwart Irishman, six feet in height, was taken to Newark from Avondale and lodged in jail on a charge of killing his wife. Avondale is six miles from Newark. Brady kicked his wife to death because she would not cook his dinner.

Secretary Halford Ill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Private Secretary Halford, who was compelled to leave the executive mansion on account of illness, is suffering from an attack of renal neuralgia. His illness is painful, but not serious.

Killed by a Street Car.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Eliza Perry, a widow, forty-two years old, was run over and killed at Henderson street and New York avenue last night by the limited car No. 55, of the Jersey City and Bergen railroad.

Fears of Violence at Kingston.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The Kingston militia has been ordered to be ready to turn out at any time, violent demonstration by the depositors of the ruined savings bank being feared.

Fired Upon Striking Rioters.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—Owing to the famine the anti-Jewish agitation, at Lodwirke, in Poland, robbed the bakers' shops. The troops fired on the rioters, killing one and wounding several.

Found Bishop Esher Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—At the session of the Evangelical association Bishop Esher was found guilty and a committee of nine was appointed to formulate a sentence.

ALBERT VICTOR UNEASY.

Did He Know the Dead Gaiety Girl Suicide?

A CORONER SHIELDS THE PRINCE.

The Eldest Son of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales Said to Have Been the Protector of Lydia Miller, Who Recently Killed Herself.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Considerable interest is being taken in the echoes of the inquest on the body of Lydia Miller, de Mauton, to use her stage name, a chorus girl at the Gaiety theater, who recently committed suicide by drinking half a pint of carbolic acid. At the inquiry on Saturday, it will be remembered, Lord Charles Montagu, brother of the Duke of Manchester, testified to having been on very intimate terms with the deceased and to having been late in keeping an appointment to lunch with her on the day of her death. This failure to keep an appointment promptly is said to have greatly annoyed the chorus girl.

Was the Prince Implicated.

Since the rejnest mysterious allusions have been made in the newspapers to a certain high personage, understood to be Prince Albert Victor, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, who also is said to have had intimate relations with the dead girl.

As in the case of the death of the Duke of Bedford, who shot himself in a fit of temporary insanity on Jan. 14 last, attempts have been made by the coroner, who is the official who acted in the case of the suicide of the Duke of Bedford, to hush up the real facts in connection with the death of the Gaiety girl. The anxiety to conceal facts in the case is said to be on account of the dead actress' noble and royal protectors, but it is only serving to attract further attention to the case.

The Dead Girl's Letter.

The coroner today still refuses access to the depositions taken, and it is openly stated that the members of the coroner's jury were called upon to affix a blank paper instead of the usual record of the proceedings. The letter to Lord Charles Montagu, produced at the inquest, read:

DEAR CHARLIE—I feel very low and depressed at your leaving me in the sulks. Shall go and stay with my sister for a few days.

The coroner did not show Miss Miller's letter to the jurymen, but he read it to them after consulting with Lord Montagu.

Montagu a Substitute.

The Star, commenting upon the affair, says that the truth as to the mystery will never be known, and that it is obvious that another inquest has been hushed up. Continuing, the Star says: "No one suspected Lord Charles Montagu and Lydia Miller to be more than the merest acquaintances, but there is now young man whose name is closely connected with hers, and it is the name of a young man whose position would authorize much effort to hush the matter up for the sake of 'society.' It was at his request or his command that she left the Gaiety theatre, so it was said on her authority at the time. A little house at Broadstairs could tell stories about Miss Miller.

"It was there she passed the summer, and Broadstairs had at the same time a distinguished visitor, whose presence, if it had been generally known, would have given the place excellent advertisement. This same person's sides are now by people are calling Lord Charles Montagu chivalrous and self sacrificing. He came forward at the inquest and assumed the role of the 'particular friend' in order to screen another.

"When it was found that she wore a diamond bracelet as a mark of princely favor it was quite certain that everything that money could do would be done to prevent publicity at the inquest."

What Montagu Testified.

Lord Charles Montagu during the inquest testified that he had an appointment to lunch with the dead girl, but that he was an hour late. He said that Miss Miller, when he finally appeared, flew into a violent passion. He added that they parted upon friendly terms and that there was nothing in her manner to intimate that she intended to commit suicide.

SAM'L OF POSEN'S HOPE.

The Claim Made That He Is a Victim of the Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—There was a decided sensation during the preliminary examination of Maurice B. Strellinger (better known as M. B. Curtis and "Sam'l of Posen"), for the alleged murder of Police Officer Grant. Henry Jeranson, formerly employed by Strellinger as a gardener, testified last Saturday that he had frequently seen a pistol in Strellinger's left hand back pocket, and identified the one found near the scene of murder as belonging to Strellinger.

When the examination began today Jeranson asked to be allowed to take the stand. He then contradicted his evidence of Saturday, saying that through fear of the police he had testified to a state of facts they had put into his mouth. He said he had never seen the pistol on Mr. Curtis, and that the only weapon he ever saw in his pocket was a large pruning knife. This development in the case, it is believed, will greatly lessen the chances of Curtis being convicted, as the case rests wholly on circumstantial evidence, there having as yet been found no eye witness to the shooting.

Head gardener for T. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
HERBERT CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HESS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could do. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

[illegible]

My little child, whatever can be [illegible]
Opened my heart, and [illegible]
Knee—
Apparitions in progress on a [illegible] hand.
Before its trance on earth [illegible]

My child's bright eyes [illegible] did fasten,
And then she questioned [illegible] answered,
"Are you old, grandmamma?" she [illegible] head:
Why, grandma's hand is very weak like this!

"Your face is young but, [illegible] dear, you hair
Is [illegible] like my grandma's, and she calls her gray.
Don't you need glasses? Now, my grandma' sight
Has left her eyes, she knows not night from day."

"Yes, child," I answered, "I am growing old:"
And then I lifted her upon my knee,
And asked, "My darling, is this prayer to come,
When I am helpless, who will care for me?"

Her loving arms entwined about my neck,
Her gentle hand caressed my fading hair,
And soft, warm kisses on my wrinkled lips
Laughed my fond question into empty despair.

Then, like a prophecy, her answer came,
Filled with the music of her clear young voice,
Freeing my soul from every dread of sin,
Making my heart in gratitude rejoice.

"Why, mamma dear, you care for grandma now;
When you're real old, I'll tell you what I'll do—
I'll be a woman, you can live with me,
And, mamma darling, I'll take care of you!"

GIRL LIFE IN PORTUGAL.

How Portuguese Maidens Are Trained to the Way They Are Educated.

Comparatively little can be said of girl life in Portugal, for girls have such a very slight role in the life of the nation. In childhood they are bright, clever and precocious, very much spoiled and very much dressed. A formal respect to their parents is insisted on, however; they address them in the third person, like the children of Israel, and ask their blessing at bedtime. They are constantly in the company of grown up people, sit up late at night and are free visitors to the theatre and opera.

A little girl of nine assumed me very much one day by a grave criticism on the voice of Mlle. Nevada, and Theodorini, who were then singing at San Carlos, and the parts in which they respectively shone. Conversation is not restrained in the presence of children, as they are early initiated into that freedom of ideas and freedom of expressing them that is so marked a feature of society in southern Europe.

The education of Portuguese girls is superficial, consisting chiefly in what used to be called "accomplishments"—music, embroidery and languages. Still three they attain great proficiency, and in the latter they excel. The Portuguese, unlike the Spaniards and Italians, are great linguists; they are, in many cases, quite fluent in French, English and German as in their mother tongue, and conquer the difficulties of accent and idiom with great accuracy.

There are schools of all sorts in Lisbon—government schools, private schools and convent schools, belonging to the French order of St. Vincent de Paul; for since the suppression of the national religious houses in 1834 these nuns have quietly spread their influence and multiplied their institutions, and have now almost exclusively in their hands the education of girls of the higher classes. They leave school at fifteen or sixteen, sometimes earlier, and marry very soon after.

HOW

How to Keep a Razor in Order.

A razor must be treated with respect, and a good razor deserves it. If you will look at the edge of a razor with a microscope you will see that it is [illegible] like a saw. If the razor be put away damp a rust will surely form in these teeth and the edge be lost. After using wipe the razor, pass it two or three times over the palm of the hand, strop it on the softest side of the strop and place it carefully in its case. In getting the razor ready for use don't be in a hurry and don't think that you will save time by heaping heavily on the strop. Haste and strength in stropping have failed more razors than heavy beards. In stropping bear quite gently on the strop and move the razor across it with deliberation from heel to toe, turning to the other side on the back of the blade and returning likewise from heel to toe, or from hilt to point, if such terms be plainer. Many youths when their beards are young think they must strop their razors, as they see barbers strop theirs. A barber, long little dab, becomes very dexterous in handling razors and puts a fine edge on his tools in a manner which if imitated by an amateur would even dull the rough edge of care, not to mention the delicate instrument with which he scrapes his chin.

How to Remove Tight Rings from Swollen Fingers.

Jewelers employ this methods Begin at the end and wrap the finger tightly with a flat rubber braid, cord or thread. Hold the finger up a few minutes; then remove the wrap quickly and wrap it again. The third, or at most fourth operation will generally reduce the finger so that the ring will slip off easily. Jewelers, however, like physicians, often find that "much depends on the idiosyncracy of the patient."

How to Act When Clothes Take Fire.

Seize blanket, shawl, overcoat or rug —anything of the sort indeed that is most convenient—spread it out as widely as possible, throw it around the victim and grasp tightly. This saves the face, which is the great object. Then throw the victim on the floor and the fire may be put out at comparative leisure. If the victim is alone, he or she may escape serious injury in most cases by falling upon the floor and rolling over till help arrives. Unfortunately, this an accident which in most cases deprives both victim and bystander of all judgment and presence of mind.

How to Preserve Natural Flowers.

Dip the flowers in melted paraffin and withdraw instantly. The mixture should be only warm enough to preserve its fluidity, and the flowers should be held by the stem and given one quick turn in the fluid to get rid of air bubbles. Of course the flowers should be free from all except the natural moisture.

How to Take Out of Glove.

Sew the buttons on a pair before using them. The buttons are not put on securely at the factories. A rip is best mended on the wrong side. For another sort of rent sometimes a bit of court plaster can be used. It will hold a tiny piece of kid in place on each thumb for a glove is liable to wear in holes. For all mending of gloves use thread instead of silk, and when repairing a small hole other than a rip buttonhole in fine stitches around its edge and then draw together. The buttonholing makes the repair more firm.

It is a pity no preparation has been found to prevent some hands from spoiling gloves by perspiration. There is only one way to care for such damp gloves, and that is to blow into them till they take the form of the hand, then put them where they will dry. If crumpled when wet it will be almost impossible to get them on after they dry.

How to Preserve Hams.

Mix five ounces of niter with eight ounces of coarse sugar and rub it on the ham; twenty-four hours later rub in two pounds of salt, and in two weeks two pounds more. This is for a twenty pound ham. It should lie in the salt a month or five weeks.

How to Make a Blackboard.

Mix flour emery with shellac varnish and add lampblack enough to give the color. If the varnish and emery mixture is too thick make it fluid with alcohol. Apply with a fine soft brush. This mixture may be put on a smoothly plastered wood or a planed board.

How to Deal with a Doctor.

Always be careful to tell him the exact truth as to what you gave the patient before he arrived. Don't be afraid of him—he is almost as anxious to cure as you are to have him. After the first general statement he will examine the patient and ask questions. Answer them as plainly and briefly as possible. In a case of some time standing it is particularly important that he should have the truth about what the patient eats. Don't let the idea get into your head that a "doctor's bill" is a sort of charity. After paying your taxes (which you can't escape) the next person paid should be the doctor. It is not necessary to be over neat in telling him how you got sick. He has probably doctored bigger fools than you.

How to Bake Gold and Silver Cake in One Pan.

When the batter of both kinds is ready put a little of one into one side of the pan, then some of the other on the other side, continuing this carefully until all the batter is placed. When baked there will be an almost straight perpendicular division line through the loaf, showing the two colors. The same thing can be done with white and chocolate cake.

SOME GOOD STORIES.

Not many years have passed since the New Mexico frontier was the abiding place of numerous characters, and some amusing stories are yet told about them. In those days any man was considered a doctor who put out a shingle and dosed and cauterized and mangled the sick and wounded. Sometimes these doctors were caught in court and forced to show their ignorance.

* * * * * * *

On one occasion the judge asked the doctor:

"How many ribs are there in the human body?"

"Sixteen, may the court please," promptly replied the doctor.

Soon after he quietly slipped into a back room and was seen with his coat and vest off feeling of his sides. He reappeared and addressed the court:

"May it please your honor, I desire to correct my testimony in regard to the number of ribs in the human body. There are twenty-four instead of sixteen."

* * * * * * *

When the Lemmon tragedy occurred in 1867 the fight took place in the street in front of the doctor's office. Chaves and Cleaver were on opposing tickets for delegate to congress. Lemmon headed the Chaves procession and Kelly the Cleaver procession. When they met Lemmon demanded the right of way, which was refused, and in the fight which ensued Lemmon, Kelly and some one else were killed and left on the ground, while the victorious procession pursued the vanquished. The doctor carried the bodies into his office for the purpose, as he afterward declared, of holding a post mortem examination and refreshing his memory and knowledge of anatomy. Before beginning operations he went across the street to get a drink, and during his absence friends of the dead men entered the office and carried the bodies away. When he returned and missed the bodies the doctor became highly indignant. He declared that to enter his office and remove the bodies was a gross violation of courtesy, "and, more than that," he exclaimed, "it is the severest blow ever inflicted on the profession of New Mexico!" —Chicago Tribune.

The Children.

Edna was looking at the sunset one evening. It was very beautiful above the golden glow hung a heavy, purplish cloud. The little girl's brown eyes shone with wondering delight. "Oh, auntie," she whispered, "hasn't God got pretty lambequins!"—Youth's Companion.

A precocious Boston youngster, whose soul was so attuned to music that he was set all on edge by inharmonious sounds, heard the dishes being washed lately, and stamping his foot and writhing as if in torture he wailed out, "Oh, dear! the forks are all in A and the spoons all in D."—Harper's Magazine.

A six-year-old little fellow was forced to wear a shirt three sizes too large for him. After straining against a little while he burst out with, "Ma, I feel awful lonesome in this shirt!"—Roselear.

There was a bridal couple from Jersey coming over on a Peconic ferry boat yesterday afternoon. They were young and tender, and as they sat together in the cabin they had hold of hands. This is perfectly proper and right, and we've all been there. Among those who looked on, however, was a lad of tender years, accompanied by his mother. The boy gazed and gazed, and he finally turned to his mother and said in a voice loud enough for all to hear:

"Say, maw, that girl wants to wipe her nose and that fellow won't let her."—New York Evening World.

Wonders of Science.

Blinks—If you have so much trouble with your teeth why don't you get artificial ones? The idea of being bothered that way in this marvelous age of scientific and mechanical progress! I got a full set only a few months ago.

Jinks—Indeed? Are they a success?

Blinks—Success? I should say so. Why, I can almost eat with them.—Good News.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

Nothing to Fear from Tom—We are Sure to Get There.

POOR SHOOTING.—As we were coming across the sand lots the other evening, after spending a couple of very agreeable hours at the adobe residence of the Widow Jackson, some would be assassin, who was in hiding, fired six bullets at us from a revolver. We think it was Tom Bigelow. We think so because Tom has shot at everybody in town and never hit any one. He didn't hit us. Being armed only with a bowie knife, we lit out as soon as the shooting began, and the last bullet went ten feet above our head.

We did think of hunting Tom up yesterday and splitting his ear with a bullet as a great moral lesson, but on second thought we concluded not to waste the time. He'll keep on blazing away around this town until somebody gets vexed at the noise and then he'll suddenly go hence. We don't want his funeral expenses on our hands.

HE'S A SUBSCRIBER.—Last week, as noticed by our contemporary in adouble headed article with three scare heads on it, Jim Benshaw, who owns the cactus ranch out on the Tucson road, refused to take his copy of The Kicker out of the postoffice. Jim not only owed us $1.50 on subscription, but refused his paper to hurt our feelings. He's been sore on us ever since we refused to lend him our white shirt—the only one in town—to go on a drunk in.

We want to show up an accommodating spirit toward all, and we have the name of being a good fellow, but we want to say right here and now that we believe a cotton wool shirt is plenty good enough for any man in this town to get drunk in. If it isn't, he'd better stay sober.

"Miss Mary," said Jim's little game we mounted our mule and rode over to interview him. He was expecting us. One bullet went through our hat and another razed our ears, but we got Jim by the hind down and we dug the bullet out of his shoulder and helped him into his dugout. He not only paid us all arrears in spot cash, but a dollar in advance subscription, and as soon as able to move about he will personally canvass for subscribers.

WE SHALL GET THERE.—Last Friday evening we were nominated for mayor by acclamation, and this is equivalent to an election. We don't deny that we sought the nomination, but we had only one eye on it for a year past. We shall also do our level best to snow our opponent under. We have been moved to this course by a desire to see the town well governed and because we believe the mayor should be the representative man of the town. We are the man. There's no use in filing and backing and talking about modesty and self conceit and all that. We lead this town. We know more than any ten men in it rolled together. We shall make the best mayor the town has ever had, and we shall see that all the city printing is given to The Kicker at legal rates.—M. Quad in New York World.

Began With "A."

In London one evening, writes a correspondent, I was looking for the Alhambra. Not knowing exactly in which direction it was, I stopped to inquire of a passerby, when suddenly the name of the theater escaped me entirely.

The situation was awkward, but I said: "Do you know where that large theater is near here—the name begins with 'A?'"

The man replied at once:

Where His Help Was Needed.

A timid man from down east, was out with a party blackberrying. It fell to his lot to help a lady, whose weight was near 200 pounds, over into a neighboring field. "Miss Mary," said he to her, "shall I help you over the fence?"

"No," said she; help the fence."

And over she went and left him to adjust the top rails at his leisure.—Texas Siftings.

TALK OF THE TOWN

All mechanics are invited to the reception at the Y. M. C. A., to-morrow Thursday evening.

The newly-elected officers of Somerset Lodge, Jr. O. U. A. M., were installed last evening.

The monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the room Thursday afternoon, following Mrs. Ellis Bible reading.

Two of the colored waiters employed at the City Hotel engaged in a fight yesterday afternoon and it was necessary to call on the police in order to have the fracas quelled.

"La Belle Marie, or, A Woman's Revenge" is the next play booked for Music Hall by the managers. It was the attraction at the opening for the season of the Windsor Theatre and drew a large crowd.

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the M. E. church will hold the first regular meeting for the season in the lecture room on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock. All the members are requested to be present and help in plans for work.

There were 208 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week against 250 in the preceding week and 192, 188, 246 and 194 in the corresponding weeks of 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 9,939 against 7,625 in 1890.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the New Jersey State Homeopathic Medical Society was held in New Brunswick yesterday. About twenty-five delegates, representing the different cities, were present. The officers chosen to serve for the year, and routine business was transacted. President S. A. Giles of East Orange, presided.

That Scotch Plains Proposed Fair.

Keeping before the public is an important for an institution as for a business that wishes to succeed. The Scotch Plains Fair Association has found it that they were no exception to the rule. Very good many dwellers in Fanwood and town centers in South Plainfield, the appeal of the members of the Executive Committee of the fair was the first information of the existence of such a society to many of their minds. But one and all have responded promptly to the appeal and the indications are that the fair will be a grand success. The tickets have sold remarkably well, the different committees report themselves well prepared for the work, and all hope for the treasury. Mr. Cornelius Martin will have a handsome sum deposited in his hands as the outcome of the summer's work.

The Executive Committee, consisting of Miss Mary N. Mead, Mrs. Thorne, Miss Bancroft, Mrs. James Baker, Miss T. Mead and Miss Kyte, have ably assisted in this work by various other committees, among which is that of Mrs. Richardson. Miss Paff and Mrs. John Marsh are prepared to furnish a good supply of eatables to hungry visitors. In this connection one must notice the beautiful menus prepared for this occasion by Miss Forest Thompson.

The music table is under the efficient management of Mrs. Geo. Moore, assisted by Miss Lizzie Nichell, Miss Randolph and Mrs. Geo. Mooney. Rebecca's well-known booth is under the direction and Mrs. Mooney in Oriental attire. The Misses Lockhart, Cook, Nicholl, Townsend and a couple of other ladies have charge of the fancy tables. Miss Florence Spencer has a doll's show which is held in one of the upper rooms, and is well worth visiting. Mr. Sayre is to be found at the cake table which has always agreed to be a popular spot in the various fairs held in the hall.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

One of the happiest men this week is Mr. E. S. Schenck of New Market, whose wife presented him with a fine healthy girl baby Sunday evening.

YESTERDAY'S PARADE.

Gazelle Engine Company Went to Somerville Yesterday.

The annual parade of the Somerville Fire Department took place at Somerville yesterday afternoon. Gazelle Engine Company took their apparatus to Somerville on the 1.59 p. m. train and participated in the parade. The company made a fine showing. The pioneer corps was one of the best drilled body of men in line. The parade did not move until about half-past three. A large number of Plainfielders were present to witness it and when Gazelle Company passed it was loudly applauded.

Before the company had traversed over the line of march, however, the engine got what is known as a "hot box" and they were compelled to take it out of the line.

While unloading the steamer at the depot, when the train arrived at Somerville, a rope which was being used broke and the steamer ran down the planks at a high rate of speed. Fortunately no one was in front of it at the time.

At about half-past six o'clock the firemen adjourned to the G. A. R. hall, where they sat down to a collation.

After they had satisfied their appetites speeches were made. The several pastors of the Somerville churches were present and addressed the firemen complimenting them on their appearance, etc.

During the evening ex-Chief Coddington, who is the sheriff of Somerset county, was presented with a handsome gold badge. The chief of the Bound Brook fire department presented Ivy Hook and Ladder Company of that place with a handsome silver trumpet, then Mr. John H. Carney of this city delivered one of his humorous selections, which was loudly applauded and the day's festivities were brought to a close.

Important Notice to Parents.

The Young Men's Christian Association is most fortunate in having secured E. A. Embury as leader of their boys' singing class. Mr. Embury who was formerly a pupil of Dr. Messiter of Trinity Church, New York, is a teacher of about eleven years' experience in the training of male choirs. The class, which will meet in the afternoon, will be taught to read music and will receive the most careful instruction in voice culture.

There will be no charge for instruction.

Boys under 12 years of age who are interested are requested to meet Mr. Embury at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

A Narrow Escape.

Dr. Edward Wetmann, of Roselle, had a narrow escape from being killed on Monday night by being thrown off a passenger train near Elizabethport for Roselle. Dr. Wetmann walked out on the platform just as the train was rounding a curve, and the jolting of the car caused him to lose his balance and fall off. It was thought he had gone under the wheels, but by some strange stroke of the roadbed and rolled down an embankment into a ditch. He was cut severely around the head, and badly bruised about the body and legs. He was picked up and removed to his home in a coach.

For Young Men.

Members of the bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. and all others interested are requested to meet at the Association rooms Thursday at eight p. m. sharp.

One of the pleasing features of the programme at the reception to mechanics at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday of this week will be tango solos by William Aten of Somerville and familiarly known as "Bill Aten" of engine No. 109. Mr. Aten who ran for years the fastest trains on this branch of the P. R. and B. O. railroad will be accompanied by four other musicians.

A Musical Service.

There will be a special musical service at the church of the Holy Cross next Sunday afternoon at five o'clock. The service will be conducted entirely by Mr. Barnes, the basso at the First Baptist church and Mr. L. S. Bond, the tenor at the First Presbyterian church. These musical services will be given on the second Sunday in each month during the coming Fall and Winter.

With Their $6,000 Carriage.

To-morrow, weather permitting, the members of Alert Hose Company with their $6,000 carriage will go to Elizabeth to participate in the annual parade of the Elizabeth Fire Department. They hope to capture one of the prizes. The carriage has been cleaned and put in good condition. In order to do so it was necessary to take the carriage all apart.

Fell in a Fit.

A man named Perrine, who is in the employ of Mr. E. H. Holmes of Madison avenue, while driving a wagon along West Front street this morning fell from the wagon in a fit and the vehicle narrowly escaped passing over his head.

AMID SILENT COMPANIONS.—III.

A Plainfielder's Critical Observations on Poets and Poetry.

It is well to turn our thoughts upon the masters of art: masters of poetry, of painting, of music. It is well to set our thoughts upon this highest of gifts, that masterful and formative creative ability which Goethe says gives forth nought but good. The soul is better, stronger in its own right for having longed for a beautiful life and peace of mind and happiness of spirit, than if it let a fitful mood break upon the silence of the day with vain weepings which do but waste power. If in this attempt at description and criticism of beautiful life and peace of mind and happiness of spirit which in itself is the art of genius, To signify what genius is and is not is best said thus, that true genius is not responsible but is creation out of materials supplied by life. Lowell defines it as an "indefinable newness and unprecedentedness." In saying that genius is creation out of materials supplied by life, it must be added that in regard to poetry, genius is the masterful and positive expression of moral ideas. All philosophy is moral or it is not philosophy and albeit that a criticism of life is the purpose of philosophy, true poetry must be the purest form of philosophy, being the simplest.

Byron's pompous productions of ecstatic genius though they be, are not pure poems of philosophy. Their spirit is vestigeful, using all materials with bad taste; thus it is that Byron is not a thorough classic, though a number of his poems are perfectly regally beautiful, however, as a production of genius, is Keat's description of the transformation of the serpent in the Lamia, ending.

* * * * also she Melted and disappeared as suddenly:
And in the air, her new voice luting soft
Cried "Lycius! gentle Lycius!" Borne aloft
With the bright mists about the mountains hoar
These words dissolved: Crete's forest heard no more."

Similar in beauty of poetic grace and sweetness is Tennyson's "Lotos Eaters," and in a far greater degree, Shakespeare's "Midsummer's Night's Dream," and yet the grace and sweetness of these are outshone by the greater genius of "In Memoriam" and "Hamlet," works filled with an eloquent seriousness, classics of such purity as drawn as the Greeks, the charm which draws our whole best self to the works of Raphael and Fra Angelico and Rembrandt and Corot and Barye; to the poetry of Moliere, Spenser, Shakespeare, Milton, Tennyson, Keats; to the music of Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Rubenstein. Each and all demand our best that we may meet their genius on its own high ground.

The moderns love the exact and call it the true, but the truth without beauty, it is the song of minnesingers, not of the great poets; it is minor truth not major truth. That the world is not beautiful, that the soul is not divine, is one of the self-asserted truths of a low-pitched age. Therefore the high truths, being material facts, are worldly, against creation by genius, against God, against immortality, against the purpose of the soul. Only by these soul does God retain his command over men. It is not impossible to ask, have we to-day in nobler things than exist day by day?

Here we no hope for nobler lives, for purer living? Here we to be told that the soul condemns us to be to-morrow as to-day? Here no inspiring dreams, without the sweet insinuation of supposed genius, without a future and regretful of the past? Here no sacred and priceless ashes at an end, peace, faith, joy, passion, morality, poetry, imagination,—eternity and God? Here is it strange that we are barbaric a nation as Russia should produce the "Kreutzer Sonata?" Is it strange that we should have Ouida? Is it strange that we should have Zola? Poetry is the highest mark of civilization, as statesmanship is the highest mark of political ability, for poetry being a fullness of lawful ideas is poetic in its germ secret from forbearers.

Poetry is the highest flight and highest and perfect ideal has no claims for genius, for genius having passed the state of seeking for the possible, fulfilling its aspirations and ideals in what it may express. Aspiring genius, with no other merit than their aspirations are generally rewards to genius. Genius in poetry must have the quality of perfect fulfillment, for a line has its force of pure beauty. Such lines as

Against the wreckful siege of battering days, of Shakespeare, and

"Come sleep; O Sleep! the certain knot of peace, of Sir Philip Sidney; and

"I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills," of Wordsworth, all bear unmistakable marks of genius which is high and strong in imagination. All such specimens of pure poetry and excellence of power ever in mind, mediocre poetry soon takes its proper place in the vanishing point of great thought and foremost genius. Mediocrity is not so much to be deplored as the fact that it is thought to be a brilliant era as it is the precursor of one.

Major truths, thus expressed through the imagination, are the vanishing point to the beautiful in an ever new and perfect form awaken to us as we in an unlikely public gathering, as we unexpectedly thought, as things as in contact with the troubled truths of life. Such contact with the "golden world" is to us what Matthew Arnold's theory that poetry of the two orders of truth and fulness of truth, or criticism of life, we must also mention his distinction of those two orders of genius, of which, whether high genius may be judged. He writes that "the two orders of genius are the fulfillment of truth and the fulness of truth applies beneath crude verse and yet genius may control it. Talents alone cannot produce great poetry, but the imagination; and, admitting Matthew Arnold's theory that poetry of the two orders of truth and fulness of truth, or criticism of life, we must also mention his distinction of those two orders of genius, of which, whether high genius may be judged. He writes that "the two orders of genius are the fulfillment of truth and by feeding the soul upon what is best and approaching nearest perfection the soul will the better maintain its office over the material practice of man and raise man above the degrading influence of mediocre thought.

Mr. Higgins Makes a Statement.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The Press of last evening stated that a constable levied on everything of any value that could be found in my stable. I wish to contradict the statement and pronounce it false. During my absence Constable Mattox visited my livery stable and took out some of my stock. They tried to rid the stable of its contents as they did before, but failed to do so, and to-day the stock taken out was partly returned. In my opinion certain persons are trying to injure my business, and I wish to make this statement in order to set myself right in the eyes of the public. There are rumors afloat which have no foundation whatever. By publishing the above you will greatly oblige,

A Plainfielder's One Thousand Mile Circuit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—To know of the world and country we live in, is to travel about in it. For one to talk of a country, one needs to see it, and in this age of lightning speed it don't take long to get around in it. A few weeks ago we started out from Plainfield for New York, thence by Hall up the Hudson to Albany, Troy and on to Saratoga. White Hall, Lake George and Lake Champlain, our route heretofore, on to the West side of the lake, and the foot hills of the Adirondacks to Rouses Point at the north end of Lake Champlain. There we crossed the line into Canada, a very level country, the scene being wonderfully curious; the farms have been cut up into narrow strips by parents dividing up with their children rather than to have them leave home. We soon reach the river and enter the Grand Trunk one and a half miles through and over the river, and we find ourselves in the city of Montreal of nearly 400,000 inhabitants, a mixed multitude of French, German, Indian, American, Canadian and nearly every other nation. This is the great business mart of Canada. The language most used is the English. In the Queen's courts are compelled to use interpreters. It is a fine city to visit. It has many churches, mostly Roman Catholic, and these are open for visitors and worship every day of the week. It pays well to visit the churches, and for a few hours. This is the proper way in every place city. We traveled by the Grand Trunk Railroad to Ottawa, the capital of Canada, to Annaugue, bordering on the Thousand Islands, through a level country. Here we took the night miles on a little yacht amid the Thousand Islands to Kingston, N. Y. on Lake Ontario, and thence by boat to Round Island Park to stop a few days.

The day time gave adequate conception of the beauty of the river and the Islands by any printed description I have thus far read. Words fail to express it myself. We leave Clayton by rail for Watertown, the home of Dewey, the millionaire paper man. We pass through on to Adams and other beautiful towns and country to Syracuse, N. Y., noted for its salt springs and the Onondaga Indians; thence onward by the D. L. & W. Railroad to Horseheads, etc., to Binghamton, passing through as nice and fertile country as the State affords. Here we cross the Susquehanna, Erie R. R. and soon we are climbing the mountains of Pennsylvania until we arrive at the coal mines and the city of Scranton, a dirty city, but rich in capital and mining business. We continue down, down, until we enter the Delaware Water Gap through a poor country, save for mining purposes.

We pass along through deep cuts and tunnels until we reach Little Washington, N. J., where we take the junction on the Central N. J. R. R. and find ourselves amid the bluffs and peach orchards and on the fertile plains of New Jersey, and her chief city for beauty and healthfulness—Plainfield. This circuit can be made in a few days by any family and her chief city for beauty and healthfulness—Plainfield. This circuit can be made in a few days by any family and is a paradise to those that use it properly.

That Naughty Pullet.

Mr. Whitely of North Plainfield, a well-known member of the G. A. R., has a number of fine chickens. One, a pullet, following the natural natural instincts of persistently endeavors to "set." This desire, Mr. Whitely, who loves to see things grow, did not care about hunting it off the nest.

Yesterday he found it "on duty" as usual, and "shooed" at it man like with his hands. It didn't budge. A more energetic "shoo" followed by a vigorous thumb nail in violent contact with the box, in which the fowl was seated, and turned the pullet over. Whew! Why! My! But how that chicken did hustle then.

Mr. Whitely says he religiously repeated all the feats he could remember, for the next few moments, and exhibited a reluctance, natural under the circumstances.

He Wants $10,000.

The case of Mr. J. A. Demarest, the City Editor of the Press, vs. ex-Freeholder E. M. Stover, for $10,000 damages, was to have come up in the Union county Court to-day. It will be remembered that a few months ago Mr. Stover sued Mr. Demarest for an article which he considered a libel on his good name. Mr. Demarest sought to have Mr. Stover indicted, but failed. He also instituted the civil suit referred to.

THE "UNCROWNED KING" DEAD.

Charles Stewart Parnell Died Last Night.

LONDON, Oct. 7th. (Special.)—Charles Stewart Parnell is dead.

He died at his home on Washington Terrace, Brighton, at 11.30 o'clock last night, but the news was not received in London till noon to-day, and no particulars till after one o'clock p. m.

His death is said to have been indirectly due to a chill which he caught last week and which at first was not regarded as being of a serious nature.

Mr. Parnell, however, grew worse and a physician was called in, with the result the patient was ordered to take to his bed.

This was last Friday, and from that time Mr. Parnell lost strength and finally succumbed.

Charles Stewart Parnell was but forty-five years old, though he had achieved a fame not often reached by men, even of genius, before ripe old age.

He was born at Avondale, Co. Wicklow, Ireland, in 1846, and his career has been especially interesting to Americans as well as Irishmen, because of the fact that his descent was American on the maternal side.

Parnell was descended from an old English family that passed over from Congleton, in Cheshire, to Ireland, and many of his ancestry were conspicuous figures in Irish history.

He was the grandson of the American Admiral, Charles Parnell.

His career would occupy columns of THE NEWS to do justice to, and will be given in full to-morrow.

IN SEMI-ANNUAL SESSION.

Fifty-two Delegates Answer Roll Call at a Presbytery.

The Elizabeth Presbytery convened in semi-annual session at the First Presbyterian church, Fifth street and Newman avenue, Bayonne, yesterday. The Presbytery comprises thirty-four churches, located at Elizabeth, Linden, Rahway, Union, Clinton, Bayonne, Basking Ridge, Connecticut Farms, Clarkesville, Bethlehem, Metuchen, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Roselle, Rosedale, Scotch Plains, Westfield and Rahway.

The session was called to order by Moderator Rev. M. Deane, of Madison avenue church, Elizabeth, at 11 a. m. Fifty-two delegates, including pastors and elders, responded to the roll call. Rev. George Backie was elected clerk of the session, and Rev. James E. Rieger, of the Bergen Point Reformed church, officiated as corresponding Member.

Rev. S. J. Niles, of Rahway, Stated Clerk, submitted a report on the condition of religion, which was ordered for-warded to the General Assembly.

At the afternoon session Revs. Kemphall, Teale and McNulty were appointed a committee to consider the General Assembly Committee report.

Rev. F. E. Wells stated that he had visited the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth and had officially inquired the reasons for the unanimous call to the pastoral relation of Mr. Axman, a student who has been filling the pulpit, and had personally invited Mr. Axman to the church pastorate. The Committee on Installation reported that Mr. Nicholl will be formally installed in the pastorate Oct. 19th.

Dr. Leggett asked the Presbytery to do something to assist in raising a portion of the fund for the German Seminary at Newark. It is in need of financial aid, and, on his suggestion, he and Dr. Coles were appointed a committee to look after the matter.

In his report on Church Extensions and Home Missions Rev. J. M. McNulty stated that the Rahway church had recently been making progress, but that it still needs the $200 annual appropriation. In response to a question from forty-two persons to locate a new church in Woodbridge, he said that Rev. David Cole Dr. Klein to visit the field. The call will, and having reported favorably, he recommended immediate action in the matter.

The Standing Committee showed a present Church Membership of 8,018, an increase over last year of 378, and aggregate contributions for the year were $92,485. Subscribed as follows: Home Missions, $11,427; Education, $2,258; Sabbath-school Work, $1,746; Church Erection, $1,613; Relief Funds, $1,232; Evangelism, $1,226; Sustentation, $1,196; Aid for Colleges, $1,178; Miscellaneous, $9,772.

A second attempt to get out the money was successful, but as he hoarsely expressed the want, a determined looking woman, deftly snapped it from him, and then, he meekly protesting walked him home, where he probably got all the "rasel" he wanted.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Bichloride of Gold for Alcoholism.

"Drunkenness is curable," declares John F. Mines (Felix Oldboy). In The North American Review. It is curable by the much talked of bichloride of gold treatment of Dr. Leslie E. Keeley of Dwight, Ills. It is certainly not safe to say that a drunkard has permanently reformed till after he is dead, but so far as man can judge in an inebriate's lifetime, Mr. Mines asserts empathically that the bichloride of gold has repeatedly wrought the miracle of freeing drunkards from the craving for alcohol.

A man is certainly thoroughly sincere in his faith and in his desire to benefit other men when he comes out publicly and confesses himself to be a reformed drunkard who, through his money, is made for him in it by lecturing on temperance. Such a confession Mr. Mines makes in The North American. He drank for years, he says, drank because he could not help it. The fever came on him, and nothing but drink, strong, terrible alcohol, would still that fierce craving.

He went to Dwight and remained six weeks under Dr. Keeley's treatment and came away a man, he honestly believed, cured forever of the fearful appetite. Dr. Keeley claims to cure 95 per cent. of all who apply to him. When the craving for alcohol comes on he lets the patient have all the whisky he desires, meantime continuing the bichloride of gold treatment. But the time comes presently when the patient returns the bottle of whisky untasted. He loathes the sight of it. The drunkard is rendered a sobering like Mr. Mines. But certainly after he makes his own fortune out of this boon to humanity, Dr. Keeley ought to give the secret of the treatment to mankind. Mr. Mines writes:

The patient's first visit is paid to the office of Dr. Keeley, where his case is stated and where he receives a hypodermic injection in the upper left arm, and there is given to him a bottle of the bichloride of gold mixture, a dose of which is to be taken every two hours while awake. The hypodermic called in Dwight the "shot," is the supporting medicine, which sustains the frame under treatment. Its preparation, and the form in which the bichloride of gold is made up for the special purpose, are Dr. Keeley's secret, and it is manifestly absurd for those not in the secret to pretend to criticise it.

The treatment is administered four times a day—at 8 a. m., 12 noon, 4 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. —and for three or four weeks usually, though sometimes for a week or two longer, as suits the personal diagnosis made by the doctor from day to day. If a patient loves whisky, it is given to him in a bottle, and he can have more until his palate loathes it and he returns to the normal habit of his life. From this point the work of his physical reconstruction begins. He finds that the treatment is a tonic, tone for tone, and more supported. Sometimes his eyesight is affected, but only for a few days; in some cases the memory is temporarily weakened; but every case that comes conscious of a feeling of lassitude and indifference to the outside world, as the gold searches into the weaker parts of his frame and purifies and builds them up into new strength. Nor is the birth slow.

The treatment at Dwight removes such physical ills as are caused directly by drink. Dr. Keeley's specifics are unused this, but I had scarcely been able to credit it. As a matter of fact, I found myself relieved of twenty pounds of superfluous flesh and fat before I left for it. Another patient, a relative of America's greatest prose writer and bearing his name, came to me from Dwight while I was there, suffering from partial paralysis caused by drink. In two or his bedridden weeks was restored, and in four weeks he went away sound of frame and with new life in his body and fresh hope in his heart.

Can we make it rain? Yes, answers General Robert G. Dyrenforth, in The North American Review. As proof he instances cases in which heavy rains have followed great battles and continued explosions of powder too often to leave any doubt of the matter. Can we make it rain? No, answers Professor Simon Newcomb in the same review, at least not by firing off explosives into the atmosphere. His reason is that such a thing would be contrary to science. "A thousand detonations can produce no more effect on the air or on the watery vapor in it than a thousand rebounds of a small india rubber ball would produce on a stone wall." Professor Newcomb more than half intimates that if the United States government had consulted the "quiet, rather diffident" men of science before making the appropriation for producing rain by explosions it would have been considerably better off than it knows.

The great demand in the industrial world is now for electrical machinists and engineers, those who understand both the scientific and practical electricity. Parents can give their sons no better fortune for the future than a thorough electrical education. Here is where the value of the technical training school comes in. Boys from these schools easily get $60 to $100 a month after working in shops for a short time. The style of electrical work at first time in the country was very defective, and this is what caused deaths so frequently in handling wires and machinery. This faulty workmanship is now, however, being rapidly changed and a new generation of electricians has appeared in the scene—the young men trained scientifically.

Dr. Felix Oswald says narcotic drinks and indoor life have made our bones so brittle that ladies break their necks in falling down a stairway or fracture their knees in stepping from a street car. An African baboon, or the other hand, that lives outdoors an does not indulge in narcotic drinks, can jump down a precipice 200 feet high and scamper off unhurt.

New treasury notes will soon take the place of the Hancock five dollar bill. These have been counterfeited extensively.

THE METHODISTS MEET

Opening of the Ecumenical Conference at Washington.

A REMARKABLE RELIGIOUS EVENT.

Representatives of All the Branches of Methodism Throughout The World Get Together to Discuss Religious Matters, but No Laws Can Be Enacted.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The Methodist ecumenical conference meeting here today is one of the most remarkable religious bodies ever convened in this country. The ecumenical conference, as its name implies, is composed of the representatives of all the various branches of Methodism established throughout the world. This will be only the second conference of the kind, the first having been held in London two years ago. The London gathering was a great success, to which the American delegates largely contributed.

Led by Rev. T. B. Stephenson.

The conference here will be on a larger scale. Five hundred delegates are expected to answer roll call; 300 from the various Methodist churches in the United States and 200 from abroad. The list of churches represented is interesting as showing the large number of divisions of Methodism which flourish.

The delegates are divided into the eastern, southern, western, and the wanderer, or American, section. The foreign section comprises twelve churches, of which the strongest is the Wesleyan Methodist church, in which the majority of all English Methodists are included. It has seventy-six delegates, led by the Rev. T. B. Stephenson, D. D., president of the Wesleyan conference, London.

The Home Section.

Of the 300 delegates apportioned to the western, or home, section, the Methodist Episcopal church south with its delegation of sixty-four. The five separate colored churches will have forty-eight delegates.

No Legislative Powers.

No laws will be enacted at the ecumenical conference, for it is a body absolutely without legislative powers; but its discussions are expected to have a wide influence and its results to be very far-reaching.

To Try Dr. Briggs Nov. 4.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—At the second day's session of the New York presbytery Dr. Francis Brown, on behalf of Dr. Briggs, announced that the accused would be ready for trial on Nov. 4. This being satisfactory to the presbytery, it was resolved to serve Dr. Briggs with a copy of the report, requiring him to furnish an answer thereto on that date named.

The committee appointed to prepare an answer to the protest of the accused to the appointment of a committee to examine Dr. Briggs' utterances was also to be present its report when Dr. Briggs rose and demanded that his protest be read first. This concession was granted and the protest and report were read. The report in part follows:

Inasmuch as said protest is based mainly on the assumption that the action of the presbytery was the inauguration of judicial process, and the points raised in the protest contentated the process as already commenced, and the laws quoted apply to cases of actual process only, it is a sufficient answer that no charges have been presented against the accused, and no thought of process necessarily entertained.

The committee appointed by the presbytery was one of inquiry only, its duty being expressed in the resolution under which it was adopted, its relation to the Confession of Faith, which inaugural had been and continued to be the subject of very general criticism, and of wide spread dissent, and against whose apparent teaching a number of Presbyterians had already declared the most emphatic dissent and judgment.

It is the judgment of this presbytery that its action was fully in accord with constitutional requirements and with the usages of the denomination, and was in the interest of justice and sound discipline.

A. W. SPROUL, Chairman.
EDWARD D. MORRIS,
MERRITT E. SAWYER.

The report was accepted, and a motion to hold the next stated meeting of the presbyterian church on Nov. 4 carried. Some of the members thought the public should be excluded, but Dr. Birch was of the opinion that it would be unwise to make the proceedings secret.

Ministers Choose Officers.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 7.—The convention of the National Association of Methodist Local Preachers adjourned last evening. Officers were elected as follows: President, John R. Wright, D. D., of Washington, and the following vice presidents—first, Chauncey Shaffer, D. D., of New York; second, R. A. Callahan, D. D., Kentucky; third, C. B. Stoner, M. D., of Indiana; fourth, J. H. Simms, M. D., of Wilmington, Del.; fifth, C. Walker, of east Ohio; seventh, H. Crawford, of Rock River; eighth, Robert S. McWilliams, of central Pennsylvania; ninth, Ebenezer Adams, of Philadelphia; secretary, D. T. MacFarlane, of New York; assistant secretary, George B. Jones, of Philadelphia; statistical secretary, C. C. Leigh, of New York; treasurer, James North, of Baltimore, and a board of directors.

A resolution was adopted protesting against the opening of the Columbian exposition on Sunday.

No Hope for the Entombed Miners.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 7.—All hope has been given up of reaching the entombed miners in the Big Mine. The coroner has impaneled a jury and began an investigation into the disaster. The jury reserved its verdict and was continued until after the bodies of the other six men are recovered.

Passenger Kelly's Verdict.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 7.—John Kelly, of this city, obtained a judgment of $2,000 against the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the Hudson county circuit court for injuries sustained by being thrown from a platform of a train in rounding a curve.

Chief Justice Fuller's Daughter Dying.

KING KARL I.

KING CHARLES OF WURTEMBERG.

STUTTGART, Oct. 7.—The King of Wurtemberg is dead. He has been ill for some time past, and his condition became so critical that the last rites of the church were administered to him. During the night his condition became worse, and at 5 o'clock a physician stated that he could live but a short time. William II, presided at a cabinet council held here. The Landstande, or "estates" of the realm, will shortly be called together. In all of the streets the people have draped their houses, as a mark of sorrow for the death of the king.

Karl Friedrich Alexander, king of Wurtemberg, was the eldest son of the late King Wilhelm, and was born March 6, 1823, succeeding to the throne June 25, 1864. His majesty on July 13, 1846, married the Grand Duchess Olga Nicolajewna, daughter of Nicholas I, late czar of Russia. Karl was a strong supporter of the scheme of German unity.

The popularity of the king has been a matter of notoriety for years. Particular attention was directed to it some years ago by the published stories concerning the favors which he lavished upon certain Americans. The first of these was Richard M. Jackson, of Ohio, United States vice consul at Stuttgart, whom he appointed his reader at a large salary.

Later on he ennobled him and gave him a splendid suit of rooms to live in. A good deal of scandal was caused by the gifts which the king conferred upon two other young Americans, who received large sums of money and fine houses, and exercised an extraordinary influence over the king. Spiritual manifestations are reported to have been the chief means employed to impress the weak minded monarch.

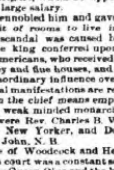
The presence of Woodcock and Hendry at King Karl's court was a constant source of annoyance to Queen Olga and the king's subjects, and their retirement was finally forced by the popular protest. There had been danger recently that the Americans would resume their sway, in which case it is understood, the late king would have been forced to abdicate.

THE GLOBE GIRDLER MARRIED.

Miss Elizabeth Bisland Is Now Mrs. Charles W. Wetmore.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Miss Elizabeth Bisland, the well known magazine writer and traveler, was married last evening on Charles St. Wetmore, of the Whalebeck steamer line. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Houghton at the Church of the Transfiguration in the presence of the immediate family and the bride. Miss Bisland is a native of Louisiana. Her first start in life was by making butter, which she carried to market herself. Eventually she became a writer on the New Orleans Times-Democrat.



ELIZABETH BISLAND.

From New Orleans she came to this city and engaged in literary work. A trip against time and Nelly Bly around the world was made by her, after which the plucky young woman made her home in London for some time.

Charles Whitman Wetmore, law partner of General Francis C. Barlow, is not only a member of one of the most conspicuous and successful law firms in New York, but he has been chiefly instrumental in forming the company which has launched the fleet of "whalebeck" steamers, building for the Canadian authorities.

Suicide of F. F. Bole.

KERR, Pa., Oct. 7.—F. F. Bole, a prominent resident of the Kerr bar and president of Corry, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He was a brother of Hon. William Bole, who failed for a large amount a year ago. Deceased had been mayor of Corry. He leaves a widow and one child.

Puglia Made the Elopers Disgorge.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Joseph Puglia, the Paterson Italian, whose wife recently eloped with his bookkeeper, taking $2,000 of his money with her, has recovered the greater part of the amount through the United States minister to Belgium, where the couple had fled.

To Control the Cotton Crop.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 7.—A convention of planters of Sea Island cotton in this state is called for Thursday to organize against the control of cotton seed, so that the Island planters of South Carolina will practically control the fine cotton market of the world.

A Train Wrecker Confesses.

NEW LONDON, O., Oct. 7.—William Canfield has confessed having turned the switch which wrecked the limited train on the Penna at New Palestine a few weeks ago in which seven men were killed. Plunder was his motive.

Printers at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 7.—A convention of typographical unions of New York state opened here. The session is secret and its object is to provide a plan for more thorough organization.

Suing Her Husband's Parents.

BINGHAMTON, Oct. 7.—Mrs. J. C. Eldredge, of this place, has begun suit against her husband's parents for $20,000 damages for alienating her husband's affections.

Secretary Blaine Improving.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 7.—Dr. G. W. Marston, Secretary Blaine's physician, says that Mr. Blaine is so much better health now than when he first came from Bar Harbor.

CAMPBELL VERY ANGRY.

He Threatens to Sue Several Papers for Libel.

CHARGES AGAINST HIS CHARACTER.

Stories Published About the Financial Condition of Ohio's Governor That Are False, He Says—A Retraction Demanded in Terms by the Executive.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Governor James E. Campbell, of Ohio, telegraphed yesterday to his attorneys in this city to demand a retraction from the New York Recorder of an article published last Monday in which damaging allusions to his honesty and business standing were made by one Ralph W. Wilkinson, of Columbus. Wilkinson is quoted as saying that his statements connecting Governor Campbell and Calvin S. Brice resulted disastrously to him.

Some of the Charges.

He also said that Campbell had for years speculated heavily in Wall street and had almost always been a loser, and that Campbell had borrowed large sums of John R. McLean, Calvin S. Brice, Daniel Lamont, William C. Whitney and even Grover Cleveland. According to the statements of The Recorder, the governor owes Brice $65,000, McLean $50,000, borrowed in his last campaign, and even Ralph W. Wilkinson, an alleged prominent Ohio politician, $7,000. The story estimated the governor's total indebtedness at more than half a million.

The article made other sensational statements, some of which reflect upon Mrs. Campbell, she being charged with great extravagance. It also charged that Governor Campbell and his entire family were high livers and had always expended more than his income. The article claimed, further, that there were numerous and large bills that Governor Campbell owed and had failed to pay according to agreement. The article was more in the points to be negated and appeared under sensational headlines.

Wilkinson a Myth.

Governor Campbell and Mr. Brice both say that Wilkinson is a myth, as they never heard of such a man, and characterize his entire story as a lie without foundation. Governor Campbell demands an immediate retraction in the most emphatic language in the next issue of the newspaper which printed the story. In case this is refused he instructs Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson to bring suit for libel.

A telegram from Columbus says that Governor Campbell wired to newspapers in other cities with printed dispatches from New York of the same tenor demanding the names of the correspondents who furnished them the story. To a Cincinnati newspaper he sent this message:

"Unless you retract in your next issue in the broadest and clearest possible language the publication made by you this day, I shall commence suit for libel from a New York newspaper I shall bring suit against you tomorrow. The man whom you call Ralph W. Wilkinson and to whom these monstrous lies are attributed I never heard of. I do not propose to let you shield yourself behind some mythical person or persons because you are attempting to ruin my credit and reputation in an honorable man by printing from papers in New York what you have not the hardihood to attest."

Secretary Meeker's Fiery Letter.

The New York Press of Sept. 27 contained an article similar to that in the Recorder, and the Philadelphia Press and Detroit Tribune took the same stand of the same character. Private Secretary Meeker demanded a retraction from the New York Press in the fiery letter, of which the following is a copy:

MANAGING EDITOR NEW YORK PRESS, New York City:

MY DEAR SIR—Your Columbus correspondent has imposed upon you concerning his statements in reference to Governor Campbell. The only portion of his screed that is true is the statement that Governor Campbell is hard up and probably in debt. The statement that Governor Campbell drew upon any bank in Columbus, or any other place while in New York, and had it made good the amount with no personal check when draft was protested, is absolutely and unqualifiedly false, and is as gross and malicious a lie as ever was published. There is not even a shadow of foundation in fact for it.

I am certain that your sense of fairness and justice will not permit you to let such a wanton libel even of a Democratic candidate for governor go uncontradicted. If you give me the name of the author of the letter I will compel him to acknowledge to you that he has lied. The statements concerning Messrs. McLean and others are equally untrue.

CHAUNCEY MEEKER, Private Secretary.

The New York Press published the letter of Secretary Meeker in a garbled form, and replied to it in the same strain partaken in the first article against the governor.

The Commercial Gazette this morning repudiates The Press article in connection with the Campbell matter. In consideration of this state of affairs the governor sent the following telegram to the New York Press, Detroit Tribune and Philadelphia Press:

Wants the Correspondent's Name.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 6.

Unless you furnish Mr. Meeker by noon the name of your correspondent as requested by him I shall sue you for libel. I propose to have satisfaction from either the correspondent or your paper. JAMES B. CAMPBELL.

What Governor Campbell Says.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 7.—The United Press reporter met Governor Campbell and was told most emphatically that the articles referring to his financial condition were absolutely false. "There is only one item of truth in the entire article," said he, "and that is I owe the telegraph company $500 which, if you will call at the office with the Duke of Wellington died forty-one years ago.

His successor as Unionist leader in the house of commons will probably be Chief Secretary Balfour, the man best calculated by force of will and skill to step into the shoes which Mr. Smith held chiefly by tact. Goschen has also been talked of, but the Conservatives generally favor Balfour.

Poolrooms Raided.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The police raided the poolrooms and arrested thirty-five persons interested or employed in the rooms. Hitherto the poolrooms have been enabled to do business on the supposition that the transactions were on a commission basis. Inspector Byrnes hopes to show that money was taken in on races at the rooms after the horses had started and thus show that the commission business is a myth.

Mysterious Murder at Wilkesbarre.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 7.—Great excitement exists in this city over the mysterious murder of Mrs. Arthur O'Donnell. She was found dead in bed with several stab wounds in her back. Richard Owens, twenty-three years old, has been arrested. He claims that he knows nothing of the crime.

Two Killed on the Track.

ASHLAND, Pa., Oct. 7.—James Brennan, aged sixty-five, a section boss on the Lehigh Valley road, was struck and killed by a passenger train at Big Mine Run. John Sullivan, foreman for the Reading road, was run over and instantly killed at Gordon Plane.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Should It Please Him to Speak to a Vice

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Russell P. Flower, accompanied by Hon. Roswell P. Flower, arrived in this city at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. When Mr. Flower alighted from the train a large and enthusiastic gathering had assembled. He was introduced by Col. Kinney, and said by the course of his speech:

"The election I come from has not been honored with a nomination for the governorship in forty years, and I doubt if there would have received it this time if Jefferson had not been cut off from Oneida. I am confident that when the end goes down question they too will hear good news from Jefferson. The cause is now in your hands, and there I am content to leave it."

Mr. Flower spoke earnestly in favor of dropping party differences and working for a full registration of voters.

Hancock Speaks at Albany.

ALBANY, Oct. 7.—Fully 3,000 people crowded Harmanus Bleecker hall last night to hear Hon. Frank Hiscock and Hon. Edmund O'Connor open the Republican campaign. Mr. Hiscock said: "This is a Republican year and every sign points to a Republican victory. The first issue is that of nonsimm.

"The chief executive who now controls has held office so long that in almost every assembly district in the state he has grabbed control of the machine and will in dominate the state convention. Armed with being governor he has gained the high office of United States senator. Couldn't two people fill these offices? Not content with this he wants a second term, so as to aid him in grasping the presidential nomination. Such monumental audacity was never before heard of in this whole Union. And yet our Adversaries talk of bossism!"

Secretary Blaine's Nephew Chosen.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Secretary Foster has appointed Henry D. Stanwood, a nephew of Secretary Blaine and solicitor of the customs, to the position of acting custodian of the barge office. Stanwood is forty-seven years old and was born in Maine. In 1881 he entered the army, and served with distinction until the close of the war. In 1881 he entered the revenue service. When President Cleveland appointed Augustus collector Stanwood was one of the first officials to be removed. When the Harrison administration came into power he was one of the first to be reappointed. In July, 1891 he was nominated by Collector Erhardt as auditor of the custom house in the place of Charles L. Perry.

Estee and Cheney the Men.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—A special to The Post from Washington says: From an inspired source it is learned that the president has decided upon Estee, of California, and Cheney, of New Hampshire, to fill the two unfilled vacancies occur in the cabinet by the withdrawal of Proctor and Miller. Both names have been selected with the view of improving the president's chances for 1892, and these two appointments are both unlooked for opposition the two persons named will be appointed.

Senator Pfeffer's Plans.

ATCHISON, Kan., Oct. 7.—Senator-elect Pfeffer will not make any speeches in Ohio this fall. He will, however, spend a few days out in Illinois in the interest of the People's party, after which he will return to Kansas and remain until after election.

Mr. Blaine Will Not Speak.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 7.—Secretary Blaine could not be induced to say anything further that he would speak in Massachusetts during the coming campaign. A member of his family said positively, however, that he would not speak at any campaign this fall.

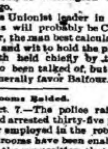
Hamilton Fish, Jr., Renominated.

CARMEL, Oct. 7.—Hamilton Fish, Jr., was renominated for congress by the Republican convention. The convention also also indorsed him for candidate for speaker next winter in case the assembly is Republican.

BALFOUR MAY SUCCEED SMITH.

Death of the First Lord of the Treasury and Severe Blow to the Tories.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The death of the Hon. W. H. Smith, first lord of the treasury, is everywhere regarded as a great misfortune for the Tories. Mr. Smith formed a link between the aristocrats of the Conservative party and the people, and was popular with men of all parties. He is said to have been the original of the admiral in the celebrated opera of "Pinafore." The celebrated words,



HON. W. H. SMITH.

"I polished up the knob so carefully, that now I am the ruler of the Queen's Navee," are said to have been illustrative of the habits of industry that raised Mr. Smith from a humble origin to be first lord of the admiralty. It was Smith's ambition to have his success in life crowned with the peerage, and this reward he doubtless would have received but for his timely death. Walter Carle, who was Mr. Smith died, is the same historic place in which the Duke of Wellington died forty-one years ago.

His successor as Unionist leader in the house of commons will probably be Chief Secretary Balfour, the man best calculated by force of will and skill to step into the shoes which Mr. Smith held chiefly by tact. Goschen has also been talked of, but the Conservatives generally favor Balfour.

J. G. BLAINE, JR.'S REPLY

He Alleges That His Wife Deserted Him.

A BATTLE FOR CUSTODY ONLY CHILD.

Young Mr. Blaine Desires the Infant to Be Placed in His Custody and Pleads That His Small Income Will Prevent the Payment of the Alimony Asked.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 7.—There has been a new and unexpected development in the famous divorce suit of Maria Nevins Blaine against James G. Blaine, Jr. Mrs. Blaine served complaint some time ago, and it was believed that young Mr. Blaine would make no defense, but allow his wife to procure a divorce by default. Instead of this, however, he has filed an answer denying the allegations of desertion and cruelty, and asking that the custody of the child be awarded to him. The answer is very long and goes into the matter at length. It is as follows:

JAMES G. BLAINE, JR.

Mr. Blaine in his answer denies his wife's allegation that he deserted her and claims that the facts were the reverse, that she left him and would not live with him. In answer to her request for suitable alimony he pleads that he is very poor and only has an income of $2,000 a year, which will cease on Dec. 1. Therefore he claims that it will be impossible for him to give her such alimony as she prays for. In conclusion Mr. Blaine asks that the court give to him the custody of the child. The indications are that there will probably be a hard fight for the child, who resembles his grandfather it is said.

MORE TROUBLE FOR YARD.

He May Be Indicted for Perjury by the Grand Jury.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 7.—In a suit brought here to recover $8,000 from the Seaside Ice company, of which Harry H. Yard, who has figured so conspicuously in the troubles of the Keystone National bank of Philadelphia, is the president and chief stockholder, by the Monmouth Ice company, of Monmouth, Me., for seven shiploads of ice, the defense produced an affidavit signed by Yard that the Seaside Ice company had a good and sufficient defense.

The affidavit was not substantiated by the evidence produced by Yard's company. The chief justice denounced Yard for signing such an affidavit, characterized as a shame its production by a reputable lawyer. He then said: "I will take this affidavit under consideration to decide whether I shall present it to the grand jury and ask for an indictment for perjury." The justice ordered a verdict for the full amount claimed, with interest.

Operated on Mr. Jones' Eye.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—"Governor Jones' left eye has just been successfully operated on by Dr. Noyes and he is as comfortable as can be expected." Such was the bulletin issued by the wife of Lieutenant Governor Edward F. Jones at 4 o'clock. For several years the patient's left eye has been slowly but surely losing its vision. The disease is undoubtedly a grave form of glaucoma.

His Mother Frenzied with Grief.

HUNTINGTON, Pa., Oct. 7.—Daniel, the fifteen-year-old son of Rev. A. L. Chilcoat, of Orbisonia, fell from a hickory tree, a distance of forty-three feet, and was instantly killed. On learning of the fatality his mother became frenzied with grief, and it is believed her mind is permanently impaired.

A Hotel Manager Short $9,000.

BUFFALO, Oct. 7.—An afternoon paper says that Charles A. Dunn, manager of the Hotel Niagara, has been dismissed for irregularities in his accounts. They are said to be short about $9,000. Dunn has been manager of the Lincoln hotel, New York city, and the Manhattan Beach hotel.

Foul Play Suspected.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 7.—Dissatisfaction is felt in Hackensack over the verdict of accidental death rendered by the coroner's jury in the case of Peter Conlin, found dead with a fractured skull in Demarest Van Rijn's barn a week ago. Foul play is suspected.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 7.—There were but two heats in the match pacing race between Hal Pointer and Direct, each getting a heat. The time was not fast, 2:13 and 2:12½. In the first heat Direct paced Pointer off his feet on the stretch and was given the heat. Pointer won the second heat by a neck. The third heat is still to be run.

Sprinter Cary Retires.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The famous Princeton sprinter, Luther Cary, has decided to retire from the cinder path. He won the championship at sprinting of America, England, France and Canada, and thinks that he could not have selected a better time for retirement than the present. It is Cary's intention to go into business in Chicago.

The Giants Win a Game.

WATERBURY, Conn., Oct. 7.—The New York League team and the Naugatucks played an exhibition game at Naugatuck Tuesday afternoon, the visitors winning by a score of 10 to 4.

Concerning the Cleveland Baby.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—At the eighteenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State of New York, Mrs. N. K. Goff offered a resolution congratulating Mrs. Grover Cleveland on the birth of a daughter, and expressing the hope that the young lady might be made a fearless example of total abstinence. The resolution being declared out of order, was referred to the committee on resolutions.

Six Hundred Delegates Present.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Oct. 7.—Over 600 delegates were in attendance when the fifth annual convention of the Christian Endeavor union opened here last evening. The address of welcome was characterized as a shame its production by a reputable lawyer. He then said: "I will take this affidavit under consideration to decide whether I shall present it to the grand jury and ask for an indictment for perjury." The justice ordered a verdict for the full amount claimed, with interest.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. When returned they are as good as when new.
WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
WM. MCLEE,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head Gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HIMS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
PATRICK KEILEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence McKee.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular corner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

VACATION.

I.

The summonses of the evening bells
Across her eiderdown she hears,
And boneward are the cool surf falls,
Winds slowly lack the joyous yard

II.

Through frowsy deep. And scenes are rife
With faint commotion; flickerings go
Like little bars of music, like
In closing to its purest flow.

III.

I search the voices and the phoenix,
And, half unconscious, linger into
Amid the dust, and fashion fragrance,
And hear my heart unreasonable "waits!"
—Richard Clark Wooten in Atlanta Constitution.

THE PHANTOM HORSE.

One day as the freight train running from San Francisco to San Jose rumbled around a curve just outside of the city of San Jose, a white horse sprang on the track and raced down towards town in front of the engine. For a mile the train did not gain on him; then the unequal footing of the cross ties and the pace began to tell on the white steed, and the engine crept slowly up to him. The engineer gave a few shrieks of the whistle to scare the horse from the track, but he kept right on in front, running with the speed of a racer, with his long tail streaming in a straight line behind him.

The engineer saw a stock gap in front half a mile away, and again pulled the whistle. The horse simply let out a few links and went on. The engineer got mad. He pulled the throttle open and went after the white phantom at a thirty mile an hour clip. He was a little hundred feet behind the horse when the animal reached the stock gap and plunged in among the open rails and fell. The pilot struck him, ground the life out of him in an instant and then ploughed into the dirt on the opposite side of the track. The engineer swore a few choice oaths and jumped out of the cab. The horse was as dead as a door nail and the engineer had left the rails.

"Another suit for the company," said the conductor as he came up. "How did you do it, Jim?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Jim, in a surly way. "The white got on the track and I just stayed there till I struck him. He was possessed of the devil, I guess."

They had to send to San Jose for the wrecking engine to get the train back on the rails, and while they were waiting a Mexican rode along the road beside the train. He pulled up his bronco to see the wreck.

"Caramba, senor," he exclaimed, turning pale and trembling, "it es Vasquez's horse!" And he mounted his pony as quickly as possible and raced off down the road.

"Who the deuce is Vasquez?" asked Jim. "From the way that Greaser got a push on himself you'd think we'd killed a man."

"If that's Vasquez's horse, as the Greaser said, you have killed a Mexican ghost," said the conductor, and he walked over and looked at the dead animal lying under the front wheels of the engine.

It was Vasquez's horse, the whole country knew it the next day. He was twenty years old and totally blind when he met his death in front of the freight train, and for ten years he roamed over the unoccupied land about the lower part of Santa Clara County free as a bird and feared by the Mexicans more than a lion. He was called by them the "White devil," and it was their belief that he was possessed of a soul mortgaged to the evil one—the soul of Vasquez. It is a strange tale that the old Mexican mothers tell of this white horse.

Vasquez was the most noted bandit of the early days of California. He bid defiance to the law, eluded the detectives and searching parties for years and killed and robbed half a hundred men. He roamed over the State of California from the north to the south, leaving desolation and death in his wake. He surrounded himself with a band of desperate Mexicans, and terrorized entire communities. Lone travelers by day and by night were stopped on the road and relieved of their cash and often of their lives. A quiet village in the San Joaquin would be awakened at the dead of night by the rush of sounding hoof-beats. Timid men would pull the covers about their heads and shiver. Next day the principal store in the place would be found open, the safe robbed, valuable goods taken, and the guardian, if it had any, dead with a bullet in his head or a knife-wound in his heart. Vasquez had been there.

One day the stage was rattling down the road from one of the mountain mines. The Wells-Fargo box was heavy with bullion, and half a dozen armed guards sat in the coach. The driver sat on the box with a Winchester between his knees and chatted with another guard who sat beside him balancing a shot-gun across his lap. They were talking of Vasquez.

"They say he allers ride a white hoss and dresses like a dandy," said the driver. "Wish't he jump ther gunasits stage once't when ther boys is aboard."

Two horsemen dressed in the tinselled Mexican cavalier costume rounded a turn in the road just in front of the stage and came riding towards it. One of them bestrode a white horse. They cantered up. The man on the white horse went to the right and his companion to the left of the stage. Suddenly they circled up.

"Pardon, senor; will the senor give me a light for me cigarette?"

The driver good-naturally pulled up and leaned up from his seat with the big cigar it was the smoking exchanged between his fingers. He was met with a snap shot straight in the brain and tumbled headlong into the dust. At the same instant the guard hitched and fell forward under the horses with a ball in his forehead. A dozen men sprang from the underbrush beside the road and showed the muzzles of their rifles through the stage door on either side.

Taken by surprise, not a weapon was drawn by the guards. The strong box lifted from the boot, the men inside were disarmed and the robbers' rifles aimed them in the eyes, and then the merry company with many jokes about the dresses they would buy for their senoritas, mounted the horses that were let out of the woods and rode away, he on the white steed humming a bit of some old Spanish love song to the tune of his horse's step.

It was a dreamy August afternoon in Southern California when the Mayor of Los Angeles and a fellow-official were driving along the old sand road through the Arroya Seco towards the town. Over the brow of a hill half a mile in front of them a group of horsemen appeared at a gallop. They swept down the hill and met the buggy of the Mayor. The galloping horses were yanked back upon their haunches and a swarthy Mexican upon a white horse waved a pistol in the Mayor's face and said, with a show of his teeth in a smile, "Your money, senor."

The Mayor thought it was a joke and laughed.

"Quick, quick!" said the horseman, as his weapon clicked. "I am Vasquez."

The Mayor laughed again.

"If you don't believe me, senor, look."

He pointed back to the hill, and there appeared another group of horsemen riding at full tilt from the town.

"Quick," said Vasquez. "I am no fool."

The mayor looked down the pistol barrel at the pair of black, glittering eyes that lined the sights and put up his hands. He was lightened of his chamois bag of gold as was his friend, and the bold robbers wheeled and were off at a run, the posse from the town riding up five minutes too late to catch them or to save the mayor's coin. The band escaped into the chaparral.

Vasquez made history in this way for five years and then was caught like a rat in a trap in a "adobe" house near the scene of the robbery of the mayor, and was shot down by a newspaper correspondent detailed to accompany the search party. He survived his wounds, was taken San Jose, where one of his earliest and most atrocious robberies had been committed, and there met his fate on the scaffold.

And now for the horse. Every time the robbers appeared, one of them, the leader, would be mounted upon a white horse. That he had a world of speed was shown in the way that he would gallop away from the rest of the band when they were pursued. The horse was hitched behind the house when Vasquez was shot. One of the capturing party tried to take him and was severely bitten for his cupidity. The horse broke away, went careering off toward the canyon where Vasquez had had his rendezvous and was lost to sight. Most people say he died in the mountains of starvation, but the Mexicans say no. They saw him again.

The night after Vasquez was hanged a white horse galloped up the street to the jail, stood a moment at the door and gave a whinny. The Mexicans heard in it a call to the dead Vasquez. There came no answer to the horse's challenge, and he wheeled about and went as suddenly as he came. Then he turned hands and followed Vasquez's old trails. Once in a while a man would be found on the road with his body frightfully mutilated and his flesh bearing the marks of hoofs.

Sometimes in the night a white horse would appear at the door of a Mexican cabin in some lonely spot and neigh. If no answer came he would be off like the wind, but if any man dared show himself the horse would attack him with hoof and teeth, and it was seldom that a victim escaped.

Time and again he was shot at and one Mexican buck was foolhardy enough to try to rope him and met a horrible death. The horse bore a charmed life. He became almost as great a terror to the Mexicans as Vasquez had been to the rich Americans. If by a chance a Mexican's pony got out of the corral and wandered off in search of grass, the white horse would find him and enlist him. First he had no follower, then two, then half a dozen.

No man could kill them and no man dared to attempt to capture them. With no loads upon their backs they were fleet as the wind and could outstrip the best horse with a rider. The Mexicans named the leader the "White Devil," and said that Vasquez lived again in his horse.

As the years went by and Vasquez became a memory and his exploits the theme for children's stories, the White Devil lost his companions. His visits to the vicinity of the little town became less and less frequent and then ceased altogether. At long intervals a Mexican would ride in with a report that he had seen the White Devil in some canyon among the hills. Even these reports ceased, and few Americans of the latter days in California had heard of him until the freight train killed the white horse.

The Mexicans came for miles to look at him. All of them knew him, at least they said so, and they respected him sufficiently to look at his dead body from a distance.

When he was dragged from beneath the engine by the trainmen a horse doctor looked at him. He was a magnificent animal even in death, and the veterinary said that he had been stone blind for years.

Vasquez's deeds are history; the story of the White Devil is a Mexican superstition.—Detroit Free Press.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Life of Things Happen, but Its Always Mrs. Bowser's Fault.

One day Mr. Bowser brought home a patent corkscrew, which some fakir had sold him, and Mrs. Bowser saw him drop it into a wallpocket. A week later, after wandering around the house for half an hour one evening, he halted before her and said:

"I'll be hanged if I don't get some chains and padlocks and see if I can't have things left where I put them!"

"What is the matter?"

"I brought home a can opener a few days ago and left it on a bracket in the dining room. It's gone, of course—probably given away to some big, lazy tramp! It's a wonder we have a thing left in this house!"

"A can opener?"

"Yes, a can opener. If you never heard of a can opener I'll hire some one to write you out a history of it. It was invented to open cans."

"Why, we have two or three in the kitchen. Do you mean a can opener?"

"I don't mean windmills or threshing machines."

"You had is in a pink paper?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"It was the day the man fixed the gate?"

"It was."

"Well, I saw you drop it in that wall pocket, and it is a corkscrew and not a can opener."

"It is, eh! Perhaps I don't know a hitching post from the city hall," he growled as he reached for the parcel and unrolled it. It was a corkscrew. It could only be used as a corkscrew. It was made and sold for a corkscrew.

"Didn't I tell you?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Tell me what? Told me it was a cork screw, and it's a can opener, just as I said it was!"

"It's a corkscrew!"

"It's a can opener!"

And so long as Mr. Bowser draws the breath of life he will stick to it, because he said so in the first place.

Like other husbands Mr. Bowser is greatly worried over the safety of his wallet while around the house. He has an idea that Mrs. Bowser would give ten years of her life to get that wallet in her hands for about two minutes, and that she lies awake a good share of every night in the year wondering when he will take it when he went to bed. He makes it a religious duty to conceal it every night and to count over his funds the first thing in the morning. One morning, strange as it may seem, he left the house without taking his wallet, which he had hidden the night before under the bureau. He had been gone about an hour when there was a great clatter on the front steps, the door flew open and he rushed into the back parlor and stood before Mrs. Bowser.

She was so upset that she could only faintly gasp:

"Mr. Bowser, is mother dead?"

"Mother dead!" he yelled in reply. "What do I know about your mother? Mrs. Browser, I've been robbed!"

"No!"

"And in my own house at that! Some time during the night some one got out of bed and stole my wallet!"

"Impossible! Was it in your coat?"

"Well, no—not exactly. For four or five glars I"—

"Yes, what?" she asked, as he hesitated and looked confused.

He rushed up stairs, and she followed in time to see him pull the wallet from under the dresser.

"Then you were not robbed?" she tartly observed.

"It is—not quite; not this time. But let this be a good moral to you, Mrs. Bowser! Never never to meddle with my wallet. That's something no husband will put up with."

"I never touched your old wallet!"

"And now you never will! And don't talk back, Mrs. Bowser. You have had a very narrow escape, and you ought to be thankful for it—very thankful. Some husbands would have raised a row; but I think you understand me, and I think the lesson will not be lost on you."—M. Quad in New York World.

Too Much Anxiety.

The famous English physician, Sir Edward Qualin, when quite a young man, was placed in charge of the case of a patient, and full of the weight of his unaccustomed responsibility, his countenance grew longer and longer. When he was leaving one day, the lady's husband followed him. "I greatly appreciate the anxiety you feel for my poor wife," he whispered, "but please don't let her see it again, for after you had left the room she asked me if you were the undertaker."—Argonaut.

Demand and Supply.

I was talking one day with Mr. Depew about demand and supply. I said the price of any commodity is always controlled by the demand and supply.

"Not always, Ed.," said Mr. Depew; "demand and supply don't always govern prices. Business tact sometimes governs them."

"How is that?" I asked.

"Well," said Mr. Depew, "the other day I stepped up to a German butcher and out of curiosity asked:

"'What's the price of sausages?'

"'Dwenty cents a bound,' he said.

"'You asked twenty-five this morning,' I replied.

"'Ya, dot vos ven I had some. Now I ain't got none I sells him for dwenty cents. Dot makes me a reputation for selling cheap und I don't like no reputings.'

"You see," said Depew laughing, "I didn't want any sausage and the man didn't have any; no demand or supply, and still the price of sausage went down."—Ed Perkins' Thirty Years of Wit.

A deposit of one dollar will be required in the shorthand class, which amount will be refunded next January, providing the scholar has attended the class regularly up to that time. The shorthand class will be organized to-morrow evening, and the bookkeeping class on Monday evening.

—By the recent census it appears that there are about 3,000 families in Plainfield and North Plainfield. Probably 500 families, from various causes such as lack of interest in local affairs, ignorance or stupidity, do not read local newspapers. THE NEWS has three-fifths of the 2,500 among its readers, or more than read to the best of our knowledge and belief all other local dailies combined and it is steadily increased in a ratio out of all proportion to the increase in population yet some of our kind neighbors think we have not enough. Well, we will gladly welcome more—the more the merrier—and will try and make THE NEWS always deserve their favor.

Adjourned For Two Weeks.

The case of the city vs. Dominick Canfield came up before City Judge Codington this morning. At the request of the complainant, the case was adjourned over for two weeks. Lawyer Wm. A. Partington represented the defendant. It will be remembered that Canfield was arrested for fracturing his brother-in-law's jaw.

SO THEY WERE MARRIED.

Romantic Ending of a Suit For Breach of Promises.

Mary Wood, through her lawyer, Chas. A. Reed, brought suit in the New Jersey Supreme Court for $20,000, against John C. Moore of Plainfield, the only son of the late William Moore, the well known railroad contractor who recently died in Plainfield leaving a large amount of real estate. The defendant, through his counsel, Craig A. Marsh, filed pleas denying the promise, and the cause coming up for trial Monday before Justice Van Syckel of the Supreme Court and a jury in the Union County Circuit, at Elizabeth.

Rumors of sensational developments in the case brought out a large audience, but when court opened the counsel for the parties asked for a new minutes time before the case should be called, stating that the case could be settled by the marriage of the parties. Justice of the Peace, B. Rogers, Esq., who is Sergeant-at-Arms of the Court, was then called into requisition, and in a few moments pronounced the pair man and wife.

The lawyers of the prospective parties, Mr. Reed and Mr. Marsh, deserve great credit for conducting the suit to so satisfactory a conclusion, and in their efforts in that direction they were ably assisted by Policeman Patrick Lynch, an old and warm friend of Moore.

ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY'S WORK.

The Revision of the Constitution Postponed Till Next Spring.

The Elizabeth Presbytery reassembled yesterday morning at the First Presbyterian church, Newman avenue and Avenue C, Bayonne. Moderator J. N. Nourse presided. Thirty minutes' devotional service preceded the business session.

The subject of revision of the constitution was broached, but by unanimous vote was laid over until the Spring Presbytery. The question of endowing the Theological Seminary was discussed, but no final action was taken.

A letter from the Presbytery's missionary at Turkey, giving a very encouraging report of the work there and in Asia Minor, was read. It was decided to hold the Session at Westfield the early part of April. An adjournment was taken.

JUDGE CODINGTON ELECTED.

He was Chosen President of the Crescent League Last Night.

At a meeting of the Crescent League which was held last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Wm. R. Codington.
Vice President—Charles P. Leggett.
Trustees—Col. C. K. Moore, Charles A. Reed and Dr. J. T. Fritts.
Secretary—George Hallock.

The question of entering the new base ball league which is to be formed was discussed and the Crescents will undoubtedly enter providing they can get in on liberal terms. If the league is formed it will include clubs from Somerville, Westfield, Elizabeth and Plainfield.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mrs. Wyckoff of LaGrande avenue is seriously ill.

Mr. William Newcorn of West Front street is a happy father. It is a boy.

Mr. Thomas Hale has returned to his home in this city from an extended stay in California.

Mr. and Mrs. King have returned to their home on Sanford avenue, from a pleasant Summer vacation.

Mrs. and Miss Nelson have gone to Roselle from a pleasant stay with Mrs. Martin of Craig place, North Plainfield.

Mrs. Jane Layton, of Liberty Corner, is visiting at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Runyon of Duer street, North Plainfield.

Mrs. A. M. Ross and family, who have been Summering in this city, will return to their home in New York, next Saturday.

Messrs. C. J. Feytel, F. P. Haffner and J. G. Betzler will represent Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor, at the Grand Lodge which is to be held at Newark next Wednesday.

Mr. Frank Laing, formerly of this city, but now of Hartford, Conn., and Miss Lizzie Livingston of that city were married Tuesday. The bride is a sister of Mr. Donald Livingston of this city. The happy couple will make Hartford their home.

Miss Clara I. Karner, who has been at the Massachusetts General Hospital for two years and a half, has returned to her home in Evona, and expects to take up private nursing. Her sister Miss Lou, who has been at the hospital for eight weeks, came with her.

A Verdict For the Defendant.

The case of the First National Bank vs. James Dunn, came up for trial before the Union County Court yesterday afternoon. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of Mr. Dunn. It appeared that some months ago Mr. Dunn endorsed a note for $800 for a Mr. Jimmerson and that afterwards the note matured, Mr. Jimmerson failing to pay it. Hence the suit.

A Yellow Tea.

The Dorcas Society of King's Daughters will give a "Yellow Tea" at the Plainfield Bicycle Club House, on Sycamore street, this evening.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

RECORD OF ANOTHER YEAR'S WORK FOR THE POOR.

Officers Elected.—The Annual Report of the Secretary, Showing the Doings of These Angels of Mercy.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association was held Tuesday, Oct. 8th, in the Association's rooms.

President—Mrs. VANNEST TALMAGE.
Vice President—E. L. GODDARD.
Secretary—Miss E. R. LEONARD.
Treasurer—Miss H. P. REYNOLDS.

BOARD OF MANAGERS.

Mrs. D. J. Yerkes.
" J. E. Terry.
" Rowland Cox.
" C. E. Ryder.
" C. C. Cokefair.
" Lawrence Myers.
" Chas. McCutchen.
" E. St. John.
" A. M. Rhees.
" P. Wyckoff.
" A. H. Lewis.
" M. W. Tyler.
" D. W. Pond.
" Wm. W. Myers.
Miss C. R. Webster.

The Secretary's report was of such interest that we give it herewith in full:

To the Members and Friends of the Relief Association:—

The year which ended on the first of October was marked by no striking modifications or great changes in our society's work. It was a quiet and rather uneventful year, though a useful one, we trust. We seem to call forth just about the same amount of interest and sympathy from the community as heretofore, and have been enabled therefore to do only about the same amount of good. If, as the population of the town grows, the number of our supporters could grow with it, our association would be able to increase its usefulness, and to make perfect progress between the annual report and the next.

WORK OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

During the past year the cases of 98 families, representing 349 persons, have been treated by the society. Of these, 35 cases have never been on our books before. The other 63 are old and recurrent ones. The following nationalities are represented:

American	30
Irish	23
Negro	10
German	6
English	3
Scotch	2
Swedish	1
French	1
Unknown	6

These families may be classified as follows:

1. Needing continuous relief, as aged, incurable, orphans, and etc. 20
2. Needing temporary relief be cause of illness, accident, or unusual trouble. 29
3. Needing work rather than relief 30
4. Ineligible applicants. 5

In the first class who receive their help from the town poor-fund, but whose provision is for some reason insufficient, and who receive assistance from the Association. The aid given to this class takes for the most part the form of an occasional gift of groceries, clothing, or a small sewing-order, by which a pair of shoes or a little fuel is earned. There are among these cases many women with families to support, whose delicate health and household cares prevent their earning more than their own living.

To the second class the aid given is usually food and fuel to bridge over a period of unusual distress. In one instance the head of a family of little children was stricken with pneumonia, and ill at the hospital several weeks; and during the time his wife earned a few dollars' worth of provisions each week by sewing for the Association. In another case a woman broken down by the care of her husband during his last illness, received medicine and a quart of milk each day during the time she said she was able to go to work again. While A. M. Rhees presided, industrious colored man was ill at the Hospital, his family was receiving a dollar's worth of provisions each week, so that the money earned by his hard-working wife could be devoted to paying the rent and other expenses.

To the third class belong those whose earnings are insufficient, because they have no work, or who, if work is to be had, while perfectly able-bodied, are indolent. The usual remedy applied by the Relief Association in such cases is to furnish a moderate amount of beneficiary sewing until other employment can be found, and to register as soon as possible to find outside work for the applicant. Generally to attain this end an advertisement is inserted in the paper at the expense of the Association, and very often the name of men and women suitable for various kinds of domestic work can be found at the rooms. The Superintendent calls attention to the falling off of the number of ineligibles as an encouraging feature. Each year the society seems to feel more hesitation about applying where they know that their cases will be subjected to a thorough examination, and she says that as a rule our beneficiaries are much more truly deserving people than they were a few years ago.

Besides the regulation food, and clothing, articles other earned by or given gratuitously to our beneficiaries, they have received help in other ways. For Mrs. A. ——, whose husband had served in the war a pension was obtained last Spring. For A. M. ——, whose arm had to be amputated, enough money was raised from friends to buy an artificial one. One month's rent was paid for him, as was also for two other families who needed to be set right with the world. During the past Winter fifty cents a week have been given to pay a woman to do the washing for the family of Mrs. A. ——, who is too ill to do it herself. Several seamstresses have been materially aided by having sewing-machines loaned them, and in one case a sum of money was loaned to buy materials for carpenter's work.

A larger amount than usual was this year contributed to send the poor mothers and their babies for a day to the seashore, and several grown persons and an indefinite number of children were thus rested and refreshed.

The other great feast of the year for our beneficiaries, Thanksgiving Day, brought happiness in the shape of a good dinner to no less than eighty-two poor families. If only the generous donors could have accompanied their gifts, as Scrooge did his turkey, I think their satisfaction would have been heart-felt.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

Number of women who have received sewing, 54.
Number of garments made, 602.
Parcels of clothing given gratuitously, 112.
Amount of sales from ordered work, $26.97.
Amount of sales from beneficiary work, etc., $134.14.
Total amount of sales, $164.11.

By no means a greater help afforded to the Association than by those who patronize this department, and by ordering plain sewing enable us to furnish more employment to those who are able to earn their food, than would otherwise be possible. A few weeks ago this question was addressed to our president: What does the cause of charity organization most need in your neighborhood? and she said, "I am inclined to answer by one word—work." Work to give to these poor, shiftless people, that they may be able to drop their pauper habits and get back their self-respect, "so that, to use the words of the Bridgeport report, "they may be graduated from the rolls of relief, and their children be prevented from falling into need."

MOTHERS' CLASS.

The mothers' sewing class was last Winter carried on with the usual success. Fifteen names were enrolled, and the attendance was very regular. Twenty-nine garments were made, but the greater part of the time was spent on the quilt, which is a story of thirty-seven pounds of rags to complete the carpet which now adorns the board room of the Relief Association. The superintendent reports that the women seemed much interested in their work, and that she is greatly encouraged by the good influence which the meetings have upon them.

PROVIDENT SAVINGS COMMITTEE.

The Provident Savings Committee has had another prosperous year. Its treasurer reports that the financial showing by the savers and collectors has been most encouraging. I feel that the weekly visits of the collectors are of great value not only in aiding the savers to become more provident, but in the personal influence that may be exerted." The savers now number 155, and of these 49 have individual bank-accounts. During the past year the sum of $1,800.53 has been collected, $1,330.95 of this amount belonging to the holders of private banks. The largest individual account is $251.25. The greatest need of the committee just at present is a larger number of collectors, ladies who are willing to go once a week to the homes of the savers, and gather up the little sums that they have been able to lay by. Volunteers in this service would be very welcome. The names of ladies to either the secretary or the treasurer of the committee.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD.

The only new line of work which our society has been instrumental in organizing during the past year is the Needlework Guild, which, though by no means a branch of the Relief Association, bears to it very much the relation of a child to its father. It was at the May meeting of the Board of Managers that Mrs. Stewart read to them the plan of the address which led to the formation of the Plainfield guild—greatly to the advantage, as we believe, of the poor people of Plainfield and elsewhere.

OUR HELPERS.

As our society grows older in experience, we see more and more the advantage of co-operation between the various benevolent societies of our city. The admirable arrangement by which the orders of the overseer of the poor are filled at once now, gives us a complete oversight of the aid which comes from that source to the townspeople, and prevents any possibility of the duplication of relief. The churches and private individuals are coming to consult with us more about cases where perhaps the information contained in our registration-book can supplement their knowledge. The Hospital, the Children's Home, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children lift a great load of responsibility from off our shoulders in caring for the sick, the orphaned, and the more than orphaned.

The King's Daughters, too, are our efficient co-workers, and although our income would probably be larger if their societies did not exist, we feel that our capacity for usefulness is greatly increased by having them to hold up the hands" as it were of our older institution.

Outside of town, also, we are able to gain helpful ideas and methods by the exchange of reports with many charitable societies of this country and abroad, and by occasional correspondence with them. Each year the report of our progress is sent to the National Conference of Charities and Correction, and our work goes to form part of the great record of benevolent action which gives impulse to that meeting.

Not least among our helpers and coworkers, though in a different way, are the physicians who have visited our sick poor, the editors who have reported kindly and judicious notices, the expressmen who have been always ready to help us, and the merchants who have given us a liberal discount on our bills. To them our cordial thanks are due, and are so far as Reynolds, who is a great trouble to himself arranged a plan by which the filing and classification of our reports and letters is rendered easy. If such co-operation and support as we have received from these and other generous friends can only be continued and augmented during the coming year, the measures of how much service we may be to the community, and how many lives we can raise from pauperism to independence?

Respectfully submitted,
EDITH RICHMOND LEONARD, Sec'y.

The New Success.

Miss Agnes Herndon produced her new play, "La Belle Marie," at the Windsor Theatre last evening. It proved to be a melodrama of unusual merit. The performance was witnessed by a large audience, and as a moral is as good as any sermon.

Recall after recall was given the fair artiste.—N. Y. Star, Aug. 14.

Bowling for a Prize.

At Dunellen to-day the Dunellen Bowling Green Club are competing with the Middlesex county Bowling Green Club for the Adam's challenge cup. The result of the contest will appear in THE NEWS to-morrow.

Mrs. Ellis To-Night.

To-night at the W. C. T. U. rooms at 7.45 o'clock Mrs. Ellis will speak to the young people, and to the boys especially, but her address will be equally interesting to all—young and old. Everybody will be welcome.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A $500,000 Fire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8th, (Special.)—The palatial residence of August Belmont was destroyed by fire at 11:30 o'clock this morning. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

A New Bridge Across the Raritan.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Oct. 8. (Special.)—The contest for a new bridge across the Raritan at Albany street was decided to-day, when the Board of Chosen Freeholders passed a resolution offered by Freeholder E. C. Kelly authorizing the building of a stone arch bridge not to cost over $100,000. The vote was 10 to 9 in the affirmative.

SAVED BY A DETECTIVE.

Mr. S. H. Taylor, of Rigbi Bridge, Escaped an Awful Death.

Late yesterday afternoon Mr. S. H. Taylor, a resident of High Bridge, while waiting for a train at the Central railroad, attempted to cross the tracks at the Union depot, at Elizabeth, and unconsciously stepped in front of a locomotive of a moving train.

He was struck by the pilot and was knocked down. He fell partly on the platform, and would have rolled back under the wheels of the engine but for the promptness of Detective William Decker, who was standing by. The officer bounded forward, grasped the shoulders of the imperiled man, and dragged him back. Mr. Taylor's hat rolled under the engine and was cut in pieces.

Mr. Taylor was overcome by the shock to his nerves, and was slightly bruised. He was carried into the baggage room, and after a little while received sufficiently to take a train for his home.

Detective Decker's action was the subject of commendation from the several people who witnessed the incident and expected the man would be crushed to death.

A most brutal and unequal fight took place in Possumtown, near Bound Brook, on the premises of a place known as the Dwyer property. The combatants were about twenty Italians, who live on this place Pike a herd of sheep. When Mr. Gaspar Wells last night was bound for home he came upon a terrible scene of "help, murder," etc. Mr. Wells not being used to such unusual sounds directed his steps toward the place of distress. A horrible sight met his view. On the stoop of a miserable shanty lay a man bleeding from not less than seven deadly wounds, produced by the murderous stilleto. His aggressors, numbering about nineteen and well under the influence of liquor, stood around him, kicking the helpless body and swearing in their native tongue. Mr. Wells, with great pluck and nerve, interfered, and, meeting with resistance, drew his revolver, thus keeping the crowd at bay, rescued the fortunate man and took him home, where he dressed his wounds and provided him with another suit of clothes. As to the cause of the disgraceful affair nothing definite can be found out, but it seems that differences in card playing instigated the trouble.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Undoubtedly, now, the White Star steamer Teutonic is the fastest ship on the Atlantic, holding both the eastern and western records for speed. It will be remembered that she came from Queenstown to Sandy Hook in 5 days 16 hours and 31 minutes. The eastward trip takes more time, but the Teutonic has reduced the trip to 5 days 21 hours and 23 minutes. Next!

Boulanger died several years ago, and only took advantage of the death of Mme. de Bonnemain as an excuse to get his corpse out of sight. All the success he ever had he owed to the infatuation of rich and silly women. Looking at his portrait the disinterested outsider can only wonder what there was in him to make women go down before him as they did. There is indeed no accounting for tastes.

This far the United States has been able to assimilate industrially every Jew that has landed on her shores, and has increased in national prosperity by it. It is charged, however, that the Russian Jews are neither industrious nor thrifty but that they are more like the indolent and shiftless Russian peasant. If this be true, their brethren of the same race will speedily take them in hand and educate them up to the requirements of American industry. The American Jews have prospered in the United States as they have done nowhere else except perhaps in France.

It is quite possible that the suicide of Balmaceda suggested to Boulanger that method of getting out of his troubles. Balmaceda, starting out under the most favorable auspices and apparently with a sincere desire for the good of the republic of Chili, developed the spirit of the military dictator in his desperate attempt to subvert government by the people he was overthrown and driven to suicide.

Boulanger, too, attempted to overthrow government by the people, striking like a viper at the republic that had made him. Like Balmaceda, Boulanger failed, and took himself by short cut out of a world that had no more use for him. Some such wrecking up as this will overtake every man who seeks to crush liberty among the people and put their necks under the foot of a dictator whether he be czar, emperor or military adventurer

An Unfortunate Controversy.

In 1889 the compulsory school education law of Wisconsin was amended by a clause which read as follows

No school shall be regarded as a school under this act, unless there shall be taught therein, as a part of the elementary education of children, reading, writing, arithmetic and United States history in the English language.

This seemed simple enough. A similar law was enacted in Illinois. An outsider could not see at first glance what was to be objected to in the act. This is an English speaking country. It is of the first importance that young American citizens shall obtain a correct and extensive knowledge of their native tongue that language which one of Germany's greatest scholars says authors, Jacob Grimm, of his own people will declare has a right to be the language of the world. And certain it is beyond all doubting, that half a century more will behold it spoken by a majority of all the civilized people on the globe.

Therefore let us have the English language pure and undefiled, as sweetly spoken, as correctly pronounced and written as we can get it. It is true that many hundred thousands of our best citizens are children of Irish or German languages other than English is the mother tongue. They cannot help it now. But they can see to it that their children shall master English perfectly. That is one of their first duties, since they have cast their lot and that of their children forever in this English speaking land. It is not at all of particular importance whether the children of German, Italian or Norwegian parents forget or remember the native tongue of their parents. It is of the first importance that these children do learn the story of this republic, and its language, government and institutions. So much will be admitted by every fair minded person.

Very unfortunate, therefore, it was that the laws in question should in some way—how, it is hard to see—have drifted into a political party question and even into a theological one, and the controversy became as red hot as only political and theological controversies can become. One party says the law was aimed at the original right of parental control as opposed to state control of the education of children, and another class of opponents declares it aims at nothing less than striking down religion, while yet a third contingent avows that it wants to destroy the private schools altogether and throw a lot of good people out of their living.

However these things be, one fact remains fixed. This is an English speaking country. In the midst of foreign tongues, here's a supreme effort must be made to educate our young citizens to a thorough knowledge of the language of the republic. If they can also learn as an accomplishment French, German, Italian, Swedish or Norwegian—Platt Deutsch as much the better, but English first, best and all the time.

THE DEATH OF PARNELL

Hope That It Will Unite the Irish Party.

ERIN MOURNS HER FAMOUS SON.

Universal Regret Over His Decease by the People to Whom He Devoted His Life—His Wife Prostrated by the Blow. Who Will Succeed Him?

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The news of the death of Charles Stewart Parnell at Brighton Oct. 6 was simply not believed when it came to London. People had no idea that he was sick, and it seemed impossible at first that the vigorous, masterful personality had gone down before a sudden attack of disease. Reporters and messengers hurried in confusion through the streets, and as the rumor spread men left their places of business to get some confirmation of denial of it. When the confirmation came the announcement was the sole and central topic of discussion. The general agreement seemed to be that the death of Parnell would re-unite the divided supporters of Irish nationality.

The Tories calculate that the death of Parnell may have an exasperating rather than a harmonizing influence, and that the contest for leadership likely to ensue will disheaten many of the supporters of home rule both in Ireland and Great Britain.

Mr. Parnell's Death.

The death of Mr. Parnell was the result of a chill with which he was attacked last week. On Friday he was compelled to take to his bed, and his death occurred at Walsingham terrace, Brighton, at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday night. Several hours before his death he became unconscious and so remained until the end. Mrs. Parnell and the physicians were the only ones at the bedside when the dying man passed away. Mrs. Parnell was prostrated at the moment when death came to roughly disabuse her that her husband would recover.

It is said that Mrs. Parnell has been almost in a swoon ever since her husband's death. She loved Parnell most devotedly, and she is known to have expressed the greatest confidence in his future. Speculation is already indulged in as to the probable effect upon her own career.

A news agency states that among the confidential private affairs left unsettled by Parnell is the question of the custody of his wife's youngest children. It is no secret that Parnell claimed to be the father of the two youngest O'Sheas.

Who Will Succeed Him?

John Dillon, William O'Brien, Tim Healy and Sexton are mentioned as probable candidates for the leadership. For long been known that Justin McCarthy was anxious again to retire to his literature and his books. With Parnell out of the way it is believed that McCarthy will insist on his resignation being accepted. Mr. McCarthy said in an interview that it would be impossible to forecast the political effect of the death of Mr. Parnell. He hoped that it would lead to the reunion of the Irish party, and it would certainly not hinder the cause of home rule.

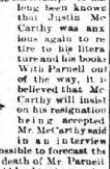
He believed that all Irish hostility to Parnell was swallowed up in genuine and universal regret. Three weeks ago he had a long and friendly talk with Mr. Parnell at his (Mr. McCarthy's) house in Chelsea.

The Paris Funds.

They mutter if agreed to draw part of the Paris fund for the expenses of registration incurred before the division of the party. Some of the dissentients declare it had been a close friend of Parnell, whom he admired intensely. "Parnell consulted me," said Mr. McCarthy, "about his lamentable manifesto, and I used all efforts to prevent its being issued, because it made his leadership impossible."



CAPTAIN O'SHEA.

The Right Hon. J. Chamberlain said in an interview that the death of Mr. Parnell might influence the government to go to the country on present legislation, but it was more likely that the cabinet would endeavor to pass the Irish local government bill.

THE DECEASED'S CAREER.

How Charles Stewart Parnell Arose to Be Ireland's Champion.

Charles Stewart Parnell was born at Avondale in County Wicklow, in the south of Ireland. He was a descendant of the poet Parnell and a family have been associated with Irish parliamentary life for a period of a century. His great grandfather, Sir John Parnell, was chancellor of the exchequer in the Irish parliament, and the most vigorous opponent of the act of union, for his denunciation of which he was dismissed from office. His son, William, resisted all efforts of the imperial government to silence him into giving away their proposals. The family name originally came from Cheshire, and Sir Henry Parnell, grandnephew of Sir John, and a prominent member of the English parliament in the time of Lords Grey and Lord Melbourne, under whom he held offices of distinction, when raised to the peerage took the title of Lord Congleton. Mr. Parnell took a home market in a daughter of Admiral Charles Stewart, a commander in the United States navy, whose other son, also an officer, was educated at Cambridge university but did not take any degree. After a visit to America he settled down on his property in Avondale, was high sheriff of the county in 1874, wished to stand for the county, but was not allowed to resign the shrievalty. A short time after, when Colonel Taylor, on appointment to the lord lieutenancy, had to resign his seat, Mr. Parnell stood for the county and was elected.

His Entry to Parliament.

Mr. Parnell took an active part in parliamentary affairs in the session of 1875, when, in connection with Mr. Biggar, he initiated what was known as the "factious opposition" and "obstructive" and the "active" policy. He opposed with great energy the bill for assuming the Fenian Fund, the flogging clauses in the mutiny act, and the grouse bill, and there were many other of the same character. He went to America in December, 1876, raised the sum of £70,000 in aid of the distress then widespread in Ireland and for the Irish parliamentary fund.

He was received every where with enthusiasm, and his speeches on this occasion contributed in all parts of the country for the relief of the starving Irish peasantry. When he returned to the House of Commons he renewed his former obstructive tactics, and had down a programme for the complete reform of the system of land tenures in Ireland. At the general election in England and Ireland in 1880 Parnell and Kenneth Early in two parliaments was suddenly dissolved, and Mr. Parnell hurried from Ireland to organize forces for attack and victory.

Lord Beaconsfield, in a published letter to Earl Cairns, had pointed out the gravity of the Irish crisis as the chief reason for returning the Tory party to office. Mr. Parnell issued his challenge and laid down a programme for the complete reform of the system of land tenures in Ireland. At the general election in England

WOES OF TWO WOMEN.

Both Claim They Were Deceived Into Marriage.

ONE WEDDED WITH A KEY RING.

Agnes Ellinger Is Anxious to Know Whether She Is a Maid or a Wife. Lillie Voorhees, of Morristown, N. J., Was Married Without Her Consent.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 8.—At Morristown society people are talking a great deal about the strange way in which one of their number, Miss Lillie Voorhees, came to be secretly married a few days ago. Miss Voorhees belongs to a very respectable family in Morristown. Several months ago she became acquainted with Harold G. Heverin, the son of James H. Heverin, a prominent criminal lawyer of Philadelphia. After a few weeks of acquaintance young Heverin became her avowed suitor. He was graduate of Princeton in the class of 1887 and was then a candidate for the ministry.

They Thought He Was Nice.

Miss Voorhees' parents and people generally in Morristown thought young Mr. Heverin was very nice. When he came to ask Mr. Voorhees for his daughter's hand Mr. Voorhees could see no objection to such a promising son-in-law. Mr. Heverin and Miss Voorhees were engaged accordingly.

About three weeks ago Miss Voorhees went to Haverstraw, N. Y., to visit a relative. She had been there but a short time when Mr. Heverin also appeared. The first thing he did was to call and invite her for a drive. They went out together.

Married While Away.

In two or three hours Miss Voorhees returned much excited and immediately went to her father's house where she has been ever since. She said that when they started to drive at Haverstraw Mr. Heverin accused her of having ceased to love him. This she denied emphatically. He asked her to prove her constancy by having a betrothal ceremony before a civil officer. She laughingly consented. The couple then drove to the office of a justice of the peace who performed the marriage ceremony.

Didn't Know She Was Married.

Miss Voorhees said it was not until the justice informed her that she was legally a wife that she realized that she had been deceived. Heverin has not been seen since his bride returned home, nor is anything known as to his whereabouts. Miss Voorhees has up to the present received no communication from him.

Mr. George E. Voorhees, the young woman's father, was very indignant, and has taken steps to have the marriage annulled.

Another Woman Deceived.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Agnes E. Ellinger has brought suit before Judge Patterson to establish a marriage with William Ellinger, insurance agent, representing $1,000 in the Mercantile Credit System at Broadway and Spring street. She alleges that she first met Ellinger at the house of a Mrs. Nolan, on Eagle Pitcher's dock. Their acquaintance soon ripened into love. A year later he visited her with his brother and two Mexican friends, one of whom he represented as a priest.

Wedded with a Key Ring.

The latter performed a marriage service, an old key ring serving as a wedding ring. A few weeks after he bade her goodby and said he was going to New Mexico, where his brother had been killed. That was the last she saw of him until she met him in court for four years and five months.

Ellinger is an elderly looking man with gray hair and mustache. He denied that a ceremony had been performed or that there had been any criminal intimacy between them. Two or three weeks after he met her, Ellenger testified, Agnes asked him to marry her. He told her that he had no idea of marrying any one. Finally he stopped his visits to her.

IN MRS. MAYBRICK'S BEHALF.

A New York Lawyer Says He Has Proof of Her Innocence.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Colonel Dawson, a New York attorney, claims to have discovered fresh evidence that Mrs. Maybrick did not poison her husband in England.

The arsenic face wash prescription, which did not turn up at the trial, has been found between the leaves of the family Bible, thus proving the truth of her statement during the trial that she used arsenic for her complexion, and not to poison her husband.

Dawson also says he can prove Mrs. Maybrick was a faithful wife, and was not intimate with Brierly.

Fassett at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Oct. 8.—Mr. Fassett spoke to a most enthusiastic audience at Buffalo last night. Mayor Becker presided and declared his support for the Republican ticket. Fassett threw down the gauntlet to David B. Hill, whom he styled the "Judas of his party," and to "Blind-eyed, red haired Billy Sheehan," whom he taunted with his alleged shady political record and character. He lauded as making up with Grokar and Murphy, "the triumvirate which has been riding the Democratic donkey."

The Pope's Position in Rome.

ROME, Oct. 8.—The pope has instructed the papal nuncios abroad to present an identical note to the governments to which they are accredited on the recent disorders in Rome on account of the offensive action of a French pilgrim at the tomb of Victor Emmanuel. This note will hold that these disorders are the evidence of the insecurity of the papal position in Rome.

Tramps Assault a Conductor.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 8.—About 3 a. m. Freight Conductor Joseph Powley, of the Pennsylvania railroad, was assaulted by two tramps, who knocked him off the train, and after rifling his pockets of $25 made their escape.

The Bishop of China Dead.

NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 8.—Rev. C. M. Sellick has received a cablegram announcing the death in Amoy, China, of Bishop William J. Boone, the Episcopal bishop of China.

Trumpbour Denies It.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Both Ostrander and Trumpbour, the defaulting bank treasurers, deny the alleged confession story in the New York World.

Sir John Pope Hennessy's Death.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 8.—Sir John Pope Hennessy died suddenly in this city about the same time as Parnell, whose opponent he was.

Buoyed Up by Hope.

There's a nice clerk in a certain Detroit music store who is not only a dreamer, but of late he has become very religiously inclined. The other day a pretty girl from the country came into the store.

"Good morning," he said politely.

"Good morning," she responded; "have you "White Wings?"

"I beg your pardon," he stammered.

"Have you 'White Wings?'" she repeated.

"Not yet," he answered, meekly. Then, hopefully, "but I expect to have some day, miss."

The girl looked at him for a second and hurriedly got out.—Detroit Free Press.

No More.

The girl we know has fled from view,
The fight we must deplore,
And joys of this we used to do
She doesn't say more.

She used to gamble on the beach
Where waters fiercely roar,
And gayly fly the breakers' reach—
She don't say more.

Her dress came high about her throat
Upon the pebbly shore,
But in the ballroom now you note,
It doesn't say more.

GRANT IN BRONZE.

The Unveiling of His Equestrian Statue in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Nearly 100,000 people on shore and in the shipping witnessed the unveiling of the equestrian statue of General Grant erected upon a triumphal arch of granite in Lincoln park, overlooking Lake Michigan.

Mrs. Grant reviewed the parade and an eloquent oration was delivered by Judge Walter Q. Gresham.

The statue, upon a high granite pedestal, surmounts a handsome granite arch, spanning an entry from the Lake Shore drive into the park. Granite steps lead from the drive up to the driveway and footpath, which runs along a mound over the arch proper and under that portion of the structure upon which the pedestal and statue rest. The work cost $65,000, the greater portion of which was raised by popular subscription within four days after the death of General Grant.

Quay and Clarkson at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Senator Quay and Hon. J. S. Clarkson, acting chairman of the National Republican committee, are here. Mr. Clarkson says a meeting of the committee, to be held in Washington, will probably be called for the latter part of November, to elect Chairman Quay's successor and fix the date and place for holding the next National Republican convention.

Miss McCarthy's Elopement.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Oct. 8.—Frederick Fish, the son of Howard C. Fish, of Jersey City, and grandson of Dr. Linus S. Loddington, of this city, eloped with Miss Mary Ellen McCarthy, a daughter of John McCarthy, a wealthy dry dock owner of New York.

Is It a Lottery or a Swindle?

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—E. C. Dutton, alias Busch, and George Dimmick, alias Hunt, were arrested in this city by Detective Bond and Murray on the charge of carrying on a lottery. The men were the agents of the California Surety Loan and Trust company.

A Hotel Proprietor's Failure.

CAPE MAY, Oct. 8.—Anson H. Hamilton, proprietor of the Cape May House, Shore house and other property at Cape May Point, has failed. His liabilities are stated at $100,000. His principal creditor is Israel S. Johnson, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Birchall Not Married.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 8.—A letter has been received here from Mrs. Birchall from London, England. She feels much hurt at the report circulated to the effect that she was married again.

Snow Arrives in Pennsylvania.

BEAVER FALLS, Oct. 8.—The first snow of the fall arrived here at 3 a. m. The squall lasted about ten minutes. It fell so rapidly that the streets and houses were thickly covered.

The Policeman Robbed Him.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Oct. 8.—Patrick Carmody has made a complaint against Policeman John Wilson. He said that Wilson took ten dollars out of his pocket, and when taxed with it said it was only a joke and he would return the money. Wilson was jailed for larceny.

ABOUT WASHING CLOTHES.

A Housekeeper Tells How to Make Washing Not Easy but Satisfactory.

Every good housekeeper likes to have her laundry done under her own roof, and rejoices when the sunshine comes when her clothes can be dried and whitened in the fresh air and sunlight. This can scarcely take up a paper without seeing an advertisement of some soap or washing machine that does away with the laborious process of rubbing. Clothes must be rubbed to be properly washed. Any soap strong enough to eat the dirt out of clothes by their simply soaking in its suds is too strong enough to injure the fabric. The same may be said of washing powders.

It is a question among good managers whether it is best to soak clothes in soapsuds and water or put them dry in the rubbing water. The writer believes, if the clothes are boiled over each day and soiled spots rubbed with soap and left soaking in clear cold water which is not too hard, it will materially assist in washing. If however, the clothes are put into cold water before they are put into a tub of lukewarm water it is better to forego the process.

It is quite important that all clothes or table linen that are stained by fruit or coffee should have these stains removed with boiling water before they are put in soak in soapsuds, but tea and most other stains yield to cold water and are set with hot water. In removing clothes from soaking take out a few at a time, wringing them into the rubbing water. The best rubbing board is one made of corrugated zinc laid in rather fine ridges. After rubbing all the clothes on the board except the very fine sheer ones like lawn dresses and underwear, cambric handkerchiefs and other sheer pieces, which must be rubbed in the hands, get ready the water for boiling.

To every two pailfuls of cold water put in the boiler add a tablespoonful of kerosene, and add to the whole in boiler about half an ordinary sized five-cent bar of soap scraped and melted in hot water. The best soap to use in washing white clothes is the old fashioned laundry soap, such as farmers used to make, but as this cannot always be obtained, it is as well to select any well recommended, perfectly well known brand of brown soap, that is firm and hard. As soon as the boiler of clothes is boiling, time them ninety-five minutes by the clock, then empty them into the water they were boiled in and let them remain till the next boiling of clothes is made ready and put over to take water prepared as before with soap and kerosene oil.

When all the clothes are boiled begin rinsing them by passing them through several rinsing waters. The last of all, put them pieces by piece in a tub of bluing, and wring them out of it with a wringer. Starch all such pieces as it is necessary to starch, remembering that it is no longer the custom to use much starch. Dresses, skirts and other pieces, which it was formerly the custom to starch so stiff that they rattled with every movement the wearer made, are now simply finished by a bath of the thinnest water starch. Colored clothes and flannels should be washed by themselves in clear water with white soap, never with brown soap, and thoroughly rinsed.

If the colors of a gaudalic or calico dress begin to run after it is put in water it should be rinsed in salt and water, using salt in the proportion of a tablespoonful to every gallon of water. Never send cambric or colored clothes or flannels to a little ammonia—about a tablespoonful to every gallon of water—in washing and rinsing flannels. Hang white clothes in the hottest sun you can find to bleach, but hang flannels and all colored clothes in the house or in a dense shade outdoors, where the flannel will dry without shrinking and the cambric without fading.

Cambrics are better dried within doors in a darkened room, as nothing bleaches out color so soon as a strong light on a wet garment.—New York Tribune.

She Brings Pleasure to Incurables.

Did you ever try to think what the word "forever," even as far as this life lasts, may mean? Did you ever try to think what to have some disease which can never be cured may mean? And did you ever try to realize how little of the sunshine of life comes to those wretched incurables who are supported at the city's expense? There is one young, pretty woman in New York who has tried to work out the problem. She is young, handsome, has plenty of money, a beautiful home, yet out of her joyful life she devotes two days a week to these incurables.

When she comes the word is passed from one to another, "Miss Kellard's here," and these wretched creatures, very few of whom can see, smile with delight because they know that the woman has come who will bring them pleasure. She goes over inside with jellies, buns, fruit and whatever else her purse may want, and she doesn't say that to have a bun you must be an Episcopalian or a Presbyterian, or to be made happy by a pear you must belong to Mr. Somebody's church.

No! She has come to bring happiness to those who are in sorrow, and she and the friend who assists her are doing a work such as will make for them a glad welcome among the cured and happy in heaven, and who will bless her because she has done that which her hands found for her to do. She has asked money from no one. But if some kindly person chooses to send a jar of jelly, a few pounds of candies, some fresh fruit to her home they may be certain that somebody hungry for a dainty, will get it.

After the goodies have all been distributed then Miss Kellard asks what else she can do for them, and letters are written and a song is sung, and occasionally a chapter from some bright book is read, and the poor souls laugh over Montmorency's pranks, or shed a tear when they think that though their eyes are closed now, they will yet be open where there shall be no more weeping.—New York Sun.

A Woman's Revolt.

She was a woman, and she was running over the pages of a woman's magazine. "There's too much of it," she offered by way of comment. "Too much of old, put them pieces by piece in a tub of bluing, and wring them out of it with a wringer. Starch all such pieces as it is necessary to starch, remembering that it is no longer the custom to use much starch. Take the rags of your soul and chair backs; millinery effects do not belong in a parlor." Again, I am told several and emphatically that a "hot bath," a "cold bath," a "tepid bath," or a "sponge bath" is the only safe and suitable manner to apply water, and while I hesitate which method to adopt a fifth paragraph appears with startling warning "Don't bathe at all; use dry rubbing." What can a poor woman, with only one small mind, do under such an array of authority?

"And I don't see," she went on, a little plaintively, "why they should nag us women all the time. We are not the only sinners, I am sure I see very many negligent, much-to-be-improved-upon men. Now, that woman's sphere of usefulness has been so greatly increased, why can't the men on their part develop a little more of the ornamental to even matters somewhat, you know? They are not prudent to live up to as we they ought to be. It is not a pretty spectacle, for instance, to see a young woman, a physical culturist, if I may be permitted the word, stepping along the pavement with a sort of gazelle empress gait and at her side a round shouldered man who sends his knees out three inches beyond his toes with every stride, but one can see at a glance.

"I should like to start a men's magazine and 'hint' and 'help' and 'don't' and 'always' them for awhile. But," she finished, looking somewhat pained, "I don't believe the men would read it."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Give the Baby Plenty of Water.

One glaring fault quite common with mothers of infants is that they do not give them all the water they need. Milk being a liquid, they generally assume that it is capable of satisfying thirst. This really drives away thirst for a short time, but it soon returns and more intense than at first, besides which the fluid portion of the milk rapidly passes through the stomach and leaves a curdled mass behind, which must linger there some hours to undergo digestion.

If milk is taken too often it is clear to be seen that it would be like eating dinner shortly after breakfast, and soon following this with lunch, and after a brief interval with supper.

There is absolutely nothing that will satisfy the thirst of babies but pure, fresh water. And the habit of giving it should begin during the first week of life. After a baby has been nursed or fed, a teaspoonful of water should be put into its mouth for the purpose of washing away all traces of the milk.

The quantity of water should be increased as the little one grows older, and be offered him at frequent intervals. It will not be long before he plainly manifests when he needs a drink, and this most wholesome beverage may always be given him at such times.

Long crying spells are caused by thirst, but the mothers do not always recognize the need. Let them try water at such times, and they will often find that they have happily struck the cause.—Boston Herald.

Lay Off a Day.

There is no better preventive of nervous exhaustion or brain fag than regular, unhurried, muscular exercise. If we could moderate our hurry, do less fretting, do less fault finding and increase our outdoor exercise, a large percentage of nervous disorders would be unknown. Take outdoor exercise, with some object in view—go to market; go to some friend that needs you. Have some motive, some object in view for exercise brain interested as well as the mechanical movements of the muscles of the body.

Don't take a walk outdoors a few blocks long because your doctor advises. Better than that would be to sit out on the steps and be in the air passively, restfully. One of the very best plans to rest body and brain from excessive or continual strain is to take a day in bed occasionally—a whole day by many whose nerves are constantly strained by their daily work.

A very successful business man, whose success has caused comment, always goes to bed for two or three days when he can be spared from his business and laughs at those who spend their holidays in pilgrimages to the country for two days' rest. One of the hardest worked women in England, who has for many years conducted a large wholesale business, retains excellent nerves at an advanced age, owing it, as she claims, to her habit of spending one day a week in bed.—Chicago Women's News.

Home Influence.

The strongest incentive to character building is the example of those whom we love. Every boy, while his knowledge is confined to his home, sees a hero in his father; every girl believes her father the finest type of man; "mother" represents to her child the ideal woman. Can money or place or power gained by the sacrifice of truth or honor ever compensate a child for the loss of perfect trust in the character of a parent?

When death comes to a life crowned with honor and the influence that like incense rises as a tribute to an honorable life is grieved, but the promise to such is too rich, too inspiring for death to leave more than a shadow. But when death robs and the child of perfect trust in the knowledge that the influence of that life has been for evil, then the bitterness of death is known and felt, even if the knowledge of that broken life is known only to the children; to say "my father" or "my mother" and blush in one's soul at the thought that these words represent the life of its possibilities of joy or happiness.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them." The children follow in the paths made and kept luminous because father and mother have walked in them.—Christian Union.

A New Disinfectant.

A disinfectant is being introduced into sickrooms in Australia, in the form of the green branches of eucalyptus. The reputation of the eucalyptus as an absorbent of malaria and as an antidote in fever cases is well established, and for some time its effects as a disinfectant in sick chambers have been carefully watched. Dr. Curgenven states, after twelve months' trial, that in cases of scarlet fever, if the branches be placed under the bed, the bedding undergoes thorough disinfection, the volatile vapor penetrating and saturating the mattresses and every other article in the room. The vapor is also said to have a beneficial effect upon phthisical patients, acting not only as an antiseptic but as a sedative, and to some extent as a hypnotic.—New York Telegram.

Home Work.

Circumstances sometimes prevent women from leaving home to seek employment. Yet there is a demand for an income from some source. This is an opportunity for the stay-at-home worker to undertake anything and everything as it is for those who go into the world. Look over the things which have been done, and well done, and select that which may be accomplished to the best advantage, and see if it cannot be made to pay something. It may be bewildering to find just where the accomplishment lies, as in the case of a woman who was unexpectedly left to provide for herself.

She could play the piano, paint with some degree of skill and write more than well, but she could not make any of these available. She accepted the first bid, however, that was in frying potatoes. "Saratoga chips" she could fry deliciously. She began to take orders for them, and soon had a flourishing business. Then all home workers could not fry potatoes to earn their living, yet they may find their talent in something equally near at hand.—Lewiston Journal.

The Nineteenth Century Woman.

There is an old adage of the masculine Anglo-Saxon mind that a woman, to be lovable, should always be marked individuality. But with the world's rapid advance through the Victorian age, woman has become more than ever perplexing to the male atom who poises himself for a moment to make a study of her. She no longer needs a man's apanel to practice a profession or to journey forth on foot under the green leaves of Arden. She has grown self-reliant and accomplish, equally well at home in the White House or on the banks of the Neva.

She never plucks daisies and buttercups nowadays, to test her lover's affection by pulling apart their petals. You find her, instead, arranging orchids in a glass and making cynical reflections upon the worthlessness of the entire race. Individual love or hate in the opposite sex is apparently all one to her.—Scribner's.

Women and Dogs.

"I sell about 600 dogs a year," said the well known dog man who makes Broadway, between the Fifth avenue and Hoffman, his field of operations. "Sometimes I don't sell one for days, then five or six or a dozen right along. There is always a pretty fair market here for thoroughbreds. I keep no other kind. Japanese spaniels and King Charlies are the favorites, but they are too high priced for most people to reach. Ball terriers and hunting dogs always sell. The principal customers are sports and actresses. Women are great on dogs. In nine cases out of ten when a man buys a dog it is to give it to a woman. Actresses love dogs. Stand here a few minutes and see the wistful eyes the women cast at these beauties."—New York Herald.

Restoring the Polish.

Says a housekeeper: "My piano, which had been covered with a cambric cover, was loaded with dust that had sifted through the sleazy cloth. The dust was too thick to be wiped off; it should have been blown and lightly whisked off first, but this my maid did not do, and in consequence the grime was wiped in, for all I know, with a damp cloth. At all events the highly polished surface was clouded over almost to a gray, and I was in despair until a friend suggested a remedy. She advised me to wring a dry cloth out of a piece of chamois from out a basin of water and rub the piano until the chamois was bone dry. This I have done, and completely restored the polish."—New York Times.

Cycling for Women.

Cycling for women has come to stay. It is no use for doctor, lawyer, parson or chief to say "Thou shalt not" to the women of today, while her conscience approves and her experience proves that her every way is right. In days gone by one-half the opposition already conquered would have been fatal to the exercise, and the silent stead would have stood unused, unhoused and unsung. But without defying or disputing, or anything but determinately doing, the woman of today sweeps aside the cobwebs of prejudice, with highest self respect and gentle dignity cleanses the world be smirch of unfeminity and goes on her narrow way rejoicing.—Grace E. Denison in Outing.

An Idea for Mothers.

Here is an idea for the mothers of unruly children, to-continue from John Ruskin, who, though the idolizer of children, admits the undesirability of allowing the young to usurp the place or despise the wisdom of the aged. "But whose is the fault?" he asks. "Youth never loses its modesty where age has not lost its honor, nor did childhood ever refuse its reverence except when age had forgotten correction. The cry, 'Go up, thou bald head!' will never be heard in the land which remembers the precept, 'See that ye despise not one of these little ones.'"

Making Taffy at Home.

Some excellent taffy may be made by taking one quart of molasses and half a pound of butter, and boiling the two until the mass shickens. This will take about half an hour. Then stir with a spoon until, on taking out a little taffy, it becomes hard on immersion in cold water. Take half a teacup of vinegar, pour into the mass, and stir for half a minute. Then pour the taffy into buttered tins or dishes and set aside to cool.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Queen's Hobby.

The queen of Italy is very fond of continually adding to her already large collection of gloves, boots and shoes, worn at different periods at Italian courts, including, for example, "Nero's" sandals, "Rienzi's" throne shoe, a pair of white slippers and a fan which they say belonged to Mary Queen of Scots, shoes worn by Queen Anne, by Marie Antoinette, the Empress Josephine, etc.—London Queen.

Tea is said not to have an ill effect upon the nerves if it is taken weak and cold. To prepare your cup of tea so that it will agree with the doctor's approbation, pour it into your saucer and add a little cool water. The very thought makes you shiver, but it is a good thing to do just the same.

The bishop of Chester, England, has told a school of girls that if they only became "good plain cooks" he believed they might do almost as much good to the community at large as if they became senior wranglers or senior classics.

There are more women in British India (124,000,000) than there are men, women and children in Great Britain, France and Germany put together, with the population of several minor European states cast in as well.

Plaster casts which are properly waxed may be wiped off with a damp cloth and will last for years without being injured, while an unwaxed one soon becomes soiled and it is practically impossible to clean it.

A woman can talk as sweet as peaches and cream to the woman she hates, while two men would be pounding each other's heads before they had exchanged ten words.

DRIVING TO ETERNITY.

JOEL R. BRIANT HAS A STROKE OF APOPLEXY LAST EVENING.

He Falls Unconscious From His Gig to the Road.—His Horse, Startled, Runs Away and Demolishes a Bicycle.—Bicycler Harry Fuller's Narrow Escape.—Mr. Briant Dies This Morning.

Mr. Joel R. Briant of West Fifth street, corner of Division, died this morning about eight o'clock of apoplexy. He was sixty-three years old and leaves a wife and two married daughters, one of whom is the wife of Mr. Elwin R. Leland of East Front street; and the other the wife of Mr. Charles E. Harris of East Sixth street.

Mr. Briant was head bookkeeper in the Bank of the Republic, New York, a position he occupied for many years.

He kept a horse at Hedden's livery, and, as his hours of business were very short, was accustomed to come from New York very early and as a means of healthful exercise go out in a gig riding, of which he was passionate fond.

His horse, a little sorrel with a white spot on its forehead, was a valuable animal—very fast, but gentle. Mr. Briant had had her in his possession about a year, having traded for her a fine horse, giving $300 to boot. He used to say he got the animal because he didn't like to take any one's dust, yet in the city he was never seen going faster than a gentle trot.

Last evening at 6:30 o'clock he was driving slowly along Park avenue westerly toward Front street, returning from his usual afternoon drive to the stable, when he was noticed to act strangely, as if about to have a fit.

He evidently felt something was wrong, and shouted "whoa!" at his horse loud enough to attract attention. In fact it was this which first attracted attention to him.

The next instant at the corner of Fourth street he fell over backwards out of the gig into the street, his driving blanket wrapped around his feet in the usual manner. He was a heavy man and the sudden loss of weight and the commotion caused by his falling out startled the horse, and it ran away toward Front street.

Harry Fuller of Church street was riding on his bicycle along Park avenue when he noticed the horse galloping toward him, and not having time to turn his machine out of the way, young Fuller jumped off and saved himself, while the horse ran over and demolished the bicycle, the collision serving only to still further frighten the horse.

When the horse had passed by, young Fuller saw Mr. Briant unconscious lying on the road, and with others hurried toward him, helping Mr. Burgess, Frank Hoff, and others, to carry him in the blanket into Williams' drug store.

Drs. Endicott, Fritts and Tomlinson were summoned, and they examined the man's eyes, observed his breathing, and saw that he was doomed.

Ex-Councilmen Dunham, who from boyhood had intimately known Mr. Briant, stood over him and said, "Hello, Joel!"

Mr. Briant opened his eyes, moved them as if trying to see who had spoken and said "ugh!" and repeated the word when likewise spoken to by Dr. Fritts but he seem dazed, and gave no other sign of consciousness, if even that could be considered as such.

The doctors examined Mr. Briant for contusions or bruises, and could discover only a slight discoloration on the head where it had come in contact with the road, and not necessarily serious. By their orders he was removed to his home on a stretcher, and lingered in a comatose condition until he died, about eight o'clock this morning, as stated, Dr. Tomlinson having attended him through the night.

The horse, which, in our account, we left running away toward Front street, continued down the latter street toward Grant avenue, thence toward Eighth street, where he slowed up, recovering from his fright, and was caught by a little boy, whose name could not be ascertained. The boy, seeing the horse wandering about, was at first going to tie him to a tree, but later some men coming along advised him to take the animal into town, which he did, and it was eventually returned to the stable unharmed. The gig had been detached and undamaged taken to the stable separately.

Special Watchman Geise shortly after the affair occurred on Park avenue found a wallet containing seven dollars and a few pennies, which he turned over to Acting Police-Captain Lynch as the property of Mr. Briant. Others turned over a pen-knife and some small change, found in the same vicinity.

During the evening the wildest rumors prevailed on the street that Mr. Brint's horse had been startled by a bicycle light, had thrown Mr. Briant out and dragged him 300 feet, killing him most horribly, and thus the account appears in the New York papers to-day, as sent by the local correspondents.

The affair was witnessed by a host of people, and our account from begin' ning to end is as furnished by these eyewitnesses themselves.

Mr. Briant was an old and much-respected member of the Methodist church, and his death will be greatly deplored by all who knew him as a man full of kindly sympathy for everyone.

Its Ninth Life.

At about eleven o'clock this morning a cat which was crossing West Front street, near Carney Bros.' store, was run over and instantly killed by a wagon loaded with brick. No time has yet been set for the funeral.

A FAIR AT ST. MARY'S.

OPENED BY FATHER C. J. KELLY OF JERSEY CITY LAST NIGHT.

Picture of the Only Plainfielder in the Priesthood.—Welcomed to his Boyhood Home.—A Man of Rare Eloquence.

The illustrated lecture given at St. Mary's school hall last evening by the Rev. Father Kelly, was an unqualified success.

The announcement that Father Kelly, the only representative in the priesthood from this city, would lecture upon his European travels drew an immense concourse of his old friends to the school hall. He had intended to lecture upon and to illustrate the Passion play as exhibited at Oberamergau, but by request he changed his plans and gave the audience a very instructive and entertaining lecture on Ireland.

He illustrated his remarks with views of the green isle, its ruined abbeys and round towers, its charming scenery of mountains and lakes, and brought to the minds of those present the happy scenes of childhood days.

Few lecturers are better endowed by nature with the qualities necessary to commend the attention of an audience.

With a fine physical appearance, as many persons did not unlike the late Henry Ward Beecher, he is also, as was that great orater, gifted with a mind of massive powers and a voice of resistless force. The influence for good he exercises in his parish may be estimated from the fact that one society alone which he has formed numbers several hundred men.

He is particularly interested in young men, and is now building a club house for their use which will cost over $50,000.

He looked to a News' reporter on the great improvements in Plainfield and, like all who ever lived here, considers it "the Queen City of New Jersey." Naturally he feels proud that among the many improvements everywhere visible, the young men of St. Mary's congregation are not neglected.

Their proposed new club house meets with his earnest approval and he promised Father Stafford, their energetic director, that he would lecture for their benefit during the Christmas holidays, and both the lectures and the objects we are sure will receive the encouragement they deserve.

We present Father Kelly's portrait that our readers may see the likeness of the only Plainfielder in the priesthood, and all agree that he is a very noble-looking man, and a creditable representative of of his boyhood home.

In the Firemen's Annual Parade at Elizabeth.—The Plainfield Company Conspicuous for their Fine Appearance Generally.—Tabulation Last Night—List of the Members, Active, Honorary, Exempt and Associate.

The annual parade of the Elizabeth Fire Department took place in that city yesterday afternoon and was witnessed by a large number of Plainfielders. Alert Hose Company of this city participated and as THE NEWS predicted captured the prize offered by the Elizabeth Fire Department for the handsomest hose carriage in line.

The trophy was a silver cake basket and is highly prized by the company.

A prize was also offered for the best equipped company and the members of our dandy Hose Comany took their patrol carriage with them also took their rubber boots and coats and were the only company in line ready to re*spond immediately to* an alarm of fire, but for some reason the prize was awarded to another company. Nevertheless, the Alert "boys" are happy.

Last evening when the company returned to this city the members of Gazelle and No. 2's Engine Companies and Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, met them at the depot and headed by the Plainfield Cornet Band, indulged in a short parade. They then proceeded to the Scott Press Works, met the carriage and proudly brought it to the house. The following is a list of the members of Alert Hose company.

SUING FOR DIVORCE.

Louis Melville Evans, a son of ex-Mayor Evans and a brother of Mr. Clark Evans of this city, has instituted a suit for divorce from his 20 year old wife, Mrs. Jessie Evans, charging infidelity, and both the lectures and the objects we are sure will receive the encouragement they deserve.

We present Father Kelly's portrait that our readers may see the likeness of the only Plainfielder in the priesthood, and all agree that he is a very noble-looking man, and a creditable representative of of his boyhood home.

Mrs. Evans is now visiting at Baltimore. Mr. Evans was formerly a resident of this city.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mrs. M. J. Coyne, of this city, is on a visit to her aunt in New York City.

Mr. Charles Beggs of New York is the guest of Miss Emma Dennis of Sanford avenue.

Miss Rose Ida and Kittie Rose of Plainsvenue, who have been seriously ill, are now convalescent.

Mr. Edward Terry of Linden avenue, North Plainfield, is the happy father of a little girl, which was born last night.

Mr. Lyon Marsh of Scotch Plains, was seized with a hemmorhage on Somerset street at about 11:15 o'clock this morning. He was taken home in a carriage.

A very young man, who some day may be a voter, at present rules the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Adams of Duer street, North Plainfield. The little fellow was born Wednesday night.

The deacons of the First Baptist church met Wednesday evening in the church parlor. The new Baptist Mission, on East Third street, a sturdy infant, needed a guardian who would have the energy and other necessary qualities to successfully further its growth. They unanimously decided upon that genial gentleman, Mr. Warren Randolph, and just as unanimously made him general superintendent of the mission. Mr. Randolph has always been a most active worker in the Baptist church, and to his ability to "ever tastingly bustle," much of the success of all the church's undertakings has been due. He, if anyone, can make the mission a success.

A YELLOW TEA.

A Large and Pleasant Assemblage at the Bicycle Club House Welcomed by Some of Plainfield's Most Charming Young Ladies.

OW changed the usually bleak Bicycle Club gymnasium was last night, when the Dorcas Society of King's Daughters' gave "A Yellow Tea." There was no tea, but lots of yellow. The apparatus of the "gym" that could not be moved was draped with it, the bowers were solid masses of the prevailing tint, the charming young ladies who presided wore pretty dresses of yellow, and even filled the button-holes of the young men's coats with yellow ribbons. Very home like it all looked and reflected "yellow credit" on the decorators.

The large room was filled with visitors and the young ladies will have about $60 or $70 to use in charity.

Each visitor was served with a cup of delicious chocolate by some of the Reception Committee. This pleasant welcome was free. There were booths all around, and ice cream up in the gallery, where money could be spent, however. The booths and their attendants were as follows:

Reception—The Misses Louise Green, Nettie Thorn, Jessie Stewart, Minnie Miller, Florence Keith and May Kirkner.

Fruit booth—The Misses Saltzman and Covert.

Lemonade booth—The Misses Florence Abbott and Kitty Thorn.

Fancy booth—Misses Brown, Maltby and Fritts.

A Large Audience.

The W. C. T. U. rooms were packed last evening to hear Mr. Ellis who gave a chart talk, upon the use of liquor and tobacco which was made particularly impressive, by related incidents from her own personal observation, and from sad facts in the lives of great men. Judging from the bright, attentive faces of the boys and girls present, (who were honored with front seats,) and from their ready and subdued laughter at the humorous phases, this younger portion of the audience was impressed as well as amused. A score or more boys signed the anti-tobacco pledge at the close of the meeting. Dr. Lewis pronounced the benediction.

Only the Wheel Wrecked.

Richard Haven had a narrow escape from a serious accident at about half past six o'clock last evening. He was riding his bicycle along Third street and when near the corner of North avenue he turned out of the centre of the road to pass a wagon, and in doing so struck another vehicle. Mr. Haven was thrown from his wheel, but escaped with a few slight bruises. The wagon passed over the bicycle and the wheel was completely wrecked.

The Mechanics' Reception.

The mechanics of this city were tendered a reception by the members of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening. An interesting programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music was rendered. Mr. William Aben, the well-known locomotive engineer, contributed to the evening's enjoyment, Mr. Nelson Runyon made a brief address. Refreshments were served in abundance.

To Give a Sociable.

The Young People's League of the First Baptist church will give a sociable in the lecture room of the church next Thursday evening.

An interesting programme has been prepared.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church is in progress in St. Mary's Hall this week.

—Hear Anthony Comstock speak to men in the First Baptist church Sunday at 4:15 p. m.

—The Board of Trustees of the Crescent League will hold their annual meeting to-night.

—The Crescents will go to New Brunswick to-morrow and cross bats with the team of that place.

—The Independents of this city will bowl with the Crescents League bowling team this evening.

—Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, will celebrate its second anniversary to-night. Admission will be by invitation.

—The short hand class will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night. All who wish further information are invited to be present.

—The contest for the gold watch at St. Mary's rair, was decided in favor of Miss Josie Shaffer, she having collected $142.30. The voting contest is to be decided this evening.

—The Young Ladies Missionary Circle of the Methodist church met in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. They reorganized the circle and planned some work for this year's terms.

—The young ladies are desirous that the Plainfield "Bi's" have another fair. They say they had great fun, at the last fair, and wish to have another good time again. Without their presence and aid, the last fair, so very successful, would have been a failure.

—Fate certainly played into the hands of Miss Agnes Herndon when it prompted her to produce her new comedy-drama at the Windsor Theatre on Monday night. It was just the sort of play that the people delight in, and it did not take long to infuse a lot of magnetism into the large gathering of theatre-goers that was below them and to the actors and actresses on the stage. "La Belle Marie" is French all the way through, but the fine acting of Miss Herndon, held her audience closely and was awarded lots of recalls and an avalanche of flowers.

The piece treats of the misery of a wronged country girl at the hands of a villain. Miss Herndon plays a dual character—Jean Ingleside, the country lass, and Marie Bell (La Belle Marie). In the first act she was nervous and hurried, and almost spoiled the denouement. But after that she made every line tell. The piece was a success before the first act was over.—Dramatic News, Aug. 17th, 1890.

The Coming Republican Club Convention.

President Joseph H. Gaskill, of the League of New Jersey Republican clubs is busily arranging the details of the convention to be held at Trenton on Thursday of next week. Mr. Gaskill is confident of a successful and interesting convention and expects to see a large attendance. Clubs in all parts of the State have elected delegates, and Camden county will send a delegation of 150, headed by General W. J. Sewell. President Gaskill has received acceptance from ex-Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson, ex-Congressman R. G. Horr and others, who will address the convention. Brief addresses will also be made by Governor Abbett, General Abner Burd Gruhb, State Chairman John Kean, Jr., John Y. Foster, George A. Halsey and ex-Senator Thomas Dunn English. Many of the Republican organization with striking uniforms, will go as an escort to President Gaskill. The Union County Republican League meets to-night at Hon. Foster M. Voorhees' office, to elect delegates to the convention. Union county should be well represented.

Mr. Miller Convalescent.

John Miller, the young man who was so severely injured by being struck in the mouth with a base ball at Boynton Beach on Labor Day, has so far recovered from his injuries as to be able to walk out. The accident puzzled his physicians for some time. He had twelve or fifteen fits every day.

Arrested For Embezzlement.

Mr. J. E. Crater was arrested yesterday on the charge of embezzlement. He is to have a hearing before Justice Nash to-morrow. He furnished bonds for his appearance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

To Make a Fortune.

It does not require a genius to make money. The accumulation of wealth is, after all, an easy matter. It does not require capabilities, breeding or genius; and certainly luck is not nothing to do with it. Any man or woman may become wealthy if he or she begins aright. The opportunities for doubling the almighty dollar are very numerous in this country. But there are certain fundamental rules that must be observed.

The first step to acquiring a fortune lies in hard work. I could give you no better advice than that given by Poor Richard, "Hope not a thing each day, no more how little you earn." Cultivate thrifty habits. Make your toil come for all that you can, and always save some portion of you wages, and then be on the alert for investment. If you do this steadily your money will begin to accumulate, double, treble, and in a few years perhaps you may be a millionaire.

The beginning is the most difficult.

Keep a true account.

When you have saved $500 or $200 or $300, look about for a good investment. Do not rush up this or that wholesale venture, but examine it carefully, and if you see your way clear put your money into it. Read trade journals and get all the information you can before you invest a penny, that you get the best counsel on the subject to aid you in making the right decision.

If your first investment prospers, by careful management and by always being on the alert, you can increase your fortune by reinvesting your profits.

Lay a good foundation for your fortune.

Be honest, be economical, be helpful, be honest, do not overwork, keep in good health, watch your mind, be sure, and in time and thrift, all you need just fear. You cannot fail.

Begin right!

Thus far Banker Henry Clews, in the Ladies' Home Journal. He instances the case of millionaire after millionaire who began with nothing and heaped up wealth. The sum of the whole science and art of getting rich seems to be this: Save your money and watch your opportunity.

Another point Mr. Clews emphasizes particularly is to keep out of the way of speculation and speculators. Money is lost, seldom made in this field. But the field of legitimate investment is still broad enough for every one who can see his opportunity. W. H. Vanderbilt was a constant investor, never a speculator. Opportunity lies all around us. One man in the midst of the poorest, most unpromising surroundings can amass a fortune, another man in the midst of dazzling openings to wealth remains a poverty stricken creature all his days. The will the determination to become independent pecuniarily lies behind all the rest. When this is steadily and always there, the man or woman in due course of time becomes well off.

At least this is likely to be the case. It is true that a man might do all that Banker Clews recommends and yet have ill fortune pursue him to such an extent that he would remain poor. But such instances are very infrequent. And even then those who constantly try will be far better off in the long run than if they had slumped down in discouragement and despair and said, "Luck is against me, I will strive no more." The men who say that are the persons who become the inferior and lazy tramps of society, die in the pauper houses and have their bodies utilized upon the dissecting tables of medical colleges, this being the only benefit they ever confer upon their fellow men.

The final point and one on which Banker Clews lays much stress, is this: Keep your head on in the midst of reverses, which are bound to come to every human being. Keep your mind steady, clear and strong, command your self and you will get on top again. You are bound to.

Every year the navies and armies of Europe grow larger and their guns heavier, and every year the Universal Peace society meets, passes its little resolutions and adjourns again. This year the society will hold its annual international congress under the very nose of some of the greatest guns in the world at Rome. Perhaps their gentle speeches and papers may in course of time start a movement in favor of universal peace, but things do not look that way. It looks rather as if the armaments of the nations will in time become so monstrous and their weapons so destructive that they will be afraid to fight one another, and so adopt universal disarming. If the armies of Continental Europe continue to grow as they have been doing, there will come a period when nearly all the able-bodied men will be soldiers and not a sufficient number will be left to feed the rest.

A new invention that will doubtless "go" next summer when the swimming season sets in again is a webbed rubber glove for use in the water. Young swimmers find one of the most difficult points to learn is to keep their fingers together in the water. With the webbed glove this will not be necessary, as the swimmer will then be web fingered and can safely compete with the Newfound land dog.

The new Dashiel 4-inch naval gun with which the government has been experimenting, is pronounced to be the quickest rapid firing gun in the world. This wicked little American machine recently, while charged with brown powder, fired five rounds in seventeen seconds.

Women are demonstrating every day that they are capable of doing what men can in the business fields. A Montana postmistress has been arrested for robbing the mails.

TOOK THE OTHER'S HAND

Cleveland and Hill Shake at Cooper Union.

DEMOCRATS RATIFY THEIR TICKET.

The Ex-President in His Opening Address Confines Himself to National Issues—The Governor Introduced by His Fellow Democrat.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The first big gun of the Democratic campaign was fired last night at Cooper Union. There were two guns, in fact, one inside and one outside. At an early hour the historic institute was packed so full that no more persons could be crowded in. County Democrats, Young Democrats, Tammany men and mugwumps all sat together on a platform and joined hands in making the meeting a success. It was a complete vindication of the claim that every branch of the party is entitled to be in one single fronted campaign. This was further demonstrated when, upon the reading of the names of the officers of the evening, cheers were given with equal emphasis for both ex-President Cleveland and for Governor Hill. Mr. Cleveland presided. In taking the chair he thanked the meeting for the honor conferred upon him. The Democratic party, he said, had always been the party of the people. In referring to the tariff and congressional matters he said:

We saw the money of the people unnecessarily extorted from them under the guise of taxation. We saw that the surplus was not a chance perpetuated for the purpose of exacting tribute from the poor for the benefit of the rich. We saw growing out of this scheme the whole debauchery and corruption of the people whom it impoverished. We saw a party which had created and defended this unjust taxation and holding power in the government by the shameless appeal to sectional hate and fear. We saw the people actually burnishing the shackles of misrepresentation and misconception which they themselves had forged, and the party of sectarian ascendency by throttling and destroying the freedom and integrity of the suffrage. Through the most critical and perilous period of reconstruction. We saw waste and extravagance raiding the public treasury, and justified in official station.

We saw the national assemblage of the people's representatives degraded to the mere semblance of a legislative assembly by the brute force of a violently created majority and by unprecedented arbitrary and tyrannical rules seemingly declared by those who usurped its functions to be no longer a deliberative body.

We heard that the war issue.

Then it was that the Democratic party stood forth to do determined battle against these strange usurpations and the crimes and outrages of the people. As results of the struggle thus entered upon, never has the restless fever of the spirit of change in the midst of our country been more completely demonstrated and never has the irresistible strength of the principles of democracy been more amply exemplified. So popular branch of the next congress the party which lately impudently arrogated to itself the dominion of the senate will be more than one-fourth of its seats. Democratic governors occupy the enemy's strongholds in Iowa, Maryland, Ohio, Minnesota and Michigan. In Pennsylvania the election of a Democratic state treasurer presented conclusive proof of Republican corruption exposed and Republican dishonesty detected.

The State Campaign.

The speaker added, however, that the work of the Democracy was not yet done. National issues were not concerned in the present New York campaign.

If we fail to obtain a majority in the Empire state, no matter upon what issue it is lost, and no matter how much our opponents may seek to avoid a verdict against them, it will be acclaimed as the verdict of our people against the principles and platform of the national Democracy.

Mr. Cleveland said he did not fear to discuss the state issues, but he did not believe it well for the United States for the national issues to be Republicans who feared to discuss them and who were now striving hard to hide their identity in a cloud of dust raised by their iteration of irrelevant things." Every consistent and thoughtful Democrat should engage zealously in the campaign and support the ticket. The men nominated, he said, were abundantly worthy and deserving of support on their own merits and for their name sake. Concerning Hon. Roswell P. Flower, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, Mr. Cleveland said:

We seek his place in the head of our state government a man of affairs, who in a long business career has earned the good opinion and respect of all his fellows whose knowledge and trustworthiness have never been impeached, and who I am sure will administer the great office to which he will be called independently, fearlessly and for the good of all the people of the state.

In conclusion Mr. Cleveland said the result could not be doubtful. He made no reference whatever to the issue of reform city governments as outlined by Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, the Republican candidate, in his attack on Tammany Hall.

Cleveland and Hill Shake Hands.

In making his appearance Mr. Cleveland was enthusiastically cheered and then the women present joined the male members of the great audience in a tremendous shout for Mr. Cleveland. Three cheers were given for the ex-president at the close of his remarks, and then he introduced Governor Hill in the following words:

"I suppose I am now about to perform a work of supererogation. I can only say to you Governor Hill is here."

As the handsome governor came forward he shook hands with Mr. Cleveland, arousing great applause. Then some one shouted, "Three times three for Hill." Then which were given with a tiger. Governor Hill then addressed the meeting, as follows:

Governor Hill's Speech.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND FELLOW CITIZENS—I appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me by inviting me to be present and speak to you. Especially do I appreciate the honor of speaking in the presence of the distinguished president of this meeting—(cheers), who has honored me and honored the state by his presence.

The political conventions have been held and the issues of the present campaign are now ascertained. They do not differ materially from those of 1888. The same issues are presented—in dealing with the questions of the hour—between political honesty on the one hand and political hypocrisy on the other.

The same struggle exists between those who favor taxation for public purposes and those who justify it for private purposes. Between legislation for the people and legislation for individuals. Between a tariff for revenue and a tariff for plunder. Between a tariff for revenue and a tariff for robbery. Between the friends of a constitutional homestead and the friends of mortgage and federal organization between state autonomy and federal centralization between state control of domestic affairs and federal interference as exemplified in a force bill. The same controversy is at hand between home rule for municipalities and legislative interference between manhood suffrage and a restricted suffrage between freedom of action and legislative license; between personal liberty and unreasonable constabulary legislation; between free ballot and fair count; between the rights of the states and the powers of the general government and their regulations; between economy and extravagance; between equality and privilege; between equal rights for all and special rights for the few, one side and Republicans and plutocracy on the other. These are the issues, simple and unmistakable which are presented for the consideration of the people.

The governor went on to show that the McKinley bill and the Lodge federal election bill were still supported by Republicans in spite of a rebuke at the polls. If the former measure he said:

The McKinley bill has not relieved the country, nor has it benefited it. It has imposed additional burdens upon the people for the benefit of favored interests. It has created no new markets for our products. It has not raised the wages of a single laboring man. It is objectionable in time, among other things, it proceeds upon the theory of the right to tax the people for private, as well as public, purposes.

Not a Free Trade Party.

The speaker repudiated the idea that the Democracy favored free trade.

We do not believe that the revenues shall be raised than are necessary for the support of the government, economically administered.

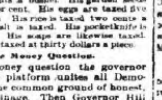
He said that the effect of the new tariff on the poor man thus:

The poor man's pipe is taxed. His umbrella is taxed 50 per cent. His gloves and mittens are taxed. His oatmeal is taxed one cent a pound. Oatmeal is taxed twenty cents a bushel. His woolens and woolens are taxed 40 per cent. His raiment. The coke which he may burn is taxed 30 per cent. His carpets are taxed 50 per cent. His salt is taxed 20 per cent. His blankets are heavily taxed. His stockings, trousers and shirts are taxed. His slippers 15 per cent. His coals a gallon. His starch is taxed at two cents a pound. His potatoes are taxed twenty five cents a bushel. His garden seeds are taxed 30 per cent. His eggs are taxed five cents a dozen. His rice is taxed two cents a pound. His tea is taxed. His coffee is nearly taxed. His soaps are likewise taxed. His horses are taxed at thirty dollars a piece.

The Free Coinage Question.

On the money question the governor said that the platform outlines all Democrats upon the common ground of honest, unadulterated coinage. Then Governor Hill went into the World's fair question. He directly charged Mr. Platt and Mr. Fassett with responsibility for the loss of the fair; and declared that Republican senators had been speculating in Chicago real estate, and read a deed in which certain such property was transferred to Commodore P. Vedder and Hon. Z. Ervin. He eulogized the work of Mr. Flower in congress on behalf of the interests of New York.

After flatly denying the charge of Mr. Fassett that the tax money had been placed in favorite banks on low interest to secure Democratic campaign contributions, and after rebuking the failure of Republicans to pass a new apportionment bill and provide for a constitutional convention, the governor paid tributes to Mr. Flower and Mr. Sheehan. For half an hour those on the platform crowded about Mr. Cleveland and Governor Hill and kept their hands in an almost unbroken grasp. Every body asked about the baby.



BRIDESMAIDS AND PAGES.

Picturesque effects are gained at modern weddings by the employment of youthful bridesmaids and pages. At a recent brilliant affair there were six bridesmaids and two pages. The latter were tiny boys of some five years of age. They were dressed in white satin knee pants, with cutaway coats and lace ruffles, feathered hats and buckled shoes.

Two small bridesmaids wore full dresses of white China silk, smocked at the waists, and Kate Greenaway bonnets. The grown up young ladies were attired in white brocade, with gold and white waistcoats and Empire Gainsbor. A JUVENILE BRIDESMAID ough hats trimmed with feathers and gold ribbon. The bride's dress was of ivory white satin, draped with rare old lace.

The young bridesmaid depicted in our cut wears, in place of a picturesque bonnet or hat, a wreath of tiny forget-me-nots and a tulle veil. Her dress is of ivory silk, with chiffon frills around the neck and bottom of the skirt. This toilet is enhanced by the decorative bunches of flowers carried by the little aspirant to distinction in fash lonable life.

M'KINLEY AND CAMPBELL

They Meet in Joint Debate at Ada, Ohio.

LUNCHING AT THE SAME TABLE.

A Novel Feature of the Hot Campaign in the Buckeye State—Each Candidate for Governor Pours a Broadside Into His Listening Opponent—Both Cheered

ADA, O., Oct. 9.—One of the strangest fights of the present campaign in Ohio was that of Hon. William McKinley, Jr., and Governor James E. Campbell, opponents in the gubernatorial fight, sitting together at lunch at the table of Professor Lehr, where they broke bread together although the very best of friends personally and politically. Both the candidates were in Ada to hold their joint debate on the issues of the day, and both were entertained by Professor Lehr, a Democrat. Each candidate received a royal welcome from his political admirers. The McKinley men wore tin badges, carried tin walking sticks, swung tin cans and blew tin horns, while even their flapjoles were of the same material. Just as noticeable was a neat little white silk badge that was proudly displayed by nine-tenths of the women and a good many of the men. Over the picture of Governor Campbell was the inscription, "Our Candidate," and below this significant text: "American wool twenty-four cents on account of the McKinley bill."

The Joint Debate.

Benches enough to seat 15,000 people had been provided at the grounds. There were two chairmen, Dr. J. M. Van Vleet acting for the governor and James C. Howe acting for Major McKinley. Governor Campbell was to have the opening of one hour and a half, then Major McKinley the second speech, one and a half hours, and his opponent the final hour. Chairman Van Vleet asked each side to vie with the other in the matter of applause. He called and introduced Governor Campbell as the fearless leader of the Ohio Democracy. The governor made such a vivid word attack on protection, saying that he was there to protest against the crimes committed in its name. Continuing he said:

Protection is a fraud—a fraud on the many to enrich the few. It makes the few rich and the many poor. It is the parent of trusts and monopolies. It is the enemy of the poor and produces a reduction of the wages of workingmen and women. Our foreign commerce has been swept from the seas and our once great commerce has been abandoned, and in their stead the British flag and made a speech supporting Mr. Fassett for governor and Mr. Vrooman for lieutenant governor.

Abbett for United States Senator.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 9.—In the Hudson county Democratic convention Congressman McDonald was renominated by acclamation. The resolutions declared the McKinley bill a stumbling block to the material prosperity of the country, having been passed as a payment to the men who contributed to the corruption fund which debauched the presidential contest in 1888." Governor Abbett was indorsed for United States senator. Corporation Attorney was nominated to fill the vacancy in the state senate.

The President Refused.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—W. H. Barker, the chairman of the Republican executive committee, has been trying for some time to get permission for the New Yorkers who are employed under the government in this city to go home to vote without losing the time so lost counted against them. The president has positively refused to make the concession.

General Hasted Renominated.

PINE BRIDGE, N. Y., Oct. 9.—James W. Husted was renominated for the Assembly by the Third assembly district Republican convention.

Detective O'Malley Goes Free.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9.—The indictment against Dominick O'Malley, the detective, who shot and killed Antonio Vetters and Incection with the trial of the Italians accused of the murder of Chief of Police Hennessy, has been abandoned by the state for the reason that there was not sufficient evidence in possession of the state.

Sir James Fergusson Elected.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson (Conservative) has been elected in North East Manchester by a vote of 4,098 to a vote of 3,908 for C. P. Scott, the Liberal candidate.

PARNELL'S DYING WORDS

He Sent His Love to Ireland's People.

THE FUNERAL WILL BE PUBLIC.

No Post Mortem Examination Will Be Held, It Is Now Said—T. P. O'Connor Says That Parnell Was Once Jilted by a Society Belle in America.

BRIGHTON, Oct. 9.—After giving the subject considerable deliberation the medical authorities have decided to forego the proposed post mortem examination. Dr. Gowers and two other physicians carefully examined the body before it was deposited in the coffin and they agreed that there was no necessity for an examination. The remains have undergone a rapid change—so rapid, indeed, that it has been found advisable to close the shell.

Cause of Death.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—A dispatch from Brighton says the doctor's certificate, which has just been filed, states that Mr. Parnell's death was caused by rheumatic fever, resulting in excessive temperature and failure of the heart. A post mortem will be held. Dr. Gowers, a son of the famous specialist on nervous diseases, Dr. William Richard Gowers, F. R. S., both of whom were in attendance upon Mr. Parnell during his last sickness, in an interview today said that the death of Mr. Parnell was due to acute rheumatism and to congestion of the lungs. The elder Gowers signed the certificate of death yesterday, but he would not say anything for publication in regard to the last moments of his distinguished patient.

Reason of the Post Mortem.

The announcement of the forthcoming post mortem examination to accurately determine the cause of death has created great misgivings in certain quarters. A telegram sent to the physicians (the Drs. Gowers) asking the reason for such action elicited the following reply: "The post mortem examination will be made at our wish and with the consent of Mr. Parnell's friends. It has not been ordered." Later in the day I saw Dr. Gowers, and he said that the dissolution was as plain a case as any he ever attended.

No Public Funeral Will Be Held.

It was eventually decided at the family council that Mr. Parnell's remains shall be accorded a public funeral. The funeral ceremonies will be held at the cemetery at Glasnevin, a village about three and a half miles north of Dublin, on Sunday next. The body will arrive in Dublin on Sunday morning, and will be taken in state to the city hall, and thence the funeral will proceed. Extensive preparations have already been commenced in view of the monster demonstration which is sure to follow. At a meeting of the corporation of the city of Dublin resolutions of regret at the death of Mr. Parnell were passed, and the lord mayor and members of the corporation were empowered to attend the funeral in their robes of state.

His Last Words of Ireland.

Most of the stores throughout the leading towns of Ireland are closed out of respect for the memory of the dead leader.

During the patient's delirium, some hours before he died, he talked much of Ireland, and told what he would do for her if he lived. In a brief, lucid interval just before death he said, and they were almost his last words:

"Let my love be conveyed to my colleagues and the Irish people."

When these words were subsequently communicated to a meeting of the delegates many of them burst into tears. Messrs. Redmond and Mahony are in charge of the details of the funeral. The body will be placed in a leaden coffin.

Healy Wants a Truce.

Timothy M. Healy, probably Mr. Parnell's most bitter opponent, declined to say anything regarding politics, remarking, "As Mr. Harrington has declined to make a statement concerning the intention of his party we for our part are determined to maintain a truce for the present."

United Ireland protests against the anti-Parnellites attending the obsequies. It says that those who failed to drive Parnell to the wall ought not to sentimentalize over his grave. "Let them keep their tears for Gladstone," quotin use the article. "It is the men of Ireland who stand about the tomb of our chief."

The Paris Fund.

The members of the McCarthyite party anticipate no difficulty in obtaining early control of the Paris fund. No matter what testamentary disposition has been made of the money, they say, it will not affect the power of Mr. McCarthy in the matter.

Mrs. Parnell is still prostrated with grief, and though weak and exhausted from long watching and the terrible shock experienced, she positively refuses to partake of any food or refreshment and will only eat her daughter.

Parnell Jilted in America.

Thomas Power O'Connor, member of parliament, says he heard while in America that during the visit Mr. Parnell paid to the United States the Irish leader met at Newport one of the reigning beauties of the season; that he fell in love with and proposed marriage to her and was conditionally accepted. But she married another. Parnell felt this blow most acutely. Mr. O'Connor cites one instance of Mr. Parnell's conscious self revelation, when he said:

"You know I was jilted. The lady's marriage has been unhappy. She has been separated from her husband for some time."

Captain O'Shea Talks.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—During an interview Captain O'Shea said: "At the last conversation but one that I ever had with Parnell he assented with obvious pleasure to my suggestion that among his political friends the falsest was Dillon; the lowest, Healy and T. P. O'Connor, and the most contemptible Justin McCarthy. I have nothing to say about Parnell. It was in April, 1886, that I found him out politically. He was never a man of ideas. His was not an original mind, but he was the most perfect assimilator of other's ideas that I ever met."

ALLERTON DEFEATS NELSON.

The Two Great Stallions Meet with That Result at Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 9.—Allerton was the only horse in Grand Rapids last night and his friends roared the city. Thirty thousand people saw the famous stallion defeat Nelson, the pride of New England. The horses were driven by their respective owners, Allerton by C. W. Williams, who weighed 65, and Nelson by C. H. Nelson, weighing 170. The first heat was won by Nelson in 2:13. Allerton broke in the home stretch. In the second heat Nelson was a length ahead at the quarter, made in 33½, a trifle more at the half, covered in 1:08, and then his lead perceptibly diminished. At the distance pole they were neck and neck and Nelson began plying the whip. His hand was unsteady and the horse swerved out of the straight course, Allerton coming under the wire half a length ahead in 2:14¼.

In the third heat, coming down the homestretch Allerton passed Nelson and came under the wire two lengths ahead in 2:15. The fourth heat of the race was the prettiest heat of the race. It was neck and neck from start to finish, and a single blanket would almost have covered both horses the entire course. At the half neither seemed to be ahead, and at the third quarter no light was to be seen between them. After passing the distance pole Allerton put forth a last supreme effort, and came under the wire half a length ahead in 2:16½. The race was a match race for a $10,000 purse.

Nancy Hanks Fails.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 9.—Nancy Hanks, driven by Doble, attempted to beat Mand S's record at Fairfield afternoon, but failed. When Doble appeared with Nancy Hanks it was seen that the great mare was not looking right, and as she neared down the first time she went on a bad break, something she was never known to do before. On the third trial Doble nodded for the word. She was at the half in 1:06¾, and finished the mile in 2:11¾. Doble said he would make another effort, but the best Nancy could do after a bad break at the half was the mile in 2:13½. The judges announced that the mare had been coughing for several days and was not in racing form.

RELICS AT WASHINGTON.

The Original Epworth Bible Before the Methodist Delegates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The Methodist ecumenical conference continued its session in Washington. The chair made from two beams of the City Road chapel, the cornerstone of which was laid by John Wesley, was occupied by the presiding officer, and the original Epworth Bible lay upon the stand.

Rev. Bishop Charles H. Fowler, of San Francisco, read an essay upon the present status of Methodism in the western (American) section. "Methodism," he said, "never whipped a Quaker or burned a witch or banished a Baptist."

Rev. James Donnelly, of Newry, Ireland, said that the church was in danger from a spirit of self glory. Bishop Fowler said Methodism in a new church every two hours.

W. C. T. U. Officers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The State Women's Christian Temperance union elected officers for the ensuing year. Mrs. Hunt, first vice president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Francis W. Graham; recording secretary, Mrs. Georgiana M. Gardiner, and treasurer, Mrs. Ellen M. Tenney.

Nearly Killed by a Brood Mare.

HARTFORD, Oct. 9.—As John Edgerton, of West Hartford, was removing his colt with Wild Rake preparatory to weaning it the brood mare attacked him, caught him in the upper part of his face and tore out a piece of the flesh from the eye to the ear with her teeth. He is severely injured and may die.

No More.

The girl we knew has fled from view,
The flight we must deplore,
And lots of things she used to do
She doesn't any more.

She used to gambol on the beach
Where waters fiercely roar,
And gaze for the breakers' reach;
She doesn't any more.

She oft would list to words of love
That Herbert used to pour
Into her ear as they would rove;
She doesn't any more.

Her dress came high about her throat
Upon the pebbly shore,
But in the ballroom now you note,
It doesn't any more.

—Washington Star.

Perplexed.

She—Haven't you been standing before that glass long enough?

He—Um. Well, p'raps I have. You see I can't decide whether to wear my hair pompadour or not.—Truth.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular grower of lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

MRS. YANCY'S ESCAPADES.

Shocking Row in Disguised Smuggling.

MRS. OLIVIA YANCY.

Mrs. Olivia Yancy, charged with evasion of customs in sealskin and many other daring schemes, is badly wanted by detectives and police authorities.

Mrs. Yancy bamboozled steamship officials and customs officers, but she reached the zenith of criminal notoriety when she disappeared recently, supposedly with a fortune in precious stones.

Diamond merchants of Chicago and diamond importers of New York are equally interested in the recovery of the jewels.

Not the least interesting feature of Mrs. Yancy's devices to elude the vigilance of steamship officers was the use made of a trained bird and a Chinese boy. The outlandish-looking ornithological partner was trained until its natural intelligence was so highly developed that it could do almost everything but talk.

Mrs. Yancy's face is well known to officers of half a dozen steamships plying between Europe and the United States. She was born in Clay County, Ky., and the family name is withheld because its publication would bring shame to many distinguished Kentuckians who are her kinfolks.

The archives of the New York Police Bureau show that she made her first appearance here in 1880. She was then about thirty years old, and called herself Mrs. Olivia Yancy. This was her first assumed name, but since then she has had many fictitious titles:

In every change she put the witty world to her name and passed as a widow.

Mrs. Yancy is described as a tall, handsome brunette with a beautifully moulded form. She is a person of some cultivation, backed up by natural intelligence and indomitable courage.

Black and White Soups.

The quiet little town of Litchfield, N. Y., is agitated over a sensational elopement that occurred some weeks ago, the facts of which have just leaked out. The woman is Jennie Smith, a good looking blonde, aged 26, wife of James Smith, a well-known farmer of that place. They were married four years ago, and have two pretty children. The man is a negro, familiarly known as "Book" Smith, aged 30. He began working on the farm of James Smith last spring, and has been there all summer. His employer often drank too much, and on such occasions abused his wife. The young negro took Mrs. Smith's part, and she formed a warm attachment for him.

In the second week of August last she eloped with the negro and all trace of them was lost. Recently the deserted husband learned that they were living together in the northern part of the county, and he immediately swore out warrants charging assault in the second degree on the man and outrage of public decency on the woman.

HER OWN CHOICE.

She ran away from home to be a chorus girl a year ago.

On October 2 she ran away from the chorus to become a bride, and now Mr. J. M. Hill's "Ship Ahoy" company is just one girl short.

This little beauty, who has broken her parent's hearts and caused a manager to wonder, is Miss Carrie Coleman, daughter of General James R. Coleman, of Baltimore. She is supposed to be in New York at present, but just where no one knows.

CARRIE COLEMAN.

A year ago she became very much stage struck, and despite all her father and her friends could do she joined a light opera company.

She was to have been in Baltimore on the 3d, and the following day she was to have married an old sweetheart whom both her father and mother wished to make their son-in-law.

The thought-to-be bridegroom is a young physician, who comes from a good family and who was Carrie's fiance before she became infatuated with the footlights.

The "Ship Ahoy" company left New York September 27, and opened in Montreal, Can., the following evening.

Carrie seemed very nervous all through the performance, and when the curtain fell on the last act she hurried into her street clothes and met a young man who was waiting for her at the stage door.

When Mr. Henry McDonald, one of the principals, came out Miss Carrie and her lover asked him if he would be a witness to their marriage, and he, of course, consented, but it was late and no minister was to be found who would tie the knot, so the trio returned to the hotel without a marriage certificate.

The groom-elect, Mr. John Bridgeman a Baltimorean of some wealth, was at a loss to know what to do, but he stuck to his fair character until Oct. 2 after the performance, when they started for Jersey City and were married there.

The reason for Carrie's sudden exit from the ranks of the "Ship Ahoy" chorus was because her father had learned of her whereabouts and friends of hers had informed her that she was on his way to capture her and take her back to Baltimore in time for the wedding.

She is a Schemer.

The wickedness of an American has been cropping out in London. The wicked one is a young adventuress named May Kerwin, who was born in Philadelphia sometime over twenty years ago.

Her career has been a varied and checkered one, and her last escapade is liable to put her behind prison bars if she is caught.

A short time ago a well-known citizen of Cincinnati, who is staying in London, was robbed of nearly $1,000 by May Kerwin. She has been leading a very double life, and the citizens of Cincinnati considered her above reproach.

After the robbery he proceeded to police headquarters and accused the woman's arrest. When told that he would have to issue a summons and appear in the prosecution he withdrew his case.

May Kerwin is well known and is reputed to come from a highly respectable family.

She had received an excellent education and a splendid musical training from her parents. These, together with her handsome face and figure, fitted her for the peculiar life she led.

A few years ago she was the belle of her circle in New York, and many have cause to remember her.

During a short Summer vacation the son of a prominent Western pork-packer spent a small fortune upon her. Later on she attempted to rob a United States Senator whom she had met in Washington, and who fell into her toils. Her game in this instance was big, as she aimed at an enormous sum of money.

In many of her escapades she had a partner, one Joe Long, who was well known to the police as an expert thief.

When he was placed in the Penitentiary she disappeared, and not until a short time ago did she again come to the front.

Many people thought she was dead, but she turned up in London under an assumed name and accompanied by a negress who was deeply interested in all her mistresses' schemes.

This person is her companion in her walks, but she is sometimes seen with a person whom she addresses as "Mamma."

The Second Attempt a Success.

Last May, Eugene Petty, son of wealthy Farmer Petty of Gibson township, Pa., ran away with pretty, rosy-cheeked Olive DeLong, whose home is comparatively poor. Olive was mounted on a pretty fast horse, while Eugene had to content himself with an old bay mare, that was as fat as bunion. They had made all arrangements to be married at Great Bend, but Farmer Petty got wind of the departure, and Constable Whitney was summoned out of his plough-horses and started in pursuit. Miss DeLong saw Mr. Petty first, and she urged her lover to make the old mare go faster. Eugene did his best to keep up with Olive, but he couldn't get the old mare off her walk, and Farmer Petty overtook them on the fleeting horse. He gave Miss DeLong a piece of his mind, and then he compelled his son to turn the fat old mare about and ride home ahead of him.

Recently, however, young Petty met Miss DeLong at the county fair at Hartford, Pa. The family kept track of them for a while, but along in the afternoon Olive and Eugene gave them the slip, got lost in the crowd, and left the fair grounds for the village. Their meeting had been prearranged. Eugene Petty hired a horse and drive them to the nearest station on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, where they took a train for Syracuse. They were married there late that night, and a few days after returned to Gibson.

FROM WEALTH TO POVERTY.

Recently there has appeared in a concert garden, in Brooklyn, N. Y., a woman with a remarkably fine soprano voice. The singer is a woman whose history is so full of pathos and romance, and so true were the notes that any musician hearing them would have asked "what is that voice doing here?"

On the bills the singer appears as May Wentworth. Not many years ago May Wentworth was Miss May Clarissa Houghton, favorite child of the late Daniel S. Houghton, a wealthy ship chandler, residing in Brooklyn Heights and an accomplished daughter of wealth and fashion. To her present position she has come through circumstances such as befall few women, and after a fight such as few women could make.

When May Houghton was fifteen years old there were few wealthy horsemen in New York who did not know her. She could handle a horse like a man, and made her own selections of riding and driving animals. She was a handsome and precocious child and thoroughly self-reliant.

She met, fell in love with and married George W. Hageman, a theatrical man, when seventeen years old. Her husband was taken into partnership by his father-in-law, and they lived splendidly on Fifth avenue. When Mr. Houghton died, in 1880, he left an estate worth between $600,000 and $1,000,000. Of this amount one-third was Mrs. Hageman's share, and her husband was the custodian of her fortune. The young couple, and their little one, spent the summer at Spring Valley, N. Y. Mrs. Hageman was a member of its church there, sang in the choir, and was the leading spirit in celebrations and entertainments.

Mr. Hageman was fond of Wall street. Wall street was fond of him. By some means his wife's fortune was speedily dissipated. This came a reduction in expenses and soon thereafter the pinch of poverty.

One day Spring Valley had a sensation. Mr. Hageman had disappeared. At the same time there disappeared Miss Redding, a young woman who was a native of Spring Valley, who had been on the comic opera stage and who was home on a vacation. Everybody in Spring Valley sympathized with the deserted wife. She endeavored to make a living giving music lessons and failed at this. Then through friends she was able to send her little boy to school, and she dropped out of the little world of Spring Valley and was entirely lost sight of by her friends.

Nothing was known of her, until she appeared as a concert singer.

She is still a fine looking woman, with a vivacity of manner by which even a severity has not been able wholly to extinguish.

HOSE AGAIN.

The Interesting Ribbon They Had to Roll Back On.

"Have a good time?"

"Lovely! Did you?"

"Perfectly elegant!"

"Where'd you go?"

"To the country—the loveliest old farmhouse and the most beautiful woods. Where'd you go?"

"To the seashore."

"Yes, indeed. Had the loveliest time I ever had in all my life."

"Did you bathe?"

"Bathe! Well, I should say so! In every day once and sometimes twice."

"Did you enjoy it?"

"Oh, it was just grand!"

"Didn't you feel awfully the first time you got on a bathing suit and went out before folks?"

"Oh, yes; but one soon gets over it. How'd you like the country?"

"Oh, it was lovely!"

"Well, the seashore's beautiful too."

"Is it?"

"Yes; isn't it?"

"But it's real nice to be at home again, isn't it?"

"Oh, ever so nice."

"Home's the best place after all, isn't it?"

"Yes, it just is."

"I think so too."

"So do I."

"You're coming soon to see me?"

"Yes, real soon."

"You must."

"But don't you wait for me."

"Oh, I won't. I'm coming over real soon."

"Do! I've got lots to tell you."

"I've hundreds of things to tell you Goodby."

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

"Remember you—goodby."

"Yes—goodby."

Not Accepted.

I was sitting on the veranda of a South Carolina hotel with Colonel Golden when an old colored man came limping up the street, and the colonel called to him to come up where we were. When he arrived the colonel said:

"Uncle Jerry, I don't see you very often of late."

"No, sah. I've dun gittin slightly freebleous 'bout movin around."

"I've got a theory of the nicest little pigs you ever saw in a pen."

"Has yo'?"

"And a new lot of chickens."

"H'm!"

"Lots of sweet potatoes around now, Uncle Jerry."

"Yes, sah."

"And the boys just got the smokehouse filled up the other day."

"Dey did, eh?"

"You are a widower yet, aren't you, uncle?"

"Yes, sah—oh, yes."

"Well, I've got a mighty fine looking colored cook now, and you must come down and see her. Just drop in on us any evening."

"Fuhsel," said the old man as he vigorously scratched his head, "I would dun like to obleege you all, but I reckon I won't come."

"You won't! Why, what's the matter?"

"I was down dar one night las' spring t' ax yo'r man Bill to lend me two bits. I stepped right into a leg hole trap, an it hurs to me till I had to holler. Den yo' come out wid a lantern an a hoswip, an de way yo' did tuck it on to me beat all, honey. I believe sumthin was said 'bout a piece yo' most lyin day, an 'bout two chickens in a bag, an if I dun 'member right I didn't git outer my cabin fur 'bout fo' weeks arter dat episodious. No, kurnel, I reckon I won't come down dar. Ise mighty fond of yo', an I kin jest taste dem roast pigs and sweet 'taters, but de nigger who puts his foot into a b'ar trap twice in one yr'ar orter be dun chalked to death fur a fule!"—M. Quad in New York World.

Wouldn't Call Her "Lady."

A "handle" to one's name is often a cheap acquisition. "The clouds may drop down titles and estates," but to the mind of a sensible American such things are hardly worth seeking or using.

The late Leonard Jerome's three pretty daughters, somewhat to his grief, chose Englishmen for husbands, but though he lived abroad during the latter years of his life he remained independent and a good American to the end. In fact, he never acknowledged Lady Randolph Churchill's title, and the first visit he paid her after her marriage he astonished the flunkey at the door by asking for "Mrs. Church hill."

The cockney footman at first seemed inclined to throw the tall, amused looking American down the steps, and holding the door half open announced, indignantly, "'Er leddyship is at 'ome, but not to the likes of you."

Whereupon Jerome smiled gently, reached in the doorway, and, by a twist of his long, strong hand on the back of the footman's coat collar, twirled him round like a top.

"Now," said he, "go tell Mrs. Churchill that her daddy is down here in the parlor and wants to see her, and I'll stand in the doorway and see how fast your calves can carry you up those steps."—Youth's Companion.

Widow Mulcahey's Sudden Demise.

In a village an Irishman named Casey kept a small general store. On a very cold but clear day in winter a fellow countryman dropped in and was greeted by the storekeeper with the words:

"That's a fine day, Mr. Mooney."

"It is, Mr. Casey. What's new wid you today?"

"Sorra much I have that's new, Mr. Mooney, but mournful news. You heard of the death av Widow Mulcahey? You did? Yis—no?"

"Not a word av it, Mr. Casey, and I hope it's not true, anyway, but what disease did she die av? The neighbors 'll miss her."

"Yis, Mr. Mooney, a dacent woman was Mrs. Mulcahey. Many a yard of calico I sold her, and many a spool of thread, for whin she had the money she never spared expinse, and she always looked nate and illigant."

"Well, what did ye say she died av, Mr. Casey?"

"Well, ye see, she just went out in the yard to the pump wid a pail in her hand to get a drap of wather. She fell an the ice, struck the back of her head and walked into the house a corpse."—Harper's Magazine.

Treasurer—James K. Arnold.

Alert's Prize Carriage.

The silver parade carriage with which Alert Hose Company won the first prize at Elizabeth last Thursday, will be put on exhibition in the company's house when the trophy they won arrives.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING LAST EVENING.

Bills Paid—Water Works Question—Mr. Powell Reports on the Democratic Committee Protest, etc.

The Borough Council met last evening in an adjourned session. Mayor Place presided and Councilmen Buncle, Hegeman, Hummer, Needham, Powell and Sebring responded to roll call.

Borough Counsel Charles Reed acted as clerk pro tem in the absence of Mr. Brokaw. Not having the books Mr. Reed called the roll in a new way. He would look at each Councilman as he called the name, as much as to say, "are you here?" The gentlemen all responded affirmatively. He then reported "all present" to the Mayor, who said, "As the Council's full, please proceed." This caused a general smile.

Mr. Hegeman—"I beg to differ with you, Mr. Mayor, I am not full."

This fully provoked laughter.

Mr. Place explained, and the business of the evening proceeded.

Bills from the Edison Electric Light company for $340, and from Mr. A. M. Griffen for $16, were read and later ordered paid.

Mayor Place—"Has the Special Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps any report to make?"

Mr. Hegeman as chairman reported as follows:

To the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Your special committee, to which was referred the question of further negotiations with the Plainfield Water Supply Company, looking to the serving of a supply of water for fire purposes on more favorable terms than they offered in their original proposition, beg to state that we have conferred with the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and they express an unwillingness to alter the terms of their proposition on the ground that we are simply low hydrant rental. They further state that, if the Council feel that ten hydrants per mile is an excessive number, they are perfectly willing that we should take a fewer number, but in that case they would have to raise the rate.

In view of the urgent necessity which exists in the Borough for water for fire purposes, and from the fact that the hydrant rental offered us by the Plainfield Water Supply Company is unquestionably low as compared with other places, your committee would recommend that the Mayor and clerk be authorized to enter into a contract with the Plainfield Water Supply Company on the basis of their proposition to the Mayor and Council, that is to say, the Plainfield Water Supply Company to furnish us with ten hydrants to the mile for the seven miles of pipe they have or are about to lay, as shown on their map Exhibit A, the annual or yearly rental of fifteen dollars per year per hydrant, one-half to be paid in advance in hydrants up to April 1, 1892, at which time we are to take the full number. In case the Plainfield Water Supply Company extend their mains beyond the seven miles shown on map, then the Council to have the right to contract for any hydrants per mile as may seems best to the judgment of the Council at the same rate per hydrant per year, the contract to run for a period of ten years, from date of execution.

All of which we most respectfully submit.

(Signed) B. A. HEGEMAN, } Committee.
LEWIS A. HUMMER, }
JAMES F. BUCKLE }

Mr. Buckle then read the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the report of the special committee be received and the Mayor and Clerk be, and are, hereby authorized to execute an agreement embodying the terms and conditions mentioned in said communications with such recommendations as shall be approved by Borough Council."

Sebring—"The offer seems very reasonable, and I move that it be accepted."

Sebring—"I think the number of hydrants is more than is necessary. Later the Water Company would put in more if necessary to supply the Borough and Council so directed."

After further brief remarks by Mayor Place and others a vote was taken, all voting "aye" but Mr. Sebring, who voted "No."

Mr. Powell then read the following:—

To the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

Your Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections, to which was referred the communication received at the last sitting of your Honorable Body from certain persons signing themselves the Executive Committee of the Democratic party of the Borough of North Plainfield, begs leave to report as follows:—

The communication in question is of so abusive a character as to indicate that its real object was, not to call attention to any unwarranted action on the part of the Mayor and Council, but rather to vent the spleen of some individual whose personal, as distinguished from partisan, feelings had been injured by a failure to obtain an office which he seeks.

Viewed in its proper light the communication is not deserving, in the opinion of your Committee, of notice from this Honorable Body, but as the authors mis-stated the law in reference to the question involved in such a way as to lead the public to imagine that this Honorable Body had been guilty of violating the statutes from partisan motives, we deem it but proper to state what the real facts in the matter were.

Section 20 of the Act to regulate Elections (which section has been decided by the Attorney General to be the law for the case governing elections in the Borough of North Plainfield), provides that the Mayor and Council shall appoint four persons for each election district, and in making said appointments the persons of the political party in the majority in the Council shall appoint two of the four and the member or members of the minority party in authority shall appoint the other two, and in case the Council shall be composed unanimously of members of the majority party, then the Mayor and Council shall appoint all four, but not more than two of any one political party.

The law does not provide for the selection of the Executive Committee of either party, if any of the members of the party under this section, and the statement to the contrary effect contained in the communication in question is therefore misleading.

The fact is that one year ago your Honorable Body, out of courtesy to the Democratic Party in North Plainfield, which had no acknowledged representative in this body, requested the Democratic Executive Committee to name the gentlemen whom they would prefer to have appointed from their party as members of the Board of Registry and Elections. Either through ignorance or design one of the persons selected by them, on election day received and deposited in the ballot box a number of tickets which had been not enclosed in official envelopes and which were therefore rejected in the count as illegal ballots. It seems hardly necessary to say that if the receiving of these ballots was due to the ignorance or carelessness of the officer in question, he did not know enough to justify his appointment, while if it resulted from "double dealing" he was equally unfit for the place. It seems strange therefore that the Democratic Executive Committee should find fault with the existing upon his re-appointment, and that they should demand it in the manner adopted by their communication is simply astounding.

The three other gentlemen whom this Honorable Body were this year requested to appoint as members of the Board, all reside in one district, and as it is impossible to appoint more than two from one district, your Honorable Body was obliged to drop from the name of one of the three, and consequently they rejected the last name on the list.

Your Committee are therefore of opinion that the action taken by this Honorable Body in appointing the officers in question was entirely correct, and would recommend that a copy of this report be delivered by the Clerk to the Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Democratic Party of the Borough of North Plainfield.

T. W. POWELL, } Committee on
H. R. NEEDHAM, } Laws, Ordinances
A. HUMMER, } and Elections.

October 9th, 1891.

On motion of the report was approved and the clerk ordered to send a copy of same to the chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee.

Adjourned, 8:45.

THE SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

Celebrated by Miantonomo Tribe Last Evening.

Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, celebrated its second anniversary in the Wetumpka Lodge rooms last evening. A large audience was present and all apparently appreciated the entertainment, which consisted of music, singing, recitations, etc.

During the evening speeches were made by the Great Sachem MacDonald, and Great Chief of Records D. M. Stevens. The latter gentleman said the order of Red Men was one of the greatest and best in existence, that it had paid out over $80,000 in benefits during the past year, that there were fifteen thousand members in New Jersey alone. He also informed the audience that there was a degree that could be taken by the ladies.

Mr. S. E. Flower informed the audience that the Indians had not come there last night as enemies, but as friends.

Mr. Frank Storr took the part of the lone Indian and he acted his part well. Of course Mr. John H. Carney received his usual share of applause and sent the audience home in good humor.

At the conclusion of the entertainment the members and its friends adjourned to Caspar's Hotel, where they sat down to a bountiful collation. After they had satisfied their appetites, speeches were made by Great Sachem McDonald, District Deputy Zimmer, Great Senior Sagamore Hummer, Junior Sagamore Cunningham, Great Chief of Records Stevens, Mr. James B. Clarkson, Mr. Norman Magee, Mr. B. J. Alliban, Mr. R. E. Seaman, Mr. John H. French, Mr. W. B. Rogers and Mr. John H. Carney. At about midnight the banquet broke up very pleasantly.

The singing of the Misses Sharp and Miss Haines was especially praiseworthy.

The Plainfield, N. J., Sewerage Franchise.

[From the Engineering Record.]

Mayor Gilbert, of Plainfield, N. J., in an able message to the City Council of that place, vetoes the ordinance granting the franchise for a sewerage system, which was published in full in our issue of June 27, and there criticised. Indefiniteness in the terms of the contract, inadequate security in the form of bond, and absence of provision for engineering supervision on behalf of the city, is clearly pointed out, and the Mayor well says:

"A contract of so much importance as this should not be awarded to any party until by the most thorough investigation and study an intelligent conclusion has been reached as to the system to be introduced, and the character of the work to be performed. Until the agreement in clear and unmistakable terms as to what sewerage is to be carried off the water let it be so expressed; if we are to have disposal works, the people have a right to know what kind they are to be located, and how the sewerage is to be purified. These are very important items, and may affect the property's large district, both as to healthfulness and desirability as a place of residence. Let us know just what we are to get for our money, and then we can grant any franchise, or enter into any agreement."

This is all well enough, so far as this particular franchise is concerned, but just why Plainfield, a city not in debt, and in good credit, should not build its own sewers from the plans, and under the direction of an experienced engineer in its employ, is difficult to understand, providing the majority of its Council are intelligent and honest.

It is down should grant a sewerage franchise only when it has no alternative between getting a sewerage system in that way or not at all. When it must accept such an alternative it needs a safer contract than the one Mayor Gilbert has vetoed.

To Go in Stages.

Arrangements have been made for the Republican delegates to attend the Republican county convention, which is to be held at Clark Township next Monday. The stages will leave the corner of Park avenue and Front street at half-past one o'clock.

St. Mary's Fair.

The fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church is still in progress at St. Mary's school hall. A large audience was present last evening. The contest for the gold watch was decided in favor of Mrs. Burns, she having collected 208.

A veritable crystal palace is the elegant showroom of Dorflinger's American Cut Glass at thirty-six Murray street, New York. Rich designs for gifts,

PLANTED BEANS IN THE BULL.

The Owners Think $200 Will be Enough to Soothe Them.

Some time ago a bull wandered through a broken fence on the property of Mr. Moore, who lives about four miles from Plainfield, North-west. Whether the bull first made the gap in the fence is not known. At any rate, disregarding the notice conspicuously posted, "No trespassing," it got in, and proceeded to sample the best of the many good things Mr. Moore had planted.

Some powder and a handful of well-dried beans served as a charge, and when applied externally proved an efficacious remedy for his bullship's complaint. David said, referring to the effect of the shot, "It riled his hair up some."

Later Margaret Falconer and James Stewart, who each held a half interest in the bull, brought an action in tort and placed damages at $500.

The bull is said to be "planted," all on one side. The side not damaged by beans may feel bad at the slight. It is also a question who owns the half punctured.

The case will be tried before Justice Sperry next week, and it may then be proven whether the owners of the bull, or the bull's hair, hide or feelings, or the beans that caused the rumpus, were most injured.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

The wife of Gen. Negley has returned to her home in this city from her usual Summer outing.

Mrs. Ellis lectured in the W. C. T. U. rooms yesterday afternoon and gave an other talk to-day.

Mr. Wm. J. Leonard, formerly editor of the Central Times, has returned from a pleasant visit to Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. Charles R. Lyps and Miss Augusta Allen of this city were married by the Rev. E. C. Mulford, at his residence.

The Rev. H. Lowery, son of the Rev. Robert Lowery, D. D., will preach at the Memorial chapel at Washingtonville to-morrow evening.

Mustangs are natural saddle horses. Sometimes they are also vicious, but when properly broken and cared for, fully repay by their untiring service the attention given to them. It was said that "the rider makes the horse," so a hard heavy hand, which is usually accompanied by an awkward seat forever ruins the sensitive mouth and other good qualities of a perfect saddler. One of the many splendid saddle horses in this city is a dapple-gray mustang which is frequently ridden by its owner, Mr. Samuel McCutchen. It is a pleasure for horse-lovers simply to see him go.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Wagner's music did what Empress Frederick could not do—made Paris reconciled to letting the Germans at least live.

One hundred years ago, in September 1791, the Jews of France were first emancipated and placed on an equality, legally and civilly, with other French citizens. In the recent celebration that commemorated the event French Jews had their great happiness of participating in a long list of illustrious names—those of statesmen, authors and splendid financiers—that their race had given to the mother country in return for its enfranchisement.

Who is going to pay for all those tons of grapes the New York state board of health destroyed? After a series of experiments carefully made, after sending the results to the French vineyard men applied in similar cases, the United States agricultural department recommended all grape growers whose vines were troubled by insect pests to spray them with a certain mixture whose ingredients were given. All at once the New York board of health concluded to declare that grapes sprayed with the mixture were poisonous, although the United States agricultural department says that a man would have to eat a ton of grapes that had been sprayed eight times with the mixture before he could get a dose of poison large enough to kill him. The question now before those interested is this, Is the New York state board of health a "bigger man" than the United States agricultural department?

Louisiana and the Lottery

Speaking of the decision of the supreme court of Louisiana that the proposed lottery amendment to the state constitution has been properly enacted and must be submitted to popular vote, The Christian Union says it was against the opinion of perhaps four-fifths of the lawyers of the state.

The Christian Union remarks of the legal decision:

It is widely looked upon as a corrupt decision, and as another illustration of the grip which the lottery company still have upon every department of the state government for the next twenty-five years in case it is rechartered. It is, indeed, the recognition that the state cannot sell itself without being owned body and soul by its purchaser—that to be at last aroused the interest in money, herself as the moral sentiment, of the public against the amendment.

A million intelligent Louisianians and hundreds a year of the affluent it draws from other states—would be an almost irresistible appeal to state and national authorities to uphold the abdication of self government for the sake of government by the great gambling corporation. The experience of the last few years has indicated what this would mean. Not only in political life, but also in social life and business life, and even in church life, the power of the company has made itself felt. Churches have insisted on the munificence of the lottery company's contributions to their support and to the support of their charities. Business men have felt the significance of being reported to have offered the Catholic archbishop to pay off all the church mortgages in his diocese if he would accept the gift. To his honor, and to the honor of his church, the gift was rejected.

"Nothing Permanent but Change."

In the mechanical and industrial world nothing is so certain as that every year new inventions and methods supersede those of the year before. As steam followed horse power, so does electricity promise to supersede steam. The telegraph looked like a miracle when it was invented, and so it is a miracle of modern science. But unquestionable facts are furnished which hint at a time when even the telegraph may be replaced by something beside which it will seem cumbersome and unsatisfactory. That is thought transference direct, now acknowledged to be a fact by men of science. Will not the great Edison spring up in a not far distant day who shall invent the method of telegraphing directly from one mind to another, separated by no matter how great distances? At any rate, it is not safe to say that such inventor will not appear.

Even mankind's ideal of physical beauty changes from generation to generation. The beautiful female figure of forty years ago was one that was too fragile appropriately to hold itself erect. The head dropped meekly forward, the shoulders drooped and stooped into a curve which if seen now would stamp a woman as being rickety shouldered. Now the shoulders must be erect and squared, the back flat and the head held bravely and saucily up. The regular Grecian nose and profile have vanished in favor of the slightly tilted chin and nose tip silhouette. The girl who goes in for athletics is the one admired by all but very old fashioned people.

And now let us remember in the world of thought and opinion precisely the same changes go on. The thought revolution is one that progresses eternally. Medicine and hygiene are not the same, social and political economy are not the same, even theological beliefs are not the same as they were. Through suffering and struggle, through violence even, mankind moves steadily forward in the direction of greater, kindlier, more tolerant thought. The Twentieth century will usher in some of the most startling changes of all.

Fifty years ago there were those who believed that African slavery would exist forever. The most advanced element of fifty years ago would unevenly revenge into favorite science if he were to come back today.

The lesson? The lesson is that he who would be on the safe side must hold himself ever ready to learn new and better things. Only truth is sure, honesty generous and good will last and remain forever.

PARNELL'S BIG FUNERAL

Ireland Will Give Him a Royal Farewell.

MURDERED TO PLEASE ENGLISHMEN

That Charge Appears Upon Posters on the Walls in Cork and Has Created a Great Sensation—Chicago Irishmen Want No Enemy of Parnell for Leader.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The casket containing the remains of Mr. Parnell was conveyed from Brighton to London this morning. There was no demonstration upon the arrival of the body in this city. This is not surprising, since the day of death in London of sympathizers with the great Irishman, but simply that the Parnellite members of parliament have so arranged. At Holyhead all the Parnellite members of parliament will be present when the funeral train arrives. A number of English parliamentary colleagues of the late member for Cork city who are to be present at the interment at Glasnevin will there meet the Parnellite members of parliament, and will accompany the body to Ireland.

Ireland's Greatest Funeral.

DUBLIN, Oct. 10.—Ireland as a nation is mourning her dead. The sable emblems of sorrow are displayed in all parts of the city. The city hall is being prepared for the lying in state of the man who had dreamed of and worked for Ireland's happier future, and it is safe to say that the funeral of Mr. Parnell will be one of the great pageants in the recent history of Ireland. The city hall is draped in black and a handsome catafalque, surmounted by strong railings, has been erected in front of the O'Connell monument for the reception of the remains. The project of taking the cast of the features has been abandoned, owing to the change which has already taken place in the features of the dead mask.

The Site of the Grave.

Messrs. Kenny, Harrington, Richard Power and Dalton paid a visit to Glasnevin and selected the site for Mr. Parnell's grave. It is situated upon an inclosed mound to the left of the mortuary chapel and is in a most attractive position. The grave will be dug in the centre of the mound, and when a monument is erected over it will be conspicuous from all parts of the cemetery. Thousands of persons are already flocking to Dublin to attend the funeral and an immense crowd is expected to be present on Sunday. All the public houses will be closed.

Metcalfites Are Threatened.

The Evening Press, of this city, says it is not probable that the McCarthyite members of parliament will attend the funeral, as many of them, especially Mr. Healy, have received threats that violence will be done to them if they dare to desecrate Irish ground with their presence. Later, sensational posters have been placarded on wall's, fences and other places throughout Cork. These posters have been denounced by leaders and bear in their centers the words, together with verses denouncing the McCarthyites. The United Ireland articles; declaring that Parnell was murdered and imploring the people to remain tranquil. The posters are stirring up much excitement in the city. The Freeman's Journal and United Ireland denounce the sensational placarding of Cork as an attempt to incite disorder.

MURDERED TO PLEASE ENGLISHMEN.

Archdeacon Gillbraith, incumbent at Powers' Court, Wicklow, has been invited to officiate at Mr. Parnell's funeral, associated with Mr. Law, D.D., of Manchester, who has offered his services.

Chicago Irishmen Angry.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—At a meeting of the Confederated Irish societies last night a resolution was passed declaring it essential to any plan of union that no person prominent in the persecution of Mr. Parnell be recognized as a leader, as such person would not be acceptable to the Irish or Irish-American people. Resolutions were also adopted deploring the death of Mr. Parnell as a national calamity to Ireland, and condemning the unchristian spirit and the malignant and bitter expressions of the article on Mr. Parnell's death attributed to Archbishop Walsh.

A generous amount was collected to defray the expenses of a mass meeting to be held in memoriam of Parnell.

Parnell's Mother Very Ill.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Oct. 10.—Mrs. Parnell, mother of the late great Irish leader, has been prostrated ever since her son's death. It is feared that the blow has unbalanced her mind. In the morning she got up from her bed and in a greatly excited manner declared she was going to New York, where she would sail for Ireland to meet the body of her beloved son. She was in a highly hysterical state and a physician was hastily summoned.

Flags at Half Mast.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Municipal council, Irish National league, respectfully request all liberty loving citizens of New York to mark their sympathy for the early death of Charles Stewart Parnell by displaying their flags at half mast on the day of his funeral, Sunday, Oct. 11.

Is He Don Cameron's Nephew?

MARSHALL, Mo., Oct. 10.—Don Cameron Peterson, of Kansas City, who says he is a nephew of United States Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, has been sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. He came here for the purpose of buying a building, a railroad, and worked off forged checks for over $2,000.

Buried from a Dog Cart.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 10.—Mrs. Dr. James Neilson and Miss Elizabeth Ryerson, of New York, were thrown from a dog cart in a runaway accident here. Mrs. Palmer's skull is fractured and she is thought to be fatally injured. Miss Ryerson had both arms broken.

Big Oil Operators Fail.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 10.—A tremendous sensation was created by the report that Hart Brothers, the well known oil operators, had failed, with liabilities to the amount of over $150,000. It is stated authoritatively that the firm will pay dollar for dollar.

Blaine's Return Delayed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A special to The Mail and Express from Washington says it is stated, on authority of one of Mr. Blaine's friends, that his return to the capital will be delayed until after the November elections.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

A. B. Rich Breaks the Two Mile Bicycle Record.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 10.—The two mile bicycle record was broken by A. B. Rich, of New York, on Hampden park. He covered the distance in 4:09⅘. Zimmerman, Windle and several others acted as pacemakers. The first mile was covered in 2:25.

Close of Racing at Terre Haute.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 10.—The races ended with the best event of the week, the free-for-all race carried over, in which the fastest seven heats ever gone in a race were made. Guy finally won, defeating Roy Wilkes, Grant's Adelaide and Telegram. Time, 2:19½, 2:22¾, 2:23, 2:22, 2:21, 2:16, 2:15¾. Tom won the 2:21 trot, Walter R. the 2:18 trot, and Charleston defeated Mc Doel in the free-for-all trot; best time, 2:25¾. Del March, driven by Budd Doble, lowered his record from 2:12 to 2:11¾.

Maryland Cricketers Play Well.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—At the cricket match between Lord Hawke's England eleven and the Baltimore Cricket club's team, the Englishmen took first turn in defending the wickets. The cricketers of Maryland made a very good showing and retired the visitors with 308 runs. The Baltimoreans then began their innings and were stumped when three they had scored fifty-two runs for four wickets, with eleven batsmen to come yet.

Von der Ahe Talks.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—President Von der Ahe, of the St. Louis Baseball club, says he knows nothing of a plan being put in New York but that Brooklyn wants an Association franchise. He thinks that a 25 cent rate of admission and Sunday games will knock out the League there. Parties in Chicago are also willing to place a team there.

President Phelps' Call.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 10.—President Phelps has issued a call for a meeting of the American Association at the Wellington hotel, Chicago, on Oct. 22. Action will be taken at this meeting upon the question of placing an Association club in Chicago next year and also one in either Brooklyn or New York.

Louisville Will Remain.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 10.—The Louisville Baseball club has effected a compromise with the Mechanics' Trust company, which holds a mortgage on the club, and the franchise will not be sold at auction today. Louisville will, as usual, be represented in the diamond next year.

Pritchard Sent to Jail.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"Ted" Pritchard, the prize fighter, was sentenced to a month's hard labor today for his assault on a bartender named John Banks. Pritchard is in Holloway jail, and his friends are trying to get him out.

FASHIONS

IN WOMAN'S WORLD.

THAT WHICH IS NEW AND INTERESTING IN HER REALM.

New Fashions—New Fancies—New Fads. How Women May Become Fairer and Fairer Every Day—Fall Fabrics. Late Caprices.

That the time will ever come when the bang will be entirely cast aside does not seem likely, for the ladies whose hair had begun to grow thin about the temples, and whose heads betray Time's pathway across their crowns by an ever-widening "part," the bang offers too welcome an opportunity to hide the tell-tale evidence of years.

The bang is bound to abide with us, in some of its many forms of crimps, or round curls, or waves. The day of the flat bang that lies straight across the brow will not be acceptable to the Irish or Irish-American people. Resolutions were also adopted deploring the death of Mr. Parnell as a national calamity to Ireland, and condemning the unchristian spirit and the malignant and bitter expressions of the article on Mr. Parnell's death attributed to Archbishop Walsh.

A generous amount was collected to defray the expenses of a mass meeting to be held in memoriam of Parnell.

Pretty Dinner or House Dress.

ENTIRELY NEW IN DESIGN.

Here is a dinner dress, suitable for fancy silk, trimmed lace. Full underfront of lace, finished by a folded sash at the waist. Loose overfronts, edged ball trimming. Fit the back, with three-quarter basque. Full sleeves to elbow, finished by a frill of lace. Gored skirt, trimmed up the sleeves with the trimming, and gathered at the bottom to show a flounce of the lace. High Medici collar.

A Permanent Census Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Superintendent Porter, of the census bureau, says the question of the establishment of a permanent census bureau will be brought to the attention of congress as soon as it assembles, in compliance with a resolution of the senate.

SEARLES WILL FIGHT ON

His Lawyer Says No Compromise Has Been Proposed.

HOPKINS ASKED A POSTPONEMENT

And Searles Had Nothing to Do with the Adjournment of the Great Will Case from Friday Until Oct. 20—No Offer Made to Tim Hopkins.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 10.—By agreement of counsel it was announced in the court that the further hearing in the Searles case has been postponed to Oct. 20.

This postponement, it is thought, is a preliminary movement toward a settlement of the entire matter out of court, and the object is thought to be to gain time to consider negotiations which are said to be pending in the case.

Searles Has Made No Offer.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—Colonel Solomon Lincoln, counsel for Edward F. Searles, says that the postponement of the Searles will case was made at the request of the counsel for Tim Hopkins, one of the contestants. There is no foundation whatever for the rumor that Mr. Searles has offered to compromise with Tim Hopkins or any other contestant.

SHE DIED FOR HER FATHER.

A Brave Georgia Girl Killed by Her Lover.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 10.—Miss Lizzie Gossett, a girl of seventeen, was shot to death by her four male cousins while defending her father. She was engaged to marry one of the young men who aided in murdering her. The affair occurred near Unionville. J. C. Gossett, the father of the murdered girl, is a planter. On an adjoining farm lives his brother-in-law, Edward Thomas, who has four sons. He has had trouble for some time with the Thomas boys, J. R., J. J. R., David Boner and Jake. They took over to whip him and had him down when his daughter Lizzie, who had been out horseback riding, came up. She sprang from her horse and grasping one by the collar threw him upon his back. The flash of several pistols followed and the girl fell, with the exclamation, "Oh, Cousin David!" It was the bullet of her cousin David which had pierced her heart. The murderers fled, leaving the father and mother alone with their dead child.

An Oleomargarine Man Jailed.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—Benjamin A. Plumley was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 for the illegal sale of oleomargarine and committed to jail. He was released later on a writ of habeas corpus. This is a test case and involves the constitutionality of the act of the Massachusetts legislature which prohibits the exposure for sale of oleomargarine. It is held to be contrary to the constitution of the United States.

Switchman Leonard Knocked Out.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10.—H. Leonard, a switchman, residing at Jeannette, and James Dewyer, an Englishman, fought thirty-seven rounds to a finish for $250 a side. The fight took place a few miles from Pittsburg and was under London prize ring rules, with skintight gloves. Leonard never yielded until overcome by exhaustion in the thirty-seventh round.

Trouble in British Honduras.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 10.—Advices from Panama are to the effect that government affairs in British Honduras are in a troublous condition. After a protracted struggle between the government and the popular element of the legislature, the representatives vacated their seats in a body. Matters have been placed before the British government for settlement.

The Bridgeport Police Trouble Settled.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 10.—Judge I. B. Hall has dissolved the temporary injunction secured by Ryland against Captain Pinkerton, of the police, and Commissioners Grant and Fisher. The common council abolished the office of chief of police and put the captain in charge. Judge Hall decides that the office of chief of police no longer exists.

An Indianapolis Girl's Suicide.

Stanley Sails for Australia.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Sir and Mrs. Henry M. Stanley, Mrs. Stanley and Mrs. Tennant, mother of Mrs. Stanley, started for Australia. Mr. Stanley is still lame as the result of his recent accident in Switzerland, and is compelled to use a stick and crutch in walking.

A Babe's Terrible Fate.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 10.—Mary Soggin of 93 Eleventh street, went out leaving her seventeen months old child Mary on the floor. When she returned she found that the child had crept to the stove and set fire to her clothing. The infant was horribly burned and died.

But One Presiding Elder.

READING, Pa., Oct. 10.—The East Pennsylvania United Brethren conference has decided to have but one presiding elder, instead of two. The annual camp meeting will be held at Mount Gretna. This is the ninety-second annual meeting of the conference.

Bernhardt in Her New Play.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Sarah Bernhardt appeared last night in the new play "Pauline Blanchard," written for her by M. Dormont, of her own company. It is a tragic drama in six acts and deals with Burgundian peasant life.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

General Grubb Talks in Independence Square.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 10.—The Republican club of Newark gave a reception to General R. Bird Grubb, United States minister to Spain, last night. General Grubb said: "A diplomat cannot say all he wants to say or I would about this land. I am one of the most rigstaving Republican speeches I ever made in my life. In looking at your banners I see that it is only necessary to go out of this country to appreciate the fact that you are an American and a Republican. I was your standard bearer a few years ago and now I am your diplomat in Spain. We have obtained from Spain what other nations would have fought for by simply wielding the sword of science, viz., the opening of that great market, the value of which will exceed $1,000,000 per month for this country.

"This is a proud moment for me to face you and say that I helped to do it. It was intercepted by Mr. Blaine—[cheers]—and carried out with the greatest care and firmness by President Harrison.

"I don't want to talk to you," continued General Grubb, "about Jersey politics. I cannot help saying to you, 'Boys, go in and win.' Take off your coats. You have now the best chance you have ever had since the last Republican candidate for mayor was defeated. You could not possibly have a better candidate than Herman Lehlbach. Remember that I am always with you, and whoever you select for an office, be it that of pound keeper or governor, I shall always support him."

Fassett Issues a Challenge.

OLEAN, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Candidate Fassett, in a speech in Olean last night, replies to Governor Hill's Cooper Union speech. Mr. Fassett repeated his arraignment of ex-President Cleveland for vetoing the bill giving back to the different states the money loaned in war times, and he eulogized President Harrison for signing a similar bill. He declared that Governor Hill and the Democrats were arrayed against this bill, but when it did finally become a law Governor Hill was the first one to take advantage of it.

When he was about to take his seat some one from the gallery asked, "How about the World's fair in Chicago?"

This placed Mr. Fassett on his mettle. He actually advanced to the footlights and very earnestly spoke as follows:

"I want to say to the coward who lurks in the shadow that the World's fair is located in Chicago by Democratic votes in congress. I want to say to the people here assembled that the World's fair bill at Albany passed both houses of state and assembly without a dissenting vote.

"I challenge any Democrat to meet me on any platform to discuss with me the World's fair question.

When Mr. Fassett resumed his seat the large hall rang with cheers.

Fassett at Jamestown.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Mr. Fassett addressed a large audience in this city, which is the home of Ansley, the Republican candidate for controller. In referring to Mr. Cleveland's speech at Cooper Union, Mr. Fassett said:

"What will be known in history as a speech more remarkable for what it omitted than for what it contained. I notice what he said in introducing Governor Hill, and this is the first time in which the president of the meeting pronounced upon his most merciless political foe. I suppose I am now about to perform a work of supererogation, but I only say to you that Governor Hill is here."

Mr. Fassett read an extract on the silver question, and said he would in a national campaign be glad to meet Governor Hill in a public discussion on this question.

Governor Hill to Speak in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Oct. 10.—The Hon. William F. Sheehan has received a telegram from Governor Hill in which he said that he would speak in Buffalo on Tuesday and speak in Music hall.

HER UNKNOWN ADMIRER

Carpenter Macallar's Love for a Fifth Avenue Girl.

DELUGED BY A FLOOD OF LETTERS.

After Miss Downing Had Received About a Hundred Tender but Badly Spelled Missives Her Brother Hired a Detective to Catch the Author.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—For nearly six months Miss Nathalie Downing, of 893 Fifth avenue, has been besieged by an inveterate and affectionate letter writer. His epistles were written in the tenderest language, and "darling" and "dearest" were the most ordinary terms of endearment used. Who the persistent writer could be neither Miss Downing nor any member of her household had the slightest idea. Some of the letters were signed with the name "Hugh Macallar," but the majority terminated in a cross. The letters were usually written on cheap blue lined white paper, with a pencil.

He Called Her "Jewnie," Too.

In her home Miss Nathalie Downing is called Jennie. She is twenty-five years old, tall, and of good figure. The first letter arrived in the early part of last May, and more than a score followed before the family left the city early in June for Saratoga. Somehow this Hugh Macallar learned of their departure, and all summer long letters came to the house every week, with the request, "Please forward to Jennie," written on the envelope. When thirty or forty of the letters had been received Miss Downing's brother, Augustus C. Downing, notified the police.

Then He Called.

Some of the letters made appointments and Detective Downing tried to induce Miss Downing to keep one when he would be present to arrest the man, but she would not consent to do so. About two weeks ago a strange man rang the doorbell at the Downing residence and inquired if Miss Jennie was in. When told "No," he left his card, saying he would call again. When Miss Downing saw the card a few hours later she was more startled than ever, for it bore the name "Hugh Macallar," in clear black script. Three days later he called again and was arrested.

He Had a Wife.

Macallar is a cadaverous looking man, forty years old. He wears a long, iron gray beard and a mustache, and his eyes have a vacant stare. He lives with his wife and children at 420 East Fourteenth street. The hearing took place in the judge's private room. Miss Nathalie Downing, her eldest sister, Augustus C. Downing and the domestic, Elise Kemple, came to court. Mr. Downing carried a good sized package done up in brown paper. It contained all the love letters sent to the house for the last six months and there were about 100 of them. Mrs. Macallar was also in the room. She was dressed in black and plainly showed that she felt her husband's disgrace. She said the letters were in his handwriting.

He Was a Carpenter.

Miss Downing told how she had been annoyed. When she heard that she would have to appear in another court against the prisoner she gave a little jump. She gave another little jump when the prisoner told the judge that he was a carpenter. Justice McMahon held the prisoner in $500 bail for the general sessions. After the hearing both Miss Downing and her brother said that they had no desire to prosecute the man if he would promise to cease his attentions. He does not appear insane. His wife says that he has occasionally acted in a peculiar manner, but has generally been a steady working man and gave no cause for anxiety.

An Election Bully Punished.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Oct. 10.—In the United States district court at Abingdon Jack Mullins, convicted of intimidating voters at the last presidential election, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $500. This is the first conviction in Virginia under the special laws for the protection of the elective franchise.

MISS RUTH CLEVELAND.

That Is the Name of the Ex-President's Daughter.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Ex-President Cleveland said in answer to an inquiry regarding the name of the newcomer in his house: "We have settled on a name, and it is Ruth. This was the name of Mrs. Cleveland's grandmother, and has always been especially liked by her."

He said further: "In connection with the publication of this item, which I hope will end much apparent curiosity on the subject, I desire especially that mention be made of the extreme and kindly interest in us and our child shown by good people everywhere throughout the country. We have received many most sensible congratulations and kind remembrances. From the president of the United States and from many a humble citizen have come heartfelt felicitations. All this has been very gratifying and has been fully appreciated, but since it will be impossible to acknowledge all these messages separately, I hope this public recognition will be accepted as sufficient."

They Drank Poisoned Liquor.

BURGETTSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 10.—Three hostelers at the county fair grounds found a bottle of liquor which had been hidden near one of the buildings. The men almost drained the bottle of its contents. The result was that Alexander Chapple was seized with convulsions and died in two hours. The other two are at the point of death. An analysis of the liquid remaining in the bottle showed strychnine, whisky and alcohol.

Jay Gould Denies a Report.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Jay Gould said there was no truth in the published statement that he had refused to attend a meeting of the Western Traffic Association at Jay Gould's house in Chicago or to send a representative to it. "Of course I could not take so long a trip just now, and Mr. Clark was detained in New York by important unexpected engagements. The association is running smoothly so far as I know."

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired one lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
WM. MCCANN,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HALL, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOS. CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to merit each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

ICELAND.

Some Facts About This Interesting Country Told by a Lady Traveler.

Norse is the language of the scenery. It is pure old Norwegian. As Scandinavia Icelandic is taught in the schools as a classic, and every Scandinavian student has read some of the Icelandic sagas, the greater part of which he understands from the similarity to his own tongue.

Iceland today is far behind civilization. "It is a peep into the past to find living people grinding corn with the same kind of huge stones as in the ancient world, weaving their own clothing and linen in hand looms, and churning butter in the tall, old fashioned churns worked by pulling a rod up and down by hand. Money is of little value, barter reigns, the chief means for the exchange of goods.

There is no telegraphic communication with the island, and during the six months of the year it is locked in. The Icelanders are entirely cut off from the outside world. They are so left to their own occupations during the winter's darkness and seclusion reaches a very high standard. Every one in the island can read and write, and many of the peasants understand another language besides their own, although many well known works have been translated into Icelandic.

From May to September there is no night in Iceland, and the midnight sun is visible during July and August. Normal daylight sounds charming, but trying to sleep in a tent in the light of day is not so charming in practice. The nights, or nights of the moon, of stars, makes the constant light very monotonous and trying, but nothing to what on normal length of darkness must be to the poor natives.

Men always kiss when they meet, but I only once saw a man kiss a woman. Up country one takes off the hat and takes off the cap to any one they may meet on the lonely path and wishes them godspeed on their way. They are polite, but they rarely smile.

Walking is impossible, the lava and scoria are too hard for the feet and the distances too great. The saddle always side, and the women generally ride astride.

Character Reading.

Those learned in palmistry and kindred sciences tell us that when a person grasps, so to speak, boneless hand, a hand which appears to crumple up in your own, a hand with no apparent vitality in it, is bereave of its owner, and that the soft and firm-to-the-touch hand is only possessed by an honest man. They also assert that a thick, cord hand is a sure sign of obstinacy and deceit in its owner. They tell you that long fingered, double jointed people cannot be sincere if they try. Another authority avers that if you want to know what sort of person you are, examine your nose critically in the glass. People of Iberian descent breathe fully and freely. All the Celtic animals have dilated nostrils. The sloping nostril shows a hysterical talent. Under the nose also droops it denotes a tragedy queen, and if only the nostrils are expanding it is marked for the interpretation of comedy. Where the nose is thin at the bridge it shows generosity; while a nose that is thick at the bridge argues a meanness. When it is "tip tilted like the petal of a flower" the person is inquisitive. A projecting nose argues a disposition to investigate. It is found of the person, as it were, and wants to send out things.

The Banner of Joan of Arc.

In the illustration is shown a correct facsimile of the famous banner which Joan of Arc unfurled many a battlefield and carried at the coronation of Charles XII.

The original, painted on white silk, is preserved in the cathedral of Orleans and displayed once a year at the May festivities. Time not having respected the much prized relic, it became necessary to save it from entire oblivion by embroidering a copy of it before the original had fallen to pieces beyond recognition. This task was undertaken and carried out by some ladies of Orleans. The design represents "Our Lord" sitting on clouds against the rainbow—the taken of his covenant—while at his feet are two angels in adoration, one holding the heraldic fleur-de-lis. Lower down Celestes trascein endevia holy monogrems, while lilies fill the peak of the famous banner.

One's Vocabulary.

From data at hand a correspondent of Science estimated the vocabulary of a citizen of the United States with a common school education and of ordinary intelligence and reading at about 10,000 words, and that of a well read college graduate, and of those who have pursued a university course, at from 20,000 upward to perhaps 100,000. One's vocabulary is usually nearly complete at thirty years of age. If but two words are learned each day the vocabulary at that age would be only 20,000. Records show that young children acquire new words more rapidly than that.

Cleopatra's Pearls.

Convincing proof of the ability of the ancients in chemistry is the experiment with which Cleopatra entertained Aglony by dissolving before him, in a kind of vinegar, a pearl of very great value (about £45,450 sterling). As present we know of no vinegar that can produce this effect; but the fact is well attested. Probably the queen added something to the vinegar, omitted by the historian.—Hone's Everyday Book.

THE DEATH WATCH.

The Little Insect Which Gives Needless Uneasiness to the Superstitious.

The little insect shown in the accompanying engraving is the Anobium tessellatum, commonly known as the "Death Watch," from the ticking sound which it makes when calling to its mate. Superstitious persons oftentimes give themselves needless uneasiness when listening to these sounds, from an old belief that they foretell the approach of death. But the only real harm that can be charged to the Anobium is the perforation of wood, furniture, etc., which has given him in France the popular name of the "Gimlet."

THE "DEATH WATCH," OR "GIMLET."

In the larval state (3, 4) the insect lives in wood, boring through the interior, and showing no signs of its presence. It is finally converted into a chrysalis, and after a few weeks the perfect insect (1, 2) appears, and makes its exit from the wood through a round hole, sometimes in such numbers that the wood is completely honeycombed and destroyed (5). The characteristic ticking noise is made by the insect balancing itself upon its hind feet, and with a sort of sesame movement striking the object upon which it is standing with the antennæ and forehead, although the regular ticking noise, when heard in a sick chamber at night, has rather a weird effect, it is only the call of a harmless little insect, and much less to be dreaded than the peremptory hum of a hungry mosquito.

Another species, the A. pertinax, receives its name from the pertinacity with which it simulates death when captured, and will allow itself to be plunged into water, alcohol, or even to be burned alive, without showing any signs of life. The illustration shows the perfect insect, also the larva, both in magnified and in natural sizes. The species originally in La Nature, and was described in a recent issue of Popular Science News.

Soldering Glass to Metal.

The Manufacturers' Gazette describes a new method, invented by a Frenchman, for soldering glass to any metal that will take solder. The glass is slightly warmed, and to it is applied by means of a brush a quantity of neutral chloride of platinum and alcohol oil of chamomile, the glass having been previously covered by a thin coating of platinum. The oil slowly evaporating emits a pungent, white vapor, which, having penetrated the pores, affects it, made subject to a red heat, and reducing the platinum leaves a thin layer of metal on it. The plated glass is then treated to a bath in nitrate of copper, and the soldering connected with the negative pole of a sufficiently strong battery, when a coating of copper is deposited so thick and strong upon the platinum, rendering it suitable to be worked in any way and can be treated as metal in the soldering. The durability and tenacity of the article subject to this treatment is said to be truly wonderful, and is applied more to the uniting of glass tubes to metal than in any instance.

A Clock as a Gunner.

At Halifax, N. S., a signal gun is fired from the citadel each day at noon and at 9:30 p. m. The Horological Review explains that a cable has been laid from a clockmaker's establishment to the citadel, and is connected with a clock which automatically fires the gun. The dial of the astronomical clock has two small receptacles containing mercury. One of these is so placed that the reverse end of the record hand will touch the mercury when the index end points to the sixtieth second. When the minute hand touches the one receptacle and the second hand touches the other the circuit is completed, and the big gun at the citadel is discharged by an electric current passing through the clock.

Primitive Ways of Starting Fire.

The Cochin China people strike two pieces of bamboo together and ignite tinder. The coating of amorphous, siliceous flint on the surface of the bamboo yields a spark at a sharp blow. A traveler tells that the Jungles are frequently fired by the excessive friction of the luminous during a gale. The Tongo and British North Borneo and the Ternate Malays carry attached to the girdle a joint of bamboo, often finely carved, containing tinder and a fragment of pounded lain. The bit of china with tinder is held in one hand and struck against the bamboo tinder horn held in the other, generally getting a light at the first blow.

The Best Method of Cleaning Brass.

The method prescribed for cleaning brass in United States arsenals is to make a mixture of one part common nitric acid and one-half part sulphuric acid in a stone jar, having also ready a pail of fresh water and a box of sawdust. The articles to be treated are dipped into the acid, then thrown into the water and finally rubbed with sawdust. This immediately changes them into a brilliant color. If the brass has become greasy if is first dipped into a strong solution of potash and soda in warm water; this cuts the grease, so that the acid has full power to act. This plan is said to be the best in the world.

The Latest Wrinkle in Welding.

The Iron Trade Review tells of a new welding method which refers principally to lap welds for joining the ends of band saws, plates and flues, and the manufacture of water pipes, boiler shells and the like. The process consists in first forming holes in one of the parts to be united so that, when the parts are heated and welded by any convenient means, a portion of the metal of the other part will be forced into said holes, strengthening the joint. In modifications to the process both the parts to be welded, and in some cases these holes are made to coincide and pins or rivets are

THE HOUSEHOLD.

ARTICLES ARTISTIC AND USEFUL.

A New Idea in Baby Baskets—Sachets and Decorative Spreads.

Pretty bed spreads of white or cream linen show a delicate powdering in cross stitch, worked in blue cottons. Another style is decorated with a band in red cross stitch and shows a huge monogram in the center.

Swinging garlands of flowers made on ropes and caught up into knots and bows are the newest fad in floral house decoration for weddings, etc.

Lace squares are made into a rich and pretty table cover by putting alternately with the lace a square of écru silk the same size as the lace square and embroidering a design in each square.

A new idea is that of a basket especially prepared to carry a tiny baby about the house in. A large oblong wicker basket, with a handle across it, is well padded throughout the inside and a little pillow is fastened at one end. The lining can be as dainty as one likes—silk, with a lace flounce around the edge, perhaps, and the handle is wound with ribbon tied in a bow on the top of it.

Night dress sachets are made of oblong form with one corner turning down to show a colored lining. They are generally made of some soft silk or linen and are embroidered with a monogram.

How to Make a Kitchen Sewer.

In answer to the questions: How can I construct a sewer to carry away the waste water from a kitchen? What size of tile should be used, and how should the air trap be arranged in the kitchen to shut off foul air? The Rural New Yorker answers:

For the kitchen sink and the washing an earthen pipe at least three inches in diameter should be used, with a lead pipe from the house nor less than 1½ inch in diameter. The trap used is an important matter, not only for its effectiveness in preventing a back flow of air, but for the purpose of cleaning it occasionally. Grease, shreds and fibers of different kinds will gather in it, and these must be removed at intervals.

A well constructed trap is indispensable and is shown in the accompanying figure. It is attached to every pipe in the house, the sink, wash basins, etc. It has a sewer opening, as shown, which affords means for removing obstructions. The trap may be kept free from grease by filling it at night with a hot solution of concentrated lye and flushing with hot water in the morning. A trap of the same material as the drain pipe is fitted half way down as an additional security. The drain may have its outlet in a convenient place where the waste water may be absorbed by some suitable material, which should be removed at short intervals. It is often the case that a drain like this, while it conveniently removes the household wastes, really makes the nuisance worse by making a collection of them that is neglected, and thus the drain may become a worse evil than that which it is intended to remove. In laying the drain the fall should be as great as may be possible, and the outlet should be as far from the dwelling as it can be.

A German Dish.

Peel some apples (six moderate sized ones) and cut them up in small, thin slices. Make a tablespoonful of butter hot in a stewpan, put in the apples and leave them covered to steam until clear and tender. Then stir into them a batter made in the following proportions: One pint of flour, the yolks and whites of four eggs, half teaspoonful of salt, a teacup of sugar. Cover the pan and let it stay over the fire until a nice brown crust has formed at the bottom. As soon as this is the case break it up with a two pronged iron fork and let it set and brown again; then break it up smaller by tearing it lightly apart and serve it without delay.

Green Corn Fritters.

To prepare green corn fritters, after removing the silk from a dozen ears of nice green corn, grate them and scrape the cobs, being careful to obtain the milk and pulp without the husk. Add the yolks of three well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of good butter, one cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls of sifted flour, with a little salt. Stir in the stiff white of three eggs and bake on a well heated griddle that is fastened at one end. The lining can be as dainty as one likes—silk, with a lace flounce around the edge, perhaps, and the handle is wound with ribbon tied in a bow on the top of it.

Lemon Sponge.

Dissolve two ounces of gelatine in barely two pints of water and boil it for twelve or fifteen minutes with three-quarters of a pound of powdered sugar, the juice of one and the rind of three lemons. Strain it, set it aside until cold and it begins to stiffen; then whisk into the mixture the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, continuing to whip it until the mixture is quite white and frothy. Now pack it into a wetted mold and let it set, when it can be turned out and decorated with preserved fruit, etc.

Peach Batter Pudding.

Peach batter pudding may be made with one pint of milk, four well beaten eggs, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Pare the peaches and cut in quarters, sprinkle them with sugar and put in a baking dish until half full, then pour the batter over them and bake; eat with cream and sugar or any sweet sauce.

Cheese Toast.

Melt some nicely grated cheese over the fire with a little cream. Toast slices of bread, butter them and dip into the cheese, then lay two slices of the bread together; arrange upon a platter, put it into the oven for a few moments and serve while hot.

Household Hints.

Use washing soda in boiling water to remove green stains from your brick walk.

Moist tea leaves will stain a very light colored carpet; use them only on dark colors.

Clean waxed floors by washing off with turpentine or benzine and rewax when necessary.

To remove a glass stopper from a bottle, try putting a drop of sweet oil or glycerine in the crevice around the stopper.

Before attempting to whip cream take the precaution to thoroughly chill it by putting it upon ice; then with a cream of good quality there will be no trouble in making it stiff. Any good egg beater may be used for the purpose.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 75, G. A. R., will hold a regular encampment to-morrow evening.

—This sudden change in the weather gives "the oldest inhabitant" a chance to do some "tall lyin'."

—A number of wheelmen from this city visited Riverside Park, N. Y., on their wheels, yesterday.

—The bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. will begin to bowl on the Olympia alleys to-morrow evening.

—Several interesting trotting events took place on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday afternoon.

—A man named Allen was fined five dollars in the city court this morning. The charge against him was drunkenness.

—Mr. Walter Limbarger has opened a merchant tailoring establishment on Park avenue and requests the patronage of his friends.

—To-day is what is known in Hebrew circles as the Day of Atonement. It is being generally observed by the Israelites of this city.

—The Rahway firemen are indulging in their annual parade this afternoon. A number of Plainfielders went to Rahway to witness it.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association have something to say about coffee, butter, etc. Read their interesting advertisement.

—The Republican delegates left in octagon this afternoon to attend the Assembly Convention which is being held in Clark Township.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—At a meeting of the Fourth Ward Election Board held Friday evening Mr. V. L. Frazee was elected chairman and Mr. W. S. Angleman clerk.

—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Court House in Somerville to-morrow afternoon.

—Book-keeping and mechanical drawing classes will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. to-night. The former will be taught by Mr. G. Q. Packer and the latter by Messrs. A. J. Gavett, Civil Engineer, and Frank Leland, of the Pond Tool Works. $2.00 membership, entitled to the privileges of the classes. For information apply at the rooms this evening.

—"The interesting sessions of the Bible Training Class, of the Young People's League, will be resumed this evening at eight o'clock, in the parlors of the First Baptist church. This class will have a much larger attendance than last year, and a very profitable time is anticipated by the members. Any one in the city may join the class and will be cordially received."

—Probably no man has done more in the interests of the wheelmen of this county than our fellow-townsman, Hon. George Kyte. He first agitated the good roads theory and secured them for his own town, and then as freeholder was one of the prime movers and most energetic workers in securing the magnificent road system which makes Union county the Mecca of wheelmen.—Union County Standard.

A Dangerous Place.

In front of the house at No. 16 Grandview avenue, an excavation has been made in the sidewalk which has not been properly covered up. Last evening Mr. Moon of that thoroughfare was wending his way homeward, when he slipped into the excavation and painfully injured one of his legs. His wounds were dressed in the house of Mr. Frank Wolff who resides nearby.

Strawberries in October.

Councilman Dunham yesterday visited DeWitt Woolsey of Middlebush, an old friend, and was surprised to find on his farm a second crop of strawberries, some in blossom, some fully developed. Fully a quart of these, some as large as one inch and a half in diameter, were picked and brought to Plainfield, where Mr. Dunham was to-day exhibiting them to friends.

Mr. Crater Discharged.

The case of J. Edwin Crater, who was charged with embezzlement came up before Justice Nash Saturday as reported in THE NEWS. After hearing the evidence the Justice discharged Mr. Crater, claiming that the testimony presented was insufficient to hold him. The complainants were Irving & Hutchings of Newark, his former employers.

A BRIDE OF TWO WEEKS.

Then Her Husband Abused Her and She Had Him Arrested.

Frank Andrews, a resident of Pondville, was a prisoner in the City Court this morning. He was charged with beating his wife. It appears that on Saturday last, Mrs. Andrews, who had been a bride but two weeks, gave her husband one dollar to purchase a casting for a stove. Andrews left the house, but instead of purchasing the casting, he visited one of the saloons and spent the money for liquor. He then went home and because his wife refused to polish his boots he beat her unmercifully. Her brother interfered and Andrews turned on him and gave him a thrashing. Mrs. Andrews then sought Policeman Cooney, but when that officer arrived the brutal husband had made his escape. The officer captured him, however, later in the evening.

When arraigned in court this morning neither of the parties interested in the case could speak English and Policeman Giese acted as interpreter. Judge Codington adjudged Andrews guilty, but re*served his decision.*

After the trial Mrs. Andrews refused to live with her husband any longer and handed Policeman Giese her wedding ring. He placed it on the husband's finger and told him to depart. After giving bonds for his re-appearance when wanted the man left.

North Plainfield Republican Primary.

A primary meeting of the Republicans of the township of North Plainfield was held in the school building, Saturday evening, October 10th, to select delegates to attend the Convention to be held at Somerville, October 13th, 1891, for the purpose of nominating a Member of Assembly and Coroner.

Mr. T. W. Morrison was chosen chairman, and Mr. Geo. T. Halloc, secretary.

The delegates elected were as follows, Messrs. J. B. Higgins, J. W. Van Horn, Hon. Chas. Place, Jacob Long and Dr. Justus B. Cooley.

The delegates were by resolution empowered to select alternates if occasion required, after which the meeting adjourned.

—The Registry Boards will be in session to-morrow.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

His Address to Men Yesterday Afternoon.

A large congregation of men listened to Mr. Anthony Comstock while for an hour he earnestly addressed them yesterday afternoon in the First Baptist church.

This was the first of a special series of meetings which are to be held by [the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoons (beginning at 4:15) for men only.

Mr. Comstock is known as an earnest and effective speaker, who has done a remarkable work in the suppression of vice, in the course of which he has acquired an experience which gives tremendous weight to the advice he utters.

His address was an urgent plea to men to beware of the three vices of intemperance, gambling and licentiousness.

It is no sin to be tempted, he said, the sin is in yielding to the temptation. He compared the heart to a chamber of imagery, upon whose walls we were always hanging pictures, which memory would keep turning for our gaze; therefore, it behooved us to be careful that all pictures of evil should hang there to constantly menace our peace.

Very specially did he warn fathers to be careful for their sons, whose temptations were so great and against whose purity such organized and powerful efforts are directed. Preserve yourself, through the grace of God from evil imaginations, which are our common temptation, he said, as God who knows man's infirmities has prepared a way of escape from them.

"The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Who can know it?" "Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life."

Remembrance of these things will save us from the evil imaginations which lead to evil practices which shut out self respect, undermines spiritual aspirations destroy reverence for holy things, and bury will power and desire to reform amid evil reading which leads to lust, defiles the body, diseases the mind, corrupts thought, perverts imagination, scars conscience, hardens the heart and damns the soul.

The address closed with a strong appeal to seek Him who said "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

The meeting next Sunday afternoon in the First Baptist church will be addressed by Major Gen. O. O. Howard, U. S. A.

ELECTRICITY RESTORED HIS SPEECH.

After He Had Been a Mute For Seventeen Years.

After being speechless for nearly seventeen years, Otto Wirthner, a well-known German, of Youngstown, Ohio, surprised himself and his friends recently by conversing fluently in both English and German. When eighteen years old he was stricken with illness which left him speechless, and seemed to find that he was a mute. Since then he never spoke a word until Thursday, though traveling throughout the country selling pencils and notions. He was induced to try electricity, and it restored his speech. He had learned English by hearing it spoken and converses as freely as though it was his mother tongue.

He Walked Home.

Saturday afternoon two well-known young men of this city drove to New Brunswick to witness the ball game. When on their way home they quarreled as to which road they would take. One wanted to go one way and his companion the other. In consequence thereof one of the party became obstinate and jumped out of the carriage, saying that he would walk home. He arrived at an early hour yesterday morning and his companion is still laughing at his foolishness.

Hurt While at Play.

While the young son of Mr. Utsinger of Grandview avenue was playing with several of his small friends Saturday, on a field in North Plainfield, he stumbled and fell. A small stick, standing point upwards in the ground, caught him under the jaw, inflicting a bad gash. No serious result however, is expected.

The Fair Closed.

The fair for the benefit of St. Mary's Catholic church which has been in progress in St. Mary's hall for the past two weeks, was brought to an end Saturday evening. The contest for the bicycle was decided in favor of Mr. John O'Rourke. The result of the fair is very satisfactory.

The Crescents Won.

The Crescents visited New Brunswick Saturday afternoon and played a return game of phase ball with the team of that place, and succeeded in defeating them by a score of 7 to 4. A large number of Plainfielders witnessed the game and say it was very interesting.

How Cold it Was Last Night.

Several thermometers at twelve o'clock last night registered 45 degrees above zero. At twelve o'clock October 11th 1890, the temperature was 55 degrees. The average for Oct. 11th, 1891, was 54 degrees; for Oct. 11, 1890, it was 50.

Adjourned Until Wednesday

The Union county court met at Elizabeth this morning at ten o'clock and the jurors were discharged until next Wednesday when it is thought that the Elizabethport murder case will come up for trial.

HARVEY HUMPHREY DISAPPEARS.

Supposed to Have Wandered to Rahway While Partly Demented.

Harvey Humphrey, a resident of Westfield, disappeared from his home, on Westfield avenue, last Friday afternoon while laboring under a temporary aberration of mind. Some time ago he had the grip and he has not been well since, though no one suspected that his malady would take the form it has.

Chairman Gardner of the Township Committee, is endeavoring to find some clue to Mr. Humphrey's whereabouts. It was reported that Humphrey had been seen in the "big woods" in the direction of Springfield. Mr. Gardner and Chief Schmitt ordered the fire alarm sounded so as to assemble the firemen and organize a searching party. Foreman Hugh Kurzhals, of the Hook and Ladder Company, responded to the call, and then for the first time was advised of Humphrey's disappearance.

Mr. Kurzhals said he and Druggist R. B. Shove had seen Humphrey about four o'clock Friday afternoon walking walk*ing on the road towards Rahway.* That was the last seen of him by Westfield people. At eight o'clock Friday morning he went to a Westfield grocery store and bought some tobacco. He was seen again in the village about three o'clock in the afternoon.

Detective J. M. C. Marsh, Mr. Gardner and B. J. Crosby went to Rahway to search for the missing man.

Humphrey is thick set, about five feet six inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds. He is forty-one years old. His hair is sandy, streaked with white. He is quite bald and wears a heavy mustache. He wore at the time of his disappearance a dark cloth sack coat and dark trousers and derby hat. His clothes were somewhat faded. A reward of $50 has been offered for his return, dead or alive, to his parents.

He lived with his parents, who are about seventy years old, in a pretty cottage on Westfield avenue. They are nearly distracted over the disappearance of their son, and are constantly making appeals to the neighbors to "find their boy."

The father, Ira Humphrey, is a carpenter and his son assisted him in his work.

Parties are also searching the "big woods" for it is rumored that they were seen in their vicinity this morning. It is supposed he had but little money with him.

EXIT PROPRIETOR AND CASHIER.

Rumor Has It That a Hotel Man Has Gone West with a Girl.

Emil Monch, proprietor of the prosperous and well-known Cafe Herold, at No. 212 Houston street, New York, and Miss Emma Harris, his pretty cashier, are reported in New York papers to have disappeared.

The Cafe Herold is a large restaurant and saloon, much patronized by German artists. Its trade was built up after years of labor by Monch and his wife, a pleasant-faced, fair-haired woman, who is still young and far from being unprepossessing.

The couple were well off and apparently very happy in their matrimonial relations. Monch is a stout, good-looking man, who dresses well and was regarded as something of a sport by the frequenters of his hostelry.

A few months ago an additional attraction was added to the Cafe Herold by the coming of Emma Harris, a young and pretty cashier, having yellow ringlets and a pair of big blue eyes.

The charming cashier lived at the cafe and attended strictly to her duties. After awhile it became evident to the other employes that Proprietor Monch was deeply interested in the cashier. He used to stand by her desk and talk to her by the hour.

Two weeks ago the father of Mrs. Monch died in this city, where she had formerly lived.

Mrs. Monch went to the funeral, leaving her husband in charge of the business. After her father was buried the wife wrote that she would return to Plainfield for a few weeks in order to comfort her mother.

On Wednesday morning last Mr. Monch did not appear at the Cafe Herold. His bedroom was vacant and his best clothes and two trunks were gone.

Miss Harris also failed to put in an appearance, and has not been seen since. Her wardrobe has also disappeared with her.

The employes at once jumped to the conclusion that the pair had eloped.

The black-eyed girl who had been in Monch's employ for some time took charge of the establishment, and is now conducting it until the return of Mrs. Monch from Plainfield.

The fascinating cashier has no relatives in the neighborhood, so far as could be learned.

It is said that she formerly sang in variety halls and tried to make herself as an actress. Monch often talked of going to Milwaukee and opening a hotel there, and his friends think that he has gone there.

That Boy.

He was a small youth with a knowledge of only about twelve Winters, and a face as free from guile as the proverbial cherub.

He was walking quietly along Dean street, and aside from stoning a dog and some chickens, was innocent of wrong.

A peddler's wagon, loaded with fruit, rounded the corner, and came toward this small boy, whose wandering mind was instantly cornered and impressed with the thought that here was time to putting it to practical use.

By the time the peddler was in a position to see him, the boy was up on the stoop of a pretty cottage—with his cap in his pocket—and a sweet, bland smile on his dear little face. He first whistled shrilly and then called to the peddler, who left the wagon and came to the gate. The boy descended from the stoop and the following conversation ensued.

"Say! Mister! Got any nice tomatoes?"

"Yep! Finest in th' city."

"Well. Got any pears 'r' apples."

"Wagon full."

"Ain't rotten, eh?"

"No siree! Here's some" and he showed a handful.

"Well, ma wants four baskets of 'em. Take'm round to the back door, and knock hard, 'cause ma's a little deaf."

Calling his assistant, the peddler gave him the basket, and taking two himself, went around the corner of the house to the back door. The boy, fishing his cap out and putting it on his head again, walked off, whistling "I want to be an Angel" and by nice calculation as to speed, got around the next street, out of sight, just as the peddlers, who, judging by the earnest expressions on their faces would have taken pleasure in mak*ing him a subject to appropriately* fix the tune he was whistling, came around the corner of the house from the back door.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Some Working Women's Wages.

It is probable that New York represents both extremes of wages, high and low, for both men and women workers in this country. Perhaps in this city of the east, where the conditions of life for working women are supposed to be much harder than they are in the west, there are some ladies who get at least enough money to support a husband handsomely. A few instances will show that this is the case.

The highest salaried woman in America, apart, of course, from a few actresses and singers, is Mme. Cottrelly, the stage directress, who received at Palmer's theatre $10,400 a year. The woman editor of a New York fashion monthly receives $80 a week—over $4,000 a year. Cynthia Westover, the linguist and mathematician, got $1,500 a year as private secretary of the New York street commissioner. She resigned from this place to take entire charge of a retail business which will pay her $2,000 a year. The reputation she won for shrewdness and financial capacity in the street department gained for her the other situation.

The New York World mentions a number of ladies who get wages that might make some men want to be women. Mrs. H. McK. Twombly pays her housekeeper $5,000 a year and her nursery governess $40 a month. Mrs. John D. Rockefeller pays the young woman tutor of her daughters $2,000 a year. Miss Clara Neymann is well known throughout the country as a speaker and advocate of woman's rights and various reforms. Mme. Neymann reduced her advanced ideas to practice by educating her talented daughter as a dentist, and now the bright young woman gets $10 for filling a tooth. In the journalistic world perhaps fifty women in the big city receive from $15 to $75 a week. Contrasted to these are several hundred newspaper women writers who are paid all the way from nothing to $15 a week.

Business pays better than anything else, if a woman can reach a place at the top, which some few have succeeded in doing. There are foreign buyers and managers of departments who get from $1,000 to $3,000 a year. Those who are able to design and originate new styles are best paid. At least one woman in a great dry goods house receives $5,000. In a fashionable dressmaking establishment the leading fitter is worth to her employer $65 a week, and gets it. But for every one of these highly paid working women there are at least 500 who work hard every week for from $3 to $5.

The Campaign in Ohio.

The letter written by Secretary Blaine in answer to an invitation to take part in the campaign in favor of Major McKinley contains a sentence that is worthy of consideration. Speaking of the Republican candidate, Mr Blaine says "He and Mr Campbell represent the honest differences between the two parties at this time."

It is refreshing, not to say remarkable to see a campaign run on the "honest differences" of opinion between two great political parties. A campaign free from personal vituperation and foul abuse is something to be commended to the attention of all the states of this union, not only this autumn, but now and forever. The two candidates for governor of Ohio are men of singularly pure private character. Both served in the war for the union—McKinley in the army, Campbell in the navy. They are within six months of the same age. Campbell being the elder, and both were born in Ohio. They served in congress together, Campbell from the Seventh district, McKinley from the Eighteenth, and both were popular among their colleagues.

No crimes of corruption and bribery no private scandal, no horse stealing drunkenness, swindling or murder has been laid to the charge of either of these singularly popular and able men. It is refreshing to turn from the Ohio campaign of two years ago and from the personal abuse and accusations that characterise the red hot political sizzle in other states to this Ohio battle in 1891. It is a pretty fight.

Worms will turn and sheep will fight. Many a year the landladies who supply hash to the students of Yale college have been put upon by these gay lads. They have become accustomed to being asked if they forgot to put the coffee in the pot, or if they saved the hash from last year's commencement roast beef. Many a year they have been told the tradition of the student who went out a-mowing and said he liked to rise no more than after he had partaken of college boarding house tea biscuit. Storing up these and other outrages, the landladies have suddenly turned upon their tormentors and put the price of a hall bedroom without fire up to six and eight dollars a week. They have formed a great trust and not a woman will strike her colors. Woman's cause is thus triumphant in the very college, where girl students are forbidden to enter.

Speaking of actresses of the present day, The Nineteenth Century remarks picturesquely, "Women, that most significant postscript to the story of creation, has never been so vividly put on the stage as at the present moment."

NUNS HURLED HEADLONG

A Catholic Mission Sacked by Chinese Rioters.

MANY OF THE MOB WERE SOLDIERS

The Government Seems Powerless and the Lives of Foreigners Are in Constantly Deadly Peril—Foreign Forts Necessary to Overawe the Rebellious Mongolians.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—Further details of the outrages in China are gathered from the papers published in that country and brought here by the City of Peking. The steamer Pashta arrived at Honkow Sept. 6 with twenty flying refugees. Several bore marks of serious violence, while all had lost all their property except the clothes they wore. The riot took place at broad noonday and came without warning or provocation. It was carried out by a handful of men, evidently acting under orders, in the presence of a number of Chinese officials, who knew every one of of the rioters.

A Mission and a Convent Fired.

Their mission of destruction was carried out with the utmost speed. A house belonging to the American Episcopal mission was the first attacked. The inmates fled to the river for their lives, while the crowd looted and burned the building. The Roman Catholic convent was next fired, and the sisters, seven in number, barely escaped to the river. They were thrown headlong down a steep bank by soldiers. They were taken in a boat on board the Pashua and were stoned by the mob on shore. Several sisters were badly injured by the missiles. It is thought a number of children in the convent were burned to death.

Met Rioters with Bayonets.

Many other houses were looted and burned, and, although no one was killed several shots were fired into the murder and threats were frequent. At the old consulate the foreigners kept the rioters back with bayonets. The leaders of the mob carried gunpowder and kerosene with which to fire the buildings. Those having stolen property from the ruined buildings were arrested and fined, but no attempt was made to capture the real leaders. On the third day, when all possible damage had been done, military mounted guard over the blackened ruins.

The Foreigners Must Go.

In Han Fow things are again stirring. On Sept. 5 there was a gathering of the anti-foreign element. They resolved that foreigners must be driven immediately from the central provinces. The missions at Wuchang have received threatening placards ordering them to leave at once or they will be exterminated. The tartar inspected the nunnery on Sept. 6 making a search for bones, eyes, etc., of children that used to have been murdered by the sisters.

Soldiers as Rioters.

Many of the rioters were soldiers, who had taken off their uniforms to disguise themselves. During the whole time mandarins were present, and made no attempt to prevent the pillage from carrying on in disorder. That no lives were lost is almost entirely a matter of luck.

When soldiers get orders from their seconds in command, they take no heed for their officers. The central government is powerless, for it has Hunan officials everywhere, and the troops everywhere are Hunan men, excepting a few Tartar's disciplined force. To order him to suppress Hunan with those men is to start a civil war. The mission at Kuling is closed, and the only solution is for a foreign force to overawe Hunan with the tacit connivance of the Chinese government.

Mme. Barrios Will Marry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Spanish papers announce the coming marriage of Mme. Barrios, of this city, to Martinez Roda, member of the Spanish parliament from Grenada. Mme. Barrios is a beautiful woman, whose history is a romantic one. At the age of sixteen she was compelled to marry President Barrios, of Guatemala. After a time she bride fell in love with her husband and they lived very happily. Barrios was killed while recovering the body of a dead son from the field of battle. Mme. Barrios fled to California, finally settling in New York, and continued to add to be the largest received by any woman in the world.

A Strike on the Erie Possible.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 12.—Chief Sargent, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and a committee representing the firemen of the Erie railway, left here for that railway, waited upon General Manager Bradbury with a demand for an increase of ten cents per day in the rate of wages. Mr. Sargent admitted that a compromise on one-tenth might be effected. Mr. Bradbury refused to concede the advance. Another strike is among the possibilities.

Printers Who Are Not in Politics.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Typographics' Union No. 6 held a special meeting in Clarendon hall. President William J. Brennan presided. There was a decided expression of opinion that Big No. 6 should not be dragged into politics. Other resolutions condemning J. Sloat Fassett recently passed at Syracuse were denounced, and No. 6 withdrew from the strict branch of the International Typographical union.

Weymouth Mills to Reopen.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Oct. 12.—The New York syndicate that recently purchased the Colwell tract of 25,000 acres of land, including two large paper mills at Weymouth, will soon commence the development of the land. It is stated that the paper mills will commence work at once.

A Wesleyan Senior Missing.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 12.—J. W. Naramore, a senior at Wesleyan university, left here Sept. 30, saying he was going to New York and would return next day. He has not since been seen or heard from. His parents live at Sing Sing, N. Y. His mother is at the point of death.

After the "Speak Easies."

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Oct. 12.—The Woman's Christian Temperance union, of Hammonton, is trying to suppress the numerous "speak easies" which are reported to exist there. It is reported that over 200 cases of beer are consumed weekly by the young men.

Mr. Flower a Groom Now.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Mrs. J. B. Taylor, the only child of Hon. Roswell P. Flower, gave birth to a 10½ pound son Sunday morning. Daily expectation of this event has caused Mr. Flower to remain here for some time.

STEEDS'S SUFFERING ENDED.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 12.—James Steeds, the eight-year-old boy who has been on the brink of the Elizabeth hospital for the past week suffering from hydrophobia, died Sunday. His nurse said when he had breathed his last, "The Lord taketh and the Lord gives," for at the very minute the young sufferer died word was received that his mother had given birth to a child.

Young James died alone, as his father was in attendance upon his mother. Even if the parents had been able to be at the deathbed of their boy it would have been an act of mercy to keep them away. Up to within about twenty hours of his death the boy was conscious, although for two days he had not been able to speak. From the time he entered the hospital he took no nourishment except by hypodermic injections. When anything liquid was brought into the room he fell at once into spasms and ranged at the mouth.

The boy was not treated by Dr. Gibler, as Dr. Mumford believes that the Pasteur system has a preventive power.

The boy was bitten on July 25 while buying milk from Milkman John Edgeworth, of Elizabethport. The lad was at once taken to the hospital and his wounds cauterized. His father brought suit for $300 damages, but a few days before the case was called the boy was taken with hydrophobia.

FASHIONS

For Cool Weather.

Here is a new ladies' jacket, suitable for any washing material, trimmed lace. Fitting double-breasted basque, opened over a full vest of lace, and turned back with revers of velvet. Coat sleeves, finished by a cuff at the wrist. Deep basque of lace and Medici collar of velvet.

A BODICE AND JACKET.

This jacket is composed of plain or fancy cloth, trimmed braiding. Semi-fitting fronts, turned back with roll collar and revers, trimmed braiding. The basque is cut three-quarter length, and trimmed pockets on the hips. Coat sleeves, raised on the shoulders.

How Was This For a Race?

The other day a lady missed a valuable and highly prized watch and chain from her jewelry case. Convinced that one of her servants about the house had taken it she made no allusion about the matter, but confidently informed the suspected servant that she would consult a fortune teller, who would tell her just where the watch was. The next day the stolen articles were found in their usual place. Superstition had done good detective work.

Garnets Again in Fashion.

Garnet ornaments are returning to the foot of fashion's throne, and Mme. Grundy has welcomed them with ringing hospitality. Garnet chatelaine bags and garnet buttons for edging house skirts and silk street skirts of walking length enliven the most sombre fabrics.

They Snubbed the Kaiser.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—The virtual rejection by the omnibus of the kaiser's bill for the suppression of drunkenness has had quite a sobering effect on the kaiser, while it immensely gratifies the Bismarckians. The members of the bundesrath treated the proposition in a summary fashion that showed but little respect for its imperial origin.

Epidemic of Diphtheria.

LAUREL, Del., Oct. 12.—Statonsville, a small village in this county, is having an epidemic of diphtheria. William Hammond has buried his entire family of five children within a week past. The faithful mother, who nursed them all through their breath left the last one, when she took to her bed, and her death is hourly expected.

France May Welcome American Pork.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—M. Ferry, president of the senate's tariff commission, says that the commission will immediately take up the matter of the American pork prohibition. Ministers Ribot and Roche will insist upon the importance of the early removal of the prohibition, especially in view of its repeal by Germany.

Another Challenge for Lodge.

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—The Prohibition state committee has issued a challenge to Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge for a joint debate on the temperance plank in the Republican platform and on Mr. Lodge's statement that the Republican party stands ready to improve, strengthen and enforce the temperance laws.

Ex-King Milan Needs Money.

VIENNA, Oct. 12.—Ex-King Milan is in bad financial straits. He has made arrangements with a Russian bank for a loan of 3,000,000 francs at 6 per cent. interest and 6 per cent. more for a sinking fund. To do this he mortgages his share of the property of the royal family.

Reciprocity with Germany, Too.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—A convention has been consummated between Germany and the United States by which American cereals are to be admitted into the former country free of duty in exchange for the free admission of German sugar here.

Big Output of Tin Ore.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—George Tangerman, of New York, has returned from the Temescal tin mines, in San Bernardino county. He says the output of the mine is forty tons of ore daily, which yields about 3,200 pounds of block tin.

Blaine Is Resume Work Soon.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 12.—It is Mr. Blaine's intention to return to Washington the very last of October, leaving here the 28th or 29th, and he will at once assume his duties at the state department.

EVEN ERIN'S SKIES WEPT

Thousands Brave the Rain to Honor Parnell's Memory.

REVERENTIAL ORDER PREVAILED

The Anti-Parnellites Remained Away and the Anticipated Trouble Was Averted—Dillon and O'Brien Saw the Procession from a Window.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Everybody is delighted with the fact that the Parnell funeral passed off so peacefully. That there was no disturbance was probably owing to the wise resolve of the Anti-Parnellites not to be present. William O'Brien, John Dillon and Sexton watched the scene from the window of a friend's house on the route of the procession. The curtain was kept closed, so that the three M. P's. only had furtive glances at the great demonstration, while they themselves remained entirely hidden from view. It is said that Mr. Dillon had expressed his intention of attending the funeral, but, wiser than he result to himself, and that it was with some difficulty that he was induced to remain away.

It Was True Funeral Weather.

The remains of Parnell arrived at Kingston at 7 a. m. Sunday. There was no demonstration along the line from London until Chester was reached, when many deputations joined the train. The parliamentary colleagues of Mr. Parnell, including John Redmond, John O'Connor, Joseph Nolan, Dr. Tanner, Edmond O'Kelly and Henry Campbell, were among the people that greeted the deputations on their arrival at Holyhead, which the train reached at 2 a. m. in wet and hazy weather that well became the mournfulness of the scene. At the transfer of the coffin from the train to the mailboat Ireland was a most oppressing spectacle. The darkness as the body was borne from the train was unrelieved except by a few lamps that flickered uncannily, throwing a wierd light over the large white wooden cross that mantled the coffin. Throughout the voyage some of the Parnellites were all the time on guard over the remains of their beloved leader. Among the watchers were the beloved mayor of Dublin, High Sheriff Maude and J. H. Parnell, brother of the deceased. The boat made the passage in a gale of wind and rain. At the Kingston pier a multitude was gathered to receive the remains. With the Irish members who had followed the body from England, the group at Kingston included nearly every parliamentary adherent of Parnell. They all gathered around the coffin in absolute silence after the remains had been transferred to the train for Dublin.

With Uncovered Heads.

The Westland row station in Dublin was reached at 4:30 a. m. A vast silent crowd waited with uncovered heads as the train steamed into the station. Conspicuous in front of the dense masses of people were members of the Gaelic and Athlenic societies, with the hurlers used in their sports draped black and tied with green ribbon. The representatives of branches of the National League wore black badges on which were the dying words of Parnell, "Give my love to my colleagues and the Irish nation." When the remains had been removed in solemn order from the train the case in which the coffin had been inclosed was laid aside. The crowd immediately rushed upon and broke it into small pieces to carry away as mementos of the dead. As the hearse moved from the station the procession, without any design or understanding, fell into line and took its place in purely extemporized fashion. As the marched progressed the crowds grew denser, and yet they kept clear of the line of the procession along the whole route to Gaside hill, where the serried ranks of the people occupied every inch of space.

In a Pitiless Rain.

The city hall of Dublin was reached at 6:30 a. m. The front was covered with somber drapery, and a dense rain fell as the coffin was borne into the hall toward the catafalque. The rain kept pouring in pitiless torrents for hour after hour, but did not diminish the vast concourse that thronged toward the hall, ignoring the elements in their anxiety to show their love for their dead leader. Reverential quiet, unbroken by the faintest cry or the remotest symptom of tendency to disorder prevailed. The body lay in state in the council chamber. A large circular room, the hearse draped in black, relieved by scrolls of white satin in looped festoons bearing in black letters the last words of Parnell. The coffin, placed on a bier in the middle in the center of the chamber, was buried under masses of wreaths, floral crosses, Irish harps and other designs. The coffin was placed on the bier, the O'Connell statue and between the bold relief statues of Grattan and Lucas.

"From His Brokenhearted Wife."

Conspicuous on the coffin were three wreaths from Mrs. Parnell, a cross and anchor, and circle, with inscription. The outer inscription was: "My own true love; my last tribute to my friend; my husband, from his brokenhearted wife." Inside this was the inscription, "My dear love; my husband, from his brokenhearted wife;" and the innermost inscription, "My dear love; my husband; my king; from his brokenhearted wife." There were also two beautiful wreaths from Parnell's daughters with the words, "From little Clare to my dear mother's husband," and "From little Kitty to my dear mother's husband."

Parnell Lying in State.

From 10 o'clock until 2 a continuous stream of people poured into the city hall. It is estimated that the people who paid their last tribute of respect to the dead leader numbered at least 40,000. Nearly all were in the deepest mourning, the men wearing a band of black crape interwoven with green ribbon on the arm, and a large proportion of the women also wearing a similar sign of grief.

At 2:45 the cortege started for the grave in Glasnevin cemetery. It was led by the executive of the Parnell leadership committee, and following came the bier, drawn by six black horses. Surrounding the bier were the parliamentary colleagues of Parnell. As the coffin passed it was almost hidden by flowers. Every head in the vast assemblage, uncovered. Parnell's favorite horse followed the bier. Then came a strong body of Gaels, headed by James Stephens, the Fenian organizer; John O'Leary, the advocate of an Irish republic; John O'Connor, M. P., leading by the arm the blind member of parliament, Mr. W. A. Macdonald, of Ossory; Parnell's brother and sister, and then the lord mayor of Dublin, in official state. Next came the representatives of the corporations of the principal Irish towns and the various so-

DENOUNCED BY REV. DIXON.

He Says the Bridge Trial Is Sham by Political Manipulation.

"NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—"Wilful peanut politics" is the opinion of the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., on the Detroit convention of Presbyterians. Mr. Dixon took occasion yesterday to make some startling public assertions, and denounced in unvarnished words the trial of Dr. Briggs, the alleged heretic.

"Every heresy trial ever held on earth was a disgrace to the Church of Christ," he continued. "It was a confession that the truth was a weak, puny thing that needed protection, and Almighty God needed the vindication of a majority of noses to establish his kingdom."

In Mr. Dixon's judgment the ordinary Presbyterian elder is absent as well qualified to settle such a question as the Briggs trial as a goat is competent to criticise the merits of a piece of statuary or a painting of the old masters.

Mr. Dixon asks with an anxious air, "What will the order of 'Holy Peanut Politicians' do when they get to heaven?" He thinks it probable that they will buttonhole the saints, and with their ideas of the potency of the majority, close the doors of paradise to any one they may not fit. Mr. Dixon designated the Detroit convention as a nose counting operation, and said the man who worshiped before the fetish of "authority" given by a majority of noses was sure to show the claws of a beast in the enforcement of that "authority."

THE LEAGUE'S MANIFESTO.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The National league in Great Britain has issued the following manifesto:

Some months ago the members of this executive body were appointed by Charles Stewart Parnell to advance the cause of Irish independence in Great Britain. Fully agreeing and ratified every Irishman remained true to the principle for which our leader lived and died the principle of the independence of Ireland's independent Irish parliament. Ireland has received a blow by the death of Mr. Parnell from which it will take years to recover. When Daniel O'connell died all was chaos. A parliamentary party sprung up, but failure and disgrace was the result. Nothing was done for Ireland and the name of an Irish member of parliament became a by-word. Fenianism arose and as a consequence Robert Emmet's head fell at the attention of parliament, while Irishmen died for Ireland on the scaffold or perished in prison or exile. Scarcely a family but has received the spirit of Irish nationality.

Parliamentary agitation followed the moonlighting and boycotting movements and at once more failure marked its course.

Then Charles Stewart Parnell came, and all was changed. Parnell was not only a parliamentary and every where combining revolutionary scene with constitutional agitation. He found the people in the depths of despair at the wrongs and miseries of Ireland. English parties and English people before him.

The Tories had with the Liberals to gain his support. Firm and immovable, commanding followers and respect, Parnell, by his genius, he made an army, he dictated his terms to the English prime minister and the minister granted. Never in the history of Ireland had more been done in generations. Measure after measure, bearing his mark, took its place on the statute book, until the last act was crowned when the prime minister of England brought into parliament a bill to establish an Irish parliament.

He is gone. Ireland mourns over his fallen body. What is the duty of those he left behind? What is the duty of the men who followed him to the last in his struggle for Irish freedom?

It has been said that we fought for a man, not for a principle. It is not true. We fought for the principle which the man embodied. The man himself was indeed, a principle—the principle of self reliance and independence which nothing could tame. To that principle we are staunch. It is now necessary for the members of this organization to elect a new president and secretary and committee, who will act as leaders in the branches of the National league in Great Britain to take immediate steps to this end. We urge our fellow workers to be of good cheer. If victory seems distant. We ask them to take as their motto the words uttered by Mr. Parnell to the executive committee: "Hold on, fight on!"

Comfort from Across the Sea.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Oct. 12.—On being apprised of the death of her father, Mrs. Parnell immediately cabled to her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Stewart Parnell, the following, "God loves and protects you."

In reply to this cable Mrs. Parnell signed by Mrs. Parnell and a widowed daughter, Mrs. Emily Thompson, which was, "May the love of the Irish people enable you to bear this terrible blow."

Dr. W. H. Shipps, her attending physician, states that Mrs. Parnell is still confined to her bed, although bearing her loss bravely.

Mrs. Parnell Too Ill to Attend.

BRIGHTON, Oct. 12.—Mrs. Parnell was too ill to attend the funeral. Her condition is pitiable, and grows worse instead of improving. She only answers in reply to questions and is unable or refuses to speak. The doctors, who are in constant attendance, say that her condition may grow more critical. The only intelligible sounds that she has uttered in hours have been plaintive cries for her husband.

Philadelphia's Tribute.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—The municipal council of the Irish National league, of this city, has appropriated $250 toward the erection of a monument to Parnell in Dublin.

MULCTED OF MILLIONS.

How Opium Smugglers Cheat Uncle Sam.

ONE REVENUE CUTTER TO DODGE.

Chinamen and Opium Brought Into the United States from British Columbia by an Organized Band of Freebooters Who Do Not Hesitate to Use Force.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 12.—The question of the smuggling of Chinese and opium across the northwestern border of the United States will undoubtedly be one of the first to receive the attention of the coming congress and will take its place among the most important subjects of legislation. It is said that the invasions of the revenue and anti-Chinese laws by the wholesale smuggling of opium and coolies across the border from British Columbia has been a loss of revenue to the United States of over $1,000,000 annually.

A Band of Smugglers.

The depredations upon the United States customs revenues which are being daily carried on by smugglers east of the Rocky Mountains is but a drop in the bucket and pale into relative insignificance when compared with the gigantic frauds being perpetrated upon the United States government in the Puget sound customs district.

The placid waters of this great inland sea, Puget sound and the Strait of Juan de Fuca, the wooded islands that dot its surface furnish modes of access and places of shelter for a band of daring smugglers who break the laws of the United States without compunction and perpetrate gigantic frauds upon its revenues.

Vast quantities of prepared opium are smuggled monthly, every pound of it meaning a loss of twelve dollars customs revenue to the United States treasury.

Thousands of Chinese Landed.

Thousands of Chinamen, prescribed by law, are annually landed by bold freebooters upon the shores of the state of Washington, cared for and given shelter and employment by their own countrymen for a short time and then scatter to various portions of the Union. Smuggling is an organized business on Puget sound. Capital is invested and a fleet of sailing vessels and three small steamers engaged in the business return handsome profits to their owners.

They Even Use Force.

The lawless men engaged in the business do not hesitate to use force to protect themselves from customs officers, and two weeks ago a gang of smugglers overpowered a United States customs officer and threatened his life, sparing it only upon condition that he abandon his post, which he did.

It is not alone the rough and hardy men engaged in running the cargoes who are responsible for the evil. Reputable citizens there are of Victoria and Vancouver in British Columbia and Seattle and Port Townsend in Washington who give the protection of their influence and furnish money for conducting the business.

A prominent city official of the city of Victoria is the principal owner of a small steamer which is said to be used almost exclusively to land Chinamen and opium upon the American shore.

A Threefold Crime.

The crime of the smugglers is a threefold one. It is a crime upon the revenues of the government, the stealing of money, grand larceny. It is a crime upon the morals of the nation by introducing in almost unlimited quantities a drug prohibited by law, a drug that enervates and perpetuates the horrible vice of opium smoking and the opium habit. It is a crime upon labor by foisting annually upon the workmen of the land thousands upon thousands of Chinese pauper laborers, whose entrance into this country is sternly and strictly prohibited by the act of congress.

How They Dodge the Walcott.

A petty handful of brave men placed by the treasury department are exerting to their utmost to check the traffic, but they are as a corporal's guard confronting a regiment. One revenue cutter with a crew of only eight men plies night and day on the sound under command of a vigilant and energetic captain, but the distance to be covered is so great that it is impossible to protect more than a small portion of the waterway, while a dozen vessels available for the smugglers are necessarily left unguarded.

The United States revenue cutter Walcott usually makes her anchorage at Port Townsend. When she weighs anchor and steams away in a given direction the information is flashed over the wires to Victoria, and the next day comes rumor of an expedition landed somewhere in an opposite direction from the scene of her cruising. When the word reaches Victoria that a favorable opportunity exists for landing a smuggling expedition, the sloops that are to be engaged in it stand out of harbor with their nets displayed, "going after fish." They work their way around to the eastward, and before nightfall come to another in the little bay back of Discovery island or in Finlay inlet.

In the meantime the cargo of Chinamen or opium has been shipped out of Victoria and carried overland to the appointed rendezvous. It is quickly loaded aboard, and then the anchor is weighed, the big mainsail set and the clipper little craft fills away and stands off down the sound toward the United States shore.

BOLD PENNSYLVANIA BURGLARS.

They Used Their Revolvers and Drove Off a Constable.

HOLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Oct. 12.—Burglars broke into the clothing store of Henry Rice Sunday morning and carried off a load of goods valued at $2,000.

The robbers then forced their way into Walter Lindsay's general merchandise store and blew the safe open and got $500 in cash.

The noise of the explosion awoke the neighbors, but they were driven off by a show of the burglars' revolvers, and the robbers escaped into the mountains. A posse is looking for them.

A CONFIDENCE QUEEN.

SWINDLING SMART PEOPLE—MRS. PECK'S PARTICULAR HOBBY.

A Little Woman Who Lives By Her Wits—Received $60,000 From Millionaire Babbitt—The Growing Proposition of the Great American Public.

"One has only to study men and women to succeed in the world" is a favorite phase of the astute little woman who is known to the police throughout the country as the "Confidence Queen."

MRS. E. B. PECK.

She is Mrs. Ellen E. Peck, and her history as "Confidence Queen" is a large and imposing monument to the gullibility of the great American public. She has a record of successful swindling and freedom from punishment which is simply marvelous. It is a record which if properly treated would be a standard acquisition to yellow-covered literature.

Mrs. Peck's history, so far as has come to the public, begins with her swindling of the famous soap manufacturer, B. T. Babbitt of New York City. In January, 1878, he discovered that his cashier, Charles H. Beckwith, together with Charles H. Ketchum and Thomas R. Lewis, had robbed him of several hundred thousand dollars. The amount that Lewis with whom Peck was associated, ran off with was $206,878. He was arrested, and, after a speedy trial, sent to State's prison for ten years. Ketchum was arrested in 1877, and made restitution. Lewis was arrested in London later and extradited.

Early in the Fall of 1877 a ladylike woman called upon Mr. Babbitt at his soap manufactory and asked him to give her daughter employment. She introduced herself as Mrs. Ellen Peck of Brooklyn, N. Y., as she was not known to Mr. Babbitt, he declined to grant her request. Upon this she informed him that she was a skillful detective, and hinted that she might be very valuable to him in tracing and recovering a portion, if not all, of the money stolen by Beckwith. Later she obtained an introduction to Babbitt and received her proposition to recover the money. She told him that she had been employed by A. T. Stewart as private detective, and had recovered for him some astounding sums. She had not received from him as somuch satisfaction for her services fully $15,000. She also cited various instances of her [illegible] and coupling and theft at length upon a case in which she recovered nearly $60,000 in Government bonds which had been stolen, and which she found in the possession of the plundered gentleman's son. She also claimed that she knew Mrs. Beckwith intimately. She talked so won over Babbitt that he employed her and gave her $600 with which to open the campaign.

Every time she came to report progress she needed a little more money. However, after paying over to her about $20,000, Babbitt grew suspicious, and finally called in a bona-fide detective. He soon proved her a fraud. Babbitt, thereupon, began a suit to recover his money, but she turned on him with her favorite weapon, blackmail, threatening to implicate him in a scandal with her daughter Etta, the girl she had taken to him to get a position on her first visit to him. Babbitt dropped his suit like a hot coal.

While still under bail for the Babbitt swindle Mrs. Peck was arrested for an act that always gave her the greatest satisfaction and which she chuckles over to this day. This was the swindling of John D. Grady, a notorious Broadway diamond broker, whose place was generally supposed to be a "fence," out of $32,000 worth of diamonds. Mrs. Peck was offering to act as his agent in disposing of diamonds, and among her acquaintances and possible customers she claimed the most prominent society ladies of Brooklyn, N. Y. When arrested she established the fact that Grady was an ex-convict who had never been pardoned, consequently a man whose evidence couldn't be accepted, and the case fell through, to her delight. Grady, as long as it was, would fly into ecstacy of rage at the very mention of the way the little woman caught him like a bird in a net.

Scarcely was she out of the Grady affair when she swindled a Cuban out of $12,000 worth of diamonds by false pretenses. She was ready to checkmate him, and suffered nothing at his hands. Next she swindled J. H. Johnston, a jeweler out of $200 worth of jewelry; a furniture dealer out of furniture to the amount of $4,500, and from Schmer & Co. she obtained a piano on Dec. 16, 1880, by fraudulent representations.

Since then, she has been in at least 100 schemes, and always to her benefit. Just now she has again brought herself before the public by an operation in her special line of swindling the mortgaging of property. Her victims are Merritt H. Day and Mary E. Day of Rapid City, S. D. She gave her a $150,000 mortgage on Brooklyn, N. Y., property worth $250,000 in exchange for 30,000 acres of land in Jefferson County, Ky. The Days are now making an effort to get the mortgage set aside, owing to the trifling fact that Mrs. Peck doesn't own the land which she transferred to them; but Mrs. Peck will not care very much if they do, for she can laugh a rollicking little laugh as she pockets the $2,000 in cash which her gullible land speculators gave her.

This remarkable little schemer is a tiny, colorless, insignificant little woman, who at first glance looks as if she's afraid to speak above a whisper.

She is about 5 feet 3 inches in height, very thin and wiry, and swift in her movements. She says she's sixty, but doesn't look it by fifteen years at least. Her face is long and narrow, forehead extremely high and delicately veined, her eyes quite large and of a steely blue. Her mouth is her most peculiar feature. It looks like a straight slit across her face; is devoid of curves and expression. Her hair is of a nondescript light brown shade. Without a thread of gray, and her complexion is sallow and colorless.

COULDN'T MAKE A TRADE.

Thought He Had Him All Right, but It Didn't Work.

"How much do you ask for this basket of peaches?" said a man who entered a South Water street orchard yesterday afternoon.

"Only fifty cents," answered the horticulturist in charge.

"Only fifty cents!" echoed the caller. "Do you call that cheap?"

"Yes, sir, for peaches of that quality. They're extra, ripe, juicy and free from bruises. You won't find a better peach in this market, and I'm betting money on it."

"They are cheaper than that in Delaware."

"But this isn't Delaware, my friend. Take a good look at those peaches. No; you needn't tear a hole in the game. Here's an opening in the side of the basket. You can see for yourself. They're sound as a dollar, fast freestones, good all the way down, and if this wasn't a big year for peaches that basket would cost you a dollar and a quarter."

"No cheaper, I reckon, if I should take a half dozen baskets?"

"I might shade 'em for you a little, but it's just as I tell you. There isn't a better peach in the market anywhere today than these, and"—

"Take forty-five cents for this basket?"

"Well, yes," said the dealer after a moment's hesitation. "But"——

"Six of 'em for $2.40?"

"I'll split the difference down a cent on 'em, but if you want six I'll let you have 'em for $2.50."

"Make it $2.40."

"Can't do it."

"Two forty-five then."

"All right."

The caller whipped a book out from under his coat, opened it and began talking rapidly:

"Here's a little work I'm introducing in this neighborhood. It's called 'The Housekeeper's Friend.' It tells you how to get up a party, how to make a bed, fly a kite, get rid of cockroaches, cure warts, cornstarch pudding, scrawling scenals, how to enter a drawing room, paint on glass, mend crockeryware, dress a chicken, cook a"——

"Thunderation! What do I want of"——

"Cook a stove, take care of a canary, bring your children up to obey you, clean spots out of carpets, how to tell mushrooms from toadstools, what kind of books you ought to read"——

"See here! I don't"——

"And I'm offering this book for exactly $2.45. It's worth $10 of any man's money, but I'm selling it at a low price to introduce it. At $2.45 it will just pay for these peaches, and"——

"I don't want it at all, sir!"

"Look it over; you'll find it's all I claim for it. What is a miserable half dozen baskets of peaches compared with a book that shows you how to approach a cow when you want to milk her, that gives you directions about cultivating your mind"——

"I tell you I don't want your book!"

"Hey!"

"I wouldn't give you ten cents for a box full of 'em!"

"You wouldn't?"

"No, sir!"

"Who's asking you to give ten cents for a box full of them? I came in here, sir, like a man to negotiate a trade with you. You have given me your lowest price for six baskets of peaches and I've given you my lowest cash price for a book worth a hundred baskets. I have offered, sir, to make an even trade. And you refuse!"

"Yes, and if you dwell any longer here"——

"I'm going, sir!" said the caller in the severe, dignified tone of a man administering a reproof to a lunatic. "I have offered a generous deal, sir, which doesn't have to commend itself to me, sir, who doesn't care enough about learning how to dress properly, take care of pigeons, acquire an easy grace of manner, cook eggplant and dress cucumbers to appeal to me, and who don't believe in the grand principle of reciprocity in commercial transactions is not worthy of the name of an American citizen. That is all, sir! Good afternoon."—Chicago Tribune.

The Concerting Hero Returns.

"Tell me, my boy," said the aged father as he gazed long and earnestly into the face of the prodigal son, who had but just returned after the long, anxious years—"tell me, what have you been doing all these years that we have mourned you?"

"Yes, father," replied the young man, his bronzed and weatherbeaten face lighting up with honest pride. "I have accomplished what other men have failed at. I have learned how to crease my own trousers."—Clothier and Furnisher.

Something Got Away.

"You say the chicken soup isn't good? Why, I told the cook how to make it. Perhaps she didn't catch the idea."

Boarder—No; I think it was the chicken she didn't catch.—Brandon Bucksaw.

No Laugh There.

We laugh at the cute sayings of children, but the telling remarks of a young brother are not always admired by the grown up sister.—Cape Cod Item.

His Sense Meant Take a Rest.

"Look at that!"

Under his arm he carried a Turkish rug.

He was walking along Ninth avenue yesterday afternoon.

At the corner of West Twenty-sixth street he suddenly sneezed, unrolled the gaudy scarf, and pre-empting a cool place under the el for a peanut stand calmly stretched his frame over Manhattan island.

The gang edged closer. Fully fifty people gathered.

"He is crazy."

"He is weary."

"He is beer."

The brave policeman took his turn. "He is the descendant of a race of kings. I guess I had better run him in."

The man whispered something in the cop's ear.

The minion of the law smiled.

"Boys," he said, as sweet as honey, "move on and let the gentleman rest."

"What's up?"

"Move on!"

The man on the rug sneezed again.

"Ah," he said, "all over now. I knew it. The first sneeze means lie down. The second get a move on you."

"Will you kindly explain your mysterious and kingly pomp?" asked a breathless World man.

"With pleasure," said the man, rolling up his rug and preparing to take his journey toward Harlem.

"What is it?"

"When I sneeze, as I did a moment before, I know by experience it is necessary for me to recline. Hence, I always carry this rug."

"But why recline?"

"I have fits."—New York World.

Some Funny Answers.

For originality, not to say humor, commend us to the answers in examination papers. Here are two or three which an English bishop vouches for. A child was asked to give some account of Oliver Cromwell, and volunteered the information that the Protector "was very unhappy and dreaded assassination. On his deathbed he cried, 'If I had served my God as I served my king I should not then be forsaken in my old age!'" Another, evidently with temperance proclivities, defined syntax as "a dooty upon spirits." One smart youth, who was asked by an examiner, "Could your father walk around the world?" was equal to the occasion. "No, sir," said he. "Why not?" "Because he's dead."—New York Tribune.

Her Great Love.

"Could you love me, darling," he whispered with a tender, pleading look in his eyes, "if I had only one coat to my back?"

"I could," she replied softly, as she nestled in his great, strong Yorkville arms, "if I knew you had sacrificed the others to buy me a new dress."—Clothier and Furnisher.

One Exception.

"It is too bad that the bristles in a handsome hairbrush like this do not last as long as the back," said the visitor to Johnny's mother.

"They will," put in Johnny, ruefully. "Ma uses the back of that brush a good deal."—Harper's Bazar.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Bride (in spe.)—I should like to give my intended a little surprise before our marriage. What would you advise?

Female Friend—Hum! present him with your certificate of birth.—Fliegende Blatter.

A Great Want.

Cumso (interrupting the barber's remarks)—Haven't you a silent partner?

Barber—No, sir. Why?

I wish you had. I'd like him to shave me."—Harper's Bazar.

Lush and fragrant now the grapes are,
Thistle down the meadows spray,
Camphorated coats and capes are
Nearing resurrection day.

In the swamps the maple leaves are Fired with periodic flame,
Here and there the walnut thieves are
Laughing at the farmer's aim;
In the evening the grates are
Bright with that which warmth imparts,
On the stump the candidates are
Airing their sorrowful hearts.

Mortbund the garden plants are,
Frosts are hastening their fate,
Everywhere the canine "pants" are Getting rather out of date;
Vernal odes "returned with thanks" are
As they oft have been before,
And again the small crustacea are Ripe for one another's gore.
—Boston Courier.

An Unexpected Answer.

"They say a girl died down here from eating ice cream," he said, as they were passing an ice cream saloon.

"She couldn't have had a bean like you, John," she answered. "I'm safe."

He invited her in.—New York Press.

HIS WATERLOO.

He had hunted for the north pole and he claimed that he had found it;
Cape Horn was but a pickle, for he knew how to surmount it,
And when it came to Africa—well, now, I shouldn't wonder
But that he growled when people thought to Stanley he'd knock under.

For he'd tackled Behanzin with all,
Beast, king and cannibal;
Well he knew the Congo, Niger and the Nile;
Killima-Njaro he had straddled,
Though his very guides grew addled,
Nor could Tanganyika's billows stir his bile.

In the depths of Asia's jungles, the tiger he went lassoing,
On the Himalayan summits he had rhapsodized enraptured;
He delved in Buddha's mysteries, then China he invaded,
The doctrines of Confucius he furiously raided,
In Australia, by the way,
He was utterly an fait;
In the bush he lived for days on kangaroo,
He had voyaged upon a whaler
Till he felt himself a sailor,
And for lack of lands to conquer he was blue.

So he pitched into astronomy and the wide heavens disarranged;
Till he could tell just why the sun with small-pox is affected.
He swore the man within the moon is quite a jolly fellow—
And that the milky way runs o'er with cream both thick and mellow;
Yet when his wife forgot
Her purse and made him trot
To search in a dress pocket for it—mind!
There his Waterloo he met.
And he learned that there were yet,
Things that even he could never, never find.
—Brown Perriman in Yankee Blade.

Doubtful Mercies.

The editor of a college paper says that a famous college president, a clergyman, was addressing the students in the chapel at the beginning of the college year.

"It is," he said in conclusion, "a matter of congratulation to all the friends of the college that this year opens with the largest freshman class in its history."

And then, without any pause, he turned to the lesson for the day, the third Psalm, and began to read in a voice of thunder:

"Lord, how are they increased that trouble me!"—Youth's Companion.

Autumn Woolens.

A commendable tendency to lighten the weight of wool fabrics is noticeable in early importations of autumn and winter dress goods. The warm, rich look is retained by ribs or cords, by crape or fleecy finish, but the materials generally are more lightly woven, their pure wool insuring sufficient warmth for the coldest weather. Another obvious tendency is toward light shades of color, of beige, gray, pearl and coral, and it is said white cloth dresses will be worn all winter. For walking dresses, however, the Paris modistes are selecting dark shades as chestnut brown clothe, various chrysanthemum shades of purplish red and gray blue, dark mouse color, green of bold olive and emerald hues, and also black woolens plaided with purplish red, or striped or marbled with green, heliotrope, pomme d'or or porcelain blue. Plain colors remain as always, the safest choice both for service and refined effect, but figured goods abound in pastilles, in V stripes, in crossbars and in marbled designs.—Harper's Bazar.

Limitation of a Theory.

Ethel—After marriage we two shall be one, shan't we George?

George—Theoretically; though I doubt if they will make out the board bill that way.—New York Sun.

1890—The kingof Holland and the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia pronounced insane by medical boards.

Truly Resigned.

There was once a certain old lady, whose son, like Job, married against her wishes. The wife was everything that could be desired, and yet the old lady had not intended her middle aged "boy" to marry at all, and lived on her complaints thereof. Finally the minister called to essay consolation and remind her that it was hardly best to make the neighbors the confidants of her troubles.

"I am sure Huldah will prove a dutiful daughter to you," said he.

"She'll do well as she can," grumbled the old lady, "but her best 'll be bad enough."

"Well, you know the deed is done now, and nothing you can do or say will prevent it."

"I know it. If he had only heard to me in the first place it never would have happened."

"But, my dear madam, this is not making the best of things."

"There ain't any best to some things," snapped she.

"If you could only be resigned"——

"Resigned! I'm always resigned when things go as I want them to."

Evidently there was no more to be said.—Youth's Companion.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The Melopoia will meet to-night at the Casino on Seventh street.

—Holten Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Dunellen will hold a meeting to-morrow evening.

—The E. A. degree will be worked at a meeting of Anchor Lodge, F. & A. M., to be held to-night.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will hold a regular encampment this evening at eight o'clock.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The Choral Society met in Vincent chapel, on East Front street last evening. There was a large attendance.

—The first fire hydrant in the Borough has been put up at the corner of Somerset street and Jackson avenue.

—There is to be a lecture in Vincent chapel this evening on "Egypt, Rameses and Moses," by the Rev. H. Skeel.

—The sale of a portion of Mr. M. A. Higgins' stock at Laing's Hotel yesterday netted about six hundred dollars.

—A special meeting of the "Y" will be held in Bethel Mission Wednesday after. noon at four o'clock. Important business will be discussed.

—A class in singing, to be instructed by Mr. Hazell will be formed at the Unitarian residence-church on Second place, Wednesday evening.

—The Fire Patrol Company which is advertised to appear at Music Hall to-night, arrived in this city this morning on the ten o'clock train.

—The cafe and billiard parlors connected with Laing's Hotel will be formally opened this evening. Lunch will be served from nine until 11:30 p. m.

—Under the amendment to the Werts law, the second meeting of the Boards of Registry and Elections will be held at the same places as the first, but between the hours of one and nine p. m.

—The person who was injured as reported yesterday by falling into an excavation on Grandview avenue, and was mistaken for Mr. J. D. Moon, who "was not in it," appears to be some one else.

—Major W. D. W. Miller will give the first of a series of popular talks to young at the Y. M. C. A. room Thursday evening of this week at eight o'clock. Subject the story of Gettysburg. The admission will be free.

—The U. S. Grant Republican Club will hold a meeting at Spencer's Hall tomorrow evening for the purpose of electing delegates to the convention of the Republican clubs which is to be held at Trenton October 15th.

—Notwithstanding the corn crop is large it is likely to command a good price. It is well to remember that the corn crops are all empty, and there is no great surplus from last year to glut the market. The new corn not yet gathered will be in healthy demand.

—The re-union of the 15th Regiment will be held in Washington, October 22d. Dinner will be served at the St. Cloud Hotel. General Penrose and Captain Paul have promised to be present if possible. Further information may be had by addressing the Secretary, W. H. H. Wyckoff, at East Millstone.

—"The Fire Patrol" with all its sensational features, and with an excellent company packed the Grand Opera House on Monday night, and created a sensation. The play abounds in incidents that are strictly original, and it tells a tale that is interesting from start to finish. The play was welcomed as a refreshing thing in a way of newness, and was liberally applauded throughout. It scored a triumph, and will play a return date.—N. Y. Dramatic Mirror. The above play will be presented at Music Hall this evening.

—The whisky ba become so abominably bad in the little Jersey city of Plainfield that half a dozen men have lately seen a "spook" glide out before them and shake its bony fist into their faces. Drink that has such an influence as this should be shunned before a ghost dance is held upon its victims' stomachs. The "spook" that is at present harrassing the city is represented as a headless man, and so frightful is its appearance that none can behold it without a strange shudder of fear crawling up his spinal column.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—An opportunity is still offered the young men of this city and vicinity to join a class in short hand to be held at Y.M.C.A. rooms Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week. A large number have thus far been enrolled and the first session of the class will be held this (Tuesday) evening at eight o'clock. The membership fee $2.00 entitles to instruction in this class and other privileges of the Association. A deposit of one dollar will be required from every member of the class and will be forfeited in case of non-attendance. The principles of the art will be fully taught by January next.

The State Convention to be Held at Salem.

The State Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the Broadway M. E. church, Salem, beginning on Tuesday evening, October 20, and continuing until Friday, 23d. The session on Tuesday evening will be occupied with short talks by the county presidents. Wednesday morning addresses of welcome will be given by Rev. A. Lawrence, pastor of the church, and Mrs. R. P. Patterson, the president of the Salem Union, which will be responded to by Mrs. H. C. Bilderback, of Camden, after which Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, State President, will deliver her annual address. The sessions during the day will be occupied with routine work, and on Wednesday evening the anniversary of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the Presbyterian Church, to be addressed by Mrs. Farmer J. Barnes, of New York.

On Thursday evening the meeting will be held in the First Baptist church, when addresses will be made by Mrs. F. Chapin, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of South Carolina, and Anthony Comstock, of New York, secretary of the society for the Suppression of Vice. All the sessions will be open to the public, and some of the most gifted women in the State will be present and take part in the exercises.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Annie Shaen of this city, is visiting the Misses Boyle of Finderne.

The Misses Marie and Agnes Steinhauser of Jersey City spent Sunday with their aunt, Miss Rose Verdon of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Mrs. Peter J. Haberle, of Plainfield, daughter of Henry Reimer, of this place, fell down stairs on Wednesday of last week and broke one of the small bones of her right arm.—Somerville Journal.

William M. Demarest died at his home on Crescent avenue yesterday morning. The funeral will take place from his late residence to-morrow afternoon at half-past two o'clock. Deceased was a son of David A. Demarest.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of Miss Laura Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Crowell Baker, to Mr. Arthur Sherman Hotchkiss. The wedding will be at the Methodist Episcopal church, Tuesday evening, October the seventeenth, at seven o'clock.

Mr. John Howard Rushmore died at his home in North Plainfield last evening. Deceased was in the fourty-fourth year of his age. The funeral will take place from his late residence, No. 142 Grove street, to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock. Interment will be made at Westbury, L. I., Thursday.

Mr. Levi M. Bates, whose death by drowning midway between Riker's Island and Bowery Bay, from his launch as reported in the News yesterday, was a member of the firm of Bates, Reed & Cooley of New York. Mr. Martin L. Cooley of Plainfield was also a third member of the firm. Mr. Bates had, it is now learned, $132,000 insurance on his life. Insuring himself, his friends say, was a mania with him.

A Paradise for Tramps.

It is said that between the island of Madagascar and the coast of India there are 16,000 islands, only 60 of which are inhabited. On any of these islands a man can live and support his family in princely luxury without working more than twenty-five days in a year. In fact, on some of these islands he need not work at all, as nature provides the food and no clothes are required.

A Donation.

The Committee on the Field Day celebration of the Knights of Pythias which was celebrated in this city on September 16th, held a meeting here last night and ascertained that on account of all claims there was a balance of about $41 in the fund which the Committee kindly donated to Crescent Division Uniformed Rank of Plainfield.

The Red Men Celebrating.

The Red Men throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey are celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America to-day. The celebration is taking place at Philadelphia and will continue three days. A number of the members of Miantonomo Tribe of this city are participating in the festivities.

A Bible Class Organized.

The Bible Normal Class of the First Baptist church was formally organized last evening, with a membership of twenty-one. The class will meet every Monday evening at eight o'clock, in the church class room, and the privilege of membership is extended to anyone interested in Bible study.

Mr. Murray Injured.

Mr. Dennis Murray, a carpenter, met with a painful accident yesterday. He was endeavoring to open a bottle of ginger ale when the bottle broke and the glass badly cut one of his hands. Dr. Allis dressed his wounds.

A Fall in Lumber.

The wind blew a twenty-five foot sign off a building on Park avenue near North avenue, this afternoon at about half-past two o'clock. No one was injured.

—A few weeks hence Venus will be the brilliant star of the evening in the northwest. It is shining with a vivid white light, and is always brighter than any other star in its vicinity.

CARELESS DOCTORS.

They Left James Steebe's Body Dismembered to be Taken to his Home.

Undertaker Michael Durning of Elizabeth was engaged by the parents of James Steebe, who died of supposed hydrophobia at the Elizabeth Hospital on Sunday, to take charge of the body. Mr. Durning wanted to get the body that morning, but was informed he could not have it until the County Physician had granted a permit for its removal. Meanwhile County Physician Wescott came to the hospital and ordered an autopsy without asking the permission of the child's parents.

The undertaker was informed Sunday night he could have the body. His men found it lying on a dissecting table as the surgeon's knives had left it. They asked Dr. Montfort, the house surgeon, if that was a proper way to turn a body over to an undertaker. Dr. Montfort, so the men allege, said: "This is a charitable case, and it is your business to attend to it. You get paid for your work and we don't."

Dr. Montfort says that he did not think it was his business to sew up the dismembered body, as the County Physician having ordered the post-mortem, that took the case out of the hands of the hospital physicians.

The boy's parents are indignant over the affair. Mr. Durning says that in his twenty years' experience he never before had such a case handed over to him from any hospital, and that somebody ought to be held accountable.

Dunellen Notes

There is on exhibition at the post office here, a photographic group of the leading members of the Amaranth Society of Brooklyn who will appear at Music Hall in "Our Boys," Monday evening, Oct. 26, 1891, under the auspices of Wetumpka Lodge, 3401, Knights of Honor, of Plainfield, who have at this end among their members the following named: Messrs. Charles D. Boice, Frank Hampston, Frank A. Ransom, Percy M. Laing, John H. Van Middlesworth, William R. Craig. Alexander E. Baldwin, William Dunham. Frank D. Covey, Edmund Teel, Jr., Charles W. Johnson, William H. Milliken, John Sylvester, Jeremiah D. Dunham, Walter Smith, Howard Giles, Frank F. Haffner, William Farrier, Charles S. Day, William G. Giles.

The Harvest Service of Song at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening was something beyond description. The church was profusely decorated with fruit and vegetables.

Mr. J. W. Hamilton has been blest with a young son. The mother and child are doing well.

Mr. Walter Runyon is also a happy father but the mother is reputed as being in a serious condition.

POLITICAL POINTS

Mr. Flower Nominated.

The Democratic Convention of the Third Assembly District of Union county was held at Force's Hotel in this city this afternoon. Mr. Vincent L. Frazee of this city was chosen chairman and Mr. J. M. C. Marsh of Westfield, secretary.

Mr. Sidney E. Flower of this city was unanimously chosen as the Democratic candidate for member of Assembly from this district.

The next convention will be held at Fanwood.

George A. Dilts Nominated.

At the Republican Convention at Somerville to-day, George A. Dilts of Raritan was nominated for member of Assembly.

Geo. A. Dilts is a resident of Raritan, is about 30 years of age, is in business in his town and is a thriving, popular young man. He is a brother of the Rev. A. R. Dilts, pastor of the Park avenue Baptist church of this city, a prominent Mason and Odd Fellow, and is well liked in the community where he resides.

Mr. Beckman Nominated.

The First Assembly Democratic Convention was held at Perth Amboy yesterday. Mr. J. Woodhall Beckman of Perth Amboy was chosen as the Democratic candidate for Assembly. Mr. James E. Martine of this city and Senator Adrain of New Brunswick addressed the delegates.

Mr. Kyte Re-Nominated.

At the Third Assembly District Republican Convention of Union County, held at Clark Township yesterday, the Hon. George Kyte of Fanwood, was re-nominated as the Republican candidate for Assembly from this district.

—The first time Elsie Leslie has ever appeared here will be at Music Hall next Monday evening. Her marvellous performance of Little Lord Fauntleroy at the Boston Museum during its four months run there gave rise to a large number of so-called child actresses who strove to imitate her style, but this little girl never made her extended tour until Mark Twain's romantic story, "The Prince and the Pauper" was dramatized for her use. This is the play which she will appear in here, and which will give every one who has not had opportunity to view the beautiful little actress who made the stage production of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" a possibility. "The Prince and the Pauper" is a much more dramatic story than Fauntleroy.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Fever's, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females. Adv.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Outlook in Ohio.—Mr. Blaine's Return.—A Saving of $300,000 Annually.—About the Census.—Republican Battle Cry: "Protection and Honest Money."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct., 10th. (Special.)—Mr. Arnor Smith, collector of Cincinnati, called yesterday and paid President Harrison a visit of some length. Mr. Smith came to Washington on business connected with the treasury department. He has been intimately acquainted with Mr. Harrison for many years, and is looked upon as one of the most conservative Republican politicians in Ohio. He assured the President that the campaign of the champion of protection would end in victory. Hamilton county, he said, was good for an unusually large majority against the Democratic candidate, and the State was safe for its accustomed Republican vote. Mr. Smith left at noon for Ohio.

The politicians who frequent the White House will now have something new to talk about concerning the Secretary of State. A special from New York last night said it was stated on the authority of one of the secretary's friends that his return to Washington would be delayed until after the November elections. It was quite the rage some time ago that the Secretary contemplated returning about the 6th of this month, but there are no indications of it about the residence of Mr. Blaine.

Secretary Blaine in his letter to A. L. Conger, stating that he could not go to Ohio, compressed the issues of the campaign into a single sentence, which is, "McKinley stands for protection and honest money; the election of Campbell means free trade and corruption of currency." It would be an attempt to paint the lily to add any words to this sentence. It is complete in itself and shows the entire situation perfectly.

The report of Postmaster General Wanamaker doing away with the counting of mail matter by letter carriers has now been in force three months, and careful calculations show that the annual saving to the Post Office Department will be $300,000. The free-delivery service was begun in 1863, and from the beginning the custom (for there appears to have been no law or regulation requiring it) had been enforced, requiring letter-carriers to count and keep an account of all letters delivered; all postal cards delivered; all second, third, and fourth-class matter delivered; all local letters collected; all mail letters collected; all local postal cards collected; all local mail packages collected; the total number of pieces handled, and the total postage on all local matter collected, and on all local matter deposited in post-offices, including that on second, third, and fourth class matter, to the correctness of all of which the respective postmasters were required to certify monthly.

In 1864, when there were less than 700 carriers in the country, the practice of counting was completely overdone; but in 1891, when there are over 10,000 carriers employed in the collection and delivery service, as reported the number of pieces handled in the preceding fiscal year to be 3,297,259,696, the Postmaster General has decided that this useless work was consuming an average of twenty minutes or more per day for each of the 10,000 letter-carriers in the United States—an aggregate of at least 3,333 hours per day, at an average cost of 30 cents per hour (a fair average for letter-carrier service), amounting to $1,000 per day, or every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays. Postmaster General Wanamaker's order therefore, he estimates, will save at least $300,000 annually, but the time heretofore thus uselessly consumed can be employed in extending and improving the free-delivery service as a whole.

Superintendent Porter said yesterday in regard to the question of a permanent Census Bureau that the matter will be brought to the attention of both houses of congress in the assemble, in compliance with the resolution of the Senate.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, is decidedly in favor of making a permanent bureau of the census. "I advocated the idea in 1880," he said.

The Senator says that no census has ever yet given satisfaction, and, under the present law, it is not likely that any ever will; that "to take the census as it is now taken, and expect it to be well done, is like trying successfully to fight a great battle with raw troops who have not had twenty-four drills." He is, the Senator says, decidedly imperfect. I have heard of the criticisms of Mr. Porter's work, but I think, very highly done. One thing is due Mr. Porter. No census in the same length of time has been so far advanced as the eleventh census is now."

"While I have not made any study of the subject," said Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, "I agree with Senator Morgan that the best way to avoid mistakes is to make a system, and have the census permanent. I hold this view without reference to the merits or demerits of Mr. Porter's work. It has been criticised, I know, and has been criticised in my own state, but I am not at all disposed to condemn a man without fair investigation. Perhaps the very imperfections of the present system have given ground for the criticisms."

"It is a great question," said Senator Call, of Florida. "There is no basis of the statistics and that our people want them. I believe it would be well worth while to try a permanent bureau. As far as Mr. Porter is concerned I have a high opinion of the man. There have been no complaints of him in my State. I believe he has done his work very well, and I think that much of the criticism lodged against him is not on account really of his short-comings so much as it was the fault of the system under which the census is taken."

The fact of individual responsibility must be impressed upon Republicans everywhere. Every vote is necessary to the success of the party this Fall, and every Republican should be made to see the necessity of voting himself and getting out every Republican to the polls. Let every Republican fall into line and march to the music of protection to American industries and a hundred cents per day for the farmer, the mechanic, the manufacturer and the merchant every day in the year. The triumph of Republican principles is of far more importance than the election of any man in this contest, and he who attempts to ad vocate it should be relegated to the shades of political oblivion until he learns to regard principle above personal preferment, and value party success more than official position. The fall in duty is emphatic and unmistakable. The opposition are in a disrupted condition and are losing ground daily. The Democracy have had enough of demagogism, politicism and anarchism.

HE MUST HAVE BEEN A PLAINFIELDER.

An American Who Didn't Have Consumption and was Ready to Prove It.

In one of the crowded street cars the other evening sat a native of the Queen's realm, and as events proved, a very low bred specimen, at that. The windows back of the Briton was open, and the cold night wind blowing on the back of a pale little woman in widow's weeds next him, caused her to shiver.

Finally she said appealingly to the Briton, "Won't you please close that window, it is very cold."

The word have caused him little, if any, inconvenience, but he harshly replied, 'No! I won't. Fresh air won't hurt you. All you Americans seem to have consumption."

The other passengers started in surprise at this rude answer. For a moment no one moved. The pale little woman shivered again as a cold blast of air came in.

From the other end of the car a large man stood up. He weighed at least 230 pounds and was quite emphatic in all his movements. He walked up to the Briton and extending his powerful arms over him, put down that window with a slam. Then he said quietly, "Now if you think all Americans have consumption fast raise that window again. I'm an American."

The other passengers smiled, and the little woman blushed and the Briton looked out of the window and thought.

The Bicycle No Toy.

An enthusiastic cyclist, and with a good deal of reason too, declares: "The bicycle is no longer a toy. It is no longer an experiment. It is used by thousands for business purposes. The doctor rides it to see his patient, who, perhaps, sent for him in the same way. The reporter rides it in search of news, which sometimes its doings help to furnish. Men who vote, men who are elected to make our laws, all are becoming interested, either directly or through their sons, daughters or wives, in the bicycle, and through it they become interested in having better roads, and good roads are a blessing to everybody."

New Jersey Christian Endeavor.

The annual State Convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, No. 820 Broad street, Newark, Oct. 23, 24 and 25. It will be the most notable gathering of the kind yet held in the State. Delegates representing about four hundred societies will be present. The Christian Endeavor Society has branches in every city, village and hamlet. The opening session will be held Friday evening, Oct. 23. Saturday will be given to the transaction of general business. Clergymen and others will address the Convention in the evening.

—One of our exchanges cautions people to be on the lookout for a couple of swindlers who are working a new scheme. They offer spectacles for sale, taking a receipt therefore. The paper turns up eventually, in the form of a promissory note. Only the well-to-do are approached.

—There were 230 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 208 in the preceding week, 243, 195 and 190 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 9,350 against 7,858 in 1890.

—Already the foliage on the hillsides begins to show signs of decay. The golden tints may be seen here and there, and ere long the magnificence of Summer will have given place to the glories of Autumn. And alas! It will be but a few weeks before our exchanges will again trot out this favorite paragraph, to wit: "The wail of the expiring porker is heard in the land!"

EDITORIAL NOTES

Balmaceda and Boulanger—burned dictators.

What fools mortals are was never more forcibly illustrated than in the bloody nose, treacherous rush for town lots at the opening for settlement of the new town of Chandler, O. T. Before any more public lands are opened for settlement the government should devise some means by which the disgraceful and dangerous scenes of Oklahoma can be avoided. From the way the fighting, clawing, shooting human animals rushed into Chandler a stranger would conclude these paltry lots were the last bits of soil on this earth, and there never was going to be any more.

A hopeful movement, and one of much general interest, has been started in the women's branch of the Farmers' Alliance party. The name of the ladies' organization is the National Woman's Alliance. Its president is Miss Fanny McCormick, candidate of the People's party in Kansas last fall for superintendent of public instruction. There is nothing, of course, out of the common in the establishment of such a society, or in its sending lecturers abroad, to co-operate with the Farmers' Alliance. But the praiseworthy feature of this association is that its object is the better education of women in economics and governmental questions. This is something neither women nor men can learn too much about, especially as at present there is many a voter in this land who does not even know the name of his representative in congress.

Less Law and More Sense.

A good man who wants to reform the evils of society calls attention to the great number of murders in the past year arising from the pernicious practice of carrying concealed weapons. The array is something ghastly of these souls that were put out of the world through pistol, knife and razor. The reformer thereupon demands that more laws shall be passed against the carrying of concealed weapons, especially by minors. Let them be heavily fined when caught and made an example of, says he.

Very good. But if our reformer will look on the statutes of every large city in this Union, if he will examine the laws of the states, he will find already stiff, doubled and twisted laws against the very thing he complains of, carrying concealed weapons. What law can do law has already done. If our reformer would diminish the number of murders by razor and pistol let him go among the people themselves and teach them that if they never carry a pistol they will never murder anybody with one. Teach them that in a civilized community it is only the coward and the sneak who carry a weapon; the brave man defends himself with his fists, when defense is necessary, which is not often. Let our reformer teach community to be good natured and honest and then the laws against carrying concealed weapons can be enforced. It is the only way.

The Latest Born Giant.

Some writer speculates on what would have happened if the inventive genius of James Watts had been directed to the development of electricity instead of steam. It is a fact more or less well known that he had constructed an electrical machine previous to making a "go" of the steam engine.

It may be that steam delayed for a 150 years the flowering out of the greater, subtler force. But at the rate at which electrical invention is progressing now the younger giant will speedily overtake and pass the elder. It is quite probable that the street railways in a few years there will be no motor used but electricity. There are in the United States at present 350 electric street railways in place of only three five years ago. The storage battery system, lately put to the best demonstrator, has, it is claimed, by actual experiment to be 7 per cent. cheaper than horse power.

The electric elevator in buildings is so rapidly taking the place of that propelled by steam or water that there are already 1,000 such elevators in use in the country. Printing presses, sewing machines and innumerable light manufacturing establishments use electricity as a motor.

The main difficulty to be overcome at present is the science of power to run the dynamos. Edison says he will yet obtain electricity directly from coal. Professor Hall, of Harvard, believes he can do the same. There is yet one source of power, however, that has never yet been utilized as it might be. That is the force of the current of rivers. Niagara will shortly send millions of horse power throughout the whole adjacent region. If the signs are to be relied on.

In Germany power has already been transmitted electrically a distance of over a hundred miles. The currents of ordinary rivers and running streams everywhere have a reserve of power in them sufficient to drive all the machinery needed if only the genius can come who will resolve it from its descending water. That it will be done there is no room for doubt. We are on the eve of greater mechanical achievements than man has yet dreamed of. The capital invested in electrical appliances amounts already to hundreds of millions of dollars. It will be as much more before the ultimate possibilities of this mysterious agent are wrought out.

FORMER FRIENDS FOES.

Parnell's Supporters in No Mood for Peace.

M'CARTHYITES NEED NOT APPLY

The Dead Leader's Adherents Say They Can Have No Fellowship with the Men Who "Rounded to Death the Foremost Man of Our Race."

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Mr. Parnell's parliamentary colleagues have issued the following manifesto: "Ireland has lost her leader, but her cause remains—the duty to the living and dead to maintain, erect and unsullied, the flag of national independence. You, the people of Ireland, gave the commission of Mr. Parnell and his parliamentary colleagues the charge of your political interests and the honor and safety of the national cause, you ask us by constitutional means to restore prosperity, peace and freedom to the country, and have trusted by his spirit, guided by his clear intelligence and firmness of soul, we carried the cause to a point at which the tower of victory could be seen by all men.

Gladstone's Alleged Satellites.

"But in an unfortunate hour a majority of the Irish representatives, at the bidding of an English statesman, broke our ranks, abandoned the flag of independent opposition and ranged themselves as followers and satellites of the British statesman, and thereby became parties to the treason, relying upon the national conviction, and maintained intact the allegiance to the independent national party in the country, that the people would justify and support us.

Free from Foreign Control.

"The great leader is dead, but the cause lives on. Reliance and co-operation in Irish nationality, we propose to carry on the struggle until the principles for which he lived and died triumph and the nation's unity is secured. The parliamentary party is pledged to work for Ireland under the flag of an independent opposition, absolutely free from the control of any foreign power or party. This is our resolution. Its realization depends upon you. It involves sacrifices and struggles, and we call upon you to make them.

Anti-Parnellites Not Welcome.

"True to the principle that we are the instruments of the people we have resolved to call a convention of representative Irishmen to discuss in the name of the nation the means whereby to carry out the policy and programme he bequeathed in dying. To our ranks we shall welcome all honest men who believe that the political affairs of Ireland should be controlled and directed by the representatives of the Irish people, and by them alone, who are immediately responsible for the disruption of the national party, who in obedience to foreign dictation bounded to death the foremost man of our race, we can have no fellowship.

"In their guidance of Ireland's fate can be no safety. We appeal to all the men who stood true to the cause of national independence Ireland must choose.

"God Save Ireland!"

"On the threshold of the tomb the leader we mourn defined our duty in these imperishable words: 'If I am dead and gone tomorrow the men fighting against England's infernal power in Irish public life must fight on still. They will still be independent Nationalists. They can still believe in the future of Ireland as a nation, and still believe that it was not by taking the orders of an English minister that Ireland's future could be saved, protected and secured.'

"Fellow countrymen, let it be the glory of our race at home and abroad to act up to the spirit of this message! God save Ireland!"

Mahony or Redmond.

This manifesto was signed by twenty-eight out of thirty-one of Parnell's colleagues. W. A. Macdonald, Colonel Nolan and James Daly were absent. Our recent report said that when the name of Parnell's probable successor was mentioned, the meeting was divided on Pierce Mahony and Willie Redmond.

Despite this manifesto it is claimed by some that the Irish party will be united again when parliament meets. Henry Parnell is mentioned as his late brother's successor as the member for Cork.

The Paris Fund.

The Parnellite leaders are taking the advice of French lawyers in relation to the Paris funds. They understand that, as the money was lodged on the joint call of Messenger Le Caron and McCarthy, without mention of a trust, Parnell's wife and his eldest brother succeed to his rights. If this be found to be correct Parnell's wife will obtain control of £10,000, which she will hand over to the Parnell leaders.

T. P. O'Connor Is Hopeful.

T. P. O'Connor, member of parliament for the Scotland division of Liverpool, in an interview regarding the situation said: "The strongest desire of the majority is not to stand between the nation and the restoration of unity. With this object in view many meetings have been postponed. We desire to show our profound respect and grief in the most emphatic manner.

"Among the political opponents of Mr. Parnell were men whose affection for him is as full as those who were warm as that of those who felt it to be their duty to stand by him."

Concerning the chances of a reunion of the Irish party Mr. O'Connor said: "It was anticipated from the first that the vehemence of their grief would lead Mr. Parnell's supporters into a state of temper in which reason would be blinded by affection. I believe that this stage of unreason will pass away."

No Difference in Principles.

"There is no difference in political principles. Both factions are convinced that the Irish party should be absolutely independent of all English parties and statesmen and that no Irish Nationalist can accept place or pay from an English ministry. Both factions desire to get for Ireland as full a measure as they can of self government and will accept no other. The so called McCarthyites hold exactly the same views politically as the Parnellites."

Remarkable Experience of Two Teachers.

FLUSHING, L. I., Oct. 13.—Two school teachers—Ida Van Nostrand and Mary Lyle—who were carried fifty feet in a runaway electric car on the end of a gondola, were both practically unhurt. The car was wrecked by a freight train.

A Defaulter for $18,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Henry Best, clerk of the circuit court, says that Joseph L. Wilson, the fugitive clerk of Judge Tuley's court, is a defaulter to the extent of $18,000 at least.

EX-GOVERNOR BIGELOW'S DEATH.

Neuralgia of the Heart Ends the Well Known Connecticut Man's Career.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 13.—Ex-Governor Bigelow, who died Oct. 12 in his apartments in the New Haven House, was taken with a chill about three weeks ago, and his physicians found he was suffering from neuralgia of the heart. He was given up last Wednesday, but rallied, a change was noticed Thursday night, and from that time he gradually sank, and was unconscious several hours before his death. He was fifty-two years of age, and leaves a widow and two adult sons.

Hobart B. Bigelow was born in North Haven May 16, 1834, and for ten years lived there with his parents. They moved then to South Egremont, where he attended the academy until he was seventeen years old. Then he was apprenticed to the Guilford Manufacturing company to learn the trade of machinist, and remained with that firm until it failed. He then went to work for Wilcox & Gay, remaining with that concern until he bought the plant. In 1870 he moved the concern to Grapevine Point, just outside of New Haven, and began making boilers, which industry made him famous.

His political career began in 1863, when he was elected a member of the common council. In 1867 he was elected an alderman, and in 1871 to 1874 he was a supervisor. He was a fire commissioner from 1874 to 1876, in 1879 was elected mayor and at the end of his term was made governor.

In 1857 he married Eleanor Lewis, a daughter of Dr. Lewis, who survives him. He gave large sums of money for charitable purposes and to institutions, of which little was ever heard. He was quiet, unassuming and well liked by all who came in contact with him in business or social life.

The Clumsy Husband-Eye.

Again the fractious, unmanageable husband-eye is getting out and buttons are coming back. There can be no question that a vest buttoned handsomely with smoked pearl or cut-steel buttons is more ornamental than the invisible fastening which has no style at all. There will be two styles of buttons for people of small taste—the medium large and the medium small. The completeness of a buttoned costume is an argument against the untidy hook-and-eye fastening, which is responsible for wrinkles and misfits.

White Stockings Again.

White stockings now so fashionable are very expensive. Good Lisle threads are $1.25 a pair, spun silks sell at $1.50, pure silk at $4 and if ornamented with drawn work or embroidery cost anywhere from $5 to $10 a pair.

Advantage of Dress Reform.

Brought a Gift from the Pope.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Among the passengers arriving today from Havre by the steamer La Champagne was Rev. Dr. Hooker, vice president of the American college, Rome, who was commissioned by the pope to bring over a present from him to the archbishop of St. Louis, who will celebrate his golden jubilee in November next.

Messenger Moore Not Suspected.

BUFFALO, Oct. 13.—Superintendent White, of the American Express company, says that Messenger Moore is not suspected of the recent robbery near Utica. "We have a pretty good clew to the robber," said White, "and we are going to get him if we have to follow him to Kingdom come. Watch us while we nab the robber."

To Challenge the Grand Jurors.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 13.—In the circuit court today Counsellor Westbrook and Dewitt, on behalf of Ostrander and Trumpbour, gave notice that they would ask the right to challenge grand jurors individually, alleging that owing to the existing state of excitement they were incompetent to serve in the wrecked bank cases.

Another Fool and His Pistol.

READING, Oct. 13.—Alvin Bess, six years old, was accidentally shot and instantly killed by his brother Charles, aged eighteen years old. Charles was cleaning a revolver and attempted to frighten his little brother by pointing it at him. Charles gives the usual pies—didn't know it was loaded.

Mrs. Parnell's Condition Unimproved.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The health of Mrs. Parnell has not improved. She is still under the care of a physician, and her heart is said to be very weak. The physician in attendance prevailed upon her to partake of slight nourishment. She was too weak to read the telegrams sent to her during the funeral.

"Sam'l of Posen" Held.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—In the superior court Maurice B. Strelinger (M. B. Curtis) was held for the grand jury to answer the charge of murder in killing Policeman Grant. Henry Gardner, a former employee, testified that Curtis habitually carried a pistol.

Monbars' Great Mile.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 13.—At the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' meeting the 3-year-old race was the greatest ever trotted, Monbars breaking the race record for that age by trotting the last mile in 2:19½, the first half being made in 1:07¾.

Hawke's Cricketers Ahead.

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—At the end of the first innings Lord Hawke's cricketers had a good lead over the Boston team. George Wright, the veteran, played well for Boston.

GOV. PATTISON'S PROCLAMATION.

He Requests That Certain Quaker City Magistrates and Constables Be Removed for Alleged Fraud and Bribery—The Special Session of the State Senate.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 13.—The senate met in extra session today for the purpose of inquiring whether "reasonable cause" exists for the removal of Auditor General McCamant and State Treasurer Boyer, also to consider whether there is cause for the removal of certain magistrates and constables of Philadelphia.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 13.—Governor Pattison has issued another proclamation asking the removal of certain magistrates and constables of Philadelphia. The paper alleges that many of the magistrates of the courts, not of record, of police and civil causes in Philadelphia, have been faithless and dishonest in the performance of their official duties; that many of said magistrates, together with the constables attached to their courts, have been participants in a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the commonwealth of Pennsylvania in connection with the collection of delinquent mercantile license taxes in the city and county of Philadelphia, by which large sums of money have been lost to the commonwealth.

Guilty of Bribery, He Says.

The proclamation states that many of said magistrates and constables have been guilty of bribery, by the payment of money to John Bardsley, the late treasurer of the city and county of Philadelphia, in order to influence the official action of the said John Bardsley and others for the purpose of obtaining control and jurisdiction of the suits against delinquent dealers in Philadelphia, it being alleged and believed that the money so paid by each magistrate before whom such suits were brought in the year 1889 and in the year 1890 to the said John Barsley for the personal use and private gain of himself and others.

Some of the Men Accused.

It is further charged that in 1890 the sum of $25,000 was paid to Israel W. Durham, Horatio P. Hackett, William H. Lisl, James F. Neall, Johnson Roney, Fenton G. Severn, Robert R. Smith, Thomas W. Smith and John T. Thompson, magistrates of Philadelphia, as magistrates and constables' costs in suits against delinquent dealers in Philadelphia, from which suits no collections whatever were made for the use of the commonwealth; and that in 1,90 the sum of $81,-194.20 was paid to William B. Ahearn, Israel W. Durham, Horatio P. Hackett, James F. Neall, Ambrose P. Pullinger, Thomas Randall, Johnson Roney, Robert R. Smith and Thomas W. Sonn, magistrates of Philadelphia, as magistrates' and constables' costs in suits against delinquent dealers in Philadelphia, from which no collections whatever were made for the use of the commonwealth.

More Work for the Senate.

The proclamation concludes as follows: Now, therefore, Robert E. Pattison, governor of the said commonwealth of Pennsylvania, having already convened the senate of the said commonwealth of Pennsylvania to meet as aforesaid for the additional purpose of considering whether reasonable cause exists for the removal of any of the magistrates and constables of Philadelphia.

Editors on the Stand.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—The state treasury investigating committee appointed by the senate and house of representatives met again in the morning and examined Colonel Clayton McMichael, of The North American. He admitted that his paper paid a commission of 40 per cent. rebate on the delinquent mercantile tax advertising, lent to them by Bardsley. No commission, however, he said, was paid to Auditor General McCamant or any one representing him, or to any one whom he suspected or had cause to believe was a public official. He also declined to state whether the commission was paid to H. M. Gerhart, deputy state auditor general's office. He further said he should decline to answer any questions relating to his private business.

Colonel McMichael Remained Mum.

The committee retired for consultation, and upon returning Chairman Smith said, "I desire to say that the committee has unanimously instructed me, to ask—first, to whom did you pay a commission on mercantile taxes in 1889 and 1891?"

"I decline to answer," replied Colonel McMichael.

Charles K. Warburton, the proprietor of The Evening Telegraph, was the next witness called.

He admitted having allowed the rebate, but declined to state to whom the commission was paid.

Bell Did the Business.

James L. Elverson, of The Inquirer, William F. McNulty, of The Bulletin, and Robert J. Cook, of The Press, each admitted the payment of the commission. Ex-City Treasurer Frank P. Bell testified that he made the arrangement with the newspapers at Bardsley's request, received the commission and paid it over to Bardsley. He said that all the arrangements with The North American were made with Colonel McMichael personally.

Bell said that in Bardsley came to him and told him the struggles which he had made against poverty and bankruptcy and he finally agreed to make an arrangement which he carried out. In 1890 he made the same arrangement with Mr. Warburton, of The Telegraph; W. F. McCully, of The Bulletin, and Captain Cook, of The Press.

The Stenographer's Report Turns Up.

A brother of Stenographer Burke, who was alleged to have disappeared with the bank funds, was taken at precinct meetings, appeared and handed Chairman Smith a copy of all the testimony taken heretofore.

Was Mercier's Life Attempted?

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—The chief of police received a telegram from Premier Mercier requesting that officers be sent to Tourville, the premier's residence. The reason for the call is unknown, but it is stated that an attempt was made upon the premier's life.

The Missing Student Heard From.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 13.—The Wesleyan university student, Narramour, whose disappearance Sept. 30 created a sensation at the college, was seen at Hartford, it is reported, on Oct. 4 by college students.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Mr. Fassett's Challenge to Mr. Cleveland at Oswego.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 13.—During a speech here Mr. Fassett challenged Grover Cleveland to come out boldly and bravely and say, "Yes, on the whole, I approve of Tammany hall as being eminently a representative of Democracy." I ask Grover Cleveland if he is willing to make such a statement in public. Was it not too bad that he failed in the work of maintaining his party popularity by going before a magnificent audience and saying pretty things about the necessity for Democratic unity this fall? Was it not bad after his speech he was obliged to introduce Governor Hill?

"What friends they always have been. The intimacy and affection that exists between me and my friend John W. Vrooman is not a circumstance to the great well springs of affection that bubbled up from the hearts of either of them as they met on that occasion. The old story of David and Jonathan will be a forgotten tradition and in its place there will be the legend of the Grover union episode. How many of the ancient Jacksonian Democrats wiped their eyes when they read of that wonderful scene. How man Jeffersonian democrats sobbed on their pillows as they dreamed how all past differences had been wiped out!"

Mr. Fassett also attacked Mr. Flower's army record. "Mr. Flower," he said "had no kind words for the returning soldier until 1888, when he suddenly remembered that he was on the roll and the home votes were taken, there were 145 votes, including several Democrats, for the measure, and against it were recorded 75, among them that of Roswell P. Flower, of this state."

Nominated by Tammany.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Tammany hall has nominated the following ticket: Judge of the supreme court, Henry A. Gildersleeve; common pleas, Roger A. Pryor; city court, Simon M. Ehrlich; city court, John Henry McCarthy; coroners, John D. Shea, Ferdinand Levy and Louis W. Schultze.

Beikmap for Congress.

Political Notes.

William Ryan was nominated for assembly by the Democrats of the Second district of Westchester, N. Y.

John T. Gorman, of Cohoes, was nominated for assembly at Troy, N. Y., by the Democrats of the Fourth assembly district.

J. Irving Burns, of Yonkers, was nominated by the Republicans of the First district, Westchester, N. Y., for assembly.

J. H. Myers was nominated by the Democrats at Rochester, N. Y., for state senator.

David A. Boody, Democratic candidate for mayor of Brooklyn, has resigned his seat in congress. Mr. Boody's highly alleged scheme is to nominate Mayor Chapin for the seat which Boody vacated.

The Democrats of the First Burlington county (N. J.) assembly district nominated H. T. Packer, of Burlington. His opponent is H. R. Lowe, of Riverside, who was nominated by the Republicans at Delanco.

The Democrats of the First district, Middlesex county, N. J., nominated John W. Beekman, of Perth Amboy, for assemblyman. Republicans have nominated David Brown, of Woodbridge, in the same district. In the Third district the Republicans nominated James Fountain and the Democrats Beekish Warne.

The Republicans of Mercer county, N. J., nominated Barton B. Hutchinson for assembly in the First district. James H. Matthews was nominated in the Second and Henry Knorr in the Third. The Democrats of the Second nominated James W. Lanning. Frederick Dellicker was chosen in the First.

The regular Democratic convention of the Second assembly district of Monmouth county, N. J., was broken up into two factions, one controlled by Abbett men and the other by United States Senator Rufus Blodgett's followers. They finally agreed upon Thomas Holmes, Jr., Marlboro, as candidate for the assembly. The Republicans have chosen Alfred P. Van Doren, of Long Branch.

Alvin J. Quackenbush was renominated by the Democrats of Schenectady county, N. Y., for the assembly.

The Vice President Beaten.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—An action which Levi P. Morton, vice president of the United States, brought to enjoin the city from the operation of its high temperance pumping engine near twelve of his houses on Ninety-eighth street, was dismissed by Judge Truax on the ground that the engine station was maintained under an act of the legislature.

Injured by an Explosion.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 13.—At Park Brothers' Black Diamond Steel works, at Thirtieth and Smallman streets, the large triple valve used to inject steam from the main boiler into the overhead boiler blew out, exploded. F. C. Ebling was fatally crushed and several other employees badly hurt. Sixteen hundred men are thrown out of employment.

M. Brisson, ex-president of the French chamber, will introduce a bill of amnesty for political refugees, including Henri Rochefort and the rest of members of the royal and imperial houses.

A conspiracy to assassinate the czar has been discovered at Kieff.

THE LYNCHERS WILL SUFFER.

That Is What County Attorney Mahony has at Omaha.

OMAHA, Oct. 13.—County Attorney Mahony has taken another surprising turn in the negro lynching cases. It was believed that he was simply making a bluff for a show of doing something, but he expresses the intention of prosecuting the men arrested charged with murder to the end, and when the coroner's inquest was begun he came in with a request that it be postponed until Oct. 22. He desires to get done with the preliminary hearings of the men now under arrest before the inquest should begin.

The police are out with warrants, and it is safe to say that fully fifty more men will be arrested charged with murder before the week is out. The people who laughingly acknowledged having been in the crowd Friday night are now extremely reticent.

A NEW SNARL AT HARTFORD.

HARTFORD, Oct. 13.—Connecticut's law required the meeting yesterday of the state board of equalization, which is composed of the state treasurer and controller. Treasurer Henry, the Republican hold over, was in his office prepared to act. But Controller Staub, who is a Democrat, had been advised by his counsel that he could not recognize Henry's right to act and must recognize Marvin H. Sanger, Democratic candidate for treasurer last November, who claims an election by a clear majority of 650.

Sanger and Staub proceeded to the place provided by law for the meeting, the treasurer's office. Henry had at the entrance a burly deputy sheriff, who told Staub that he might enter, but that Sanger, while free to make a social call, would be expelled by force if he sought to enter in any assumed official character. Sanger and Staub stepped outside, organized and performed the duties of the board. Henry claims that their action is illegal, and that the corporations assessed can refuse payment of their taxes, estimated at about $100,000. Staub's counsel denies this.

A Boy's Suicide in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—William V. Heiser, aged nineteen years, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He was a brother of C. C. Heiser, a wealthy coal merchant. He left letters stating that some scoundrel had drawn him into trouble with a woman. The boy's mind is believed to have been affected.

GERMANY WANTS WHEAT

Further Details of the New Reciprocity Treaty.

TO EXCHANGE CEREALS FOR SUGAR.

The Treaty Is Not Ready to Become Operative Yet and Washington Officials Are Still Reticent Concerning Its Terms. What Germany Feared in the Bill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The report that the United States was arranging or had arranged a reciprocity treaty with Germany has aroused great interest through out the country. Assistant Secretary of State Wharton says the negotiations to secure the free entry of cereal products of this country into the German empire and the reciprocal admission here of beet sugar from Germany free of duty are still pending. He declined, however, to intimate what reduction would likely be made in the German tariff on United States grain products or what particular cereals would likely be affected when an agreement is reached by the two governments.

What Germany Will Do.

Germany has entered into negotiations for reciprocity with the United States, but the concessions to be made are not nearly so comprehensive as the published report Monday has made them out to be. A United Press representative learned today from an authority whose thorough knowledge of the negotiations cannot be questioned that Germany has not offered to admit all American cereals free in consideration of the admission of German beet sugar into the United States without payment of duty. This concession, it was stated, would cause Germany serious trouble with other European countries, and it was too broad a concession to be offered or asked.

Brought Germany to Time.

Under the McKinley tariff law the admission free of duty to this country of beet sugar manufactured by foreign countries was authorized, but a proviso gave the president authority to suspend, after Jan. 1, 1892, the operations of the law with respect to countries that did not grant the United States some concessions in return for allowing their beet sugar to free entry. Germany sends more beet sugar to the United States than any other country, and the removal of the duty on that article has proved a large item in German trade. No effort was made by Germany, however, to return the concession granted by this country until the negotiations resulting in the removal of the restrictions on the admission of American pork into Germany had been concluded.

What the Favored One.

These negotiations opened the way for treating on the beet sugar question, and matters have assumed a position where the admission into Germany free of duty of some one cereal, wheat in all probability, or of more than one cereal at a very low rate of duty will probably be negotiated. This government will not endeavor to secure from the German government concessions of so broad a character that Germany's relations with other nations will be endangered.

History of the Negotiations.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—A Washington special says in regard to the proposed commercial treaty between the United States and Germany. The negotiations have been completed, but under the law they cannot go into effect until Jan. 1, 1892. The people under which President Harrison has been acting is contained in the tariff act of 1890, section 3, schedule N.

Germany is especially anxious to make a treaty since one has been made with Spain to allow Cuban sugars and other products to come in. Up to Jan. 1 she will get no benefit by nothing in the matter, but Germany at once saw its advantage in making a treaty now, so that it can go into effect on the first of the year. Consul Mumm began the negotiations with the state department, and through Secretary Rusk and General J. M. Foster, acting for the state department, the treaty has been brought to a successful completion. It was signed last month at Saratoga, when General Foster and Consul von Mumm paid an unexpected visit to that place while President Harrison was there as the guest of Mr. Arkell.

She Needs the Wheat.

One provision in the treaty which has prevented its publication is that Germany claims the right to first announce the signing and promulgation of the treaty. At present Germany has sugar coming into the country free under the new tariff law, and nothing can prevent it until Jan. 1, when the president is given the power to shut it off on the 20 cents per pound sugar imposes duties on agricultural and other products of the United States, which, in view of freer introduction of such sugar, etc., into the United States, he deems to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable. Just at this time Germany, with its short wheat crop, finds that a free entry of cereals from the United States will be beneficial, and besides she must have a market for her enormous beet sugar output.

The Typesetting Machine Contest.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—The typesetting machine contest, under the auspices of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, began in the Chicago Evening Post building in the morning, copy of every description being given to the machines. Their product is carefully read by proof-readers, and the time taken for correction, repairs and stoppages of all kinds is charged up against each machine. Numerous letters and telegrams evidence the interest felt in this, the first typesetting machine contest.

To Give Ruby Ruth a Spoon.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—The young daughter of ex-President Cleveland is to be presented with a handsome gold spoon by the Clover club next Thursday night. The handle will be formed like a four leaf clover. It is expected that the young lady will be represented by her father's old friend, Daniel Lamont, who will accept congratulations of the club members for the entire Cleveland family.

After the Sabbath Breakers.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 13.—The police have handed to the grand jury a list of 170 persons who were guilty of offences against the Sabbath laws Sunday. About one-half are charged with working on Sunday, while the others are accused of selling goods.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 13.—Jockey Anderson, [illegible] and killed William Robinson in Gloucester city, in September, has surrendered himself. He was taken to the Camden county jail.

Those Wonderful Sixteen Kids.

Some years ago, in a village school not many miles from the Hub, it was the law of the "committeeman" that the pupils should learn to spell and define all words placed at the beginning of the reading lesson.

The knowledge attained will be evident by the following dialogue, which actually took place:

Teacher—Johnny, spell and define bewitching.

Johnny—Be-witch-ing, fascinating.

Teacher—Correct. Now, what does fascinating mean? Who can tell?

Silence for the space of half a minute, then up comes a hand, shaking with impatience to give the desired information.

Teacher—Well, Michael, tell us what your idea of fascinating is.

Michael (drawling, but shouting with the utmost assurance)—Phwat yer put in yer arm ter keep off smallpox!—Wide Awake.

No Danger.

Lady—Aren't you afraid, my boy, that if you play in the sun without your hat on you will get tanned?

Johnny—Nop. Pa ain't at home and ma's got rheumatism of the arm.—Truth.

JOHN HOEY RELIEVED.

He Is No Longer President of the Adams Express Company.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The World says that John Hoey is no longer president of the Adams Express company, as a result of the action of the directors taken yesterday. Mr. Hoey has been a prominent man before the public for a long time. His position as president of the big express company gave him standing and fame from one end of the land to the other.

Hoey was drawing $30,000 a year as president of the Adams Express company. Mr. Hoey did not resign. It was not a matter of choice with him.

Another gentleman, intimately connected with the ex-president, and with the company as ex-president, is also without a comfortable salary. Mr. Clapp Spooner, of Bridgeport, Conn., was not treated as summarily as his chief was, but he met with a very cold reception from the board of directors of the company yesterday morning. Like Mr. Hoey, he is at present out of work.

Mr. Hoey had been discharged; Mr. Spooner resigned. But Mr. Spooner's action was one of those moderately things which is sometimes called "cold deck."

The World says it is whispered that President Hoey and Vice President Spooner had used their positions to make private deals at the time was Henry Sanford of Bridgeport, Conn. It was very soon after this that Mr. Hoey decided that the time was auspicious for a trip to Europe. And he went, but not until Wednesday, when the City of Paris brought him back. In the mean time the board of directors had not been idle. Mr. Sanford and his colleagues held frequent conferences and decided that it would be injudicious to retain Mr. Hoey as executive officer of the company. So after thirty years of official connection with the Adams Express company John Hoey finds himself out of a job.

The Times says that in 1882 the directors of the Adams Express company, under the advice of Mr. Hoey, went into investments in New England express companies and acquired a half interest in the New York and Boston Dispatch company, the Union company and the Kinsley company all lines operating from Boston.

In 1888, when John Hoey became president, these companies passed entirely into the hands of the Adams Express company by the purchase of all their stock. Not long ago the directors found that it had cost the Adams Express company $850,000 to acquire the properties.

They looked over the testimony that had been given by Hoey, Spooner, Taft and Sherburne in the suit of the latter against the first three. According to the evidence Hoey made $179,000 on the deal and Spooner $173,000. The evidence showed that they had entered in the deal with Taft and Sherburne on a basis of dividing the profits into quarter parts, the directors then figured that about $700,000 had been made by the transaction. On that basis the property for which the Adams Express company had paid $850,000 were worth about $150,000.

REVOLUTION STAMPED OUT.

Several People Killed and Many Wounded in Uruguay.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 13.—There was a serious attempt at revolution here The members of a revolutionary club in the suburbs of the city fired upon the troops stationed near at hand. The latter returned the volley. Several persons were killed outright and many wounded.

Most of the ringleaders of the assault including a priest, have been apprehended Attempts were made to assassinate President Cose and to capture the junta, but they were unsuccessful. Subsequently the insurgents were dispersed. The political outbreak originated with the Blanco party The rising seems to have extended everywhere throughout the country districts but was speedily and effectually suppressed.

THE WORLD OF SPORT.

INTERESTING EVENTS THAT FOLLOW THE CLOSE OF THE BALL SEASON.

Promise of an Exceedingly Good Number of Athletic Contests During the Coming Months—Bowling, Bicycling, Boxing and other Sports.

Is Windle or Zimmerman the better man? It was thought that the recent circuit would effectually settle the mooted point, but Windle's indisposition prevented, and it is as much in the dark as before. On the one hand, Windle beat Zimmerman fairly and squarely in the world's mile record race at Springfield, and although it may be claimed that the Jersey lad was fatigued by his previous work of the two days, yet it must not be forgotten that Windle was quick man —so sick, in fact, that it was a piece of folly for him to have ridden in that race at all; and, in fact, nothing but the comments made on the day previous by press and public induced him to ride. But on Thursday evening, after hearing all the vaporings upon the street and at the club houses and hotels he decided his intention of riding if he was able to mount his wheel, and ride he did, giving an exhibition of pure grit that was appreciated by those who knew the inside facts of the case. So that is the end of the question honors were easy. It was then hoped that Peoria would decide, but here again the calculations were all at sea, for Windle was taken sick and go West, and we know fast as little as we did before Zimmerman broke that debut on the safety that opened the eyes of the cycling world.

A REMARKABLE PLAYER.

A Ball-Player Who Jumped Into the Front Ranks in a Day.

HUGH JENNINGS.

Hugh Jennings, the remarkable young Louisville short stop who jumped from a country club right into the Association and made his mark without even preliminary minor league training of any experience,is in many respects a very interesting character. Jennings, before his entrance into baseball two years ago, worked in a coal mine in a small town in Pennsylvania. His advent on the diamond was made at Lehighton, Pa., where he signed as a back stop. Jennings describes Lehighton as being a beautiful place of about 3,000 inhabitants, but he was somewhat lost while there, for of the 3,000 residents, all were Dutch except two, an Irish saloonkeeper and his sister. "I would never have come to Louisville," said he the other day, "if Manager Chapman had not promised me $100 extra. He came from a place like that into the American Association was more than I could have hoped for, and I would never have reached Kentucky at all had I not been given the money in advance. I felt sure that I would prove a failure, and I only accepted Chapman's proposition after I got me two weeks. If I was certain that they would keep me long enough to work out the advance money."

The position of short stop was new to Jennings when he came, but he was at once assigned to the position and played it like a veteran. Everything considered, his playing since he joined the Louisville Club has been marvelous. Like all good players, he makes his errors, but goes after everything in sight, and the batsmen of the opposing clubs have suffered the loss of many base hits in consequence.

Horse Owners Made Rich.

Secretary H. D. McIntyre of the Coney Island Jockey Club, has completed a list of the winnings owners of the money they have won during the meeting just closed.

A Public Functionary Shocked.

"Some Western ladies rather startled me the other day," said Captain Dinsmore, the popular guardian of the White House, at the Shoreham, "by wanting to know if 'Lige Halford' was in. It turned out they were old acquaintances of the secretary, and he was very glad to see them.

"But a few days after that I got a worse shock, one that nearly took my breath away. A neatly dressed gentleman, a stranger to me, asked me with a pleasant smile if Ben was home. It was the President's brother, and I think he rather enjoyed my amazement."—Washington Post.

Albert and Rowell Matched.

James A. Albert, of Atlantic City, N. J., and Charles Rowell, of London, England, will enter upon a six days' race this winter, if contract goes for anything. Dr. J. A. Dougherty, who says he has a two years' contract with Rowell, signed for him on September 30. The race is to take place either in New York or London this coming winter. The race to be a sweepstakes of $2,500 a side between Rowell and Albert, and the race to be open to the world. Entrance fee to be $500, and no one to be entitled to a share of the receipts who does not cover 500 miles.

Capt. McClung Resigns.

Capt. McClung of the Yale football team, on Sept. 30, resigned as captain of the team, and Wm. Hillman H. Murphy, of Southville, Mass., has been elected. Murphy has played in the nine for the past two years in the field and as short-stop, and is considered one of the best base ball players in the University.

Dress and Fashion.

The plainest dress is always the most genteel, and a lady that dresses plainly will never be dressed out of fashionably. Next to plainness in every well-dressed lady is neatness of dress and taste in the selection of colors.

Avoid the extreme mode; and, in adopting the style of your friend, be careful that it will suit your figure, your complexion and stature; the fashion must not be adapted to her may be absurd in you.

Never wear mosaic gold or paste diamonds; they are representative of a mean gentility, and will cause you to appear what you are not, and most likely what you ought not wish to be.

Let your ornaments be, then, more remarkable for their intrinsic worth, and for the taste with which they are chosen and worn than for profusion.

In large cities do not exhibit any remarkable anxiety for the care of your dress, nor, if an accident should happen thereto, exhibit peculiar or violent emotion; if you are so distrait, many will believe that you have exhibited the best portion of your wardrobe.

Perfumes are a necessary appendage to the toilet; let them be delicate, not powerful; the attar of roses is the most elegant.

Keep your finger-nails scrupulously clean.

When a barber comes to arrange your hair give him complete directions, or he will not regard the character of your physiognomy, but arrange your hair according to the time-worn imposition of blocks from Paris or London.—N. Y. Evening Sun.

How to Wear a Veil.

It takes a talented girl now to adjust a veil properly. Some one discovered a few weeks ago that the prettiest woman in the world would be ruined, as to her looks, if she were to attempt to wear the bedecked short, speckled veil which was then trying to be in fashion. The alarm quickly spread, and now you may walk the city over, you may traverse Lenox, you may climb the mountain steppes and jog along the most fashionable autumn retreat without finding a single woman with a single veil of that description. Instead of the beauty-disfiguring sort, women are wearing great pieces of tulle of some shade to either match or harmonize with the costume. The tulle is not figured, and is put on loosely and drawn in at the back or top in the most bewitching way imaginable.—Pittsburg Leader.

Married in all Weed.

A most unique example of filial devotion is furnished by Miss Jaeger, daughter of the underwear man. She got married the other day and though she might have had fine laces and silks galore, she adhered throughout to the fabric of the family fortune. The whole outfit was woolen—even the bridal veil was all wool and a yard wide, and the undergarments of the regulation dull hue.

Every Woman Does It.

When a woman has got her bonnet and gloves on and is perfectly ready, with her parasol in hand, she always goes back, says a cynical person to a mirror "to take a last, fond farewell." Every woman does this, but few are honest enough to confess it.

Leather waistcoats, bands on the foot of skirts, and buttons of the same are some of the novel trimmings to be used on tailor gowns this autumn.

The juice of a lemon taken before breakfast will often ward off a bilious attack.

A CROCHET VEST.

Work That Will Interest the Young Lady with a Beau.

Rather a novel industry this fall is to crochet a waistcoat for some other girl's brother—to be worn when he goes on any sort of a cold expedition like ice boating, skating or tobogganing. First measure him from his shoulder to a little below his waist and from his under arm seam (if he has one) to the middle of his chest, then get a ball of Germantown wool the color you want and a long, straight crochet needle. Make two oblong strips in old fashioned Afghan stitch. This will give a bristly character to the beard and hair, which is borrowed from the animal whose tissues these stiff bearded compatriots of ours have too largely exhibited, I can never stray among the village people of our windy capes without now and then coming upon a human being who looks as if he had been split, salted and dried, like the fish which has built up his arid organism. If the body is modified by the food which nourishes it the mind and character very certainly will be modified by it also. We know enough of their close connection to be sure of that without statistical observations to prove it.

Orthopedic Boots.

To the question whether boots can be made that will give extra height to short people an English shoemaker answers emphatically, yes. He claims by an ingenious device to have produced the amazing result that any person may be raised from half an inch to six inches above his natural height, may walk, stand and even dance like other people, and the true facts of the case may be ignored, if he so please, by his most intimate friends. The change is effected by an addition within the boot or shoe instead of outside it. A piece of cork, bolstered to receive the foot, is placed inside the heel, and is finally glutated off at the middle of the foot, thus preventing the body from being thrown abruptly forward, as some people might imagine would be the case. The foot, indeed, does not extend in reality to the toe of the shoe, and it is therefore possible for those who wish to be in the latest fashion to have a narrow pointed toe without feeling any inconvenience therefrom.

Treatment of Burns.

The Therapeutic Gazette describes the following method of treatment of burns, employed by Dr. Bardeleben in a Berlin hospital. The burned surface is then carefully washed with a 2 or 3 per cent. solution of carbolic acid or a 3 per mille solution of salicylic acid. The blisters are then opened and the entire surface covered with subnitrate of bismuth finely powdered, and over this a layer of cotton wool. This dressing is to be renewed as soon as it becomes at all moistened by discharges from the wound. If the burn is very extensive, an ointment of bismuth is substituted for the dry powder.

Dr. Bardeleben asserts that with this dressing cicatrization is much more rapid and suffering much more quickly relieved than is the case with any other form of treatment. He states that, in spite of the large quantity of bismuth which he has employed, he has never seen any symptoms of poisoning follow its use.

Biting the Nails.

Biting the nails is not only a most disagreeable practice, but an exchange affirms that it is also exceedingly dangerous, as the biter never knows when to stop and at any moment is liable to bite into "the quick" and cause blood poisoning. Even when the utmost care is taken of the teeth, a poisonous secretion is apt to collect on them, and the entrance of a minute portion of this into the circulation may prove as certainly fatal as the pus on a surgeon's scalpel.

Electric Light on a Painful Surface.

The successful treatment of hysterical rheumatic and neurasthenic affections by illuminating the surfaces with the electric light is reported, in a foreign medical journal, by Dr. Von Stein. His apparatus consists of an incandescent light of twelve volts supplied with a reflector and a handle. Illuminating a painful joint or nerve, as sciatica, for two to five minutes has yielded him surprising results.

Good Health

FOOD AND CHARACTER.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes on the Influence of the Diet on Body and Mind.

Most assuredly I do believe that body and mind are influenced by the kind of food habitually depended upon. I am persuaded that a too exclusively porcine diet gives a brutish character to the beard and hair, which is borrowed from the animal whose tissues these stiff bearded compatriots of ours have too largely assimilated. I can never stray among the village people of our windy capes without now and then coming upon a human being who looks as if he had been split, salted and dried, like the fish which has built up his arid organism. If the body is modified by the food which nourishes it the mind and character very certainly will be modified by it also. We know enough of their close connection to be sure of that without statistical observations to prove it.

Etiquette

AT HOME DAYS.

The Advantages Which They Offer Over Afternoon "At Homes."

At home days offer many advantages over afternoon at homes; for one thing they are much less trouble, and, comparatively speaking, entail but a minimum of expense. In the one case little or no preparation is required, in the other much preparation is necessary, while, as to the expense, a good deal may be incurred if any special amusement of a superior character is to be provided. An at home is limited to one afternoon and acceptances and refusals are expected, but an at home day of weekly occurrence gives an opportunity of calling when most convenient without being pledged to one day only. On an at home day the hostess is accessible to all her visitors, and most of them may hope to enjoy a little chat with her. At an at home she is either receiving or saying goodby during the whole two or three hours that the at home lasts, and more than a word or two is not to be expected from her. Indeed, among the visitors themselves the chances of a little conversation are far greater on an at home day than at an at home, and it is difficult for friends to find an opportunity of talking to each other; interruptions are so frequent, every one's attention is claimed on all sides, and if it is not the survival of the fittest, yet is it the fittest to the front, and the meek ones of the earth get perhaps never a word with their most valued friends and leave it to others whose self assurance to control the situation is more prominent than their own.

Those who have at home days should, however, be quite sure that they have a clear run for a month or two months as regards the number on those particular days, and also as regards engagements out of town—going away, for instance, on a week's visit. Nothing is more sad and trouble of putting off possible callers on a certain day when something unexpected has turned up often prevents ladies from pledging themselves to be at home on a given day in each week. When it is unavoidable to postpone an at home day on account of sudden illness or bereavement, it is not unusual to write or to inform a large circle of friends by note that the at home day is postponed, but it is left to the servant to inform the visitors of the circumstance. The hour is not named on the card, but the usual calling hours are observed.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—Remember the meeting at Reform Hall this evening.

—The Union County Court resumed its session this morning after a few days' adjournment.

—Three new houses are in the course of construction on Orchard place, the street which was recently opened.

—An Afternoon Tea will be held in the Club rooms of the Hillside Tennis Club on Saturday afternoon, October 17th.

—The Crescent League Bowling team will roll a game with the Elizabeth team on the Crescent League alleys to-morrow evening.

—A wagon loaded with straw was overturned at the corner of Linden avenue and Somerset street at about two o'clock this afternoon.

—Crescent Division Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, held a regular meeting last evening, at which business of a routine nature only was transacted.

—The members of the Crescent League Bowling team expect to go to Mott Haven Friday evening to participate in the opening of the new Phenix Club House.

—Major Gen. O. O. Howard will speak to men under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the First Baptist church next Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. All men are invited.

—Messrs. Bremmer Bros., merchant tailors on Somerset street, call your attention to-day in an interesting advertisement. Read it carefully, to the fact that they desire your patronage.

—The cafe and billiard parlors connected with Laing's Hotel was formally opened last evening. Luncheon was served from eight until eleven. A large crowd was present to participate in the opening, which is said to have been very successful.

—Messrs. Hallock & Davis, that enterprising firm on West Front street, who supply men with nice things to wear, have now a large stock of neck-ties and collars. Their derbys, as well, are the latest styles. Look at their advertisement to-day.

—"The Fire Patrol," a rather lurid production, was given in Music Hall last evening to a large audience. Small audiences are now the exception rather than the rule. The improvements in the hall are far enough progressed to give an idea of how the hall will appear when they are completed, and the opinion is highly flattering to those in charge of them.

—The Chinese are very particular about lucky and unlucky colors. They liked English sewing needles, but would not buy many of them because they were wrapped in black paper, black being an unlucky color. A printer used green paper for the Chinese calendar and the trade stopped almost immediately. He finally discovered that green was an unlucky color.

—The Chinese have queer ways of doing things. They boil their rice in flat iron boilers so thin that they burn through very quickly. Some English makers thought that the boilers should be thicker, and sent some thick ones there, but the Chinese refused to use them, saying that they were too thick, because, to get the rice boiling, they would have to spend more fuel than it would cost to renew the thin boiler.

A REGULAR ENCAMPMENT.

An Interesting Session at the G. A. R. Rooms Last Night.

Winfield Scott Post No. 83, G. A. R., held a regular encampment last evening, during which Major W. D. Muller, an aid on the staff of Gen. Hancock, was mustered in as a member of the Post. During the evening the Post accepted an invitation extended by the Y. M. C. A. to be present at the First Baptist church next Sunday morning to listen to a lecture to be delivered by Major-General O. O. Howard, who was formerly Commander of the Eleventh Corps and was at present commanding the Division of the Atlantic. The members will wear the G. A. R. hats, regulation badges and white gloves.

"Our Boys."

The entertainment to be given October 26, 1891, in Music Hall by Wetumpka Lodge promises to be a decided success. Tickets are on sale at R. J. Shaw and Deane & VanArsdale.

The Brooklyn Comedy Company composed of leading members of the Amaranth Dramatic Society of Brooklyn will appear in H. J. Byron's popular comedy, "Our Boys," with the following cast:

A POOR BOY KILLED.

THROWN FROM AN EMPTY COAL TRAIN THIS MORNING.

The Terrible Fate of Little Matthew McClaren while Picking Coal on the Railroad.—The Remains Taken to His Father's Home.

Matthew McClaren, aged eleven years, was instantly killed on the Central Railroad near the Scott Printing Press Works shortly after nine o'clock this morning.

Engine No. 186, drawing an empty coal train bound West, stopped near the above-mentioned Works. The engine was detached and proceeded to the stand-pipe for the purpose of replenishing its supply of water.

Young McClaren, who was picking coal on the track, jumped on the train and began filling his basket with coal that had been left in the cars when the train had been unloaded. While thus engaged the engine had again been coupled to the train of empty cars and when it started on its way the sudden starting of the train threw the unfortunate lad under the wheels and he was instantly killed.

Mr. L. M. French was near-by at the time and picked up the remains of young McClaren, and they were later taken to the home of the boy's parents on Kensington avenue.

The family have but recently become residents of this city, having moved here from Philadelphia. The boy's father is employed as a weaver in the carpet-works which are situated but a short distance from where the accident occurred. A few months ago the father and mother lost a young daughter by death.

Policeman Lynch informed a News' reporter this afternoon that for several days past he has visited that vicinity and drove boys off of the tracks, but that they returned as soon as he left the vicinity.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.

Young Peter McCann Seriously Injured.

A team of horses attached to a stage belonging to Mr. Michael Higgins, the liveryman, ran away on West Front street near Grove, at about two o'clock this afternoon. While running one of the horses stumbled and fell and was dragged some distance. The heavy stage struck the animal on the hip and inflicted an ugly wound. A bystander says that the runaway was caused by the colored driver abusing the horses.

Peter McCann, a boy who was riding in the stage was thrown out and was rendered unconscious by his head striking a stone. He was carried into the residence of Mr. David Bird and Dr. Knowlton was summoned. Upon examination it was found that a deep gash had been inflicted in his head above the right eye. It required fourteen stitches to close up the gaping wound.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Lawyer Wm. A. Codlington is convalescent from his recent serious illness.

The condition of Mrs. A. C. Baldwin of Park avenue is reported as not much improved.

Mr. H. L. Maxson of West Fourth street is attending a New York Law school in New York City.

Mr. Bachman, formerly of this city but now of Asbury, N. Y., spent yesterday with friends here.

A young son of Mr. William Newcom of West Front street was baptized according to the Jewish custom this morning.

Mr. Daniel Niles is convalescent from his recent serious illness. He had been confined to the Muhlenberg Hospital for five weeks.

Mr. Norman Keller and Miss Annie Erickson both of this city are to be married at the Trinity Reformed church this evening.

Mr. J. V. Burnett of Central avenue returned last evening after several weeks' absence, during which he was traveling in the South and West.

Miss Ida Agger of Evona, W. C. Squier of Harmony street, North Plainfield, and Warden Charles Dodd of Elizabeth, left this morning for Pennsylvania, where they will indulge in a few days' shooting for partridges.

Mr. W. H. Mountford of No. 942 Somerset street, North Plainfield, started this morning on a two weeks' tour through Montreal, Toronto and Quebec. The balmy weather of Indian Summer, now due, will doubtless enhance the pleasures of his trip.

The funeral of the late Joel Bryant took place from his late home on West Fifth street yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large number of the friends of the deceased, including a number of the attaches of the National Bank of the Republic of New York, where Mr. Bryant was formerly employed. The Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell, the pastor of the M. E. church, conducted the funeral services.

The Melopoia Last Evening.

The able musical director of the Melopoia, Mr. Chapman, drilled his "class" on Wednesday evening in the Seventh street in his usual admirable manner.

There was a good deal of fun along with the "drilling," but the fact that three very sweet selections were learned, is sufficient evidence that there was also work done.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

EGYPT, RAMESES, MOSES

REV. H. SKEEL'S LECTURE IN VINCENT CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

Kemi, the Ancient Land of Blackness.—Its Wonderful History, and Verification of the Bible.

THE Rev. H. Skeel gave a most interesting lecture in Vincent chapel last night under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, the subject being entitled, "Egypt Rameses and Moses."

The lecture opened with the following poetic introduction:

O wonderful land! the old Egypt land!
A belt of green by the hot desert sand;
Mountains and hills of bare sun-bleaching stone;
River between them from fountains unknown,
Silently flowing by cities left lone;
Long ages ago besieged, overthrown,
By Assyrian hate, and Persian hand.

Obelisk dingers still point to the skies;
Monoliths, gazing with cold stony eyes;
Ancient grey pyramids, crumbling, though grand,
Heavenward rise and in majesty stand
While new cities grow by, and the restless sand
Of the desert slowly creeps on the land,
Over the mound where the dead city lies.

Temples, magnificent in their decay;
Altars, priests, deities, all passed away;
Palaces, fallen as palaces must,
Crowns eaten up by long ages of rust;
Tombs, from which glory "all mouldered to dust"
Finds resurrection, but not as "the just":—
This is the land we re-visit to-day.

"A single historical fact," said the lecturer, "inseparably associates Egypt with smiting, plagues and darkness. The very meaning of Kemi, its ancient name, was 'Land of Blackness.'

"To discern its far off horizon requires keenest historical vision, and the mist-hidden plain of that far-reaching vision is broken only by monotony of mountain ages, slowly crumbling colossi, sphinx, obelisk and temple, while over it all broods the solemn truth that underneath sun-bleached rock, dusty, forsaken mound, and wretched Arab huts lie unopened tombs, filled with its ancient people and the great cities of its habitation.

"Egypt is the notable past of this land is so fastened upon the pages of sacred and profane history, has left so many marks of its power in the world's progress it is impossible to be forgotten, and piece-meal its resurrection slowly comes from its dust and ruins.

"Beginning on the north, geologic zones of lime-stone, sand-stone and syenite-granite, cut the valley at right-angles, the Nile, with not a single tributary for more than a thousand miles, flows on, ever gradually down from the rain-lands of the South, flowing and ebbing in annual rhythm, covering and uncovering its banks, carrying on its bosom the heart-beats of Jehovah's love for the many millions—the myriad-beings of life-getting mercy, ceaselessly throbbing somewhere in the Nyanzian realms.

"A thousand things consider. To make Egypt to-day the challenger of all learning, the Tempter of all travel, the Hope of Christian education, the Text for exposition of every Spade-man, the Oracle, speaking from out-the silence and mists of crumbling temples and tombs, and the shadows of mysteries most protracted and ancient.

"Of scattered miles of richest and most ancient northern Egypt, as known to-day, have been brought down from Central Africa by the rush of the Nile, and builded into the shallow depths of the ancient Mediterranean. Geologic forces have lifted and tilted the tongue of sand and rock fields.

"To get, if possible, a glimpse of a few of its marked characters and the fortunes attending them, and so by a stranger turned up two and two, incident and faith, connect the plain to-day, with the dream-shrouded past;—bringing to mind, from out all, the truths and lies as shown by the strongest tests of long-lost historical proverbs, and by a trophy at the feet of Christ.

"Egypt has a history whose first chapter—mythical or not—covers more than two and one-half thousand years of fabled rule of the gods. Then follows that part covering the time before Christ, which, not a completely recorded history, ending with the termination of the rule of the Pharaonic, 340 years before Christ.

"These twenty-one Dynasties, thought by the ancient historian Manetho, to be consecutive, by others, more worthy of credit, are believed to be, in several instances, contemporaneous. By this latter theory, the most reasonable adjustment of Chronological dates is obtained. Egypt was early ruled by warriors from the far north-east called the Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings, and from their time to past the nineteenth Dynasty its rulers were of foreign extraction.

"Under the rule of the Shepherd Kings in the IV Dynasty, the first, second and third great pyramids were built as tombs. The second and third, perhaps completed under native rule. And yet, so exasperated were the people at the oppression they suffered in building them—and such were their threatenings to dishonor the bodies of the kings who built them, that both Cheops and Cephrenes, when dying, ordered their attendants to bury them in secret.

"Under the rule of the Shepherd Kings in the IV Dynasty, the first, second and third great pyramids were built as tombs. The second and third, perhaps completed under native rule. And yet, so exasperated were the people at the oppression they suffered in building them—and such were their threatenings to dishonor the bodies of the kings who built them, that both Cheops and Cephrenes, when dying, ordered their attendants to bury them in secret.

"Before the Pharaonic ruling line among the known, prevailing customs were those of constructing built tombs, embalming the dead—customs practiced for quite 2,000 years. What their modes of sepulture before that we do not know. The Mastabas were the tombs of private citizens, and were to them what the pyramids and temple tombs were to the kings.

The lecturer described the tombs of the various rulers and citizens, and told of the power and stupendous grandeur of the ancient people whose very language became extinct over 2000 years ago, there being nothing like them in any other land for massiveness and stupendous grandeur and minuteness of detail. The strong religious sentiment of the Egyptians, the political and military ambition of their rulers accounts for the prominence of these three things in history.

"Though among other things they worshipped the sun, crocidiles, birds, insects, cats and onions,—they believed in the Supreme God—in immortality, in future rewards and punishments, in the great Judgment Court of Osiris in a future world, and embalmed and entombed the dead in that faith, with parenthetical exceptions, and it is estimated, that, no less than 731,000,000 of their people have been thus laid in sepulchral rest—more than eleven times as many people as there are now in the United States, and more than forty-one times as many as are in Egypt to-day.

"What other significance there might have been, of historic, scientific prophetic or religious kind, attached to the three great pyramids, they were tombs for dead kings or dead gods, and one, when opened, contained the remains of a sacred transmitted bull.

The lecturer told of the expulsion of Shepherd Kings, and traced the career of the various lines of rulers, of whom the strongest he said was the Rameseau one. It was of Assyrian descent.

He vividly pictured their efforts to perpetuate their names in sculptured stone and preserve their bodies by embalming, and concealing in the earth; yet all their striving after earthly glory did not save their bodies from being meanly stolen by later generations of thieving Arabs and sold piece-meal as mere curiosities.

He then showed how differently it was with Moses, who cared not for earthly glory, rejecting the offer of the throne of the great Egypt itself to serve God, and relieve the oppressed, and when he died, no man knew where he was buried, except as the Bible describes.

"About seven years ago it was suspected the Arabs, residing in the neighborhood of Necropolis of ancient Thebes, knew of hitherto unknown tombs, and were clandestinely despoiling them, selling their contents, as they could find antiquarians and travelers to secretly buy them!

"The museum authorities of Cairo organized a police, under Maspero, they then superintendent, instituted search, made arrests, and by bribes found the suspected tomb. It was a ruinous cavern, a deep rock cut pit, hidden and filled with fragmentary rock, leading to passages, descending, direct, diverted, stair-like, going 200 feet from the bottom of the shaft, and terminating in a family tomb chamber of the last of the 21st Dynasty, the Her hor or priestly line. Here, together, were the fragmentary representatives of 3 Dynasties, 36 royal persons, covering a time of 840 years.

"From the 17th a king and queen.

"From the 18th four kings and three queens.

"From the 19th two kings and one queen.

"From the 21st two kings, three queens, one princess and a prince, buried.

"Besides these, were some of minor royal and also of priestly rank, reaching backward in their date to 300 years before the Israelites left Egypt, or 54 years before Jacob went into that land, and extending down to 391 years after they crossed the Red sea. Not all the rulers of that period are represented by tombs of them. The twentieth dynasty is not represented at all. They perhaps are the ones who were destroyed or sold off by the Arab. But Rameses II was there. His Father Seti I. not found in his sarcophagus at Boulouk, in 1815, was there. Rameses III was there. Nophre-tare was there, and the last of the royal line, Queen Isi-em-Khob or Isem'-hebe's was there in her own tomb, into which these others had come to rest, after 2800 years had been spent. But Amenophis II, the Pharaoh of the throne of Moses thundered at the command of God, 'Let my people go,' was not there. The mummy of the unpitied Pharaoh who 'hardened not his heart and took his people with him' in the pursuit of the Israelites. And the Bible says 'The horses of Pharaoh went in with his chariot and with his horsemen into the sea, and the Lord brought again the waters of the sea upon them.' This sufficiently explains why he was not present to answer to his name Aug 6, 1881 at the roll call of the dead Pharaohs. The great American Blatantist tells of Pharaoh's mummy, the most perfect piece, in undertaking what proved to be a disastrous sub-marine military excursion.

The lecturer spoke of these rulers did not prevent thieving Arabs robbing their tombs, and their monuments being lost in the dust of years or scattered here and there in fragments. But no sepulchral thieves ever approached the sacred burial place of Moses:

By Nebo's lonely mountain
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab
There lies a lonely grave,
But no man dug that sepulchre
And no man saw it e'er,
For the angel of God upturned the sod
And laid the dead man there.

This was the bravest warrior
That ever buckled sword,
This, the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word,
And never Earth's philosopher
Traced with his golden pen
On the deathless page such truths half so sage
As he wrote down for men.

And had he not high honor?
The hill-side for his pall,
To lie in state while angels wait
With stars for tapers tall!
And the dark rock pines, like tossing plumes
Over his bier to wave
And God's own hand, in that lonely land
To lay him in the grave!

"Which of the two, Rameses or Moses, has won the true glory? What is your choice?"

The lecture—of which we have given merest extracts—occupied an hour in delivery, and intensely interested the audience throughout.

The Musical Director.

Did you ever see anything more laughable than the rear view of an earnest-minded and energetic musical director of a choral society when he settles down to business, in a whole-souled effort to get a medley of voices into melodious unity?

With his right hand and arm he will be vigorously keeping time with his baton, his shrugging shoulders and jerky head will indicate expression, his left hand serves the desired turn on the piano, his body will bend and straighten as though to help their voices rise or fall and his foot, mayhap, will be jigging on the floor.

But when the unity desired is reached the listener is lost in admiration of the melody. Not till then are the efforts of the director appreciated.

"BILL" ATEN IN A SMASHUP.

His Train and the "Royal Blue" Brought to Grief by a Wagon.

Monday the "Royal Blue" which left New York at 5.30 in the afternoon had a narrow escape from a frightful accident while on its journey.

It left the Bound Brook station at 6.30, the same time as the Somerville local, running on a parallel track. A quarter of a mile west of the station a wagon, with a load of ridge timbers, was stalled across the track. The driver, Peter Cramer, finding his horse unable to pull the load, and seeing the train approaching in terror had unharnessed his horse and abandoned his wagon.

The Somerville local, with Engineer Bill Aten in the cab, struck the wagon, completely demolishing it, and throwing the lumber over to the other track.

Into the wreckage the "Royal Blue" flyer crashed. Both trains were derailed, but the passengers were not hurt, though all were badly shaken up.

The Philadelphia engine was wrecked entirely and the Somerville engine lost a smokestack and a cowcatcher.

"Bill" Aten is one of the best and most experienced engineers on the road. He is well known in this city. He participated at the Mechanics' reception given recently at the Young Men's Christian Association, and received hearty applause for his skillful banjo playing.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK.

An Important Meeting Held Here Yesterday.

The Classis of Newark met in the German Reformed church on Craig place, North Plainfield, yesterday. A large number of delegates were present. Previous to the convention assembling the church had been handsomely decorated with cut flowers and plants by Mr. Peter Doeringer.

When the meeting was called to order by the Rev. Wm. M. Woodside was elected president and the Rev. Dr. Vislage of Irvington secretary. An interesting report was read by the Rev. Mr. Jensen of Newark in reference to mission work. It showed that the work has been very successful in the foreign field as well as at home.

The question in relation to uniting the German Reformed and the Dutch Reformed churches was thoroughly discussed, but no action was taken on it. The matter will again be discussed at the Spring session.

During the day the ladies connected with the church entertained the delegates at a luncheon. The session was brought to a close last evening.

The Murder Trial Postponed.

The Elizabethport murder case which was to have come up for trial in the Union county court this morning was postponed until the second Tuesday in January owing to the illness of the defendant.

—H. W. Loomis, a Connecticut mechanic, claims to have invented a bicycle that can be propelled at the rate of a mile in a minute. It is practically an ordinary safety bicycle geared inside of a traveling wheel 27 feet in circumference; the traveling wheel is nine feet in circumference. The machine is designed for general utility purposes, and the inventor is confident that it will prove a big success.

—The following paragraph is going through the press of New Jersey at a lively pace. It has the endorsement of the public generally: "There should be a general waking up all over this State in regard to the maintenance of plain and truthful finger posts. The present law does not seem to meet the requirements, and something should be done this Fall to remedy the existing evils. The State can well be proud of its maps; its roads are being bettered every year, and it should be an easy matter to evolve some intelligent system of pointing the way and giving the true distance to the traveler."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Medical Discoveries.

It is interesting and important to note from time to time the advancement made by our friends the doctors, in their investigation of physical ills. We observe that it is now discovered that disease follows not only severe grief but severe fright as well.

In their reports of insanity and nervous diseases we are thrilled to the marrow bones to read of a case in which acromegaly actually acromegaly nothing less, followed a case of severe fright. A blooming girl got a bad scare one day. Though she was in perfect health she began to have headache next day and asthenopia. She had no nervous anæmia but the asthenopia came on the same afternoon by a great depression of spirits. What else could be expected, pray, when a girl not only had asthenopia but acromegaly too? Finally she got so bad that she swelled up all over and her sterno-occipital diameter became ten inches, and the sterno-occipital circumference proportionately great. In toto condition we must leave her with assurance of our profoundest sympathies.

Another of the pets in the experimenting on moles, birds and dogs—tormenting them and trying to make them die of a broken heart, so that he could cut them open and see what their insides look like after they have expired of grief—he finds that the nervous disturbance forms a toxic substance, probably ptomaines, and this causes fatty degeneration of the parenchymatous elements. So remember that is what will happen to you if you die of a broken heart, and don't do it.

In conclusion the paranoymatous degeneration doctor expresses the ghastly hope that doctors and officers of prisons will pay particular attention to examinations of convicts who are either ailing or who die, and ascertain for certain about the ptomaines and the deleterious changes of the parenchyma. He has also found that sunshine follows great fright or great grief.

The Record Breaking Year.

For extremes in several directions 1891 is unique. To begin with she weather in some parts of the country done was the hottest, July the coolest, and September again the warmest that has ever been known. It will furnish the largest wheat crop ever known in the United States, also the largest crop of independent political ideas.

The ocean record between Europe and America has been broken both ways. The world's bicycle record has been broken in England. Running to the other end of the globe, the ocean record has also been broken between Yokohama and Victoria. One of the Japan-Europe an mail steamers shortened the time between these two cities two days and nineteen hours. Inspired by this achievement, the Canadian Pacific railway authorities then resolved to do their best to expedite the oriental mail to New York. By running their trains on the best advantage they succeeded in bringing the mails from Victoria to New York, across the whole continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in 3 days 12 hours and 23 minutes.

It is to be remembered that the globe rounds up narrower as it goes northward, making the distance between the same meridians somewhat less, which will account partly for this raped railway running.

But perhaps the greatest achievement of all is the quick time made from San Francisco to New York to Mr. John W. Mackay in his special car, the Grass mere. The car was attached to regular trains, but by making no unnecessary delay Mr. Mackay traveled to New York from San Francisco in 4 days 12 hours 28 minutes.

It has been made a frequent charge against the trades unions that they dictate to every employer how many apprentices he shall have. An important change has been made in this rule by an agreement between the Mason Builders' association and Bricklayers union, of Boston. According to this agreement any builder may employ as many apprentices as he desires, but the apprentice must be indentured for three years and must serve at least that length of time. No apprentice can be released till he is twenty-one years old no matter at what age he is apprenticed. The master builder must give the apprentice constant employment until his time expires and must not discharge him in dull times. Thus the natural law of supply and demand will regulate the number of bricklayers apprentices in Boston, and no man can hereafter lay it at the door of the Bricklayers union at least, that his son wants to learn a given occupation but tradesmen unions will not let any employer take him as an apprentice.

Labouchere declares, contrary to the usual supposition, that Queen Victoria's savings are really small and that she is not a rich woman. If so what has she done with her savings? She certainly has not spent them on dress. Since their per haps good to pay the debts of that big bad boy of hers so as to make it possible for him to succeed her on the English throne?

A comet has just passed through the constellation of the Pleiades, but invisible to the naked eye. What's the good of a comet that nobody can see?

JOHN HOEY SHED TEARS.

His Futile Plea Before the Adams Express Board.

SUCCEEDED BY HENRY SANFORD.

Sensational Scenes at the Meeting of the Directors to Choose a President and a Vice President to Fill the Places of the Deposed Express Magnates.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—John Hoey, the deposed president of the Adams Express company, took a bold stand yesterday. As was told in these dispatches yesterday, he had been dismissed from office in the most summary manner. He had been accused of malfeasance and had made no defense. He knew that would be useless. He had admitted before a referee of the supreme court that he had made money through a deal manipulated by him and Vice President Spooner by which the company of which he was the executive head had been defrauded. But notwithstanding all this, he decided to appear at the Adams Express company building and attend the meeting of the directors called to choose his successor, and he had the somewhat painful experience of seeing Henry Sanford, of Bridgeport, Conn., the man who had caused his downfall, elected president in succession to himself.

He Meant to Fight.

And so Mr. Hoey drove in a close carriage to the general offices of the company at 59 Broadway. Behind him John Hoey had walked through those offices with the lordly mien of prince of the domain. He was the head and front of the mammoth institution. Late had long been the hours of business men. To his push, enterprise and acumen the wonderful growth of the Adams Express company was largely due. After a notable and grand connection of forty years with the company, he walked through the headquarters a dishonored man. The clerks did not dare to see him. There was no one to render obeisance to this dethroned king. He walked through the long hall between the counters without one. Ladies had long been the marts

DISCOVERED BY A DOG.

How Murdered John Whalen's Body Was Found.

HE WAS KILLED AND CUT UP BY COY

Tragedy Unearthed Six Weeks After Its Occurrence Near Pittsfield, Mass. The Dead Man's Boast That He Had Been Intimate with the Murderer's Wife

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Oct. 14.—Murdered at midnight, cut to pieces and buried in the woods on a lonely mountain side was the fate of John Whalen, whose mangled and dismembered body was recovered last night. William Coy is in Pittsfield jail charged with the murder, which was committed on the night of Saturday, Aug. 29, in Coy's tumbledown little farmhouse on a lonely road near Washington depot. Whalen worked on the Boston and Albany railroad and boarded with Coy. Coy's wife fostered the attentions of Whalen and he became intimate with her.

It Was a Fatal Boast.

Whalen boasted of this to Coy and Whalen and Mrs. Coy finally arranged an elopement, the time set being the Friday before the murder. Whalen collected $82 due him from the railroad and other sources and packed his clothes and hers in his trunk. She left home on Friday night, and then went to Albany, where Whalen was to meet her on Monday. Whalen had gone home and was probably asleep when Coy arrived. To Coy's jealousy had been added a desire to obtain the money in Whalen's possession. He stole some cord from a neighbor's barn and crushed in the skull of the sleeping man. Saturday night was spent in cutting up the body and carrying it to the woods.

Jessie's Room Was a Sight.

On Sunday Coy went to Albany and found his wife, which leads to the supposition that Whalen had confessed the previous night to Coy's wife. On Monday morning Coy and his wife returned home. On Tuesday Mrs. Coy called in Mrs. Eliza Beer, a neighbor, to see "John's bedroom." She said there had been an awful fuss there, and there had. The walls of the little room were spattered with blood. That night Coy and his wife went to Mrs. Beer's house. Mrs. Coy saying that she could not sleep in her house. They staid at Mrs. Beer's two weeks and then went to Westfield, where Coy drove a street car until he was arrested, charged with murder. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded for a hearing Nov. 2.

Discovered by a Dog.

Meanwhile the town of Washington was aroused. Selectman Pomeroy started the search, accompanied by his dog. In a thick growth of bushes, empties and beeches on the mountain side, sixty rods south of Coy's house, his dog began scratching the ground. The dog kept on digging and soon brought to light a suitcase, which was fastened to something still under the ground. Several citizens began to dig at the spot. About two feet below the surface the remains were found.

The body lay on its back, and the severed legs were on top of the trunk. The remains were in a shutter and were found in the house where the crime was committed. An examination showed that the skull had been crushed and that a gash had been cut across the throat. Mrs. Beer says that while Coy was at her house he was uneasy and drank heavily. He constantly referred to Whalen's absence, saying he would not understand where John was. When arrested he had Whalen's watch in his possession. He said Whalen had given him the watch and $100 to help the head of his intimacy with Mrs. Coy drop. Coy is about thirty-five years old, short, of rather stout build and unintelligent looking.

China Alarmed at Russia's Move.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Chinese minister to Germany has arrived at St. Petersburg from Berlin, in consequence of sudden orders from Pekin regarding the Russian encroachment upon Pamir, the extensive territory on the Central Asia. The Chinese government became alarmed over the advice that the Russians had penetrated far beyond the frontier of this district, and the minister was instructed to proceed to St. Petersburg and obtain positive assurances with regard to the intentions of the expedition.

Tim Crough—same place—It did. Divil the wink did I get all noight for the bells.

Halligan—They used t' bother me the same way.

Crough—An' don't they now?

Halligan—Not a bit. I jined the voloonteer foire department four years ago an' haven't heard a foire-alarm since!—Judge.

HER VICTORY.

She raged in torrents of abuse,
He never spoke a word;
To watch his calm, impressive face
You would not know he heard.

She talked, and talked, and talked, and talked
He kept his mouth closed tight;
Her language would have withered him
If mouths had mind and might.

And so the sharp warfare was waged
In a one-sided way,
She getting more and more enraged,
With more and more to say

Till finally, quite breaking down,
She paused to catch her breath
And awoke was the victory—
Men know the reason why.

—Somerville Journal.

TAKEN BY TARTARS.

In 1873 I was a sub-lieutenant in the British Royal Navy, serving on Her Majesty's gunboat Tickler, commanded by First Lieut. (now Captain) Charles Napier. We were cruising in Chinese waters, keeping our eyes open for a lot of Tartar pirates, who are the pests of those seas, and are dreaded by all honest trading vessels. We were lying at the mouth of the Ho-Tong, a small river or creek emptying into the Pacific, and Commander Napier had sent me, with a boatswain named Joe Maxted and a launch's crew of twelve men, up the creek to hunt for and, if possible, destroy the stronghold of a certain Tartar pirate who had recently made himself particularly obnoxious.

We got into the creek and rowed up about five miles without finding anything or anybody, and without being molested in any way whatever. Then I thought we had gone far enough, but, being young and panting for glory, I determined to reconnoitre a little further inland. So, taking with me Joe Maxted and two men, and giving orders to the men left in charge of the boat that if we did not return in forty-eight hours they were to come in search of us, we started upon what was undoubtedly a very foolhardy trip.

The whole river bank on either side was a dense jungle for about half a mile, breaking into a belt of pine forest and then into the open. Here and there were narrow cuttings down to the river side the river was only about eighty feet wide, about the width of a fairly wide street—and occasionally one came upon a tiny village with a clearing and small rice farms. The inhabitants of these villages, we suspected, all took a hand in the organized excursions which Tickler was endeavoring to suppress, but on the present occasion it was the head man of a small tribe which even attacked the village pirates themselves, that we were after.

It was early morning—about 5 o'clock—when we started out upon our excursion. We thought to take advantage of a cool morning air and, if necessary, rest in the shade during the intense heat of the day. Of course we were well armed. We each carried a Colt's navy revolver, the men had each a rifle and cutlass and I my sword. Being fully aware of the possibility of losing our way and not getting back to the boat, we blazed the trees along our route and cut a fair path through the undergrowth. We also kept a lookout for ambushes, for there was little doubt that our pirate knew perfectly well that we were after him. We were not quite so well acquainted with the country as he, however. We made the discovery too late and to our bitter cost.

After about two hours' cutting and hacking at the dense undergrowth and having reached the belt of pine trees, I ordered a halt, and we sat down to breakfast. For two of our party it was their last meal. I do not know how it happened, for I had risen to my feet and was again moving onward, expecting the men to follow instantly, when I heard Joe Maxted's voice shouting to me:

"Mr. Martin! Lie down on your face! Flat down, for God's sake!"

It saved my life. I just turned an instant, in time to see my two poor ambuscaded seamen on their backs with a dozen arrows in the body of each, and Joe on his face on the ground. The whole wood seemed to be alive with the most horribly rigged Tartar villains I ever set eyes on. Some had masks on their faces and all carried javelins and great swords. Well, I threw up my hands. I couldn't do less.

In an instant we were surrounded, and, leaving the two dead bodies where they lay, we were dragged along until we came to a large clearing about a quarter of a mile away, the existence of which we had never suspected. Here was a sort of a village of bamboo huts, little more than an encampment of about eighty or a hundred men. Not more. We were in the hands of the pirates we had come to exterminate. There was nothing for it. They would exterminate us. We had not a chance. Our men wouldn't come after us for two days. There was no hope of a release. We might just as well make up our minds to it.

Up to this time we had been so far apart, separated by our guards, that we could not speak to each other or suggest any plans. When we reached the clearing, however, we were brought together, and marched before the head man of the band, a villainous looking rascal I ever set eyes on—evidently the chief of the band. Joe was filling the air with the most lovely and choice selections from his truly magnificent vocabulary of Billingsgate, and relling upon each and every separate Tartar to let him have the use of his hands and his cutlass and meet him on fair ground. What would they do with us? We were very soon to know.

With a hospitality we could not understand, the chief signed us to sit down, and presently a great dish of delicious rice was placed before us and we were, by signs, invited to eat. Our morning trip had made us both hungry, notwithstanding that we had already had some breakfast, and not even the sad memory of the death of our comrades could prevent our "pitching in." Then came bowls of most refreshing, sparkling spring water. What would come next?

We noticed, as we finished our repast, a perfectly hellish grin spread over the features of our host. He made a sign and said something which we, of course, did not understand. Two fellows came up and evidently said all was ready, for at another few words we were seized, made to stand on our feet, our arms bound securely to our sides, our ankles tied together and we were dragged off. Joe's oaths were a caution. I wish I could print one of them! They would frighten a Bowery bartender.

Presently we came, to a spot where not a tree of any kind formed the slightest protection from the sun's rays, and where at a distance of about six feet apart we saw two large, deep holes.

"Now, what are they going to do?" asked Joe.

I had no time to answer, for in a minute we were dumped, feet foremost, one into each hole. Then the beggars began shovelling the sandy soil in on top of us.

"They are going to bury us alive!"

It was worse than that. That would have killed us too soon. They only buried us to the necks, leaving our heads free, but so securely fixed in the soil that we looked like a couple of living heads on a magician's table. Great God! what horribly conceived torture was this? While we were buried helpless there a brute came and with a sharp knife carefully shaved a round patch from the tops of our heads, then another smeared some sticky substance thereon. Were they going to set fire to us? Worse even than that!

Do not suppose that all this was done in silence. By no means. A horrible, yelling, jeering, hooting crowd surrounded us, and now they came and threw handfuls of every description at us, spat in our faces and slapped us with flat pieces of bamboo. This went on for a couple of hours, and the sun was beating down upon us with almost unbearable power. Then the flies came in myriads and bit and stung us, and the stench from the filth that had been thrown at us was stifling and inconceivably sickening. Then came a cry from Maxted, which I quickly echoed:

"I'm bursting! If this don't stop soon I'll burst!"

The rice and water we had swallowed was swelling, and the weight of the soil creating an enormous resistance, our agony was intense.

"Great God! Why didn't we tell the men to come sooner?"

Then poured forth another volley of oaths and curses from Joe, and the cheeriest words of encouragement to me a man could think of.

"They'll never obey you, sir; they'll get anxious and come."

His words were prophetic. They were hardly out of his mouth when we heard the heartiest British cheer I ever heard ring through the clearing—then a volley and another from good British rifles, and then the short snapping of the revolvers—and then I fainted.

A week later lying in my little cabin on the Tickler, I heard how one of the men, angry at not being chosen to make the inland excursion with me, had followed us a short distance through the forest. He had seen the attack and at once scampered back to boat. Realizing that ten men would *be of little use against so many Tar*tars, they had rowed down the river right back to the Tickler, reported my capture to Commander Napier, who had come himself with a young brigade to my rescue, with the results that you have already read.

Every pirate in that scoundrelly crew was shot or cutlassed in the attack. Not one escaped.—T. L. B.

This is a Monkey Story.

Henry Wightman, an English merchant in Siam, who has been at the Richelieu for a few days, told something interesting about the expert cashiers in the little Oriental kingdom, says the Chicago Herald.

"The cashiers in the big counting houses in Siam are of what nationality?" he asked.

"Englishmen."

"Guess again."

"Americans."

"That is worse than the first guess. The cashiers are monkeys. The great apes of Siam are very valuable for mercantile purposes. In no country in the world is there more counterfeit coin than in Siam. The land is fairly covered with base money, and it is manufactured so well that no human being can tell the chaff from the wheat with so much accuracy as can these apes. It's queer, but a fact.

"The monkey cashier will separate a hundred coins in the time that it would take a bank clerk to separate one good one from one bad one. Each ape is kept in a nice cage, and the three feed peanuts to him. He puts each piece of money in his mouth with grave slowness. If the coin is all right it is placed in a pan in the cage. If it contains an alloy the ape throws it on the bottom of the cage and chatters loudly. It takes him only a second to distinguish the coins, and a mistake has never been known among these clever animals."

A Coffee Drunkard.

A good citizen, who was once a considerable drinker, remarked yesterday: "When I drank whisky I felt that it was incumbent upon me to take as much of it as possible, but when I quit I quit for good. Now, strange as it may appear, I was about as confirmed a drunkard for six months after I quit as I was before, but I was a coffee drunkard. It appeared to me that I must have stimulant, and I drank coffee, sometimes drinking as many as fifteen and even twenty cups a day. There could be no doubt that the coffe was doing me more harm than whisky, so I gave it up. I was a coffe drunkard—just as bad as a whisky drunkard."—Washington Post.

The Latest Juvenile Poetry and Prose. All Carefully Selected With a View to Strengthen Youthful Minds—Sayings of Little Tots.

The birds are flying South, my dears,
And the days are growing longer;
The thistle has his night-cap on,
And the winds blow strong and stronger.

And all the little barefoot boys
Curl their little toes together,
The fall is coming on, my dears,
And with it colder weather.

And out in the forest the squirrels are busy,
Their winter stores providing;
Away in the hollows of countless trees,
Their chosen nuts they're hiding.

And soon the sky will look all gray,
And the snow flakes fall in a flurry;
So let us say, to each warm day,
Oh, do not, do not hurry.

Winter on the Farm.

I have just about decided
It 'ud make a town boy happin'
For to work all winter choppin'
For a old fireplace, like I did!
Laws! them old times was contrairy—
Blame backbone o' winter, 'pears like,
Wouldn't break I—and I was skeered like
Clean on in to February!
Nothin' ever made me madder
Than for Pap to stomp in, sayin'
On a extray forestick, sayin':
"Groun' hogs out, and seed his shadder!"

HIGH CHAIR PHILOSOPHY.

The first time my little Marie, aged twenty-six months, saw the girl dressing the fish for dinner, she came running to me, her eyes sparkling with excitement. "Mamma! Mamma!" she exclaimed, "Mary comb fishes hair wid de knife and it all come off!"

The other day a conversation took place between two little children, a girl of seven and a boy of five. Girl (wishing to show her superior knowledge)—Which do you like best, Queen Victoria or Washington? Boy (simply)—I love mamma.

A little girl of two and a half, on first seeing the sole of a kitten's foot, said, "Beauty dot holes in he stockin." Later she saw some of his hair on the chair cushion and exclaimed regretfully, "Beanie's losing he fedders."

We recently had occasion to reprove her little Tommy, not quite three years old, and told him as seriously as possible that we were ashamed to have so disobedient a little boy. The little fellow listened very patiently, and then asked with an earnestness which completely disarmed us: "Don't you think you had better get a better boy?" The same little boy astonished us the other evening before going to bed by giving us the following improvised version of his usual prayer:

"Jesus, tender shepherd, lead me,
Bless thy little lamb to-night.
And every where that Marry went,
The lamb was sure to go. Amen."

Children love to propound philosophical problems, and I must say I do not find it easy to give satisfactory answers to those which fall from the lips of my three-year-old boy. One of the simplest, and yet a question which even a wiser mother could not have answered at a moment's notice, was this: "Mamma, why can't we see our own faces?"

Frederick, six years old, was telling Walter, three years younger, of a pleasant trip which he, the narrator, took with mamma three years before. "Walter, you weren't born then," he said. Walter meditated awhile upon his loss in not coming sooner upon the scene and then said: "Fred Fedwick, I was wishing then that God would make me!"

"Can your little brother talk now?" "Yes. He can say some words real well." "What are they?" "I don't know. They're words I never heard before."—Harper's Young People.

How a Little Girl Didn't Help.

I suppose your mother has asked you ever so many times to help her by putting away your books and toys. And don't you remember how much happier you felt when you picked everything up and put it in the right place? And that other time when you didn't want to do it, and went off and played you forgot all about it, you didn't feel very happy, did you?

You see I know just how it is myself. Sometimes I put off things until the next day that ought to be done that very minute and then I'm miserable about it.

I suppose one can be so anxious to do something right, though, that he will do it all wrong. I know a little girl whose name is Eva—Eva Gaud. She is usually a very good child and when she is told to put her playthings away she does it quite carefully. One day her mother was especially busy; and she said to her, "now you must be very good to-day and help me all you can." Then she left her alone in the dining room for half an hour or so. At the end of that time, her mother began to wonder what the child was up to. She couldn't hear a sound and to be so still was very unusual. Opening the door softly, she heard the mite crooning these words. "Eva must be a good girl and ba'p her mamma." Creeping in softly on tip-toe, what do you think she saw? Well, you never could guess. The tot was washing the windows "for her mamma," and she was using her best white linen handkerchief and some ink from the ink-bottle to do it with. All over the panes of glass, rubbing carefully in the corners, and all the white sill she had scrubbed with the black ink.

His Trouble.

The reporter saluted a gambler as he stood on the after deck of a Bay Ridge boat last evening coming from the races. This is the conversation:

"Win or lose?" by reporter.

"Win—good money. Big play on last race."

The gambler had won. He was not elated—he did not smile. There he stood thinking of something, and his thoughts presently came to the surface in words.

"I was thinking," said he, "how easy some men can weep, shed tears, cry like women. Only today a big man came to the back of my box with a ticket on King Hazen. It called for fifty dollars against five. The man was with tears running down his face and his ticket, ready to be cashed, in his hand. Poor fellow, I thought, that will help him out of some tight place.

"'Crying for joy?' I asked.

"'Nope,' said the man.

"'Sorry you won?' said I, suprised.

"'Nope,' he replied.

"'Why, what was the matter with him?' asked the reporter, unable to hold down his curiosity.

"'Had hay fever,' said the gambler, looking far, far away.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The public school financial report is advertised in another column.

—A good imitation of a Scotch-mist visited Plainfield this morning.

—A freak in the shape of an ossified man is on exhibition in a store on East Front street.

—The convention of the Republican Clubs is being held at Trenton to-day. Delegates from this city are in attendance.

—Smalley Bros. are furnishing stone for the Bryant school yards on East Fifth street which are being macadamized.

—Two game cocks belonging to Mr. George Voehl of West Front street engaged in a fight yesterday afternoon and one of them succeeded in killing the other.

—The story of Gettysburg will be the subject of the talk to be given by Major D. D. Miller at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening. The admission will be free and all men are invited.

—"Home made," the words sound good, and that "home made" eatables is the subject of the Woman's Exchange advertisement in another column to-day—a guarantee of something delicious.

—Mr. Walter G. Limbarger, the merchant tailor of Park avenue has a stock of fine cloths and samples. He is an enterprising young man, and deserves success. He guarantees satisfactory fits of clothing made by him.

—The meeting the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the First Baptist Church will be held in the Bible class rooms tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock. It being the first meeting of the season a full attendance is desired.

—The annual convention of the fourth N. M. C. A. district of New Jersey will be held at Rahway, November 20-23. Mr. E. L. Sugern of this city is one of the Committee of Arrangements and will give information to all interested.

—Young men with a good common school education, who want to better their condition in life, should seriously consider the opportunity offered by the Young Men's Christian Association in the short hand class that will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow at eight p. m.

A CHANCE TO LEARN MUSIC.

Twenty Members, Not Unitarians, Will be Admitted.

A meeting was held in the Unitarian rooms on Second place, last evening, to form a class to learn music.

Mr. Henry B. Wells, of North Plainfield, presided, and made a good chairman. After reproving Mr. Pardon, who wasn't at all stunned, for talking after the call to order, Mr. Wells announced the purpose of the meeting. Suggestions were then in order.

It was finally decided that a committee of three be appointed to consult with the music committee of Trinity church. Mr. Bazell, who is to teach the class being the musical instructor there, the consultation of the committees is necessary to decide upon suitable evenings for the proposed class to meet.

The number of members, not of the Unitarian Society, will, on account of accomodation, be limited to twenty.

Mrs. Pond and Mr. Wells then appointed the committee of three. To this committee may be sent, before next Wednesday, when the next meeting will be held, the names of applicants for membership in the class. Twenty is the limit. The names and addresses of the committee are Mrs. Pond, 211 West Seventh street; Mr. Wieland, 8 First place and Mr. Roger Lawrence, 19 Prospect avenue.

THE BAPTIST SOCIABLE.

The Programme Prepared—Music, Fun and Refreshments.

The Young People's League of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. L. H. Bigelow is president, will give a sociable in the church parlors to-night.

Special efforts have been made to have the social of more than usual interest, judging by the programme prepared the efforts have been successful.

Mr. L. H. Bigelow will make the opening address. Then there will be:

Piano solo.....Mr. W. E. McClymont
Banjo duet, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins of Somerville
Soprano solo.....Mrs. Martin L. Cooley
Recitation.....Miss Eleanor T. Morrison
Duet Messrs. B. T. Barnes and G. Stevens

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments will be served. The young people extend a cordial welcome to every one.

A Burial Permit Issued.

County Physician Wescott of Fanwood, viewed the remains of Matthew McClarven, the eleven-year-old boy who was killed by the cars near the Scott's Printing Press Works yesterday morning, and seeming an inquest unnecessary issued the burial permit.

"Y'S" BUSINESS MEETING

THEY DECIDE TO HAVE THEIR OWN ROOMS AFTER NOVEMBER FIRST.

The Many Things These Charitable Young Ladies Propose Doing This Fall and Winter. — Private Theatricals, a Fair, etc.

HAVING important business to discuss, a called meeting of the Y's was held yesterday afternoon in Bethel Mission on East Fifth street.

There were twenty regular and five new members present. President Miss Amy Green presided.

The meeting was opened by scriptural reading and prayers. The minutes of the special meeting of September 16th were read and approved.

After some discussion a motion was made and carried that the "Y's" have their own rooms after November first.

The committee appointed to select the rooms is Miss Grace Lewis, chairman, the Misses Mabel Potter, Kittie Glen and Augusta Holmes.

The possibility of giving an entertainment before the holidays was discussed and Miss Louise Green was appointed to select her own committees in deciding the matter.

The "Y's" expect to have Mrs. Barnes give a talk for them about the first of November, and Miss Amy Green was appointed to make all necessary arrangements.

The exact date for the cake and candy sale which the "Y's" contemplate giving sometime before Thanksgiving, will be decided upon at their next business meeting which will be the first Tuesday in November.

Private theatricals may be given during the Fall.

Miscellaneous business was next disposed of, after which the meeting adjourned.

The "Y's" devotional meeting will be held in Bethel mission next Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock.

A DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

The Burglar Was Well Dressed and Wore a Bouquet.

The residence of Mrs. Strong on East Fifth street who burglarized yesterday afternoon and a gold watch and $30 in money stolen therefrom. The thief effected an entrance by bursting in the back door.

A neighbor of Mrs. Strong's saw him depart and describes him as being well dressed and wearing a button-hole bouquet.

Mrs. Strong was absent from home at the time of the robbery.

The police have been notified.

North Plainfield Republicans Organize.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club met in Spencer's Hall last evening and reorganized by electing Mr. B. A. Hegeman chairman, and Mr. H. Newton Spencer secretary.

A number of new members were elected, and Messrs. T. W. Morrison, Caleb Dickinson, H. N. Spencer, C. P. Sherman and Chas. Reed were elected to attend the State Convention of Republican Clubs to-day at Trenton.

Remarks were made by Mayor Place, Councilmen Hegeman, and Buckle, ex-Councilmen Emmons and Smalley, and Messrs. Moon, Fountain, Winckler, Biggins, Martin, Goodwin, Duck, and others. The meeting was very satisfactory and harmonious.

Railroad Accidents.

A coal train was wrecked on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at South Plainfield at an early hour this morning. No one was injured but travel was delayed for several hours.

The train which is due in this city at 3.39 a. m. was nearly two hours late this morning owing to the breaking of some of the machinery on the locomotive. The accident occurred on the draw bridge near Elizabethport.

Now It Is October Raspberries.

Mr. George H. Burgess of Central avenue yesterday showed friends some beautiful ripe raspberries, which are as luscious as any raised this Summer. This is most remarkable; raspberries in the middle of October, and fitly follows our item a few days ago about October strawberries.

A Sun Flower Musicale.

The Altar Society of Grace church will give a tea and musicale at the residence of Mr. Edward L. Finch, No. 210 Park avenue this evening.

The tea will be from four until ten o'clock, the sun flower musical at eight o'clock. A small sum will be charged for admittance.

Daniel Boone.

The scenery for this production, to carry which Messrs. Peck and Fursman have a sixty-foot car was painted from sketches in the vicinity of Boonesborough, Ky., by Artist Goodfellow of New York. The company carry their own orchestra, and a troop of acting horses.

A Socialistic Candidate.

The socialists of Union county have put forward the name of Benjamin C. Harris for the Assembly. The vocation of this candidate is a fiddler. It is how thought that instead of a tame election there will be a lively fight at the poles.

The Jurors Discharged.

The Union county Court of quarter sessions adjourned yesterday until October 26th. The petit jurors were discharged until that day.

AMID SILENT COMPANIONS.—IV.

A Plainfielder's Critical Observations on Poets and Poetry.

In saying that imagination alone cannot produce great poetry, it must also be understood that imaginative or beautiful truth is an essence of pure poetry inspired by a holiness of soul and graced by a natural and lucid expression. All that is worldly and yet beautiful may be seen through a charmed vision,—that is Chaucer's genius, that is Shakespeare's superior imagery, that is Dante's sombre love for strength and judgment in poetry; for poetry which is alone spiritual is not best no better than Shelley's nimble, indefinable, untangible; and poetry that is alone worldly is at best no better than the best of Horace and Byron, negligent of the higher claims of art and imagination. The real art of poetry is the natural transformation of great deeds and truths and thoughts from mortality into immortality. This art or transformation, of touching what is common with the light of perfect beauty, lies in the imagination (or as Carlyle termed it, Fantasy), diplomatic in its thorough trust in beauty, proud in its silence (for "Thought will not work except in silence"), and more sensitive than any attribute of life within us.

Imagination must see the very methods of creation, and in its lucid transformation it must show the finest results of its visions: metamorphosis does not stop, for creation and re-creation are tireless. Great deeds are oftenest done in silence, "that at length they may emerge full formed and majestic, into the daylight of life, which they are henceforth to rule."

In our common speech, poetry does hold a certain place which it will never lose, as it were the undertow of great tides which change the contours of many shores: this hold on life is by use of symbols. Signs and symbols being poetic devices to aid memory, their rarity and beauty lie in the veracity of their report of nature and their criticism of life. Dislocate the symbol from the symbolised thing, detach the idea of brayling from an ass, of perfumes from the zephyrs which are wafted from the Indies, and poetry is in danger, for poetry does not depend on words but on imagery and simile and memory, the setting fire to the embers of the mind that the flames of tender and simple and passionate thought may be nourished into activity.

Imagination must expose beauty in its purest form as well as transpose mortal beauty into immortal beauty; not beauty as we see it by the roadside or in the woods and fields, but the beauty which is possible to be seen in all things. Hodbette's pictures of the Dance of Death seem ugly to many whose minds are affected in a true sense of art, and there are many who laugh at the grotesqueness of their characteristic drawing; but they fail the ideal of marvelous imagination in that branch of poetry. Dante's passing through the realms of Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise, to cite but one of several instances, fulfils the ideal of introspective poetry, and as the Ride of the Walkures fulfills the ideal of mythic music.

Carlyle has tersely divided Napoleon's saying, that imagination rules the world, thus:—"Fantasy I might call the true Heaven-gate and Hell-gate of man." How well that describes the success and failure of the arts, but of a particular poet, Keats, who was so much less a Britain by being so far from common-sense, so far from heavy-witted, so far from Lowell's arraignment of the Briton who makes "the best working institutions and the ugliest monuments among the children of men." It is to Keats that we owe the lines,

"One will teach a tame dove how it best
May fan the cool air gently o'er my rest";

it is Keats (whose imagery is as resplendant at times as the prodigal Spenser's) who left this exquisite imagery without a single spectacular effect:

"sweet music has been heard
In many places; some has been upstirr'd
Out of the eyelids of the weak blind mole
By a swan's ebon bill; from a thick brake
Nested and quiet in a valley mild
Bubbles a pipe; fine sounds are floating wild
About the earth."

It is improbable, however, that, having said prior to this that it is the "spirit of conscience which makes the supremacy of the soul in man and the supremacy of poetry in literature," that imagination can be admitted to be the sole essence of poetry. It is, however, the spirit which rules in the contact of poetry with man. We can not blame some poor dogs for going through the world in their shambling gait with no care for any moment but their very last on earth which they would welcome with ghoulish glee; yet had they some healthy imagination, how much more noble the soddened would turn to gold and inner life be turned to hope. Art has as much if not a more controlling importance in poetic expression; taste has its share and wisdom has no minor part in the activity of epic genius, but imagination (genius itself, too), like faith in religion, must never be questioned, or it loses its own native sheen and is imagination no longer: the thinking man withdraws into himself while the inquisitive man asks why let the stricken deer go weep? When Hamlet describes his father "with an eye like Mars, to threaten and command (wherein occurs that perfect line,

"New lighted on a Heaven-kissing hill"),

the veracity of the imagination must not be questioned on a judgment of the speech, but we should probe the veracity of the symbols wherein the spirit of the the imagination is lodged. Therefore, aside from the fact that conscience (or the moral force) in poetry must be predominant, the soul must be united with it together with indomitable genius, with natural and perfect beauty, and with the coloring spirit of imagery, to produce the best results from poetic principles.

The disciples of Pope claim that his wit assures him of remaining a classic. No more so than that this Autumn's clothes will be in fashion a year hence; in the world of fashion, where etiquette does the thinking for society. Pope may be thought great; but is it not strange that affected wit and perversion of simplicity are needed in poetic expression, or that wit alone can sustain a reputation longer than a lifetime except in shallow minds or through the medium of a narrow antiquary? Wit in poetry is a weak substitute for imagination, when it alone is the conveyance of thought; but when, as in Ben Jonson, in Marlowe, in Otway and Goethe, in Browning, in Tennyson, in Longfellow and in Lowell, not to mention Shakespeare (neither Dante nor Milton use wit in the sense of sparkling wisdom), it is as a sudden and momentary scintillation of simile, its charm adding a grace to the sombreness of genius, and as the grave-diggers lend to the melancholy Dane.

WILLIAM CUSHING BAMBURGH.

THE NEW UNITARIAN CHURCH.

To Cost $10,500. — $6,400 Already Subscribed.

The new church, now in course of erection on Park avenue, for the First Unitarian Society, will cost $10,500.

The original bid was larger, but alterations made by the careful building committee have reduced the amount to the above.

*Of this $10,500, the committee have re*ceived money and hold subscriptions to date aggregating nearly $6,400.

The walls of the church will be completed and roofed in by mid-Winter.

Harvey Humphrey Returns.

Harvey Humphrey, who wandered away from his home in Westfield last Friday while laboring under a temporary aberration of mind, returned at six o'clock yesterday morning. His home-coming was as sudden and mysterious as was his leaving. His aged father and mother were almost worn out with anxiety and suffering caused by their son's disappearance. They were overjoyed by his return. They immediately put him to bed and gave him something to eat. They questioned him as to his wanderings, but he could give no coherent account of his travels. His clothing was covered with mud and his hair dishevelled. He said that he slept on the ground at night. What it was that had impelled him to return to his father's home. Everything was a blank to him. It is a mystery how Humphrey survived the recent cold spell.

Robbing the Railroad Company.

A bold system of robbery has been unearthed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at South Plainfield. For some time the company's detectives have been trying to discover how its grain cars have been robbed. They are now looking for J. O'Donnell, a South Plainfield farmer. At South Plainfield the cars are switched to sidings with the cars isolated. In this way it was easy to bore auger holes in the car bottoms and draw grain into bags. The company has been robbed of thousands of bushels of grain in this manner.

John Manning, a South Plainfield farmer, went on his bond. As soon as he was released O'Donnell fled and there is now no clue to his whereabouts.

The Red Men's Celebration.

Messrs. Eli M. Adams, Richard E. Seaman and Samuel Clouston represented Minisunono Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, on the occasion of the celebration of the Four Hundredth Auniversary of the discovery of America, which took place at Philadelphia this week. They returned last evening and report having had a good time. A large number of Red Men were present, including Tribes from Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Off for Keyport.

To-day is Field Day for the various New Jersey Regiments. Company H., of Somerville left last night to participate in the festivities which are being held at Keyport. Among the members of the Company from this city who will participate are Messrs. C. J. and Harry C. Ackerman, E. E. Fall, Jos. B. Harding and John Reed. The Messrs. Milliken and Mr. Swackhammer of Dunellen are also taking part.

New Employment Agency.

Yesterday at the office of County Clerk Crowell articles of incorporation were filed by the United States Employment and Business Agency, which begins operation with a capital of $20,000. The incorporators are Albert Maddock and Robert Nixon of New York, and Giovanie Ferara of Plainfield. The chief agency will be at Plainfield.

Lost a Digit.

Frank Eick, an employe of the Scott Printing Press Works while working at a grindstone yesterday afternoon caught one of his fingers in the gearing and the digit was amputated below the second joint. A physician dressed the wound.

A Runaway.

A horse belonging to the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company became frightened on Madison avenue yesterday afternoon and ran away. It ran into the yard adjoining Laing's Hotel where it was caught. No damage resulted.

DO YOU KNOW "THE LATEST?"

What Plainfield's Stylish Males Will Wear.

The changes in evening dress suits are so few and slight from year to year that most men know very little about them. This is the style for the season: Collar moderately high, straight cut, or the "white wings" type. Shirt of plain white linen, with three very small white enamelled studs. Tie of plain white lawn, tied by the wearer. Square cornered, linked cuffs, with buttons of white enamel, although gold buttons are not in bad taste. Pearl-colored gloves. Handkerchief of plain white linen, or silk. Shoes of patent-leather, with silk tops.

Red predominates in neckwear colors this Fall. Garnets, cardinals, and other reds outsell all other colors. Puffs are leading the smaller shapes, and the Ascot is preferred in many quarters.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Ex-Judge John L. Jones of Flemington paid a flying visit to this city to-day.

Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz of Somerset street is convalescent from her recent illness.

Miss Jessie Stewart of 96 West Seventh street, starts to-day for New Haven, Conn., where she will visit friends.

Catharine Clark, widow of the late Robert Clark, Sr., died at the residence of her son in Washingtonville last evening.

Miss Ida Ross, who has been confined to her home for several weeks past, was out riding yesterday afternoon for the first time.

Messrs. Rogers Bros., yesterday received from Arizona, a large box containing several kinds of ore. It was sent to them by Mr. Harry Dorr, a former resident of this city.

Miss Racey and her brother Joseph, former residents of Plainfield but now of Montclair, rode in on a tandem yesterday and are the guests of their uncle, Mr. Brock, of Mountain avenue.

Miss Flower, of Orange, and Frank P. Baynon of this city, were married at the home of the bride in Orange last night. Arthur Mulford was best man and the ushers were Otis Olmsted, C. E. Flower and Clarence Murphy.

Mr. Thomas H. Pittis of Central avenue is having extensive improvements made to his property, of which he owns a large tract. A portion of it is to be sold off as close lots are advertised. It is a very attractive locality.

Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson of South Plainfield will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home this evening. The South Plainfield Cornet Band will furnish the music. Cowell Division, Sons of Temperance will attend in a body.

A number of young people from this city attended a sociable given under the auspices of Central Circle in Arcanum Hall, Westfield, last evening and they report having had an enjoyable time. The committee in charge of the affair was Messrs. C. Cox, G. Foster, F. Crouch, and J. Frazee.

CHRONOTHANATOLETRON.

Don't Get Scared—Its Only the Name of a Play.

"Chronothanatoletron" is the original title of a piece suitable for private theatricals, which an energetic and charitable band of Plainfield young ladies may put upon the stage with success at no very distant date. What a terrific name?

And yet the "Y's" will make an enjoyable play of it, for there's lots of talent among them.

Fractured his Shoulder Blade.

George Rickert of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, met with a painful accident Tuesday afternoon. He was leading a horse from a blacksmith shop, when the animal suddenly reared, throwing Mr. Rickert and fracturing his shoulder blade. The fumbling attending him. A few years ago while Mr. Rickert was driving Gazelle steamer to a fire he neglected to strap himself in the seat and while crossing a water break in the road he was thrown off of the seat and one of his legs fractured in two places.

"From Nigh About Plainfield."

M. Quad, the humorous writer, in Tuesday's Evening World has a half column article about a green countryman, who said, according to the writer, that he was from "nigh about Plainfield."

M. Quad makes him so ridiculously behind the times however, that it is evident the young granger was off as to his place of residence, and was from New Brunswick, Westfield or Elizabeth, and not from this energetic and progressive city.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest proposition, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Lecturing That Pays.

The two things most to be dreaded by the public lecturer, according to George R. Wendling, in The Globe-Democrat, are the introducing fiend and the spare room business. No lecture committees can ever understand, apparently, that a lecturer wants to go to a hotel and have his time to himself, in peace and quiet, before he speaks. There are some good souls who even insist on making a large dinner or tea party and inviting all the notabilities of the place to call on the speaker just before the hour for the greatest effort of his life. These people and those who insist on making a lecturer take the spare room in a private house and entertain company will undoubtedly go when they die to the same place with the girl who quickens the kitchen fire with kerosene.

Mr. Wendling assures us that lecturing is not dying out, that on the contrary it was never more in request. At present annually there are certainly not less than 5,000 addresses delivered in lecture courses every year. The business is mainly in the hands of four lecture bureaus that make engagements for the speakers and make a charge for advertising and commission. These are the Redpath of Boston and Chicago, the Star of New York, Slayton of Chicago and New York and Major Pond's bureau of New York.

Mr. Wendling gives the names of nearly 200 persons who make much or all of their living in the lecture field, and in some cases it is a handsome living, in his own for instance. He himself has spoken 1,300 nights in seven years. The prices range all the way from $150 down to $25 for a single lecture. Of the list of speakers given in the most of them is fairly well occupied, and a dozen of them have more engagements than they can fill. It is a little odd, the number of preachers on the list. There are over fifty who have time from their pastoral labor to devote to pay lectures, but not a single doctor. A physician, to practice his profession successfully, cannot travel and leave his patients at home.

There are quite as good lecturers now as there were twenty-five years ago, in the judgment of our writer. Miss Willard and Kate Field are unsurpassed among women, and, excepting only Beecher, there are preacher lecturers now as eloquent as ever thrilled a multitude by words from the platform. One word of advice is dropped to local lecture committees that is worth heeding: Do not want your course unless you have sold tickets enough beforehand to cover all expenses. Never depend at all on what you may take in at the door on the lecture evening.

Who was the greatest lecturer ever in America? Wendell Phillips, says Mr. Wendling.

Two Roads to Temperance.

His little majesty, the emperor of Germany, has determined to law temperance into his people. With his own fair hands he has aided in drafting a bill which shall diminish and punish drunkenness. He will have in the bill a clause making the Salvation Army a legal moral engine in his realm.

His advisers know better the temper of the German people than he does, and have heard, which he probably never has, of the strenuous opposition of Germans in the United States to all prohibition laws, on the ground that they are an undue interference with personal liberty, meddling with a man's natural right to eat and drink what he pleases. But the emperor will not have it, and will insist on the passage of his bill. The spectacle of the emperor with a large proportion of his reichstag locking horns on the prohibition question may therefore be looked for with interest.

Meantime the Chicago Tribune, with the feeling of satisfaction arising only from good digestion and a clear conscience, makes the following gentle and optimistic prediction of the time when all mankind shall follow the peaceful paths of total abstinence:

Men are growing more temperate, not because the law says they shall not have a chance to get drunk, but because public sentiment imposes upon them the conviction that they cannot afford to get drunk. It is by strengthening this sentiment that the work of temperance reform is to be chiefly promoted. Tell a man the law says he shall not get drunk and he is quite likely to do it out of spite; convince him that "it does not pay" to get drunk and no law will be needed.

The Mormon conference accuses the United States Utah commission of falsehood in declaring there have been polygamous marriages in the territory since the saints promised they would not do so any more. The conference says there have been no plural marriages in the time specified, because President Woodruff said there had not. "I know it is so, for he said so," remarks the gentle old innocent in the "Story of an African Farm."

The American Authors' association for defending the writing lamb from the publishing wolf might well make comic notes of the plan which has been devised in France. The scheme there is to force all the writers of books into a great syndicate, which shall publish its own works, hiring an agent at a salary to attend to the printing and distribution.

Two more revolutions have broken out among the Central American republics, spray them with Paris green.

JOHN HOEY HAD NO STOCK

He Sold Out Before the Deal Was Made.

CLAPP SPOONER ALSO UNLOADED.

It Is Said Both Men Held Their High Offices and Hoey Drew $90,000 in Salary After Their Financial Interest in the Adams Express Ceased.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Wall street has been astounded by new revelations in the Adams Express company's imbroglio, and the hundreds of business and social friends of John Hoey, the deposed president, were pained to learn that he sold out every dollar's worth of his stock in the corporation just before the Boston Dispatch and Kinsley Express negotiations.

Clapp Spooner, the Hoey vice president, was in the same transaction, and he, too, disposed of all of his holdings in the company's shares prior to the "turn" which enriched him to the extent of $172,330. The committee of investigation was thunderstruck when these discoveries were made.

"Just think of it," said one of the managers of the company, "the president and vice president of the great Adams Express company sell all their stock and then buy enough proxies for the company, paying for it out of the treasury $700,000 more than it is worth." The speaker was excited, and before he cooled off he indulgently dropped the remark that another gentleman, high in the councils of the company, was also in the deal, which he called a very questionable transaction.

Criminal Prosecutions Probable.

It is said that a good many suspicious enterprises and items have been discovered in the books since the president and vice president will be called upon to explain.

"You may say," exclaimed President Sanford as he ran nervously over up his tall form, "that the officers of this company will spare no effort to recover the large sums of money which have been unlawfully taken from the treasury. Suits will undoubtedly be brought and criminal prosecutions may even follow. Mr. Hoey does not own a dollar's worth of stock," said the president, "and I expect to say that this statement also applies to Mr. Spooner." With not a dollar in the company, the old president and vice president, soon after they went into office in 1888, actually sold out all of their shares of stock and the same men made the trade by which the Adams Express company acquired the Boston Dispatch company and Kinsley Express companies in New England for the sum of $650,000.

The new officers find that Hoey and Spooner, who acknowledged in the supreme court before Judge Ingraham last April that they divided the sum of $700,000 profits on this deal, did not own a dollar's worth of stock at the time of the transaction nor for the past three years. Yet they held office during that time until forced out, and the president has actually drawn nearly $90,000 in salary since ceasing to be a shareholder.

Henry C. Taft Accused, Too.

Henry C. Taft is said to be the fourth man involved in the deal, "number three" being incognito at present. The committee of investigation will meet again this afternoon, and they are prepared for any sort of a surprise.

A Most Audacious Scheme.

"It is my wonder that we wanted to get rid of those two men?" said a manager yesterday with indignation. "It is the most remarkable situation ever coming to my knowledge," he continued. "How two men, with not a penny's worth of interest in a company with a capital of $21,000,000 could possibly get hold of a $700,000 deal and continue in office three years without discovery, passes my understanding. It was one of the cleverest and most audacious schemes of financiering in the history of Wall street. And now it is said that the law cannot reach the ex-president. The worst part of it is that we have discovered that we cannot collect a dollar from the two ex-officers, there are so many judgments already ahead of us."

They Say Hoey Explain.

Friends of Hoey say he will make a statement soon and completely exonerate himself from the charge of malfeasance in office. Hoey, on the other hand, is to be annoyed to him. Stockholders are becoming a trifle nervous over the revelations in the affairs of the old rock ribbed Adams Express company, and the stock was sold off from 147 to 140 since the exposure.

Spooner Will Not Talk.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 15.—The story of the double dealing practiced by ex-Vice President Clapp Spooner has caused much astonishment here where Spooner has lived for the past thirty years.

He resides in a palatial house on Golden Hill, the fashionable residential street; has been a pillar of Christ (Episcopal) church, and has always been regarded as a model of uprightness in business dealings. When seen by a reporter he displayed much agitation, but refused to talk. Mr. Spooner's wealth has been poor during the past year, and he has also been greatly affected by grief at the sudden death of his wife. Henry Sanford, whose investigations resulted in the discomfiture of Hoey and Spooner, lives within a stone's throw of the latter's home,

THE CITY OF ROME SAFE

She Was Reported Lost Of Newfoundland.

THE CRUISER CASTA TURNS UP.

Reported at Lewes, Del., in Rather Bad Shape with Two Men Fatally Injured by a Lamp Explosion—Her Thrilling Experience During the Big Storm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Since the receipt of the news that the Oregon had been sunk nothing has occasioned such agitation and consternation in shipping circles as the report which was sent out early last evening in the shape of a telegram from St. Johns, N. F., stating that the City of Rome, of the Anchor line, which sailed from this port Oct. 10, had been lost off R. Shoots. It was a very brief message, but it was full of horrible import. It true t ment that 678 people, passengers and rew, had been drowned. Finally it transpired that the Anchor line City of Rome was not lost, but that a woman, who laimed to be the soul surviving member of a crew of forty-three, had arrived at Trepassey, N. F., and said that a tramp cattle steamer named the City of Rome had become a total wreck on Monday night at Marine cove, St Mary's bay.

The Cittа di Roma.

But when the first feelings of relief were over at the discovery that it wasn't the big City of Rome, a search was made to discover what sort of a steamer it was that was bearing her name. At the steamship offices they all declared that they had never heard of such a vessel. The shipping lists did reveal the existence of a freight vessel, the Citta di Roma, which is Italian or the City of Rome. This vessel sailed from New Orleans Sept. 28, bound for Bordeaux and Queenstown, and touched at Norfolk on Sept. 30.

The City of Rome Safe.

Late in the evening Henderson Brothers received a telegram from the operator at Cape Race stating that the City of Rome had passed there, all safe on Tuesday. As Cape Race is twenty miles beyond where it is reported that the wreck has taken place, this dispatch removed any lingering shadow of suspicion that might have remained that it was the big City of Rome, of the Anchor line, which had foundered.

Believed to be the Durham City.

It is now believed that the wrecked ship is the Durham City, which sailed from Boston last Wednesday for London with 34 head of Canadian cattle belonging to Robert Bickerdike, of Montreal. The cattle foreman in charge was named Riley. The Durham City carried a crew of fifty hands. The dispatches which have been received here, however, all call the boat the City of Rome, and a dispatch from Halifax states that the captain and crew were all drunk.

The Sensational Report.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Oct. 15.—James Brennan, belonging to Sligo, Ireland, has arrived in Trepassey from Peter's river and says he is the only survivor of the crew of forty-three of the steamer City of Rome, which became a total wreck Monday night at Marine Cove, St. Mary's bay.

The says the captain, crew and officers were all drunk and not able to save themselves. He washthrown up on the cliff and rescued by a man named Lundrigan. The City of Rome had 575 head of cattle, flour in sacks and Indian corn on board. Brennan says the steamer was commanded by Captain John Thomas Kelly, and left Montreal Oct. 7 bound for Dundee. St. Shott's bay is the fatal spot where so many vessels have been recently wrecked.

The Atlanta Safe.

LEWES, Del., Oct. 15.—The United States steamer Atlanta is here awaiting orders. She was in the gale fifty-four hours. Her mawser pipe was broken and her forward compartment was filled with water. In covering a lamp to make an investigation of the hold an explosion occurred and six men were badly burned. Two of these men are not expected to live.

Captain Bartolatte Not Kelly.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 15.—The steamship Citta di Roma, reported wrecked at Marine Cove, St. Mary's bay, N. F., left this port on Sept. 28 for Bordeaux, via Norfolk, Va. She touched at the latter point on Sept. 30th, since which time she has not been heard from. She was in command of Captain Bartolatte and carried forty men all Italians.

The Despatch's Crew at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—The survivors of the ill-fated United States steamer Despatch, numbering sixty-nine officers and men, have arrived in this city under command of Lieutenant Noel and Chief Engineer Ogden.

Hayes Re-elected Commander.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—The commander in chief of the Loyal legion at its annual session here elected officers as follows: Commander in chief, Rutherford B. Hayes; senior vice commander, Rear Admiral J. J. Almy; recorder, Colonel John P. Nicholson; register, Colonel Albert Ordway. The meeting will probably settle the question of the removal of the Loyal Legion Library and Museum of War Relics here at a cost of $300,000. Of this amount $150,000 has been raised.

Stout Was Short $40,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Some time ago Thomas H. Stout, a confidential employe of Samuel Hallis & Co., of 50 Broadway, fled on the stermer Germanic and left a letter saying he was defaulter. The firm looked over his accounts, but could find no shortage. It has just been discovered that Stout was short $40,000.

Lehigh Will Contest.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 15.—Full returns from the election show an apparent majority of 199 for Haynes for mayor. It is alleged, however, that this majority was obtained by fraud, and Lehlbach, the Republican candidate, and the Republican county committee propose to contest the result.

To Enforce Pittsburg's Sunday Laws.

ROBERT RAY HAMILTON IS DEAD,

That Fact Has at Last Been Established by a Coroner's Jury.

MARKET LAKE, Idaho, Oct. 15.—Coroner Henry Cole, of Evanston, Uniteh county, Wy., has arrived here after a journey of two weeks' duration to Jackson's Lake, in the northwest corner of Wyoming, where he held an inquest over the body of the late Robert Ray Hamilton, of New York, who was drowned in Snake river more than a year ago.

The body was disinterred by Coroner Cole on Oct. 9 and carefully examined for such marks as would identify it if it were really the body of Robert Ray Hamilton. Further than this he had, while riding in Central park one morning, fallen from his horse and had fractured his left leg below the knee.

When this fracture healed the growth of the bone formed a promin nt projection on the front of the shin. The body disinterred fully answered the above description, and the coroner's jury, composed of Robert E. Miller, Andrew Matteon and C. F. Hamm, rendered the following verdict:

We, the coroner's jury, do find that the name of the deceased is Robert Ray Hamilton, aged about thirty-nine years, and that he came to his death by being accidentally drowned in attempting to cross Snake river below Jackson's lake. According to the evidence furnished by his watch, Hamilton was drowned at 9:30 o'clock on Saturday night, Aug. 25, 1890.

The picture presented when the cover of the rude box in which the remains were found had been removed was pitiful.

Here lay the body of one who had served his constituents well in the assembly, and who was, moreover, a great-grandson of one of the signers of the Declaration statement. It was crowded into a box too shallow to allow the feet to remain upright. It was clothed in a rough woolen coat, waistcoat and shirt, and in trousers that had been cut off below the knee into the semblance of knickerbockers. Thick leather leggings and leather shoes were on the bare extremities, and a pair of heavy spurs were strapped over all. Around these were twined long shreds of water grass.

A Live Man in the Morgue.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 15.—Beverly Brown (colored), confined in the Hudson county jail awaiting examination as to his sanity, was taken suddenly ill, Wednesday morning he was found in his cell motionless and the county physician pronounced him dead. The body was removed to the morgue, and was being prepared for the coffin when signs of life were detected. A physician pronounced the man alive and ordered he removed to a hospital. Up to a late hour Brown had not recovered consciousness, although undoubtedly alive.

Sam and Eva's Romance of the Sea.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 15.—Pastor Junor, of Brooklyn, who has been here investigating the Thornton-Eva Jewell romance of the sea, gives a somewhat taken aback by the affidavit of W. R. Garter, editor of The Metropolis, to the effect that he rode in the same car with Thornton and Miss Jewell from Pensacola to Milton on the day before Thornton says he landed on the east coast from the ship whose name he has forgotten. Pastor Junor, however, believes the story of the castaways.

Throckmorton Says He Is Innocent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The arrest of Major Charles H. Throckmorton created a sensation in army and social circles. He declares he is innocent. It is alleged that Throckmorton borrowed money from three different persons, giving as security duplicate vouchers for his August pay. He is also charged with having drawn checks on the Lincoln National bank although he had no account there.

The Barrel of Kerosene Exploded.

SOUTHVILLE, N. J., Oct. 15.—Joseph Lango, while carelessly knocking off the uneven ends of bristles on a paint brush, communicated the flames to a barrel of kerosene. The kerosene exploded, and his two younger brothers, Samuel and James, who stood near, were terribly burned. Samuel has since died, and James will not recover. Joseph was also badly burned.

To Succeed Carl Schurz.

HAMBURG, Oct. 15.—Emil Boas has been appointed to succeed Carl Schurz as general manager of the Hamburg-American Steamship line in the United States. He will assume the management in January. The chief executive officer of the company says that Mr. Schurz does not leave the company.

His Body Dentated the Train.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Three cars of a freight train on the Boston and Maine railroad were thrown from the track at East Cambridge by running over Brakeman Corcoran.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired my lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction. WM. MCCABE,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has proven that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
RICHARD CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HEBB, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could ask.
CLARENCE KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mrs. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home on the night and perfect as can be. Knowing we are easily the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's most obedient,

WOMAN'S HOME

WHY GIRLS FAIL.

Some of the Reasons Why Many Young Women Do Not Succeed in Business.

Sometimes the question is asked, "What are the causes of failure among women workers?" Not that there are an alarming number of failures, but while many have scored brilliant successes, there are others who have fallen far short. The causes are various and are worthy of consideration.

Perhaps one of the most common mistakes made by young women in their failure to prepare themselves for the work undertaken. We often hear it said, and truly, that there was never a time when so many fields of labor were open to women. It should be added, with equal truth, that never were the requirements so great. There is no lessen in demand for shoddy labor. There are in every calling enough who are equipped for their work to entirely crowd out the incompetent workers.

Young women, not realizing the immense necessity of thorough preparation, strive for and attain some position and fast secure thereto, but as time progresses and greater efficiency is required they are requested to give place to others from the ranks of the efficient. These raw recruits who find their way into every department are likewise filled or are shown their way out, deserve our pity, since they must ever stand back and give place to those who are prepared for their work. In some instances, to fact, in many instances, the lack of preparation is more remote than the matter in hand.

In the business colleges of our land are to be found many young women pursuing their studies with honest effort. After months of study, not having attained the required result, they grow discouraged by they have failed where others have succeeded. The reason is obvious. They were not prepared for the studies they pursued. Elementary and book keeping would as well them little, even if mastered, if they were ignorant of the simplest rules of grammar, spelling and other studies positively necessary to accompany the subjects pursued.

Another cause of failure is that girls too often undertake a work for which they are not adapted, being foolishly influenced by the success of some friend. A man may be a first class mechanic, but he would hardly succeed as a lawyer, though he spends years in the study of law. A girl may have a special genius for fashioning bonnets or dresses, and she will doubtless find success in that line. But, if allured by the success of another, she undertakes teaching, office work, or some other labor foreign to her tastes, failure is imminent, though she has taken pains to prepare herself for the work. Wise is the young woman, who, having found her work, has strength of purpose to say, "This one thing I do," and having decised thne, to adhere to it.

A very great mistake often made by business girls is a lack of endeavoring to perform just as much work as they are paid for and no more. Great is their anxiety lest they do two dollars' worth of work for one dollar. To such, let me say that the determination to fulfill every obligation faithfully in spirit and in letter will surely result in the weight of the money to be made. This may be a difficult matter when one's earnings are required to augment the family purse, but it will certainly pay in the long run.

If a young woman agrees to perform certain duties for a nominal sum, perhaps for half the actual value, she should know that she cannot afford to render anything less than the best of which she is capable. It may seem to her that her efforts are not appreciated, but in time they will be rewarded and were doubtless always appreciated.

Lack of intensity of purpose is another cause of failure. In other words, too many enter the ranks of breadwinners, not with the idea of continuing long therein, but simply to tide over a time between the graduation and the wedding day. They are interested in their work only so far as to the pay they are to receive, the chief interest being in the "coming man."—Frances Mosely Terry in Housekeeper.

Amelia Rives' Gowns.

There is not another woman in America who keeps up so constant a correspondence with her modiste as Amelia Rives Chanler. She gets her materials from everywhere—London, Paris, Richmond and the family carpet—converting skins and crude fashions into things of value, and old lace shawls, silk beggings, linen draperies and historical finery into bodices, scarfs and skirts. Worse still she imported a New York dressmaker, who has them cleaned and steamed, if necessary, and matched with something else for the picturesque effect always aimed at by the mother of "Barbara."

Mrs. Chanler is very clever with her brush, and her letters are more than four pages in length and dotted with sketches of sleeves, trains, gores, corsages and bodices so far as the trimmings done in the desired color. Sometimes she dashes off two of these illustrated letters a day, sometimes she gets out of the notion altogether and wires the dressmaker to "see letter" which changes the whole plan, converting a De Medicis robe into an Empire gown. Amelie has a mind of her own and maintains the right to change it as often as she pleases. Nothing was hard to please, however, but very, very hard to understand. Her great hobby is "modifications," always of some remote style.

Amelie knows what she wants, and things go on smoothly enough when she succeeds in enlightening the New York modiste. To solve the fitting problem she has a body, sleeve and skirt lining accurately drafted from her measurement with mathematically true seam lines, on which the wonderful gown is built. There is no trying on until the work reaches her Virginia home, and then back it comes to this city if anywise dead is not per stetch. To save herself the modiste flies these hand painted letters in case memory proves treacherous.—New York World.

Women and Their Work.

A woman who occupies a unique position as treasurer and business manager of a large publishing firm in New York says nothing makes her feel worse than to see girls employed in different ways spending the leisure often found in business hours in reading or not doing fancy work when they should be acquiring information or mastering details necessary to promotion and success. Opportunities now are not lacking to give women employment. The point is to so fill the place, to so perform the duties, that one shall be indispensable. It is not enough to accomplish the duties pointed out in a mechanical way. There must be also an interest in the success of the business or firm.

A milliner who is posted in all the new fashions, who knows the new names of new colors and the popular fads, will plan more successful models than if she simply copied those imported for the purpose. It hardly seems worth while that the head woman of a large display room should not know the name of a single French or English artist from whom models are obtained. The successful newspaper woman must know the requirements of the paper for which she writes. One such, being called to an important position on another paper owed her success to the practical way in which she studied the headlines and character of the page before submitting her matter. Suffice it to say, it did not take the editor half the night to rearrange and make it suitable.

Editors complain of the ignorance of writers in the matter of punctuation and paragraphs, an evil which could be easily remedied with a little study. The efficient saleswoman keeps her patience, even if the occasion be a crank. The Brooklyn librarian, who forestalls the demand for certain literature, based on some public event, the death of a celebrated person or the craze for a certain book, by hanging a bulletin of all the books to be obtained, is of invaluable service both to the institution and the public. The teacher who came to school the first day of the fall term just begun with a schedule of the day's work carefully written out was undoubtedly the one of considerable merriment among her sister teachers for such an unheard of proceeding, but all the same the little act showed that her interest was in the right place—in her work.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Two Sides to the Domestic Question.

"I'm disgusted with them every day of my life," quoth a good woman the other day to a friend who was paying a morning call. They were discussing servants, it may be said. "Only this morning," she said, "I went down to the kitchen to give some directions, and just as I was leaving I said to the waitress, who, I noticed, was making preparations to wash her own clothes: 'Don't wash today, Mary, your cold is too bad to hang out clothes in this rain. I'll see that you have another opportunity later in the week.' She thanked me very kindly, and seemed grateful for the attention, and I came up stairs.

"As I was passing the speaking tube on the second floor, I overheard to me I had forgotten an important suggestion to the cook, and was about to speak down when my own name caught my ear. 'Did you hear Mrs. Scandal?' Mary was saying, and then she repeated my speech of the moment before, mimicking my voice and throwing into her manner indescribable and absurd parsinage. I was too indignant to speak, really had to turn away and command myself before I could give the necessary order."

"You wasted your strength to get indignant," was her friend's comment; "they all do it. I feel sure that I'm talked over the moment I turn my back on my own servants."

At which a man who was in the room, and who was a brother to one woman and a privileged friend to the other, came forward.

"I can't see where the maids are much worse than the mistresses," he offered. "I've been housekeeping for a bachelor friend over your 'help' for the past half hour, and I haven't caught any compliments."

Both women laughed and admitted the truth of the assertion. Which indicates only typifies once more the curious antagonism which exists at times between different households and which should be independent upon each other.

The remark, too, of a man who has had charge of an intelligence office in this city for twelve years is apt to the connection. To a captious customer who had interviewed a score of girls, finding none to suit her, and who had impatiently given her list of a large display room should not know the name of a single French or English artist from whom models are obtained. The successful newspaper woman must know the requirements of the paper for which she writes. One such, being called to an important position on another paper owed her success to the practical way in which she studied the headlines and character of the page before submitting her matter. Mrs. Lincoln and Her Tenement House.

What Miss Octavia Hill has accomplished for the poor tenants of London Mrs. Alice N. Lincoln is bravely trying to attain in the tenement house district of Boston. In 1879 Mrs. Lincoln took possession of an old barrack on the corner of Merrimac and Chardon streets, variously known as "The Morgue," "Polly Pitch," "Hell's Hole" and "Little Hell," provoked by the filthy condition of the place, the recurring fevers and the frequent deaths resulting from shameful and inhuman neglect on the part of capital. Mrs. Lincoln tore out the inside of the building, had the drains perfected and the walls strengthened, and rebuilt the house for the convenience, comfort and welfare, as well as the accomodation of the people for whom it was intended.

She painted the walls and floors, had a closet and sink and a range and stationery tubs placed in each apartment. The rents remained the same as formerly, and many of the tenants who moved in twelve years ago are still in the building. The name now is "Good Luck," and the income from the investment being larger than she felt like accepting, Mrs. Lincoln devoted the surplus to a tenants' fund, out of which improvements are annually made in and about the building. Whatever still remains is applied to the care of the sick and infirm.—Boston Letter.

A Cast Iron Cement.

It is generally thought that when any cast iron object is broken that is the end of it and it is useless to try to mend it. A clever amateur workman tells us, however, that a cement may be made which will hold the parts together perfectly. It is made in the following manner: Take two ounces of sal ammoniac, one ounce sublimed sulphur and one pound cast iron filings; mix in a mortar and keep the powder perfectly dry. When it is to be used mix it with twenty times its weight of clean iron filings, grind the whole in a mortar, wet with water until it becomes a paste and apply to the parts to be mended. After a while it will become hard as stone and hard as any part of the metal.—New York Tribune.

How to Keep Cutlery Shining.

Great trouble is sometimes caused in the household by knives and other steel cutlery becoming rusty. This may easily be prevented by a little care. Steel cutlery should be plunged in a pan of whiting after washing and removed just before it is used. When it is wiped it will be perfectly bright, and if kept in this way it cannot get rusty. In case the cutlery should already be rusty it should be rubbed with a flannel dipped in sweet oil, then covered with slacked lime and allowed to rest for twenty-four hours. It should then be wiped clean and finished off with some powdered whiting and a piece of chamois leather, when it will become as bright as new.—Chicago News.

How to Grow Plump.

Any woman not predisposed to extreme thinness and in comparative good health can, by care to her diet and her temper, reach the state of plumpness she yearns for. But first of all she must not worry. Women who are nervous and worry over every trifle, will always remain thin. The young woman desiring to get fat must take life calmly; hurry about nothing, and as far as possible rest a great deal. If the nervousness is extreme, then she must apply to her physician, who will give her a sedative and a proper diet. She may eat freely of green salads, put upon them as much oil as she likes, but give up the vinegar.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Bake Bread in a Slow Oven.

It is wrong to put the dough for bread in a hot oven. The oven should only be slightly warm, and then heated gradually. This plan has been tested by a London baker, who asserts that the intense heat, suddenly striking the surface of the dough, kills the yeast influence which should make the bread rise. He tried an experiment by having the dough put in the oven of a gas stove, slightly warmed and gradually increased the heat till it reached the degree at which bread bakes. The result was simply wonderful. Bread baked in this fashion rises to amazing size, and the loaf is of a spongy lightness.—Yankee Blade.

A Brooklyn Woman's Library.

Mrs. Abbey E. Pope, the Brooklyn bibliomaniac, has the finest library of any woman in the country. The books are her own, not by heredity, but by purchase and personal right. Among other articles she has a number of first editions of the English poets, novelists and British essayists of priceless value, and the famous Charles VI Bible, which was presented to the church levied upon Mrs. Pope for loans of rare and extinct copies of famous books bound in mosaic and carved leathers. Aside from collecting books she is an omnivorous reader and knows her library.—New York Letter.

To make volatile soap for removing paint, grease spots, etc., take four table spoonfuls of spirits of hartshorn, four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, and a table spoonful of salt. Shake the whole well together in a bottle and apply with a sponge or brush.

It is customary, as every one knows, to serve beef and mutton quite rare. Lamb and veal should be thoroughly done, but they should not, for this reason, be dry. The juices should follow the knife when the meats are cut on the table.

The silk vest is really an institution and has come to stay. It is unquestionably the most comfortable of all summer garments, and for cold weather wear, with a light weight wool gossamer, there is nothing better.

Mrs. Senator Edmunds in her Burlington home uses a very curious card receiver, it being nothing more nor less than an immense Indian mortar and pestle taken from the Columbian river.

When the Princess of Wales gives a garden party it is her custom to request the guests to bring their children. The result is that a pretty scene is made still more picturesque.

If soot has fallen out from the chimney in any rooms, salt thickly sprinkled over the soot will allow of its being easily gathered into the dustpan, leaving no traces.

To remove rust from knives, cover the blades with sweet oil for a day or two and then rub with a lump of fresh lime.

What She Meant.

The struggles of childhood with long words are often as pathetic as they are droll, but it is the funny side which is apt to impress their elders. A lady went not long ago to call upon a neighbor in the country, and found the five-year-old son of the home playing in the lane.

"How do you do, George," she said. "Is your mamma at home?"

"No, Mrs. Gray," he answered, with the most approved politeness, "she is not."

"I am sorry for that," the caller said. "Will she be gone long?"

"I don't know," the little fellow answered doubtfully. "She's gone to a Christian and devil meeting."

"Gone to what?" the lady exclaimed in astonishment.

"To a Christian and devil meeting in the vestry," was the reply.

And it suddenly flashed across the caller remembered that the day for that afternoon had been appointed at the vestry of the church a meeting of the Society of Christian Endeavor.—Boston Courier.

A Long Vacation.

Likewellyn, a Little Lord Fauntleroy darling on the North side, saw an Indian for the first time the other day. He gazed in speechless wonder at the quiet warrior's earthy face and hands for some moments, and then said, "Papa, what an awful long vacation that man must have been taking."—Chicago Tribune.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The City Common Council will meet in adjourned session next Monday evening.

—It is rumored that the Union County Grand Jury will present its first batch of indictments next Monday.

—Several of the members of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of this city, attended the State convention of that Order, which was held at Trenton yesterday.

—Mr. Jas. McKenzie, an employe of the Scott Printing Press Works, returned last evening from Passaic where he was engaged erecting a large double cylinder press.

—There will be a business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Union of the Trinity Reformed church Thursday evening, Oct. 23d, at which time officers will be elected.

—Major Anderson Post G. A. R. No. 109 accepted invitation to attend as a Post the meeting to be addressed by Major Gen. O. O. Howard in First Baptist church Sunday at 4.15 p. m.

—The society known as the Iron Hall have engaged rooms in the Hand building on West Second street, and will in a few days remove thereto. The society now meets in Westphalia Lodge rooms.

—By their advertisement to-day, the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association endeavor to convince the public that they are headquarters for fine butter, fresh roasted coffee, new crop teas, etc.

—A number of the members of the First Church of Christ visited Bound Brook last evening to attend the revival meetings, which are being conducted by Mr. J. B. Cleaver, who formerly resided in this city.

—The new billiard and pool rooms of Mr. Wallace V. Miller, the proprietor of Laing's Hotel, are now open and he invites the patronage of the public. The tables are all new and of the latest pattern, and Mr. Miller says he proposes to keep a first-class billiard parlor.

—"All the world loves a lover," and though this may depend somewhat upon who the lover is, it is certain that all the world is interested in the love affairs of a man like the author of "Home Sweet Home." Miss Laura Speer, a connection of the family to which Miss Harden, the lady who won John Howard Payne's love, belonged, has written an interesting article called "John Howard Payne's Southern Sweetheart" for the November New England Magazine. It is embellished with portraits and sketches, many of which now see the light for the first time.

—Hon. George Kyte, the Republican nominee for Assembly in the Third District, is an old soldier, both in the war and in politics. He won public recognition a few years ago by carrying Fanwood township when it was thought to be the property of the Democrats, and he has been an active, able and thoroughly reliable member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders ever since. Last year the Republicans nominated him for the Assembly, and he was elected by a handsome majority. His record was such as to make his renomination a certainty. His re-election is a foregone conclusion. —Elizabeth Journal.

—In Daniel Frohman's production of the new play, "The Prince and the Pauper," at Music Hall Monday there will be a series of picturesque scenes portraying London in the sixteenth century and a stage fully peopled with representatives of English life in that period, which will make the spectacular effect of the drama uncommonly attractive. It is also well supplied with genuine comedy. Elsie Leslie's acting of this role has gained her great reputation in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, and there is little fear of any other impersonation appearing in this play as there has never been any young actress save Elsie Leslie who, being young enough to look the characters, was gifted with dramatic ability to play them.

—At the Grand State Convention of Republicans which filled Taylor Opera House at Trenton yesterday, an account of which appeared in yesterday's Trenton Times occupying five columns, this section was accorded a large share of the honors. Ex-Senator Thompson of Somerville was chosen a Vice-President of the State League, H. Newton Spencer of North Plainfield a member of the State Executive Committee, ex-Judge Ulrich of Plainfield a delegate to the National Convention, which he afterwards declined; and Editor T. W. Morrison and Mayor Whiting, the latter of Bound Brook, were nominated as National Convention delegates from the Third Congressional District to represent Monmouth, Middlesex and Somerset counties, both declining in favor of Judge Hoffman of Monmouth, and Capt. Inslee of Middlesex, who were chosen.

SUNFLOWER MUSICALE.

AT THE RESIDENCE OF MRS. FINCH LAST EVENING.

The Friends of the Altar Society of Grace Church Attend the Fair, Tea and Musicale en Masse and Make it a Social and Financial Success.

HAT is a "Sunflower musicale?" was probably the question of many when they read in THE NEWS that the Boys' choir of Grace Episcopal church, under the leadership of Mrs. Wm. A. Freeman, would give a sunflower musicale at the residence of Mr. N. F. T. Finch on Park avenue last evening. It was a gratifying success. The ladies of the church held a fair and supper at the same place during the afternoon and early evening. The attendance was large, the house being crowded all the time. The proceeds are to be used for the organ to be purchased for the new church now building on Seventh street.

The fancy tables were decorated with yellow and white and the ladies attired in similar colors in keeping with the large and hardy plant they represented —the sunflower.

The tables were presided over as follows:

Flower table under direction of Mrs. F. O. Herring assisted by Miss M. A. Bowers, Miss G. Howard, Miss Cudlipp, Miss M. Dumont, Miss Guion and Miss Van Boskerck.

Lemonade table, under the care of Mrs. H. B. Depew, assisted by Miss L. Hart and Miss B. McKinney. Tea was served by Miss Cock, Miss Tweedy, Miss Fleming and Miss Lowe assisted by the young ladies of the church.

Mrs. Rodman assisted the ladies in receiving their many friends.

Fancy table, under the direction of Mrs. V. B. Hart, assisted by Mrs. E. L. Finch.

Chocolate table, under the direction of Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke assisted by the Misses Holt, Erickson and Depew.

The Altar Society consists of Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, chairman; Mrs. V. B. Hart, Mrs. S. S. Guion, Mrs. E. L. Finch, Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke, Mrs. W. R. Depew, Miss A. Guion, Miss M. Morgan.

TALKING IT OVER.

In the large double parlor was a large colored curtain decorated with eighteen enormous sunflowers with their stalks and leaves. These healthy bright-hued plants were well cultivated. In the centre of each flower was a black heart. This was removed, and the faces of the choir boys appeared instead.

The following programme was well rendered and highly appreciated:

1. Opening Chorus, In light tripping measure.
2. Solo—Walter Bartindale, The Leather Man.
3. Duett—Jack Dumont and Chas Davis, Old Mother Goose.
4. Solo—Jack Bartindale, Baby's Dreams, by P. L. Moir.
5. Solo—Roy Cox,..... Little Jack Horner.
6. Solo—Walter Sherwin,..... Curly Locks.
7. Solo—Leslie Tingley,..... Maggie's Pet.
8. Duett—The Spider and Fly, Jack Bartindale and Jack Dumont.
9. Sol—Walter Sampson, Lullaby.
10. Solo and chorus—By all the Sunflowers, The death and burial of Cock Robin.
11. Chorus—Good Night.

In the song "Cock Robin" there was a questioner, (Arthur Freeman), and the other boys each represented the various birds.

The members of the choir are:

TWINS AND TRIPLETS.

The Population of Plainfield Being Rapidly Increased.

The population of this city is being rapidly increased. Last evening Mrs. Benson who resides at the corner of Liberty and Fourth streets gave birth to triplets, two boys and one girl. There was also an increase in the family of Special Policeman Andrew Muir, who resides on South Second street. During the night his wife gave birth to twins, a boy and a girl. It may be seen that the boys are in the majority.

Arrested for Swearing.

Yesterday afternoon Policeman Lynch arrested Frank Hand for using profane and indecent language. When arraigned before City Judge Codington this morning the accused pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for next Tuesday morning. Mr. Hand is also charged with intoxication.

A PLEASANT EVENING.

The Y. P. L. of the First Baptist Church Entertain.

The class-room of the First Baptist church was filled with people last evening. The Young People's League of the church, it was announced would give a sociable, and the crowded room was the result.

Mr. L. H. Bigelow is the President of the League. Mr. L. Warren Randolph was the chairman of the entertainment committee.

The pleasant programme prepared was apparently greatly enjoyed by those present. It consisted of piano solos by Mr. W. E. McClymont, banjo duetts by Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, of Somerville, soprano solos by Mrs. M. I. Cooley, a duet by Messrs. B. T. Barnes and George Stevens, and recitations by Miss Morrison.

Light refreshments were then passed around.

"THE STORY OF GETTYSBURG."

Major W. D. W. Miller Told It at the Y. M. C. A. Rooms Last Evening.

An interested audience listened to Major W. D. W. Miller, last night at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, while he told the "Story of Gettysburg." Major Miller was one of Gen. Hancock's staff, and was therefore in the fight. Maps of the different day's positions helped to make the story clear. The Major paid a glowing tribute to his old commander, Hancock, extolling his manliness, honesty and absolute purity of life. He also spoke emphatically of all those to whom credit was due for the victory of this which he called the greatest battle of the century.

DR. COOLEY'S PURCHASE.

The Wadleigh Property.—Many Improvements Contemplated.

Borough Assessor Dr. J. H. Cooley has bought the Wadleigh place on Somerset street. The property consists of 60 acres and on it he will erect a handsome building to take the place of the house now in use on Sandford avenue. The building will be of brick and have all modern improvements. Dr. Cooley expects to expend considerable money in improving his new purchase.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. J. G. Wilson of Penn Yan, N. Y., is visiting friends in this city.

Mr. E. A. Leland of Newark is visiting his parents, who reside on Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Lucy Montclair, N. J., returned home last evening after a brief visit at her uncle's, Mr. Brock of Mountain avenue.

Mr. H. C. Leland of Waterbury, Conn., spent Sunday with his brother, Mr. G. R. Leland of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Messrs. Wm. Brown, Augustus Martin and Charles Smith of this city visited the fishing banks yesterday and returned last evening with fifty-eight fine fish.

Mrs. Addie Runyon, wife of Walter G. Runyon, died at her home in Dunellen last evening in the twenty-sixth year of her age. Deceased was a relative of Mr. A. M. Runyon of this city. The funeral, which will be private, will take place Sunday.

The very successful series of afternoon *teas which have been given by the Rill*side Tennis Club during the past season will be brought to a close to-morrow afternoon. On this occasion Mrs. Robert Burnett will receive the Club's guests assisted by Miss Bain, Miss Ginna, Miss Lawrence, Miss Miller and Miss Wotherspoon.

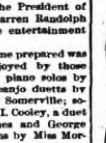
In an article about the superstitions of an actor an exchange has the following about "Our George," a former Plainfield resident. George Thatcher believes that good fortune will come to a man who perceives the moon over his right shoulder, hears the chirping of a cricket on the stage or sees a black cat. Upon his arrival in New York from Baltimore last week he engaged a coupe at the ferry, and while passing along West street he observed a worn-out horseshoe lying in muddy thoroughfare. He immediately ordered the driver to stop, and getting out he picked it up and returned to his seat in the coupe. Upon arriving at the Park Theatre, a bump-backed carman, who was bringing a trunk into the theatre, ran against him and passed him away from beneath an inclined ladder that he would otherwise have walked under and which would have resulted in a run of bad luck. Thatcher attributed his escape solely to the influence of the horseshoe, which he had picked up. "My eye!" he said to his partner, Hugh Dougherty, "but I've struck luck. We'll do business here." Monday morning he went into the barber shop of the Marlborough. After the barber had completed his operations and while the sector was tying his necktie he saw in the glass the reflection of the colored porter of the shop, with his ever-ready whisk broom, on the point of brushing his hat. "Here, you black man!" yelled Thatcher, "what are you going to do with that hat?" "Jes' gwine to brush it, boss; du's all." "Well, jes' don't." "It's mighty du's'y, boss." "It'll stay du's'y until I finish playing here. I wouldn't brush the luck I'm now having off that hat for a mint of money."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females. —Adv.

SAVE YOUR BREATH.

HERE ARE ANSWERS TO THE QUESTIONS YOU ARE ASKING DAILY.

Something Every Person Who Uses the Library Should Read Carefully and Remember.—Information for the Public.



EQUALLY, day after day, the same questions regarding books are asked the cheerful young lady at the Job Male Public Library, who attends to the duties of librarian. Miss Adams has patience, but if the dear public would remember a little it would no doubt be gratifying to her.

To aid them the following questions (their own) are given below, with answers. Cut them out and keep handy for reference.

ANSWERS TO SOME QUESTIONS OFTEN ASKED AT THE LIBRARY.

"CAN ANYBODY TAKE BOOKS OUT OF THIS LIBRARY?" Any resident of Plainfield can take books from the library by complying with the regulations.

"WHAT DO YOU HAVE TO DO, IN ORDER TO GET BOOKS?" To each applicant for books is given a blank which he or she is required to fill out in ink, and have endorsed by a real-estate owner. Upon presentation of this form properly filled out at the library a "borrower's card" is given to him entitling him to the full privileges of the library.

"WHEN CAN YOU DRAW BOOKS?" Every afternoon, from two until half-past five, with the exception of Saturday. On that day from half-past seven until nine in the evening.

"HOW LONG CAN YOU KEEP BOOKS OUT?" Most books may be kept two weeks, at the end of which time they may be renewed by bringing or sending the card to the library. Recent or very popular books of fiction may be kept but one week and cannot be renewed. These are designated "Seven days' books."

"CAN PEOPLE LIVING IN NORTH PLAINFIELD TAKE OUT BOOKS?" Residents of North Plainfield can take out books on the same conditions required of Plainfielders, and on the payment of one dollar semi-annually in advance.

"HOW OLD DO YOU HAVE TO BE BEFORE YOU CAN TAKE BOOKS?" Fourteen. Children under that age can however use the cards of any members of the family to which they belong.

"CAN ANYONE COME AND READ THE PAPERS OR THE BOOKS IN THE BUILDING?" The library is a free, public library and open to all. All, therefore, residents or otherwise, are entirely free to use the reading room, and any papers, magazines or books in it they wish. No books can of course be taken away from the building without a card.

"DO YOU HAVE TO PAY TO GO UP IN THE ART GALLERY?" The art gallery as well as the library is free to all.

"HAVE YOU PRINTED CATALOGUES?" This question is asked very often that I will answer it quite fully. The library has not a printed catalogue, neither the number of borrowers, nor the income of the library yet warranting the expense of a printed list, great as would be the convenience of such a list. We have however complete author and title card catalogues, which are always kept up to date, also lists of the works in each department. These may be consulted at any time. With the exception of two departments the shelves are always open to the public, and notwithstanding the large number of people who daily go to them, but few books are lost in this way.

"HOW CAN I FIND WHAT THE LIBRARY HAS [ON A GIVEN TOPIC]? The books are arranged according to their subjects and the librarian is very glad at any time to direct people to the works of which they may be in search.

"AT WHAT TIME CAN YOU SIT AND READ AT THE LIBRARY?" The library is open every day, excepting Sunday, from nine in the morning until nine at night, closing only at noon from twelve until two, and in the afternoon from six until half past seven.

Board of Freeholders.

At the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders, on Tuesday, the committee appointed to look after the Bound Bound-bridge, and see that the Port Reading Company did not interfere with the approaches, reported that they found that the county owned a strip of land, purchased of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, and that the Port Reading are going to cross the county's road at grade, their road being about 8 feet north of the face of the abutment wall of the iron bridge. The report was accepted and the committee discharged. A committee consisting of Messrs. Vreeland, Rockafellow and Director Stants was appointed to make such disposition of the strip of land mentioned as may be for the best interest of the county.

The County Collector was authorized, on motion of Mr. Vreeland, to borrow an amount, not exceeding $15,000, in anticipation of taxes.

The report of the County Collector showed that bills had been paid up to December 15th amounting to $26,185.38, of which $12,139 was for bridges.

A Narrow Escape.

Three laborers, employes of the Pond Machine Tool Works, who were engaged Wednesday unloading a car filled with sand that is used in the moulding department of the works, had a narrow escape from death. The car was on an incline and inadvertently one of the workmen gave it a start in order to place it over another of the drops. A second laborer saw the danger and jumped off. The third "manned" the brake and did all in his power to stop the car. He did not succeed however, and the car eventually ran off the track. Fortunately no one was injured.

A Bicycle Collision.

As Mr. Jas. Casey of New and Third streets was passing along West Second street yesterday afternoon, a bicyclist suddenly turned out of Exchange alley and the machine he was riding struck Mr. Casey on the left hand knocking him down. The force of the collision also caused the bicyclist to take a "header," injuring his hands and head. Mr. Casey's shoe was also nearly torn from his foot, and he was slightly injured about the hip.

Fined Ten Dollars.

A Frank, the man who was arrested by Policeman Cooney one evening last week, was yesterday arraigned before City Judge Codington and a fine of ten dollars imposed. Frank was arrested for wife beating. He had only been married two weeks when the fracas occurred. Frank was employed at the Potter Press Works, but was discharged yesterday. His wife refuses to live with him since he whipped her.

"Gep" Was Angry.

Wednesday evening "Gep" Frazee and a Democrat engaged in a political dispute in reference to the coming gubernatorial election in New York and the argument became so heated that Mr. Frazee sicced a club and threatened to annihilate the follower of Thomas Jefferson. Friends interfered before "Gep" succeeded.

—The Emeralds will hold their State Convention in this city next Tuesday.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The London Spectator feels sure that bad temper is the cause of nine-tenths of all the mental suffering of the world.

Internal revenue reports show that Montana has a saloon for every sixty inhabitants. Great heavens!

The negro voters, according to Charles W Anderson, the colored orator, are no longer content to say to the white politicians "Give us the Lord Jesus and you can take the rest." They are going to have some of the rest too.

Mr. Irving M. Scott, general manager of the Union Iron works, of San Francisco, went across to Europe to see in what respect, if any, his iron shipbuilding plant and yard were behind those of the Old World. He finds that we in America are disgracefully behind Europe in regard to our iron shipbuilding plants, that England leads the world in this respect, but he believes that the finest warship work has been turned out by France.

A new way of making farms pay is gradually being developed in the vicinity of cities. To the favorably situated farmer in such a locality there is one valuable paying crop that never fails. That is the summer boarder. It has long been found that the best way to sell grain is to make it walk off upon its own feet in the shape of fat live stock, and the same fact is beginning to be appreciated in the case of farm fruits and vegetables. The summer boarder more and more persons go back to nature awhile in the country, and find they can afford it better than not. It is money in the pocket of both the city dweller and the farm folk who maintain a good table off the products of their own ground. Many New England farmers who were dependent as to even making a living any longer on their rocky lands have brought back prosperity through the summer boarder.

Roman Catholic Loyalty.

Whoever has followed the movements of the time cannot fail to have been impressed strikingly with the intensely loyal attitude of the Roman Catholic church in America on all occasions in which a sentiment has had opportunity to manifest itself. The speeches of the highest dignitaries of the church in America teem with this patriotic feeling. They impress it on young Catholic men to love their country and inform themselves about her history and government.

The address of Archbishop Ryan to the convention of Catholic young men in Philadelphia might have been delivered by any Protestant doctor of divinity or college president in America, so utterly wanting was any sentiment that would set good intelligent Catholic citizens apart from any other good, intelligent citizens, whether Protestant, Jew or agnostic. The archbishop said, among other things:

What is good, upright citizens, and the societies you represent are created to foster intelligent, faithful, patriotic American citizens, to inculcate into the hearts of men piety, honesty and patriotism. Knowledge is always holy. Knowledge consists in purity and beauty, and is God itself. Because we are intellectual we are able to cope with the greatest questions of the day, and those are the questions which underlie the fundamental principles of our republican institutions.

Bishop O'Farrell, of Trenton, said too:

We Catholics are subject to no king or emperor, and are don't desire to be. We are Americans, and have come to stay. Four hundred years ago Catholic sailors planted the cross on these shores, and soon on the approaching great anniversary of the landing of Columbus let us show that there are no more loyal and true citizens than the Catholics.

With such glowing, earnest patriotism as this instilled into the hearts of young American Catholics there need be no fears for the safety of either the American republic or the English language.

About Your Health.

Take care of your health, but do not take care of it too much, just enough. Because a little is coming is not any reason yourself in flannels till life becomes a burden to you, and you feel like an Eskimo eating a tallow candle in his snow hut.

If you want to keep well, Dr. Edward Smith says you should do your severest work in the early part of the day and get plenty of sleep before midnight. No man has a right to work more hours than will leave him time for rest and amusement. More than this is slow suicide, and he who would go through the world at his best must divide his time between work and play. The savages from whom we are descended never did any work at all except what was necessary to feed themselves, and they knew little disease and had no doctors. In leaving savagery we have left behind far too much that was good.

What was best most of all when we left barbarism was fresh air. It is a medicine the like of which is not found in this universe. If mankind could live out in tents for a generation or two, sleeping under the skies, consumption and lung troubles would vanish. Babies would not have croup or snuffles. In padding up your houses for winter, therefore, remember that it is not air, but the want of it, that gives you cold and kills our boy. Perhaps in a thousand years more our race will learn that they can so accustom themselves to sitting in a draft that it will not hurt them in the least; on the contrary, it will give them needed fresh air, also that it is excellent exercise for a person in good health to walk rapidly up stairs, breathing deeply through the nostrils.

M'CAMANT TO REMAIN.

His Attorney Says He Will Defy Governor Pattison.

TO FIGHT WHILE HIS TERM LASTS.

The Auditor General's Lawyer Reported to Have Said That He Will Prolong the Fight in the Courts Until His Lease of Office Has Expired.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 16.—Rufus E. Shapley, counsel for Auditor General McCamant, says that in any event the struggle for possession of the auditor general's offices will be prolonged and bitter. Even should the senate present a finding to the governor sufficient to remove McCamant, the latter would refuse to recognize the governor's action, and would decline to recognize any appointee and not turn over the department keys. In this event the matter would go to court, and in the end would get to the supreme court, and by the time the latter body had passed judgment McCamant's time would have expired.

To Subpoena Livsey.

The sergeant at arms has been instructed by the senate to subpoena William Livsey, late cashier of the treasury and secretary of the sinking fund commission.

Proceedings of the Senate.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 16.—The proceedings in the senate indicate that the Republican members will insist on conducting the investigation, supported by the power governor for the removal of Auditor General McCamant and State Treasurer Boyer as a trial in court would be conducted. There was considerable discussion on a resolution offered by Senator Hall (Dem.), requesting the governor to submit to the senate the testimony obtained by the state treasury investigating committee, which he thought would expedite matters.

Senator Gobin (Rep.) opposed the introduction of this testimony, and contended that instead of expediting matters it would only prolong the session.

Senator Ross (Dem.) thought this evidence was necessary in order to fix the blame of delinquencies of the auditor general and state treasurer.

Testimony for Information.

The resolution of Mr. Hall was adopted unanimously after it had been amended so as to provide that the testimony be used for information.

Senator Gobin then moved to proceed with the investigation, and Messrs. Boyer and McCamant, with their counsel, Judge Orris, of Philadelphia; Rufus E. Shapley and R. C. Dale, of Philadelphia, and Lyman D. Gilbert, of this city, ranged themselves in front of the clerk's desk.

Attorney General Hensel and Deputy Attorney General Stranahan made their appearance in the interest of the commonwealth.

Mr. McCamant's Answer.

Mr. Shapley then read the answer of Auditor General McCamant. It denies rights of either the governor or the present session for his removal and disputes the jurisdiction of the senate. It declares that he had been elected auditor general by the people the term for which he now holds office. He, the auditor general, had not been convicted of any crime or been guilty of any, and no reasonable cause existed for his removal under the constitution. He denies all charges of misbehavior directed against him by the governor. He had enforced the laws relating to his office as he understood them, and had suggested legislation to remedy the defects in existing acts.

His Dealings with Bardsley.

In the dealings with John Bardsley he had acted in what he supposed was in conformity with the laws. If the charges of the governor against him were true he would be liable to impeachment on conviction in the courts. The making of these allegations during his political excitement was criticised. He denied the power of the senate to administer oaths, and that consequently an indictment for perjury against a witness would not lie.

The governor had no power authorizing the senate to address the governor and reference to men who were incapacitate; from the performance of their duties by impeachment, senility or bodily infirm. The auditor general then referred to the fact that he had been before the Philadelphia councilmen's committee and before the Philadelphia bulletin committee on one or five times and that he emphatically denied the truth of the charges made against him.

The Governor Criticised.

He then showed the senate how he had been fooled by Bardsley, who had previous to the discovery of his embezzlement borne a good name, and who always manifested a great interest in the commonwealth's welfare.

The governor was criticised for not giving the auditor general any credit, for his testimony denying the truth of allegations of corruption, for the governor's figures as to the amount of the embezzlement by Bardsley were assailed as unwarrantably high. Henry Graffin, who died over a year ago, had never received the money he had received from Bardsley. Graffin was formerly county clerk under Auditor General McCamant. The auditor general also denied that he had received rebates for mercantil advertising.

Treasurer Boyer's Answer.

The answer of State Treasurer Boyer was in many respects similar to that of the auditor general. He particularly defended his action in paying $400,000 to Bardsley, the amount of the school appropriation to which Philadelphia was entitled, as within the law. This amount was lost to the city through Bardsley's defalcation.

The Expenses Constitutional.

Upon the submission of the answers of the accused a controversy arose as to how the payment of the expenses of the session should be secured, and it was finally decided to ask the attorney general for a written opinion. He replied that the constitutional provision which made it the duty of the executive to summon the senate into executive session and the law providing for the compensation of members, employes and officers carried with them the implied power of the senate to order and of the state treasurer to pay the necessary expenses of the naval academy and meeting, by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia, that the attorney general conduct the investigation was finally tabled and an agreement reached that the fifth rule asking the attorney general to assist in the investigation would be sufficient to meet all requirements.

The attorney general having asked for an adjournment until Monday afternoon in the interest of an expeditious inquiry, the senate acceded to his suggestion.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Allerton Easily Defeats Delmarch in the Great Lexington Stake.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—The great stallion race here between Allerton (2:09¾) and Delmarch (2:11¾) was won by Allerton in straight heats. It was a match race, and placed the proposed match between Allerton and Nancy Hanks. Twenty thousand people were present, Allerton was never in better condition and can be appeared on the track he looked the king he is. Delmarch is also a handsome horse, and in any other company would have been an easy winner, but Allerton was had him beaten in the scoring, as he approached the wire the first three times so fast that Delmarch was carried off his feet each time. In the first heat he allowed Delmarch to lead into the stretch, when with little urging Allerton came home an easy winner by a length. The second and third heats it was Allerton all the way. The fractional time was:

First Heat—33¾, 1:06¾, 1:40¼, 2:13¾.
Second Heat—32, 1:06, 1:42¾, 2:15. Third Heat—35¼, 1:09¾, 1:44, 2:17¾.

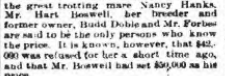
It will be seen that the last quarter of the last heat was trotted in the remarkable time of 31¾.

Nancy Hanks Sold.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, Mass., has purchased the great trotting mare Nancy Hanks, Mr. Hart Jewell, her breeder and former owner, paid Dobie and Mr. Forbes are said to be the only persons who know the price. It is known, however, that $42,000 was refused for her a short time ago, and that Mr. Boswell had set $50,000 as his price.

Monbara Equals His Record.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—Monbara, the great 3-year-old stallion, was driven by Hobbs to beat his track record here of 2:19¾. In the first attempt he equaled it, but he was not driven again, owing to the cool weather.



THE NEW MILLINERY.

Fashionable Shapes in Fall and Winter Hats—Notes About Trimmings.

Capes for the Demisseson.

Capes represent the fashionable wrap provided for the first chill days of the fall and for driving. For wear with colored dresses black capes of velvet or short napped plush are quite the thing, while embroidered brocades furnish a showier form of wrap. Many of these capes are finished with a boa of braided, fluffy black tips, or of cock's feathers down the front. Cloth in light fawn gray or similar color, lined with black satin and trimmed with black lace around the neck, furnishes the material for some very attractive new capes.

TUDOR CAPE—PARIS CAPE.

Our cut depicts two simple but very be coming specimens of the popular demisean cape. The Tudor cape, with high collar, is made of black velvet on the back, straight collar and plaits, with large jet cabochons and is lined with shot silk. The graceful Parisian model in gray cheviot, lined with moire, has the novel combination but the double frilling around the throat, which together with the turned down collar, is edged with silver cord.

Fashionable Opera Cloaks.

Opera cloaks seem to get more gorgeous every season. One doesn't look for novelty in shape so much as in the color combinations and trimmings. Jewel trimming has been called garish and theatrical, and garish and theatrical it certainly is, but, in spite of all that, it has proved itself proof against it, it is still the fashion. That it has survived the fluctuations of two or three seasons proves that the majority of women admire it. Bead trimmings never will go out of style. They are cheaper and much more showy than silk embroideries. The newest opera cloaks are trimmed with gold embroidery and ostrich feathers. The feather collars that are now worn form an exquisite background for the head. A smart cloak for a young wearer is made of white box cloth, trimmed with a yoke of gold embroidery.

They Will Sue John Hoey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—President Sanford, of the Adams Express company, says that the directors have decided to bring suit against ex-President Hoey for the money they believe to be due the company from him on account of his connection with the transactions of the late Baltic Mining company. Mr. Hoey's friends say he is preparing a statement for publication which will entirely exonerate him from the charges of malfeasance.

Pullman Company's Stock Increased.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Stockholders representing $18,000,000 of the $25,000,000 of which Pullman's Palace Car company is capitalized have authorized the issue of $5,000,000 of stock, and have elected the old board of directors. A quarterly dividend—the ninety-ninth—of two dollars a share has been declared on the original $25,000,000 of stock.

He Murdered a Young Girl.

CANTON, O., Oct. 16.—A thirteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Lottie Loey was shot and killed by Charles Jones. Hawkins then tried to kill himself by slashing three gashes across his throat with a razor and hacking four times in his head with a hatchet. He will hardly recover. Jealousy of a man named White led to the tragedy.

Miss Blanche Havemeyer Married.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 16.—A genuine love match was the marriage of Miss Blanche, daughter of Theodore A. Havemeyer, president of the American sugar refineries, to W. Butler Duncan, Jr., a lieutenant of the naval academy and member of a very distinguished New York family.

Machine Typesetting Record Broken.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 16.—F. J. Smith, who operates a Mergenthal linotype typesetting machine on The Commercial, beat the world's record for machine composition on Tuesday night, setting 47,000 ems correct matter in exactly eight hours. He took the regular run of newspaper copy.

FASSETT AND FLOWER.

The Opposing Candidates to Meet in Debate.

NEW JERSEY REPUBLICAN CLUBS.

They Re-elected President J. H. Gastill at the Session in Trenton—What Fassett Said—Blaine—Sheehan and Fassett Both Make Interesting Speeches.

TRENTON, Oct. 16.—At the session of the State League of Republican Clubs convention a resolution congratulating James G. Blaine on his improved health was read and unanimously adopted. The resolution was enthusiastically received, and when it was read the convention boomed with all the way. The fractional time was:

First Heat—33¾, 1:06¾, 1:40¼, 2:13¾.
Second Heat—32, 1:06, 1:42¾, 2:15. Third Heat—35¼, 1:09¾, 1:44, 2:17¾.

It will be seen that the last quarter of the last heat was trotted in the remarkable time of 31¾.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, Mass., has purchased the great trotting mare Nancy Hanks, Mr. Hart Jewell, her breeder and former owner, paid Dobie and Mr. Forbes are said to be the only persons who know the price. It is known, however, that $42,000 was refused for her a short time ago, and that Mr. Boswell had set $50,000 as his price.

Monbara Equals His Record.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—Monbara, the great 3-year-old stallion, was driven by Hobbs to beat his track record here of 2:19¾. In the first attempt he equaled it, but he was not driven again, owing to the cool weather.

On the call of clubs for the nomination of president, the present official, J. H. Gastill, of Mount Holly, was named by all the clubs present and unanimously elected. The vice presidents elected were, First district, Morris A. Rogers; Second district, F. A. Magowan; Third district, L. A. Thompson; Fourth district, C. M. Shipman; Fifth district, Eugene Kelly, Sixth district, Samuel J. Bowers; Seventh district, Richard Brown; Eighth district, E. M. Condict. General W. J. Sewell and H. A. Potter were elected delegates and Foster M. Voorhees and George T. Cramer alternates to the convention of the National league.

The Resolutions.

Resolutions condemning the Democratic administration in this state and indorsing the administration of President Harrison and his able secretary of state adopted. Speeches were made by ex-Senators Cattell, of Camden; Judge R. B. Seymour, of Jersey City; Colonel Sawyer, of Cape May; John Keen, Jr., chairman of the state committee; Captain John Graham, of Jersey City, and General James E. Rusling, of Trenton.

Mr. Sheehan Speaks at Asbury.

ATLANTIC, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Hon. William F. Sheehan, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, spoke here last night to one of the largest audiences which has ever assembled at a political meeting in this city.

Mr. Sheehan, who received an ovation, said that Mr. Fassett had refused to discuss national issues, but had resolved to decided to confine himself to state issues. "For one, if he insists on this," said Mr. Sheehan, "I am willing to meet him." Then Sheehan referred to Fassett as the candidate of Thomas C. Platt at length, and said the nomination could not meet with the approval of the Republicanism. He then asked why Fassett defeated the anti-Pinkerton bill and the state printing bill.

There were other measures in the interests of labor offered in the senate, but why did Mr. Fassett, who claims to have always been the friend of labor, use his efforts to defeat them? Then were the weekly payment bill, the bill regulating the liability of employers to employes, the contract labor bill and the bill regulating the hours of labor on state railroads. Why did he refuse action on these bills? Mr. Sheehan discussed Mr. Fassett's connection with the World's fair at length and also devoted considerable time to answering Mr. Fassett's oft-repeated remark that the present campaign was one of good government against Tammany Hall.

Mr. Fassett on the Silver Question.

ROME, N. Y., Oct. 16.—A Republican barbecue was held here in the afternoon and a mass meeting last evening. Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, Hon. John Vrooman and others spoke. Mr. Fassett opened his speech by saying:

Governor Hill says that the Republican party has been in the habit of promising reforms in October. This year we are going to break that habit. Governor Hill was anxious a few weeks ago to have you believe this was a national campaign. His experience should have taught him that a president is to be elected next year, and that he is not to be called upon to discuss national issues but state. Cleveland was then the Democratic presidential candidate. Mr. Hill's speech in Saratoga showed when that fail. Hill has undertaken this fall to discuss the silver question.

He has found two Democratic newspapers that give the same version of his speech in this respect, and that is that there is no silver plank in the Democratic platform. Since Hill has discussed the silver question before and assumed and refined people it has caused me to wonder whether Cleveland has had in mind remarks the governor has made, and whether the handshaking between the two at Saratoga Hill had straddled the silver question most beautifully. Hill has not been a success as an illustrator of the tariff question. Some years ago he said he was not a free trader, but he wanted the duty taken off tea and coffee. He had then been off for two years.

He Favors the Australian System.

We are at present suffering from an outright political crisis. Tammany Hall is master in the worst thing we ever had. I believe in the advancement of the workingman and employes and for all classes of people the Australian ballot system is the best.

Mr. Fassett talked about the low tax rate of this year and said it was established by the Republican legislature of the year before. He said if the Republican party could continue in power a few years the state tax gatherer would no longer call.

Jonas Assists Fassett.

The speech was the first report of the bank superintendent and alluded to the failure of an Ulster county bank which had not been examined in two years. He attacked the record of Treasurer Jonas and said he

JOSIE MANSFIELD WEDS

Jim Fisk's Evil Genius Marries Once More.

THE GROOM A NEW YORK LAWYER

His Name Is Robert L. Reade, He Family Is Well Known One, and He Is Alleged to Be a Relative of Mrs. Levi P. Morton.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Lawlor, formerly Miss Josie Mansfield, well known in New York twenty years ago, was married last Friday at St. George's church, Hanover square, London, to Mr. Robert L. Reade, of New York. Mr. Lawlor, brother of Lady Falkland, his mother and three members of the bride's family were present. The couple are spending the honeymoon at Brighton.

Josie and Jim Fisk.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The news that Josie Mansfield is married will set tongues wagging from one shore of America to the other. The woman who was more discussed twenty years ago than any other person in the western hemisphere—the woman who inspired Edward S. Stokes to kill James Fisk, Jr.—has again become staid and demure.

Josie Mansfield's History.

It is not fair even to guess at Mrs. Robert L. Reade's age. She is as charming today as she was when she ensnared the gallant Colonel Jim Fisk, Jr., more than a score of years ago. At that time her smart carriages, her gorgeous diamonds and her dashing gowns, all the gifts of Erie's king, were the talk of the city. Her fame went abroad, too. Her name was as well known in every backwoods hamlet as John L. Sullivan's is today. Bonnets and gowns and a certain mode of dressing the hair were named for her.

The Shooting of Fisk.

Then Josie Mansfield and Jim Fisk quarreled and parted. The King of Erie was as jealous because his handsome friend and ex-partner, Ned Stokes, was too attentive to Josie and spent too many days and nights in the house Jim Fisk's money had furnished for her.

Then came bickerings, a threat of publishing all of Fisks letters and telegrams to Josie, a final junction by which Fisk prevented Stokes from publishing them or any of them, and finally the shooting of Fisk by Stokes on the main stairway of the Grand Central hotel on Broadway.

Josie sued Colonel Fisk's widow for $200,000 she claimed the dead man owed her, but she did not win the suit. Josie went to Boston, but she found that city too hot to live in. Crowds followed her, and hooted her in the streets. Soon she fled to Paris.

She Was Once Reported Dead.

It was reported three years ago that Josie was dead and had been secretly buried, but a report came with the mail the little bonbonniere she inhabited near the Boulevard Pereire. She looked astonishingly fresh and blooming, and her auburn hair was as much a graceful knot upon the top of her head.

Josie Mansfield was married in 1864 to Frank Lawlor, an actor of some note. She was then living in San Francisco with her parents, whose name was Warren. Lawlor and Josie led a happy life until 1868, when he found that he could no longer live with her.

Josie had a hard time after that until she met Jim Fisk in the house of Mrs. Annie Meads in 1870 and was introduced to him at her own request. Lawlor died years ago.

Who Robert L. Reade Is.

Robert L. Reade has a law office at 31 Nassau street. He has always enjoyed too much money and too merry associates to become remarkably celebrated at the bar. He is a short, thickset man with a red Burgundian complexion. He looks like a man who has seen forty-five years or more.

The bridegroom's father was Robert Reade. He was very wealthy, having been one of the first and most extensive property owners in Minneapolis.

He went to Paris in 1876 and was accidentally drowned. Robert L. Reade remained in this city and practised law. Mrs. Reade and her daughters made their home in England. The elder daughter Miss Katharine, married General Francis Strachan, governor of the Burmudas. Captain Percy Cary, aide-de-camp to Gen. Strachan, fell in love with Mrs. Strachan's pretty sister and married her. By the death of his uncle Captain Cary succeeded to the title of Viscount Falkland five years ago.

Related to Mrs. Levi P. Morton.

Mrs. Reade spent last summer at Caris bad with her cousin, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, and her daughters. Lawyer Robert L. Reade went over to visit his mother in July. There he met Josie Mansfield, who, in spite of her years, was as much of a belle as ever. She called herself Mrs. Frank Lawlor, and the number of her devoted admirers was legion. Lawyer Reade was fascinated. He urged the fair Josie to marry him, but she was coy. She told him to take ample time and consider well what he was about to do.

Thereupon Mr. Reade returned to this city and considered. He gave a little dinner to a very few companions early in September. After they had all dined well Reade said:

"I'm going to marry Josie Mansfield. The drinking myself to death. Well, Josie Mansfield is the woman who can save me. Hil marry her if she'll let me, for I think she has been more sinned against than sinning."

Thereupon Mr. Reade's chums told him that he was all right and drank his fiancee's health.

Three members of the bride's family were present at the ceremony, but the cable says nothing as to the presence of the bridegroom's relatives, but the chances are that they were all absent. For Mrs. Reade, the bridegroom's mother, has long occupied a very lofty social position in England. Lady Falkland doubtless could not find time to assist at the wedding.

A Dishonest Clerk Drove Him to Suicide.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 16.—Jacob L. Burphis, aged fifty years, a well known resident of this place, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He had just returned from a visit to the grave of his wife. Despondency over financial troubles, brought about by the speculations of a clerk, caused the deed.

The Czarina's Gift to the Starving.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 16.—There has been a complete failure of the harvest in thirteen provinces and a partial failure in seven. The czarina has given twenty millions of rubles to the sufferers.

Her Son Danny.

An old woman who was selling peanuts from a basket was sitting in the shade of some freight near the Fort Lee steamer landing, and after we had talked a bit she said:

"Five years ago my son Danny was drowned in this very slip and I often come down here and sit and think of him."

"That was sad to lose a son that way," I replied.

"And such a good boy as my Danny was! He never gave me one moment's worry."

"How old was he?"

"Going on twenty, sir, and he dearly loved his own mother. He sat right on that beam there with his feet over the water, and he probably fell asleep. All to once he fell in, and though the boys tried to save him he never came up again. It was an awful blow, sir."

"Must have been."

"But perhaps it was for the best after all, for he hadn't been gone two days when the ... came to arrest him on four different ... rants, and they said he'd have to ... spend at least five years in state prison. Poor Danny, he was such a good boy!"—New York Evening World.

DEATH ON AN ENGINE.

Three Chicago Newspaper Men and an Engineer Instantly Killed.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—A horrible accident, resulting in the death of three members of The Inter-Ocean staff, occurred on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois road about 11 o'clock, at Crete, Ills. The dead are Leonard Washbourne, sporting reporter for The Inter-Ocean; Fred W. Henry, reporter for The Inter-Ocean, and A. McAferty, artist for The Inter-Ocean; James Clark, engineer.

At Crete the train ran into an open switch. The three men who were killed were on the engine, Henry and McAferty having gone out for the purpose of writing up and illustrating a midnight ride on the fast train, Washbourne, who was returning to Chicago from an Indiana trip, had joined his friends on the engine. As the locomotive left the track the tender and four men were caught and completely buried beneath the wreck. Fireman Lafferty jumped from the engine and is slightly injured.

The engine and baggage car were completely destroyed. Two passenger coaches and the sleeper were more or less damaged. The combination car, in the wreck was destroyed and fell upon the wrecked engine.

When the remains of the three news paper men reached this city they were met by a delegation of 100 representatives of the daily and weekly papers and press associations, who followed the caskets to Jordan's undertaking rooms. All of the bodies were terribly disfigured. A call was issued for a mass meeting of newspaper men to take appropriate action on the bodies of Washburne and his associates.

Governor Hill to Eulogize Grady.

ALBANY, Oct. 16.—Governor Hill will start on Sunday next for Atlanta, Ga., where he is to deliver the address at the dedication of the Grady monument on the 21st inst. The committee of arrangements from Atlanta will convey the governor and his party thither in two private cars. The governor's party will consist of General Sheehan, A. McCall, General Austin Lathrop, General McEwen and General Ferdinand P. Earle. The party will stay at Richmond, where the Powhattan club will tender a reception for the governor on Monday night.

She Fell Dead Over Her Child.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 16.—Stephen D'Ayala, a pattern maker at the Wightman Motor works, shot his wife twice through the head last evening at the May House. The woman fell dead over her child which she was stooping to pick up. The father of Mrs. D'Ayala grappled with the murderer, who attempted to escape, and a scuffle followed, in which the father was badly injured. D'Ayala was captured and lodged in jail. Jealousy is the alleged cause of the tragedy.

Agent Southwick Arrested.

ROSNOUT, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Station Agent South wick, was arrested on Tuesday that he had been waylaid and robbed the previous night of $350 belonging to the Stony Clove and Catskill Mountain Railroad company and the American Express company, has been arrested, suspected of having committed the deed himself to hide the robbery.

Hebrews Desert Their Hirsch Farms.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 16.—Two farms at East Haddam, bought a year ago by Russian Hebrews with money supplied from the Baron Hirsch fund, have been abandoned by their purchasers, who have gone back to New York. Hebrews who have come here and have been supplied with farms do not seem to like farming life.

A Grand Monument at Washington.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16. — The Grand Army of the Republic intends to erect in Washington a monument to General Grant, and the necessary money to pay for the monument is being raised by popular subscription among the Grand Army posts of the country. It is estimated that the sum of $10,000 will be required.

ISABELLE URQUHART.

Millian Russell's Possible Successor in Light Opera.

Miss Isabella Urquhart the prima donna soubrette with an American of Scottish descent. She made her first appearance in the stage about eleven years ago, at the Standard Theatre, New York city, where she sang in the chorus of the comic opera "Billee Taylor," under the management of D'Oyly Carte. Afterwards she joined Augustin Daly's company, and took part in several plays, enacting a minor character. Then she joined Lawrence Barrett's company, and finally returned to comic opera, playing the part of Venus in "Orpheus and Eurydice," under the management of Bandmann and Dickson. Later on she joined the Casino chorus, where she received several small parts, and gradually pushed herself forward, until she gained a leading position among the queens of song. Miss Urquhart has a magnificent figure, a handsome face, is a fine actress and possesses a beautiful soprano voice. She is now in Europe, studying singing and further cultivating her voice.

ISABELLE URQUHART.

Ada Rehan and Boulanger.

In the fall of 1881, Mr. Blaine, then Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Arthur, sent for Creighton Webb and urged him to act as an escort for the representatives of the French Government at the Yorktown celebration.

On day it occured to Mr. Webb that the French officers would be entertained by a visit to Daly's theatre. Mr. Daly at once reserved two boxes for the party, and during the performance suggested that perhaps Boulanger and his friends would like to meet the actors and actresses behind the scenes. Boulanger at once became quite excited. He would be charmed. So they were escorted behind the scenes and introduced.

When Boulanger was presented to Miss Ada Rehan he manifested a little too conspicuous delight. He chatted with her politely enough for a few moments, but was so demonstrative that she was anxious to escape him. At last, as she turned to leave him, Boulanger allowed his ardor to get the better of him. He seized Miss Rehan by the hand and attempted to embrace her, and when she resented this familiarity with an anger which was not simulated, he seemed to think that it was merely the coquetry of a girl. It grew much more vehement. Attaches was violent and Miss Rehan, now thoroughly alarmed, called for help, and in an instant there was a rescue. Some of the male members of Mr. Daly's company laid violent hands on Boulanger, and one of them would have thrown him to the floor had he not been restrained. It looked for an instant as though there surely would be fight there. In the confusion Miss Rehan and the other women escaped, and the men were left standing face to face ready to give and take punishment. The best of Mr. Webb's tact saved Mr. Daly's stage from a scene of actual and not mimic personal encounter. Mr. Webb assured the company that Boulanger having been accustomed to life behind the scenes in the French theatres, did not realize that such things as were permitted in Paris were not tolerated here.

A Million for a Convict.

The heir of over $1,000,000 has been found in the Western Penitentiary, in Allegheny City, Pa. Early in the eighties an actor, whose stage name was St. Rayn, but whose real name was Edwin Boyle, became stranded with his company in New Orleans. He had the good fortune to rescue a wealthy Cuban, Louis de Amboise and daughter Edith, an only child, from a deadly assault by two villains.

In the struggle St. Rayn was severely injured. The Doctors nursed him back to life. The young couple fell in love, but the father demanded that his daughter should marry a cousin, Horace Leigh. She refused, and the lovers eloped and were married. The father forgave them. St. Rayn frequently absented himself, and Horace Leigh studied medicine as a result of which DeAmboise and his daughter were led to believe that the husband was unfaithful. A separation ensued. De Amboise and his daughter and the latter's child went back to Cuba.

Leigh on his deathbed confessed his deceit.

DeAmboise and his daughter also died, leaving an immense property to St. Rayn, who after a year's search was discovered to be an inmate of the Western Penitentiary, convicted of a crime that had never been committed.

Waited for Her Daughter.

The marriage of John Ring of Cabell county, W. Va., aged seventy, to Miss Mary Donnan, aged twenty, of St. Albans, last week, has more than ordinary romance in it. Mr. Ring was formerly an unsuccessful suitor of his bride's mother. He always remained her friend, and when her child was born became greatly attached thereto. The little girl, as she grew to womanhood, strikingly resembled her mother, and when Mr. Ring sought the daughter's hand the mother looked with favor upon the alliance. The groom has just purchased a fine farm.

William Reeser and the Blacksnake.

William Reeser, of Reading, Pa., while riding horseback to Lebanon the other day, encountered a big blacksnake in the middle of the road. The snake jumped at the horse, and quick as thought wound itself around the animal's left foreleg, causing him to rear and pitch frantically. Reeser dismounted with difficulty, and when the snake extended its neck from the horse's leg to strike him, he gave it a sharp rap on the head, whereupon it loosened its coil and was promptly dispatched.

RUINED BY WOMEN.

Great Men Who Have Gone Down to Destruction Through Them.

The Fate of Napoleon.

The suicide of General Boulanger at the tomb of Mme. de Bonnemain suggests the memory of many another distinguished soldier whose infatuation for a woman who was not his wife caused him to neglect marriage vows, social obligations and the good opinion of the world.

Caesar and Antony, two of the greatest generals the world has ever known, forsook their lawful wives for Cleopatra. Her beauty and her charms of conversation indeed an enchantress. Harmachis, the hereditary high priest, and Pharaoh of Egypt tells us in Rider Haggard's book how he, a strong man, a priest who had penetrated the most occult mysteries of creation, a philosopher who had laughed Caesar to scorn as a weakling and expressed his contempt of the great queen who had usurped his throne—this man Harmachis tells how he fell beneath Cleopatra's spell and for her fleeting favor violated his most sacred oaths, sacrificed his priesthood, his country, his religion, and exchanged his certainty of heaven for countless ages of hell.

Another great soldier, the Emperor Justinian, distracted his empire by his love for Theodora. Like Cleopatra, she was a beautiful, strong-willed and crafty woman. But she was a notorious woman, despised by the people as the vilest of her sex; and yet Justinian so loved her to his heart and seated her on his throne as his equal colleague in ruling Rome.

Alexander the Great, who wept because he had no more worlds to conquer, meekly succumbed to the sophistical seduction of a worthless woman. She stifled his ambition and transformed him into a drunkard. The orgies of Alexander with his mistress resulted in the cruel sacrifice of many innocent lives and the burning of some of the fairest cities in Asia Minor.

Frederick the Great was captured by a ballet dancer of poor repute. For her sake he forsook all that had been nearest and dearest to him. She changed his life. He was a puppet in her hands. Her word was law. She spoke and Frederick commanded his advisers to obey.

In the full meridian of intellectual greatness Condé, the pride of France, was consumed by an unlawful love. A notorious English adventuress named Sophia Dawes, made him her prey. For years the Prince was her slave. His squandered fortune on her sacrificed his family and his friends for her, and she ultimately repaid his kindness by murdering him.

Louis XIV is another instance of an able soldier who suffered his judgment to be routed by the battery of woman's affection. His amorous intrigues alarmed the nation, and well they might when it became patent that the kingdom of France was being governed by such creatures as the Duchess de Vallière, Mme. de Montespan and Louise de Quorquilles.

Napoleon, too, the greatest soldier France has ever known, was lured by a fair face from the paths of domesticity. His cruel treatment of the Empress Josephine will ever remain a plague spot on Napoleon's memory.

But if woman has brought disaster to many a distinguish soldier she has also brought him victory. The smiles and triumphs of her mouth have been more than the tears and defeats.

He Gave Fair Warning.

Rev. C. Wilson of Georgetown, Del., has a [illegible] parrot [illegible] who sings [illegible] says some six months from date and carrying off what valuables he can safely take. He says his intentions are merely burglary, and that no arson, murder, or other crime will be attempted. The burglar coolly admits in his lengthy epistle, that it is not customary with him to notify subscribers of his intentions. He says he knows that if he is caught it may be three years, to stand one hour in the pillory and receive twenty lashes, as did John Cummins, the Baltimore burglar.

The writer continues: "I saw John Cummins whipped at New Castle yesterday with twenty lashes. It is a very barbarous institution, and I can only teach a barbarian and likewise your law. I want to make a daring burglary in this State, and anyone not here desiring to arrest a burglar of first class. I am leaving Wilmington for the West, and will return by the line of Delmar and Georgetown. So if you, my city as the first place to operate. I will show the people of Delaware that there is no danger of arrest as long as the police of Paris, London, Chicago, and Baltimore could not arrest me. I mean to carry my word, and my stake is a big one. I confess I have not the least ambition to the pillory or whipping post. If you can pull me in I agree to receive ten lashes more. I will walk to the pillory and whipping post barefooted, but I would advise you not to anticipate such a pleasure."

A Sleepy Convict.

The physicians at the Columbus, Ohio, penitentiary are studying the case of John Davis, a convict imprisoned there. He sleeps constantly, and can be aroused to take food only by the most liberal applications of water and a strong paddle well used.

The severe discipline of the penitentiary had no effect. The convict went to sleep wherever and whenever he could find something to lay or lean on. Of course, he soon became useless, and the warden ordered him to the idle house, and then the physician had him removed to the hospital. For the past month this convict has been peacefully sleeping. A large flat paddle is used when it is necessary to arouse him. The paddle is vigorously applied on the feet.

Davis drowsily arouses himself, answers incoherently any questions asked, swallows the food forced upon him, and then apparently with great relief, returns to his slumbers. He weighed 200 pounds when he entered the hospital, but now only 93. The doctors say that Davis's case is hopeless, and that he will sleep his life away.

A Woman Moonshiner.

Lucy McClellan, a notorious woman moonshiner, was captured near Lincoln Courthouse, W. Va., a few days ago. Miss McClellan is twenty-four years old and an amazon in strength and courage. For two years she has peddled illicit whisky to thousands of workmen engaged in the construction of the New York & Western railroad. The liquor was made in a secret still in the Logan Mountains by her father, brothers and lover. Accompanied by the latter the young woman made regular visits to the workmen's camp disposing of the liquor. She was always armed, and had shot three men who had insulted her. Deputy marshals have made frequent attempts to arrest her. Last week they came upon her unexpectedly in Logan county. She escaped, and they pursued her for 200 miles. On Saturday night she was taken while in the house of a friend taking the first sleep she had had in four days.

He Would Do.

How a Boy's Confidence Got Him Three Cents.

Merchants, of all men, appreciate qualities which bring success—tact, energy, courage, industry, quickness and a readiness in suiting means to ends. As an example of this I will relate a story which may be new or old, truth or fiction, but which is not incredible in itself, while it illustrates in a striking way the spirit and method of a born man of business. A country boy went to New York, with no friends and little money, determined to make his way in the world. In the course of his looking about he wandered into "lower Wall street," and walked into the store of W—— & Co. Mr. W—— was busy and the boy waited. At last the frank, bright face of the stranger attracted the merchant's attention.

"Well, my boy," said he. "What can I do for you?"

"I want a place, sir."

"What can you do?"

The boy answered eagerly:

"Most anything, sir."

Partly in joke, perhaps, and partly to rid himself of an almost too confident applicant, Mr. W—— said:

"Ah, ah! Well, just go out and borrow me a couple of thousand dollars."

The lad put on his hat, walked out of the store, and passed slowly down Front street till he came to another large store in the same line of business. This firm was probably well acquainted with W—— & Co., the boy said to himself, and with a bold but honest look he walked in and accosted the man who seemed to be the head of the concern:

"Mr. W——, of W—— & Co., sent me to borrow $2,000," said he.

"He did, my son? How is business up at your place?"

The boy, who had seen an appearance of large shipments, answered promptly:

"Very good, sir."

"Two thousand, did you say? Will that be enough?"

"Well, two thousand is all he told me, but if you have plenty I think he would like it if you sent him three thousand."

"Give this boy a check for $3,000 in favor of W—— & Co.," said the man to his cashier.

A few minutes later the boy walked into Mr. W——'s office and handed him the check.

"Here it is, sir," said he, with an air of having done an errand in the ordinary course of business.

Mr. W—— looked at the check and then at the boy.

"Young man," said he, "come in here, you are just the man I have been looking for," and he gave him a desk and set him to work.—Youth's Companion.

An Itching in Fun.

"Why do you work for a living?"

It was Clare de Sagittlenuddy who spoke these fateful words.

And there was rich.

Rich is, you the most resplendent dreamof the dozens and dozens who sought her hand.

But she loved a man who was poor.

And he was respectable.

Respectable beyond the limit of reason.

Because he would not avail himself of his opportunities and organize a matrimonial combine with Clare, permitting her to put up the capital.

He was a rank outsider, he was.

And he apparently wanted to stay there.

He was in love with his work.

That was another evidence that he had mental aberration in half a dozen places.

"Algernon," she cried, in passionate pleading tones, "tell me, why do you work for a living?"

He had not answered her when she had asked this the first time, but he could not refrain longer.

"Clare," he said, and there was that in his voice which makes the heart grow sick and echoes through the interminable corridors of despair, "listen to me: I work for a living because the darn thing won't work for me."

Clare uttered a piercing scream and flung herself into his arms.

Ill Timed Mirth.

There are times when persons with less than half of Dr. Holmes' brightness would do well to imitate his cautious resolve against ever being too funny.

A gentleman who had come home to his supper in a badly overheated condition swallowed a spoonful of red hot tea, according to the Rochester Talisman. As men will, under such circumstances, he cast the blame upon his wife.

"My dear," he said, "this tea is so hot it has taken the coat off my stomach!"

"Oh, well," she said, with cruel wit, "what do you want of a coat on your stomach this hot weather?"—Youth's Companion.

Accommodating.

Educational Note.

"Are you learning much in school?" asked Colonel Pizzleop of his son Johnny, who is a student at the University of Texas.

Johnny shook his head.

"Why don't you learn?"

"Well, you see, pa, the class is too big. The professor is kept so busy licking the boys that he doesn't get time to teach them."—Texas Siftings.

Low Water in the Connecticut.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—Gen. Howard—First Baptist church—Sunday 4.15 p. m. All men welcome.

—The foundry of the Potter Press Works is being re-wired for electric lighting.

—The new engine to be used in the electric light works has been placed in position.

—Edsall's new advertisement to-day speaks of some good things. He guarantees the best quality at the lowest prices.

—Good will Lodge, No. 101, Knights of Pythias, of Scotch Plains, held a meeting last evening. Business of a routine nature only was transacted.

—A hackman and two of his customers engaged in a wrangle on West Front street at about half-past eleven last evening. The police settled the dispute.

—The usual praise services will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening at 7.45 o'clock. Meetings will be held in the same place on Sunday at nine a. m., and at four p. m.

—It is said to be a fact that spurious silver money is more easily passed on wet or foggy days. In damp weather it somehow loses the peculiar greasy feeling which betrays it on dry days.

—The members of Company B., Third Regiment, enjoyed their monthly sociable at Somerville last evening. Several of the members reside in this city. The music was furnished by Prof. O'Reilly.

—There were 198 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 220 in the preceding week and 177, 205, 195 and 195 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 9,448 against 7,985 in 1890.

—The East New Jersey Baptist Sunday School Convention will be held in the First Baptist Church of our city, next Tuesday, Oct. 20th. Three sessions will be held—ten a. m. and two and seven p. m. Eminent speakers have been secured, and all interested in Sunday School Work, are cordially invited to attend the convention.

—According to Patent Office records the rain-producing process that is being experimented with by the Government Department of Agriculture is really patented, and the patentee is General Daniel Ruggles, of Fredericksburg, Va., an aged ex-Confederate officer. Various persons have claimed to be the originators of this rain-making apparatus, but the Patent Office gives to General Ruggles the credit of being the first to suggest the concussion theory, and to offer an apparatus of bombs, kites and the like to make it successful. General Ruggles' application is dated at Austin, Tex., on February 22, 1879, and his papers were filed in the Patent Office on June 7, 1880. The patent is entered, "Method of precipitating rainfalls," and its file number is 250,087.

—Lovers of fine music should not miss hearing Dan't Boone's Challenge Band on parade next Wednesday as well as their concert at night. This is now acknowledged to be the finest of all traveling bands. It is composed of fifteen of the best musicians obtainable, each man being a solo player, and the programme they offer at their nightly concerts is a big one. Every effort has been made by Peck & Purssuan to have the crack organization of its size in America, and it is evident that they have succeeded. The latest and best music is constantly being rehearsed by them under the leadership of a competent band master, who has special arrangements made for this band. The orchestra attached to this company is also a very fine one, producing the latest operatic selections and closing the performance with the national "Star Spangled Banner."—Ex.

—Unquestionably the most valuable property of existence is health, and everything conducing to a perfect state of health is of interest to the public. In this connection one of the most interesting of the exhibits at the American Institute Fair in New York this year, is that of Walter Baker Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa and Chocolate preparations. Their method of manufacture, unlike the Dutch process, does not admit the use of any chemicals, dyes or alkalies, and therefore positively the only an absolutely pure, but an absolutely healthful drink. The exhibit in itself is a work of art, the booth in white and gold, with old gold silken hangings, the young lady attendants attired in pale blue satin gowns, old gold fancy work hats, aprons and white aprons, (the exact costume of Liotard's celebrated painting "La Belle Chocolatiere," adopted by W. Baker & Co. as their trade-mark,) and the tasteful array of the goods form the most striking and attractive exhibit in the whole fair, and one that will well repay every visitor's attention. As an American institution fighting the fight of health against adulterated products, Walter Baker & Co. deserve the support of consumers of cocoa and chocolate in this country.

WAS RANDOLPH RESPONSIBLE.

Suicide of a Boy Who Burned His Barn Because of Pay Refused.

It has been learned that William Croucher, who hanged himself in a barn at Piscataway, made a confession on Wednesday night to James Smith, a watchman at Landing Bridge, that he set fire to the barn of his employer, Clinton Randolph, last Winter.

Croucher said that he could not get his pay from Farmer Randolph, and that one evening after hitching up the team for Randolph and his wife they drove away, when Croucher slipped into the barn and set fire to the hay. He then closed the doors and went into the house. Soon afterwards flames burst through the barn and Croucher then ran out and helped to save the live stock. The loss by fire was about $4,000.

It is thought that Croucher was in fear all the time of being arrested, and that the matter weighed so heavily on his mind that he became deranged, and while in this condition killed himself.

Candidate George A. Dilts.

If any Republican candidate now in nomination for the Assembly of this State, is as good a man as George A. Dilts who has been nominated by the Somerset county Republicans for the Assembly they ought to be elected. Those who know him say that he is an honest, upright business man of the strictest integrity. He belongs to an old and highly respected family of Raritan, is a thorough gentleman with a large heart, always aiding the poor when called upon, allowing no worthy fitmess to pass that he can or empty handed. His fellow townsmen speak in the highest terms of him, and bear testimony of his popularity. The collar which Leon Abbett put upon the neck of Mr. Bergen last Winter, and led him to the speaker's desk to do his work, will not fit Mr. Dilts's neck. We all know what a submissive Assemblyman to the Abbett power Mr. Bergen made. But Mr. Dilts, if elected as he should be, will wear no man's collar. The Legislative jobbery of Gov. Abbett will be cut to the quick by Mr. Dilts if he is elected as he should be. Let this end of Somerset county do her duty and all will be well.

Wetumpka Honored.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Honor held at Newark on the 14th inst., Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3401, of this city, received second prize for increase of membership during the year ending October, 1891, and Mr. F. P. Huffner a Knight's gold badge inlaid with diamonds for having increased the membership of his lodge 50 in 90 days. He was placed on the Good of the Order Committee. Mr. C. J. Feytel was elected Grand Vice Dictator without opposition. This speaks well for Wetumpka Lodge, which now numbers 152 strong and is just turning its third year. With two members in the Grand Lodge and three representatives for 1892. It will have a strength of five votes at the next session.

The Three R's Entertainment Last Night.

The Epworth League entertainment at Vincent chapel last night proved a great success. Mr. James R. Joy, the editor of Youth, gave selected readings, Mr. Ezra Loomis spoke on the Art of Writing, giving examples, and Mr. George R. Cornwell, the mental (George) mentality told of how arithmetic was taught when he was a boy, as if that were long, long ago.

He gave some amusing and curious examples, and altogether the affair proved to be a very enjoyable one.

A Handsome Business Wagon.

Messrs. Van Emburgh and White, the well-known and prosperous merchants of West Front street, put on the streets to-day, fresh from the shop, the prettiest business wagon yet seen. In color it is white and gold. The wheels are garnet with gold stripe. David King, the driver who took the wagon on its initiation trip, considers it the giddiest and most attractive wagon in town.

Two Young Women Arrested.

Yesterday afternoon Policeman Giese arrested Fannie Moerath and Annie Rothenhouse at the charge of using profane and indecent language and striking a little girl. When arraigned in court this morning they pleaded not guilty and City Judge Codington set the cases down for this afternoon at two o'clock. Neither of the girls is over seventeen years old.

Salvation Army at Reform Hall.

Captain McIver and Lieut. Rowland have been appointed to take charge of the Salvation Army services in Plainfield. To-night, a family gathering; to-morrow, (Sunday,) at 10 a. m., a business meeting and at 7.45 a great Salvation meeting, to which meetings everybody is welcome.

Fractured His Arm.

Michael Gill, a driver for Mr. Harry W. Marshall, the proprietor of the American Steam Laundry, on East Front street, fell from the wagon at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon and fractured one of his arms. A physician set the fractured bone.

Rapid Transit.

This is an age of rapid transit. The Plainfield Evening News of Friday last reached here this morning.—New Brunswick Home News, Oct. 13th. Same here. Tuesday's Home News arrived here this morning.

A Street Fight.

Another disgraceful street fight took place in the boulevard last evening. The participants in the affair are known and warrants will be issued for their arrest.

AN ESCAPED LUNATIC.

WITH AN IRON BAR HE CHASES A PLAINFIELDER.

Excitement in the Elizabeth R. R. Waiting Room.—After Fencing With a Stove, and Spoiling All the Isinglass, the Crazed Fencer Makes Things Interesting For an On-Looker.—Finally Captured.

Yesterday afternoon a man with a case of excitement in the waiting-room of the railroad station at Elizabeth.

A Plainfielder in there at the time says the man was rather wild-looking. He came over to the passengers waiting and extended two fingers for a shake.

The next event was a fencing match with the stove. The man showed great agility in avoiding the determined rushes of his adversary, whose body was pierced again and again, (through every pane of isinglass) by the cane he wielded.

Then there was another hand-shake, seemingly congratulatory. The Plainfielder was standing close-by, much interested. When, however, the fencer lugged out from a rear pocket a short, heavy bar of iron and started towards him, the young man made for the door. The stove was circled twice, and then the chase ended.

The Plainfielder reached the door, and waited further developments. He did not wait long. His pursuer, after following him around the stove, stopped and opening one of the stove-doors brought the bar down on it with a crash. The door left the stove at once. At this point two policemen came in and walked off with the man, who, they said, was an escaped lunatic.

Social & Personal

The funeral of Matthew McClaren, the eleven-year-old boy who was killed by the cars Thursday morning near the Scott Press Works, took place from his late residence this morning at half-past eight o'clock. Interment was made in Philadelphia.

Major-General Howard will be the guest of Major W. D. W. Miller of La Grande avenue during his sojourn in this city. Members of Post, No. 73, G. A. R., desirous of hearing his address will meet at Post rooms, Sunday afternoon, at 3.30, wearing regulation badges and white gloves. All veterans are invited to unite with them on this occasion.

Who Is He?

[From the New York Sun.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—William Balkwell of Plainfield, N. J., was charged to-day at Oxford with obtaining 10 shillings (about $2.50) by false pretences from the Warden of Merton College, Oxford University. Balkwell represented himself to be "Phillip Brooks, a novelist, of Long bridge, Maine, and a son of Bishop Phillip Brooks. He asked the Warden to tell him if anyone at Oxford was acquainted with his grandfather, Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Balkwell also declared himself to be the author of "Mr. Barnes of New York," and said that he had recently been to Paris, where he added, he got into a swindled out of a considerable sum of money.

The prisoner was remanded in order to enable the police authorities to make further inquiries respecting Mr. Balkwell of Plainfield, N. J.

The name Balkwell does not appear in the directory.

The C. Y. M. L.'s New Building.

Mr. George R. Musgrave, the West Front street carpenter, has the contract for the new building of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, on Sixth and Liberty streets.

It will be a handsome structure and will cost about $4,000. The work on the building commenced this week is progressing rapidly.

BASE BALL LEAGUE, '92.

Westfield, Somerville and Elizabeth Have Already Entered, and Plainfield will Probably Do So.

Rumors of a base-ball league for next year have been prevalent for a week back and all sorts of statements have been made concerning the Plainfield attitude in regard to it. A Standard man asked Manager Codding yesterday for the latest news about a league. Mr. Codding says the league scheme has materialized, and a Northern New Jersey League will play championship games next season. Westfield, Somerville and Elizabeth have already joined, and it is hoped Plainfield will also join. If she does not, Newark, Rahway or New Brunswick will make the fourth club. A meeting was held last week at Elizabeth, at which were present Ogden Cohen, of Elizabeth; Codding and Peck of Westfield and Mack of Somerville. The league scheme was discussed informally. Mr. Codding says there has been no attempt or no wish to "freeze out" Plainfield. Some of the delegates, however, feel rather bitter toward the Plainfield management. When asked if he had any complaint to make against the Crescent management, Mr. Codding said "no," so far as Westfield is concerned. Personally, I think the Crescent way of running base ball is antiquated; that is entrusting a team to a "committee" instead of giving absolute control to a manager and holding him strictly responsible for the work of the team. The other clubs in this vicinity who have dealings with the Crescents, would like to see that team in the hands of a man like Charley Burnett, whose word would "go" and when an arrangement should be made with him, one would not be informed a day or two afterwards that the "committee" had vetoed it. All the interviews against the Crescents for bad faith in base ball deals can be traced to the wonderful work of this board called "committee." The reason Plainfield was not invited to the meeting at Elizabeth was that they were on the eve of an election of officers, and it was hoped that the clumsy method of management at present in vogue, would be thrown aside and the team put in charge of an enterprising man like Burnett, with whom we could do business satisfactorily and not feel that after we had discussed business with a decision that we would be able to trot and consult some ponderous committee before he could do anything. — Union County Standard.

TWO COWARDS GET THEIR DUE.

Farmer Toms's Assailants to Serve Long Terms in State Prison.

Francis Cook and John Walker were arraigned before Judge Bartine, in the Somerset Court, yesterday for sentence. They are the men who cruelly treated Farmer John Toms, near New Brunswick, by tricing him with a rope and leaving him in a dark closet to die.

Judge Bartine spoke of the crime, and told the men they ought well to be ashamed to commit such a cowardly act.

Cook was then given fifteen years in State prison at hard labor for robbery and five years for arson and $1,000 fine.

Walker was sentenced for eleven years for robbery and one for assault.

Charles Marion was sentenced to State prison for seven years for horse-stealing. He had already served a sentence in the penitentiary for burglary. Another crime, Arthur Vanfleet was sentenced for four years for a similar offense. He had served three years in Monmouth.

This Season's Novelties.

A "peanut" party will be one of this season's novelties. If written invitations are issued, have two peanut shells pasted in each envelope on one corner of the paper. The hostess provides herself with a quantity of peanuts, and conceals them in every imaginable spot in the rooms where she is to entertain her guests—behind pictures, under mats, among the flowers, everywhere there are peanuts. After the guests have all arrived, a small bag is handed to each one, and the company are told that whoever first fills his or her bag with peanuts wins the prize of the evening. Then begins the scramble—here, there and everywhere—for peanuts.

Another Opportunity For Young Men.

Every man should have enough knowledge of book-keeping to accurately keep his own account with debt and credit; this knowledge if strictly observed would cause many a failure to a success. Accurate business knowledge mixed with honesty will give both new disastrous failures. Bookkeepers writing a good hand are in demand; endorsed with honesty, and they are at a premium. The Y. M. C. A. invite you to their rooms and to enroll your name in the book keeping class Monday night.

Indignant Italians.

Nine of the Italians who were employed by the contractors who are putting in the water mains for the Plainfield Water Supply Company were looking for a lawyer to compel Contractor Dowd to pay them for their week's work. They claim that Mr. Dowd refuses to pay them because they left his employ.

The Prisoner Escaped.

Thomas Fahy was arrested by the police last night on the charge of wife beating. On the way to the station house on East Front street, the policeman and escaped. The police are looking for him to-day.

Rogers Bros.' Stock Sold.

The stock of Rogers Bros.' shoe store was sold this afternoon and bid in by the mortgagee. The store will be re-opened Monday morning and will be in charge of Rogers Bros., when goods will be sold at greatly reduced prices.

They Rode the Goat.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, held a meeting last night at which time three candidates for membership took the third degree. There was a large attendance of members.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Are There Mahatmas?

Yes, say those who follow the theosophic cult, there are. They are glorious creatures, mostly or altogether Indian Brahmins, who have so far conquered matter that they can even now assume the function of spirit and waft themselves to any spot of earth whither sweet fancy may dictate, like Sam Lucas in "Mr. Isaacs," leaving their bodies, to which they are still connected by an electric chain, asleep in a sort of monkery in Thibet, which these glorious persons still deign to dwell in, while they oversee matters connected with worldly affairs, particularly the spread of theosophy.

Colonel Henry S. Olcott used to be a shrewd, very able newspaper man, for a time particularly active in ferreting out fraud and humbug. Punishment for this may now have overtaken him in the shape of a tendency to believe what his fellow men declare to be arrant nonsense. Colonel Olcott, in brief declares there are mahatmas, that he has seen and talked with them, and that, most staggering of all, they have sent him letters by psychic telegraph. That is to say, they understand the laws of matter so well, in their high and mighty way, that they can take a letter, dissolve it into its primordial atoms, in that shape waft it across a continent, then, by sheer force of their "charm," put the atoms together again and make it flutter and fall in real, solid, tangible shape at the feet of the person for whom it is designed.

New Colonel Olcott, once a newspaper man, who therefore ought to know better, informs us that he himself has actually received such letters, and he used to be a fruitful man before he went to India and the mahatmas got hold of him. Meantime the New York Sun offers to give a certificate of genuineness over the editor's signature, if Olcott will deliver through his mahatma postal service a letter directed to a certain person not named, and inform the public through any newspaper of the contents of the letter as obtained by the occult knowledge of his mahatmas.

The proposition is a fair enough one. Of course it is easy to take refuge in a lofty superiority and say mahatmas will not work at newspaper dictation. But then it will follow sensibly enough that nobody will believe in them. If there are mahatmas, now is their time to appear to us. It is unfortunate, indeed, that such fairy tales should come to the ears of the investigator into real psychological science, thought transference, etc. There is a world of true scientific knowledge, hidden hitherto from general research, which we seem just on the point of grasping. Under such conditions every thing that cannot verify itself according to the severest tests ought to be brushed aside like cobwebs.

Better Than Electricity.

At least it may prove to be so. It is compressed air. For once the French have gone ahead of the Americans in the field of utilizing inventions, and put compressed air to so many industrial uses that we of the western republic can only admire in silence.

In Paris, thanks to the admirable system of cellars under the streets, compressed air is conveyed in tubes beneath the pavements, just as gas, steam and electricity are conveyed under some of our streets. Pipes carry the air at a pressure of six atmospheres, which can be reduced to four by means of valves.

The compressed air is used for many things. In one place a visitor found it doing the work of a twenty-five horse power motor instead of steam. In another it was found to be doing the purpose, performing its task perfectly and cheaply. By its means 10,000 clocks in Paris all strike the time at the same instant, street cars are propelled without the use of either horses or electricity, cheaply, safely and surely. They neither stop because the horses balk of the circuit is broken. Compressed air cools liquors in barrooms perfectly and furnishes electric lights. Paris seems to be going wild over it and expects no end to the wonders it will work.

There are some new things in airships. Maxim, the Yankee in England, says he is nearly ready for the last grand test with his air traveler. He has spent $80,000 on the machine. Its fuel will be gasoline. This will generate steam, which will drive the engines and screws. When equipped with fuel, water, etc., the aviator weighs 5,400 pounds, and Mr. Maxim believes he can make it lift itself by pressure of the air upon the under side of inclined planes. Another idea is that of the French aeronaut who will soon attempt to cross Africa in a machine of the balloon type. He expects to generate as he goes the hydrogen gas to hold the balloon in air. This Frenchman is Professor Lecomte, of the Paris school of aerostation, and the chances are that Professor Lecomte's friends will bid him an eternal farewell when he starts on that voyage across Africa.

The versatility of woman's mind would never have been apparent only for the modern agitation about her rights. A lady writing to an agricultural paper begins her letter with a devout exhortation to read the Bible and ends it with a recipe for destroying cabbage worms.

NOT ONE CENT IN SIGHT.

Officers Fail to Find Any of Hoey's Property.

IS CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

It Is Alleged That He Has Appropriated Over $16,000 of Company Funds and That He Has Defrauded the Adams Express of Over $700,000 in All.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—President Henry Sanford, of the Adams Express company, has begun suit in the supreme court against ex-President John Hoey to recover the sum of $712,750.37, alleged to have been unlawfully converted to the use of the defendant, and a writ of attachment was issued by Judge Patterson against Mr Hoey's property in this city. None of it was found, neither was the ex-president charged with embezzlement, too.

In addition to the thousands of dollars alleged to have been taken from the treasury of the Adams Express company by the venerable ex-president, the papers set up the claim that the further sum of $16,045.37, paid to Mr. Hoey by the administrators of the estate of the late treasurer, Isaiah C. Babcock, in settlement of the amount due the company, was never applied for the expressed purpose, but con verted to the use of the ex-president.

Deputy Sheriff Joel O. Stevens took the attachment and summons and proceeded at once to Delmonico's, Mr. Hoey's temporary home in New York, but the defendant could not be found. It is said, however, that service will be acknowledged today.

Mr. Hoey Will Fight.

Through his son Mr. Hoey, who was at Delmonico's, sent out word that he would not think of paying the company, and would be prepared to make a statement to the public soon. His counsel, Root & Clark had requested him not to talk about the case, and he could not go into particulars. The ex-president is a fighter and will stand his ground. There is no doubt about that.

When he gets ready, the explanation of all the charges of fraud made against him will be made clear to the satisfaction of his friends, he said. His former wicked partner, Sherburne, now in Paris, will get the onus of the charges. Assistant Deputy Sheriff F. J. Burns also accompanied to reach Mr. Hoey, but the servants at Delmonico's would not permit the officer to go to the ex-president's room.

Not a Cent in Sight.

Sheriff's officers lost no time in serving the attachment upon Secretary Marston, of the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, 22 William street, but they found that they were too late to stop the $22,000 which Mr. Hoey drew from the institution last Tuesday. The ex-president has kept a large balance at that bank for some years past, but checked out the last dollar the day of his sudden deposition.

Next the sheriff's men visited the South ern Express company's office and served the writ of attachment upon Secretary Tilley. Here, again, the officers found that Mr. Hoey has withdrawn his entire and his large holdings of stock in the company. Treasurer Hubbell, of the Adams Express company, was also served with the attachment, but he only possesses the insignificant interest of Mr. Hoey was his October salary of $2,400, and that had been drawn several days ago. So the sheriff's men have not found a penny's worth of property up to date.

The Allegations Against Hoey.

The attachment against John Hoey was issued upon the application of Henry Sanford, the new president, on the ground of nonresidence. Mr. Hoey's home being at Hollywood, N. J. Upon the affidavit of Frederick Lovejoy, the new vice president, whose affidavit recites the history of the company, which is a joint stock association, and says that Mr. Hoey was appointed manager of the company on Jan. 7, 1870, and has ever since continued to act and is now acting as such. Hoey's elevation to the treasurership, the presidency and the presidency is then referred to. In all of these positions, he says, Hoey occupied a fiduciary relation to the company and had control of the funds.

The Express Purchase Deal.

Prior to March 25, 1882, it is alleged, Mr. Hoey either individually or in connection with other persons, had acquired an interest in the business of the New York and Boston Dispatch company, the Kinsley Express company and the Union Express company for $73,000, and that at that time all of the interest purchased. On that same day he sold and transferred this interest to the Adams Express company for $200,000, and in his official capacity caused this sum to be transferred to himself and others out of the funds of the Adams Express company, and was paid the appropriated $270,905 out of the $350,000 to his own use and that of others, in fraud of the rights of the Adams Express company, and in violation of his duties as an officer and trustee. This sum has been wholly lost to the Adams Express company.

The Company Out $712,750.37.

Continuing, Mr. Lovejoy alleges that prior to March 12, 1888, Hoey, either individually or in connection with other persons, had acquired an interest in the stock of the Southern Express company, said to be $712,750.37, which company at the time was solvent and the interest purchased. On that same day he sold and transferred this interest to the Adams Express company for $1,000,000, and in his official capacity caused this sum to be transferred to himself and others out of the funds of the Adams Express company

SLAIN ON CHILI'S SOIL.

Three Yankee Tars Killed by Valparaiso Sailors.

THEY BELONGED TO THE BALTIMORE

The Probable Cause of the Difficulty Was the Unfriendly Feeling of the Chilian People for the United States. The Battle Was a Bloody One.

VALPARAISO, Chili, via GALVESTON, Tex., Oct. 17.—Three, perhaps four, American man-of-war's men were killed and several others were more or less severely wounded in a desperate street fight here last evening with a crowd of Chilian sailors. The Chilians did not do all the fighting, for when the fight was ended a number of them were found to be pretty badly hurt, though it is thought none of them were killed.

They Were the Baltimore's Men.

The American bluejackets who were engaged in the battle were from the United States cruiser Baltimore, and the Chilians were from the various war ships now in the harbor.

It is impossible at present to get the full particulars of the fight or the names of the killed and wounded.

Hatred of the Yankees Caused It.

There are several accounts as to the origin of the difficulty. One of them, which seems plausible, is this: Ever since the triumph of the junta there has been a feeling among the lower classes of the people of marked hostility to the Americans, and the bluejackets from the American war ships were sometimes subjected to insult.

It is alleged that a party of men from the Baltimore, ashore on liberty, met with the Chilian man-of-war's men. The hatred of the "Yankee" led to some insulting remark, which was resented by one of the hotter headed Americans, and this brought on the general fight which was attended with such fatal results. There was much excitement in this city when the news of the fight spread. The unfortunate affair is greatly regretted in official circles and among the better class of citizens.

WILLIAM O'BRIEN'S DEFENSE.

He Tells the Story of the Famous Boulogne Conference.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—William O'Brien, stung by the charge that he and Dillon hounded Parnell to death, has made public the story of the Boulogne conference, with a letter from Parnell, written on the day negotiations were broken off. Mr. O'Brien says: "We kept three objects always in view. First, that it was impossible that Mr. Parnell could continue as chairman of the parliamentary committee; secondly, to soften the memory of Mr. Parnell's fault by every possible palliative and evidence of good will that his devoted colleagues could suggest; thirdly, to avert the calamities, which we keenly felt to be irreparable, from any disruption of the forces."

He asserts that Parnell's four lieutenants wanted him to consent to Parnell's first proposition, to retire in favor of O'Brien, and taunted them with this silence now. This is Parnell's letter, which Mr. O'Brien includes in his statement:

February 11, 1890.

MY DEAR O'BRIEN—I desire to express to you how deeply I feel the kindness and gentleness of spirit shown to me by you throughout the negotiations. I have felt all along that I had no right to expect from anybody the constant anxiety to meet my views, the intense desire that all proposals claiming your sanction should be as palatable as possible to me, which so distinguished your conduct in the communications which passed between us. I know that you have forgiven much roughness and asperity on my part and that you have made allowances for some unreasonable conduct from me, which, to anyone gifted with less patience and conciliation than yourself, would have been most difficult.

I appreciate intensely the difficulties which surrounded you during the negotiations—the constant daily anxiety which would have been overwhelming to anybody possessed of less courage and devotion than yourself. I fervently hope and believe that the prospects of Ireland are not as dark as you fear, and that after a little time, having passed through clouds and darkness, we shall again stand on our former footing, where in happier days we were comrades in arms in behalf of a united Ireland. Dearest O'Brien, I am always yours,

CHARLES S. PARNELL.

"Thus closed the Boulogne negotiations," continues Mr. O'Brien, "with the full recognition that we parted as honorable opponents."

FIGHTING FOR AMERICAN PORK.

M. Ferry Threatens to Resign During a Heated Discussion.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Before the customs committee of the senate, M. Ribot, minister of foreign affairs, and M. Roche, minister of commerce, advocated the raising of the prohibition from American pork, and the substitution of a duty of 20 francs. Several members of the committee opposed the bill.

A proposal by M. Ferry to postpone discussion until Saturday was rejected. M. Ferry thereupon declared that he would resign the presidency. Efforts were made to reconsider the vote.

Four Anarchists in Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Before Judge Biddle a hearing was had and habeas corpus in the interest of Judius Moskowitz, Isadore Brenner, Jacob Apple and Morris Gitlis, charged with making incendiary speeches and inciting to riot. The men were the ringleaders of a social labic meeting held last Sunday night. The Judge said that their doctrines were seditious. Foreigners came to this country voluntarily, and the first thing they did was to attack our institutions. They were enemies of the human race. He would hold the four men for trial.

WOMEN DELEGATES POISONED.

Nearly One Hundred Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. Members Ill at Bradford.

BRADFORD, Pa., Oct. 17.—Nearly 100 delegates to the Women's Christian Temperance Union state convention were poisoned by something they ate or drank at a dinner in Armory hall tendered the delegates by the McKean County organization. Shortly after the afternoon session was called to order a large number of delegates fell violently ill and in half an hour at least seventy-five were lying ill in their seats or on the floor, all vomiting and extremely sick. Medical aid was summoned and all the physicians in the city have a dozen or more patients on their hands. Mrs. Gause and Mrs. Orvis, both of Phillipsburg, Center county; Miss Pearl, Mrs. Ada Cable, reporter of The Era, and Miss Davis, all of Bradford, and Mrs. W. H. Halvey, of Pittston, a reporter of the Scranton Truth, were among the most serious cases. All were taken to the residences of the citizens where they were being entertained. Mrs. Halvey and Mrs Cable are the only really serious cases.

She Died in Paradise Pond.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 17.—The body of the missing Northampton college girl, Laura E. Presbery, has been found in Paradise pond. She had committed suicide. On Monday she was detected robbing one of her college mates, and preferred death to disgrace. It is believed she was a kleptomaniac, as she had plenty of money of her own.

American Mechanics Elect Officers.

TRENTON, Oct. 17.—The state council of the Junior Order of American Mechanics at their annual meeting elected the following officers: State councilor, E. S. THE HOUSEHOLD

FRENCH SOUPS OR POTTAGES.

The English versus the French Notions Concerning the Real Mission of Soups.

The real mission of soups is completely ignored in England, where soups are identical with heavy, thick, and, to French notions, highly indigestible food. The French consider them only as a forerunner and preparative to a good dinner. Considered in this light, soups do not require the expensive foundation often demanded by professed cooks in England. English cooks affirm that they must have four or five pounds of beef if they are to make a clear soup, while French ones boldly assert that there is no sort of necessity for such extravagance. But when meat is extensively used for properly made soup, why should not the meat itself be afterward served as an entree? Is it simply because it has helped to make a tasty, delicious soup? Boiled fresh beef is not, perhaps a great relish, yet when properly cooked has its merits and helps to make a variety. One eats other boiled meats, as corned beef, legs of mutton, boiled fowls, etc. The French cooks make many delightful soups or pottages with little or no meat at all. And the great secret in the excellency of French soups like other French cooking is to "mitonner." When applied to cooking mitonne means a thing cooked a long time very slowly and watched with great care. It is used for other things, but it is generally applied to soups. Anything mitonne always conveys the idea of having been done very slowly, with particular care.

Helpful Hints.

To prepare brown bread, using white sponge as a foundation, stir into one quart of the sponge three fourths of a cupful of molasses, then work it stiff with the brown flour, as in making white bread.

If varnish is found to have shown white marks, take linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts, shake them well in a phial and apply a small quantity on a soft piece of cotton until the color is restored, then wipe the mixture entirely off.

A little oxalic acid dissolved in soft water cleans zinc. Rub with a cloth wet with this; then dry the zinc quickly with a clean, soft cloth. As oxalic acid is poisonous and will eat whatever it touches, it should be kept in a safe place and can be taken not to get it on the clothing or hands.

Very fine coal ashes cleans brass easily and well.

To prevent juice from fruit pies from boiling out, a small funnel made of stiff writing paper may be placed in the center of the pie crust.

Cover pears while baking; place the fruit in a dish, dissolve one cupful of sugar in one cupful of water and pour over them.

Croquettes.

Croquettes of various kinds are much liked, yet for want of care many people fail to make them nicely. Here is a recipe for chicken croquettes which ought to be a success. Fry together one ounce of butter and one ounce of flour, without letting them color, pour upon this half a pint of milk, previously boiled with a blade of mace, and stir it all together till it boils, when add salt, cayenne and a very little nutmeg. Strain it through a fine sieve, mix with it the yolks of two eggs and stir over the fire till of the consistency of melted butter. Now mix into this six good tablespoonfuls of finely minced chicken and put it aside till cold, when you must lift it out in dessert spoonfuls, roll these into balls, dip them in flour, then into beaten eggs and lastly into fine bread crumbs. These balls can then be shaped into outlets, corks or any form you please, taking care not to break the outer coating. Fry to a golden brown in clear, boiling fat, drain and serve.

Do Not Keep the Piano Too Dry.

A piano tuner tells that the instrument suffers from too great dryness. This will be new to many who have heated too well the old fashioned air-tight stove in the parlor, become damp. The following is the remedy offered. Keep a growing plant in the room, and so long as your plant thrives, your piano ought to, or else there is something wrong with it. Just try it, and see how much more water you will have to put in the flower pot in the room where your piano is than you use in any other room. Some people keep a vase or urn with a sopping wet sponge near or under the piano, and keep it moistened, just as a cigar dealer keeps his stock. They keep this up all the time the fires are on.

Fruit as a Table Decoration.

Fruit no longer appears as a part of the decoration of some dinner tables; it puts in an appearance at dessert only. The reason given for this change is that the heavy odors and perfume of some fruit be out of harmony with that of the fumes of the earlier courses, and epicures lose pleasure in the taste and sight of a dessert which they have gazed upon during the length of the repast. The same argument holds good in regard to richly scented flowers, which are no longer admitted in dining rooms. Ferns and palms and a few delicate blossoms brightening the greenery have replaced the lavish display of fragrant flowers.

PITTED PLATES.

Grooving is often found in boilers around the stay bolts of water legs or furnaces, radiating from the bolts as centers. The plates probably bend backward and for ward slightly under the varying pressures, and though the flexure and consequent attention of the surface may be too small to be seen, it may be great enough to start incipient cracks and open up the iron to the action of the water.

An instance of pitting, which seems to be due to this cause, is described and illustrated by The Locomotive as follows: "The pieces which the cuts represent were cut from a horizontal tubular boiler forty eight inches in diameter, which had been in use about six years in a mail works. The plates were of steel, one quarter of an inch thick and the boiler was set over a blast furnace, the waste gases from which are used in the place of fuel. The lap from which these pieces were cut came directly over the vertical flue through which the furnace gases were admitted to the boiler.

FIG. 1—A PITTED PLATE (OUTER LAP).

"Naturally there were great and sudden variations in the temperature to which the lap was exposed, and the expansion and contraction of the plates at the lap must have been sudden and violent. At one moment steam would be blowing off freely at ninety pounds, and a few minutes after ward the gauge would show only forty pounds. The plates, being light, would readily transmit heat through to the water, while the lap, being thicker, would not part with its heat so readily, and there would frequently be a considerable difference in temperature between the lap and the plates, which would cause the adjacent parts of the plates to twist and buckle slightly. Water would enter the small fissures so produced and attack the metal a fresh surface of which would be contin ually exposed, and the higher and more varied the temperature became the more active would be the buckling and corrosion.

"Such changes in pressure would naturally be accompanied by slight changes in the form of the boiler. The lap being stiffer than the plates, the greatest motion would take place along the edge of the lap where the two come together, and we should expect to find the pitting and grooving most severe at this point. This is the fact in almost every such case. It is indicated in Fig. 1, and in Fig. 2 it is evident that the rivet heads exercised a similar stiffening power over the inside lap, for the outlines of the rivet heads may be easily traced by the pitting that took place along their edges where the motion of the metal composing the inner lap was greatest."

When boilers are set, as this one was, over a flue leading from a blast furnace, The Locomotive recommends that the up per end of the flue be curved toward the rear end of the boiler, so that the gases will not impinge directly on the plates, but be deflected horizontally along the under surface of the boiler. Some very trouble some cases of this kind have been cured by this simple expedient.

Industrial Memoranda.

Popular Science News furnishes the following:

For a good cement that will stick muslin to bunting, boil together two parts shellac, one part borax and sixteen parts of water Thin surface must not be greasy.

One day in 1830, when a working jeweler, Joseph Gillott, later the famous steel pen maker, accidentally spilt one of his fine steel pens, and he suddenly required to sign a receipt, not finding his quill pen at hand, he used the split tool as a ready sub stitute. The happy accident led to the idea of making pens of steel.

A process has been recently invented by which iron may be coppered by dipping it into melted copper, the surface of the iron being protected by a layer of melted cryolite and phosphoric acid.

A German inventor has devised a new material which is intended as a substitute for leather in many of its uses. This material consists of panels of wood, with wire netting between them, the whole being glued together under heavy pressure.

A good recipe for making waterproof cement, to be used in constructing aquariums, is to take twenty five parts gutta percha in shreds and melt it carefully. Add seventy-five parts ground pumice stone, and then mix in 150 parts Burgundy pitch and melt well together.

Do Diamonds Abound in America?

Professor G. H. Foote, in a paper read before a meeting of scientific societies in Washington, spoke of a geological formation that gave rise to some very interesting suggestions. He has found, he says, upon the claim that in a collection of very remarkable specimens of meteoric iron, found on the side of Crater mountain, Arizona, he had discovered diamonds. Crater mountain rises abruptly 432 feet above the surrounding plain. The walls of the so called crater, which are very steep, are formed of sandstone and limestone, and are lifted at an angle of 40 degs. But as no lava or other volcanic products are found, the bottom low cannot be considered a true crater. As this depression is of similar character to that from which the diamonds at Kimberly, South America, are dug, why should not diamonds abound in Arizona, New Mexico and Mexico, which are the richest regions for meteoric iron in the world? Professor Foote's theories are among the soundest advanced in the sea of speculation or the production of diamonds of the past decade. But as the conclusions of science are often too premature and too positive, the letter of the learned gentleman's proposition must not be accepted without the proof derived from thorough investigation, says The Jewelers' Circular

Scotch Cakes.

This is a recipe used daily in a Scotch family: Take one pound of flour, one teacupful of carbonate of soda and cream of tartar respectively; mix it well and make it into a substantial paste by stirring into the same with a spoon a sufficient quantity of buttermilk or sour milk. When the paste is of proper consistency, roll it out, not too thin, cut into cakes and bake on a griddle or on any iron plate on the top of a brisk fire

She Invented the Freezer.

Mrs. Nancy M. Johnson invented the first ice cream frigerator in this country. Before her invention ice cream was made by a common dasher, and by stirring the cream. She devised the crank, and got out a patent for her invention in the year 1843. She afterward sold the right of her patent for $1,500. She lived in Washington, all her life, and died in 1890 at the ripe old age of ninety-five years.—Boston Transcript.

INEXPENSIVE TOYS.

Pretty Models That May Be Made at Home by Ingenious Girls and Boys.

A great variety of attractive toy models may be made at home with the aid of a pair of scissors, a few sheets of colored paper, a piece of gold perforated card, some bits of cardboard and a bottle of liquid glue.

A long match box can readily be converted into a charming grandfather's clock by cutting a square of one inch with a pen-

knife out of the front, half an inch from the top, and an oblong, 2 inches by 1 inch, an inch lower down. Bits of glass, rather larger than the openings, should be firmly glued in from the inside of the box, and frames added outside of gold perforated card. The inside of the box should be stained black, as it shows through the long glass panel, and forms a fitting background for the pendulum. The dial is that of a toy watch, to which a pendulum is attached by fine wire. This can be made of a bit of cardboard, or, better still, of a piece of brass wire, with a large gold bead at the end. The dial of the watch is fastened securely behind the top square. A piece of card, the exact width of the box, covered with silver paper, is cut in a fancy shape, decorated with gold and gummed to the box above the dial; a large round headed pin can be added for a ball at the top. A gold ornament occupies the space between the glass panels, and a larger and more elaborate one the space between the lower one and the bottom of the box. Silver paper is fastened over the top of the box. The clock stands on a small piece of card, covered with red paper.

An old fashioned well can be carried out as follows: First procure a round box (mine is the lid) 2½ inches in diameter and the same in depth. Cover this with silver paper, adding rims of gold perforated card one-half inch wide top and bottom. Glue two strips of strong cardboard one-half inch wide at opposite sides of the box. These should be about 5¾ inches in height, and the tops should be pointed and connected by a wire, which helps to carry the roof; they are further strengthened by the addition of cross pieces of cardboard, fastened about an inch from the top of the supports. Directly under these crosshars a strong wire supporting a cork (to which is fastened the chain and bucket) is run through the supports. When the wire has been passed through the second support it is then bent suddenly downward about 8 inches; a small wooden handle can be attached to the end. The roof is formed of a piece of cardboard, 5 inches by 3 inches thin, with the supports, is covered with red paper fancifully decorated with gold. The lining of the well should also be red. Part of a toy silver watch chain answers admirably for the well rope; it is secured to the cork by a small tack. A tiny wooden or tin bucket can be bought at any toy shop and affixed to the end. If properly made it should really wind up and down to the most realistic manner possible.

AN OLD FASHIONED WELL.

A Game Called Trunk Packing.

This game requires a good memory and some ingenuity. The first person says, "I pack my sister's fur muff other relative's trunk with her best bonnet." The second continues, "I pack my sister's trunk with her camel's hair shawl and her best bonnet." The third takes it up with, "I pack my sister's trunk with a box of tooth powder, her camel's hair shawl and her best bonnet." The fourth person in the party adds, "I pack my sister's trunk with a pair of nickel plated scissors, a box of tooth powder, her camel's hair shawl and her best bonnet." The next player then says, "I pack my sister's trunk with a box of sewing machine needles, a pair of nickel plated scissors, a box of tooth powder, her camel's hair shawl and her best bonnet." Thus the game proceeds, each one mentioning some new article to go into the trunk and repeating the list given by his predecessor.

If a blunder occurs, for which, of course, every one is on the alert, "Halt!" is called, and the delinquent either drops out of the game or else pays a forfeit named by some member of the party whom he selects as his judge. The next person then essays to repeat the ever increasing list, which will usually consist of droll or preposterous articles with long and complicated names which, of course, render them difficult to remember and to articulate readily. When the fifteenth item is reached "Game" is called, and the packing commences over again. A smaller number of articles may, of course, be agreed upon at the beginning of the game, and if there are not so many persons in the party the game may go round the circle more than once.

The Manly Boy.

It isn't the boy who doubles his fists
And thrusts them under another's nose,
Saring the sleeves from his rigid wrists
Ready to rain vindictive blows;
Whose tongue is ready with jibe and jeer
To stir up strife wherever he can,
Breathing menace and waking fear,
Who grows to be a manly man.

A Game for a Rainy Day.

There is an old game called "Consorting," which is just the thing to play on a rainy day in the country. It can easily be made so noisy that it would be awful if done in the house, but there may be a nice big barn where you can do that is just the thing for a concert hall. Don't invite any people with sensitive ears; they would be terribly shocked (unless you are wonderfully skilful). Select a very bright person must be selected for the conductor, from eight to ten more will be needed for the orchestra or band.

AN ORCHESTRA WITHOUT INSTRUMENTS.

Each one of the players has an imaginary musical instrument—there will be violins, cellos, bass viols, drums, cymbals and what not. Most of them will need an imaginary tuning before beginning to play in concert a familiar air. Each performer endeavors to imitate in sound and gesture an instrument and the manner of playing it. The conductor of course wields an imaginary baton, and his players must follow perfectly his leading, whether it be a quick or slow tempo, or a full rest. Perhaps you can find some one to sing to your accompaniment. If you should practise this enough to become really skilful, you could give a very interesting concert. The boys should dress in evening suits of black cambric, if dress are indicated, (grief they should wear trained gowns of delicate colored cambric and tarleton. And you could charge an admission fee. Practise half a dozen familiar songs, and give an entertainment of this sort. Now there's an idea for you.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—The City Common Council will hold a meeting this evening.

—Elsie Leslie is to appear in the "Prince and Pauper" at Music Hall this evening.

—The "Ys" will hold a devotional meeting in the Bethel Mission chapel tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock.

—The bowling section of the Y. M. C. A., will meet on the Olympia alleys tomorrow evening at eight o'clock.

—A collection was taken up yesterday morning at the First Baptist church in aid of the Education Society of that denomination.

—There were several very interesting trotting events on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue Saturday afternoon.

—Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., will work the Master Mason degree on one candidate at a meeting to be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

—The police arrested an old umbrella peddler Saturday evening. City Judge Codington this morning sentenced him to ten days in the county jail.

—Last evening the police were called upon to quell a disturbance on Cottage place. When the officers arrived on the scene, peace and quietness reigned.

—The Crescent League bowling team was defeated by the Phenix team of New York last Friday evening. The game was played on the latter club's alleys.

—There has been such a rush of work at the Pond Machine Tool Works that a large number of the employes of the works have been working until 9.30 p. m.

—A number of bicyclists from Newark, New York and surrounding cities took a "run" over the new county road yesterday and dined in the various hotels here.

—The annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association will be held in this city on November 5th. There will be three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening.

—A family gathering of Christian friends was held in the barracks of the Salvation Army Saturday evening. Captain and Lieutenant Rowland now have have charge of the Army in this city.

—A sewing meeting of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will be held Wednesday afternoon, at three o'clock, in the church parlors. Supper will be a feature of the evening. Discarded garments will be received.

—The Plainfield members of the W. C. T. U. have subscribed to the "Temperance Gazette," and the "Union Signal" for the Public Library. With this increase the number of weeklies now regularly taken at the library reaches twenty-six.

—Ex-Chancellor Runyon, Corporation Counsel Marsh, Mr. R. V. Lindabury, Pres. Frank Bergen of the Plainfield Water Supply Company and Postmaster E. R. Pope of the same company were in conference today in reference to the water question in this city.

—The restaurant connected with the Elkwood will hereafter, commencing today, be open day and night, under the management of the famous French cook Jacot. Oysters in every style, steaks, chops, salads, will be made a specialty. Private parties served at their residences.

—Shortly after five o'clock Saturday evening a bicyclist who was turning the corner of Park avenue and Front street, when the wheel which he was riding struck a large part of which a laborer was carrying in his hand and it rolled across the street. The laborer looked at the pail in sort of a dazed way and then went and picked it up.

—To-night at eight o'clock in the class room of the First Baptist church, the Bible Normal class will hold its first regular session. Subject: "An introductory study in the book of Genesis." This study which now numbers nearly fifty members is free to any one interested in Bible study, and a cordial invitation is extended to anyone in the city to join this class.

—Regarding the production of Mark Twain's beautiful story "The Prince and the Pauper," which will be seen at Music Hall to-night, several of the foremost writers of the country have expressed themselves in highly complimentary. Mr. Metzler, of the New York Herald, pronounces it the sweetest, purest and prettiest of all plays seen since Little Lord Fauntleroy, and says further that Mrs. Burnett's stage romance falls far short of "The Prince and the Pauper." On the first night of the play in New York city Mark Twain was called before the curtain, and confessed that the production was "the realization of a cherished dream."

WHY THE LOCOMOTIVES STOPPED.

An Accident on the Central Railroad Saturday.

As engine No. 206 was steaming along near the Grant avenue station, Saturday afternoon, a spring under it broke.

A delay of about fifteen minues was caused by the accident. Then the engineer was able to run his engine slowly to the round house at Dunellen.

Several locomotives and trains were delayed, and stood one after the other along the track in there are of No. 206.

GEN. HOWARD'S ADDRESS.

A Large Audience of Men Greeted Him Yesterday.

General O. O. Howard addressed yesterday afternoon a large audience of men in the First Baptist church after some good singing by a choir of male voices. Gen. Howard spoke from a warm heart to the large number of veterans and others present of the love of God and deliverance from the wrath of God through faith in the blood of Christ. He spoke eloquently of the happiness of the Christian life and contrasted with this the unrest of the life of sin. Incidents from his war experience were given in a most interesting and impressive manner. At the close of the meeting the speaker had the pleasure of speaking with young men who desired to become Christians. A quartette from Princeton College will sing at the meeting to be held in the Methodist church next Sunday, at the same hour a short address will be delivered by Mr. A. C. LaBoyteaux of this city. All men are invited to be present.

A RUNAWAY ON PARK AVENUE.

Mr. Hooley and His Companion Thrown from Their Carriage.

At about three o'clock yesterday afternoon as Mr. Edward Hooley of West Seventh street and a gentleman friend were driving along Park avenue near the entrance to Elizabethtown cemetery, one of the wheels of the wagon in which they were seated suddenly collapsed. The accident frightened the horse which they were driving and it ran away. Both Mr. Hooley and his companion were thrown out, but they escaped injury other than a few bruises. The horse was caught further down the avenue. The wagon to which it was attached was badly wrecked.

East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-School Convention.

The East New Jersey Baptist Sunday school Convention, composed of about thirty-two schools from Jersey City, Newark, Elizabeth, Plainfield and intermediate places will hold its annual meeting to-morrow, in the First Baptist church in this city. Morning session opens at ten, afternoon at two, evening at 7:45.

The speakers secured for the occasion are Rev. R. M. Luther, D.D., Newark; Rev. Henry Archibald, Newark; Rev. A. R. Dilts, Plainfield; Rev. B. D. Hahn and Rev. W. W. Boyd, D.D., of Newark. The topic announced to be discussed at the session exceedingly interesting and profitable. The ladies of the First Baptist church will provide refreshments during the day for all who may come.

Both Legs Cut Off Below the Knees.

Bernardino Mico, who lives at Roselle, started for Elizabeth last night to attend a birthday party. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law Divestro Faragone. They tried to board the train which leaves this city shortly after seven o'clock, while it was in motion. Mico slipped and fell between the road, both his legs were severed by the wheels, which cut them off below the knees. He was also cut severely about the head. He was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital and will die. He is thirty years old and married.

A Runaway.

A horse attached to a light buggy became frightened on North avenue near the Water Supply Company standpipe yesterday afternoon and ran away. The occupants of the carriage were thrown out but not seriously injured. The horse was caught further down the road, but not until it had succeeded in completely wrecking the vehicle to which it was attached. The parties who occupied the carriage were from Feltville. Their names cannot be ascertained.

An Engine Disabled.

P. & R., engine No. 509 drawing the Imperial Blue Line train which passes through this city at about half-past twelve o'clock, bound West, blew out a cylinder head when near the Washington avenue bridge, causing a delay of about half-an-hour. The damage was temporarily repaired and the train proceeded on its way to Bound Brook, where another engine was substituted for the disabled one.

A Small Fire.

At about ten o'clock Saturday evening an alarm of fire was sounded from box No. 13, situated at the junction of Park and North avenues. The department responded but its service was not needed as the flames, which originated in a dry goods box in the rear of a North avenue store, were extinguished before much damage resulted, the weather boards on the building being slightly burned.

Stole Thirteen Chickens.

Some sneak thief or thieves effected an entrance last night by way of Mr. Vogeller's butcher shop on West Front street late Saturday night or early Sunday morning and decamped with thirteen fowls. They left no clue to their identity.

Bitten by a Dog.

Clarence Hand, a young son of Mr. Frank Hand of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, was badly bitten on one of his legs by a dog last Saturday afternoon. A physician cauterized the wound. No serious results are apprehended.

A Preliminary Meeting.

Another preliminary meeting to organize a new lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be held in Perseverance Lodge rooms this evening at eight o'clock. All persons desiring to join are requested to meet there.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, and no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. A. L. Force is building on an addition to his house on Duer street.

The engagement of Miss Flora Leeson and Mr. Moon both of this city is announced.

The son of David Snedicker, of 110 Duer street, is down with the jaundice at the home of his parents.

Mr. Louis Levy, formerly of this city but now of New York, spent yesterday with his sister, Mrs. I. H. Boehm, of West Front street.

Charles, the six-year old son of Street Commissioner Robert Meeker, died at the home of his parents on East Second street this morning.

Mr. Walter Scott of the Scott Printing Press Works has recently been granted a patent on the stopping and reversing mechanism on printing presses.

Rev. L. E. Livermore, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church of New Market, preached before Friendship Council 81, J. O. U. M. of that place, last evening.

Mr. C. W. McCutchen, after an absence of several weeks, owing to family bereavement, resumed his place as director of the choir of the First Baptist church, yesterday.

Chief Engineer Astfalk, of the Elizabeth Fire Department, his brother, and two members of Rolla Engine Company, No. 3, were the guests of Chief T. O. Doane yesterday.

Mr. Harry Campbell and family will start next week for Florida. He will take his horse, carts, etc. Mr. Campbell is the owner of an extensive orange grove in that State.

Lawyer Wm. A. Coddington is about to remove his offices from their present location, No. 34 West Front street, to the building, No. 28 West Front street, where he has secured three large rooms.

Mr. J. Louis Harberger, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Boston, made a flying visit Friday to the old Harberger homestead on West Front street, to his mother and returned to-day.

Mr. Warren Squire of Harmony street, North Plainfield, Mr. Niel Apgar of Evans and Warden Chas. W. Dodd of Elizabeth, returned Saturday night from a four days' shooting tour in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Campbell, who resided in Washington Park some ten years, and who went to Paris, and finally to Soudan, where he became a successful dentist, is at present visiting his native land. He is now in Philadelphia, prior to his departure for Europe.

One of the handsomest residences in this city is the one which was recently completed for Mr. Aaron Keyser at No. 195 Broadway. The interior throughout is finished in hard wood. The second floor is finished in cypress wood from the Isle of Pines. The sitting room is wainscoted and ceiled with old oaken panels.

Judge Jones, editor of the Flemington Democrat-Advertiser, is stopping in Plainfield for a few days, having been summoned by telegraph to be near his brother-in-law, Mr. Dunham, who for the past twenty years has been the cashier of the First National Bank of Flemington, but is now at Dr. Cooley's in a precarious condition of health.

Mr. Williard Case, a nephew of Colonel Rufus K. Case, is in preparation for the Baptist ministry. Mr. Case has been very diligent in the church work, being one of the many young men who gave their time and attention during the last days of the ministry of Rev. W. H. Miller, East Third street, out of which has grown a flourishing mission in that section.

The funeral services over the remains of the wife of Walter Runyon of Dunellen, who died at her home there last Thursday, took place at the house yesterday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Mr. Kinsey, pastor of the M. E. Church officiated. Interment was made this morning in Hillside Cemetery. Mrs. Runyon, was formerly Miss Addie Apgar before her marriage. Her early demise is mourned by a large number of acquaintances.

Major-General O. O. Howard, Commander of the Division of the Atlantic, was the guest of Mayor W. B. W. Miller, of Le Grande avenue, Saturday and Sunday, where many prominent citizens met him. He made two address yesterday.—One to the scholars of the Crescent Avenue Sunday school and the other to the young men of Plainfield at the First Baptist Church. He left for his post at Governor's Island on the 10:01 train this morning. He was accompanied by Major Miller and others.

DEATH RESULTED FROM THE INJURY.

Mrs. Giddis Dies of Lock-Jaw.—A Rusty Nail the Cause.

Mrs. George Giddis of Pearl street, North Plainfield while walking along that street about two weeks ago stepped on a rusty nail. The nail entered her foot about half its lenghth. The wound was painful but proper care was not given at once as no serious result was feared.

Later, however, the wound became serious. Lock-jaw set in, and in spite of medical aid, Mrs. Giddis died this morning at eleven o'clock.

A MECHANICAL CLOCK.

It Registers the Time the Employes of Scott's Go to Work.

A mechanical clock is the latest device added to the Scott Printing Press Works. It is used in keeping the time of the employes. Each employe is numbered and to that number is attached a key. As he enters the shop in the morning he inserts his key in a hole in the clock and the time upon which he came he enters the shop as well as his number. It is a wonderful piece of mechanism and attracts considerable attention.

TO FORM A "SINGIN' SKEWL."

Would-be Members Must Get Their Names in by Wednesday.

Wednesday evening a class to learn music will be formed at the Unitarian Church, on Second Place.

The announcement that this "singin' skewl" was to be formed has created interest. There has not been one in Plainfield in two or twelve years.

As the number of members to be received is limited names are desired sent at once to the Committee: Mrs. D. W. Pond, Prof. Weiland or Mr. Roger Lawrence. This committee met with the Music Committee of the Unitarian Church, Mrs. Nevins, Mrs. Hodges, Mr. Henry D. Wells and Mr. Samuel Huntington, and Friday evening was the night decided upon for practice if the required number of names are received by the committee before, or registered at the rooms by Wednesday evening.

As Wednesday is prayer meeting night the committee wish it understood that those not wishing to stay, can leave their names as members before eight o'clock.

The class will be taught by Mr. Hazell.

DID QUININE DERANGE HIM.

Mr. Randolph Thinks the Boy Had Taken an Overdose.

Clinton Randolph thinks George William Croucher, who confessed to burning his barn at Piscataway and then hanged himself, was insane from taking an overdose of quinine for malarial fever.

Mr. Randolph said: "I did not owe young Croucher any money. He worked for me four months the first time and two weeks the last time, at five dollars a month. He is a good boy. He was seventeen years old. He had acted strangely for a day or two before he hanged himself. I received a letter from his sister while he worked for me. She was living as a domestic in Ontario, Canada. She said their father was in Florida.

"I don't believe the boy set fire to my barn. At the time of the fire he risked his life trying to save some of the horses."

LEAL'S TEAM WINS.

They Defeat a Borough Team, 18 to 6, at Football.

A game of foot ball was played on the Park avenue grounds Saturday afternoon. It was between Leal's First and North Plainfield nine.

The team from Leal's was victorious by a score of 18 to 6.

The line-up: C. Peck of the Leal team and G. Cathcart of the Boroughites was noticeably good.

The names of the players are:

Leal's—H. McGee, C. Peck, P. Huntington, Van Vliet, Jr., Lovell.

North Plainfield—Frank Grant, D. Loizeaux, H. Williams, Fred Grant, Richard Williams, Jr., Loizeaux, Geo. Cathcart, N. Titworth, H. Wilson.

Umpire—Cathcart. Referee—Lovell.

Each team was two players short.

The C. L. S. C.

The Congregational church C. L. S. C. will hold its first meeting of the year in the church parlors at eight o'clock Tuesday evening. The lesson will cover paragraphs 1—42 in American History and chapters 1—III. in Social institutions of the United States. The programme will include a contest for the ownership of America, a sketch of colonial life, and a talk upon law terms. A cordial invitation is extended to any one, whether members of the church or not, who would be welcomed into the membership of the circle.

The Escaped Prisoner Captured.

Thomas Fahy, the prisoner who escaped from the police Friday night after they had arrested him on the charge of assaulting his wife, was again captured Saturday afternoon by Policeman McCue and lodged in the station house.

This morning Fahy was arraigned before City Judge Codington, he pleaded guilty to wife beating and City Judge Codington sentenced him to the County jail for forty days.

Committees Appointed.

The Board of Trustees of the Crescent League held a meeting Saturday evening and after transacting some routine business appointed committees as follows:

House Committee—Messrs. Charles A. Reed, Howard Emerson and Charles P. Leggett.

They Disturb the Services.

One of the officers of the Mt. Olive Baptist church (colored), applied to the police this morning for a special policeman to be present at the services held in that church. He said that a gang invaded the church and that they disturbed the services by loud talking, whistling, etc. The police promised the congregation protection hereafter.

Discharged With a Reprimand.

The two girls who were arrested at the instance of Lizzie Thorp, on the charge of using profane and indecent language and assaulting her, were given a hearing before City Judge Codington Saturday afternoon. After hearing the testimony the Judge discharged the defendants with a reprimand.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The bookkeeping class of the Y.M.C.A. will meet this evening and will be taught by Mr. Garrett Q. Packer.

The classes in mechanical drawing will also meet to-night and will be taught by Civil Engineer A. J. Garrett and Mr. Frank Leland of the Fond Machine Tool Works. The above mentioned gentlemen volunteer their services and it is hoped that their will be a large attendance.

A Degree of the Pocohontas.

A Degree of the Pocohontas a branch of Manhattan Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, is to be organized in this city. The degree is especially for ladies.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE LA CHAMPAGNE SAFE.

The Second Officer and Two Sailors Injured by a Heavy Sea.

New York, Oct. 19, (Special.)—The French steamer LaChampagne which sailed from Havre on Oct. 8th arrived here to-day.

The captain says it was the most tempestous voyage the vessel ever had.

On Oct. 15th the captains' bridge was washed away and the second officer and two seamen were seriously injured.

A Writ of Attachment.

New York, Oct. 19th. (Special.)—A writ of attachment was served upon John Hoey, the ex-President of the Adams Express Company to-day.

AN ALL NIGHT CHASE.

Which Ended In Naught For Elizabeth Officers.

The loss of a bay horse, with two of his hind feet white, and a side bar buggy, was reported to the police early Saturday morning.

It seems that the animal had been found by a police officer in Elizabeth at 12:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Half an hour after the animal was missed by Ex-Alderman Thomas, of Elizabeth, the owner, and he with Police Officer Gerstell and another citizen, started in quest of the beast, not knowing that another Elizabeth officer had taken charge of Mr. Thomas' horse half an hour previous.

They drove to this city, Westfield, Metuchen and Rahway, meanwhile telegraphing to South Amboy and New Brunswick to police officers on guard for the capture of the supposed thieves.

Saturday morning a message from Elizabeth to New Brunswick gave the four searchers, who had been driving all night, the information that the horse and buggy were safe at Elizabeth. To say that they were disgusted over their goose chase is to mildly express their feeling.

Had the Elizabeth officer immediately reported the finding of the much sought-for horse, they would not have been occasioned so much trouble.

COT SUCOT.

It was Celebrated by the Hebrews Saturday and Yesterday.

Cot Sucot, or the Feast of the Tabernacles, begun at sunset Friday night and will continue eight days. Its origin is the Feast of Thanksgiving for a bountiful harvest. It originated in Palestine where the Hebrews got together and dwelled in huts built especially for that purpose. The last day was called Simcha Sucota. The last three days of the Feast will be days of rejoicing. One of the days is called Simchas Torah and celebrates the rejoicing of the law. On that day the reading of the five books of Moses is finished and began again. Presents had also that day distributed to the poor and needy. It was appropriately observed by the Hebrews of this city.

Dunellen Doings.

On Thursday, Oct. 22d, the Dunellen and Middlesex County Bowling Green Clubs will play one game for the prize of the Adams' Challenge Cup, which was won on the third by the Dunellen Club, but since taken off for the reason that the Second Rink threw the Jack and continued the game after the latter was called by the referee. Previous to this the Middlesex County Club were winners.

Friendship Council, No. 81, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet at New Market this evening.

All the churches in Dunellen last evening were closed in consequence of a union meeting which was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, New Market.

The teachers of the public school of Dunellen will give an entertainment in the First Presbyterian Church Tuesday evening for the benefit of a public library.

In all probability a special train will leave Dunellen at 7:30 Monday evening, Oct. 26th, for the benefit of those who will attend the first entertainment of the season of Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3401, Knights of Honor, at Music Hall, Plainfield. NEMO.

Boys' Club Notes.

The average attendance per evening last week was forty eight. The largest being fifty eight and the smallest thirty nine. The average during the month of this week was twenty seven. Five boys joined making the membership to date four hundred.

All members wishing to join the class in scroll-sawing are requested to hand their names to the superintendent as soon as possible as the class is limited to thirty. Five boys will be allowed to work one evening a week.

An entertainment will be given next Monday evening beginning at eight o'clock. There will be entertainment of vocal music and a short talk by Mr. E. C. Pease of North Plainfield. Mr. Pease has addressed the boys before and all are well acquainted with him. Both the boys and their parents are invited to all the entertainments.

The entertainment to be given the boys on either the evening preceding Thanksgiving or Thanksgiving Day will surpass any that have been given before to the boys. A small stage will be erected and all will be invited to a short theatrical performance by talent from North Plainfield and New York.

The Case Postponed.

The case of Margaret Falconer and James Stewart vs. David Moore for $200 damages, which was to have come up for trial before Justice Searry of North Plainfield Saturday, was postponed until next Friday. The plaintiffs claim that defendant's son shot a bull belonging to them with beans. The defendant claims the bull was trespassing on his property at the time it was shot.

A Successful Fair.

The fair recently held in St. Mary's school hall for the benefit of St. Mary's church was a grand success in every way. At all the services held in St. Mary's church yesterday the priests announced that the fair had netted the church $1,600.

BALLOT REFORM'S BOOM

Eighteen States Without the Australian System.

THIRTEEN TO TRY IT IN NOVEMBER.

An Interesting Review of the Introduction of the New Method of Voting Throughout the Union—The Australian Plan First Tried in Connecticut.

ALBANY, Oct. 19.—All but eighteen of the forty-four states in the Union will, in November, vote some form or other of the Australian ballot. The eighteen states are Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Virginia. The next legislature of Kentucky will, under the new constitution adopted last August, enact such a law; and Iowa, having barely defeated such laws early in 1890, is likely to pass ballot reform laws within the coming year. Thus only fifteen states have made no move to enact the reform, Maine having passed a law to take effect next year.

First Tried in Connecticut.

The Australian ballot was first tried in Connecticut and Montana, then a territory, in the October elections of 1889. At the November elections of the same year Rhode Island and Massachusetts joined them, making four states having the new system for that year. Montana had the genuine "blanket" ballot, with the names of all the candidates on one piece of paper. Connecticut did not come up to the standard with its provision for official envelopes, which may not be marked for identification in any way. The voter can obtain at the booth "ballots of any political party he may desire," but they must be printed on official paper and the envelopes must be indorsed by the officials.

The Real Australian Ballot.

The full Australian ballot law was first adopted by Massachusetts. It originally enacted the names of candidates were placed upon the blanket ballot and arranged under the designation of the office in alphabetical order, regarding of the names. There were left at the end of the list of candidates for each office as many blank spaces as there were persons to be elected to such office, in which the voter could insert the name of any person not printed on the ballot for whom he desired to vote. The ballots were so printed as to give to each voter a clear opportunity to designate by a cross in a sufficient margin at the right the name of each candidate. His choice of candidates and his answer to the questions submitted.

No voter was allowed to keep a booth more than ten minutes. Voters who are not able to read and write were allowed assistance. The law did not prevent party workers from following the voters to and from the polling place, but this defect has been remedied by a recent amendment.

Nine More in 1890.

In 1890 nine additional states—Indiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Jersey, New York, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin—adopted the new system of voting. Indiana added to the name of the political party on the blanket ballot a party device.

The names of the candidates on the party tickets to be voted are marked with a cross, as in Massachusetts. The other states requiring the cross were Minnesota, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin. In Missouri the voter may scratch out all the names for which he does not wish to vote.

The Paster Ballot.

New York is the only state thus far that allows the use of a paster ballot, so that a voter, with this in his pocket, can fasten it anywhere on the official ballot, and it will be counted. New Jersey has followed a sort of paster ballot to be printed by each party at the public expense.

Thirteen states will vote by the new ballot on the 3d of November next. They are Arkansas, California, Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia and Wyoming. Arkansas, like Missouri, erases all the names not voted for. All the other states named above require the voter to make a cross opposite the names or the party groups for which he wishes to vote. Michigan and Ohio are the only divisive. The voters of West Virginia may vote by secret or open ballot as they choose.

A SCORING FOR INGALLS.

His Refusal to Stump Kansas Wins the Topeka Capitol's Praise.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 19.—For the past six weeks the Republican state central committee has been making efforts to persuade Senator Ingalls to stump the state in the interest of the party, but all to no purpose. The Topeka Capitol, the official state paper and Republican organ, which has for years supported Senator Ingalls, after asking the question, "What is Senator Ingalls doing for the party that honored him so many years?" says that he has done nothing. The article continues:

"That he is not a leader today is more due to the supreme egotism and cold-blooded selfishness of the man than to his lack of ability, forgetting the gallant self sacrifice in the fight of his party that went down to defeat with him. His supreme ignoring of himself turned his face upon the political friends of a quarter of a century, as well as upon those who laid aside their convictions against him and gave him a loyal support. No man in American history was ever so greatly honored for the single talent of sarcastic oratory as Ingalls, with opportunities and he most signally failed as a leader, politician and friend. Today in Kansas the executor is neither missed nor regretted."

Italy to Welcome Our Fork.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—President Louis Cortencin, of the Italian chamber of commerce, has received a cablegram from Rome stating that the government had agreed to abolish the decree against American pork. A proclamation to that effect will shortly be issued.

Balfour to Succeed Smith.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—It is officially stated that Chief Secretary Balfour will take the place of the late W. H. Smith in the cabinet as first lord of the treasury, carrying with it the Conservative leadership in the house of commons.

Born Behind Prison Bars.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Francisca Larando, an Italian woman in Ludlow street jail on charge of passing counterfeit money, gave birth to an eight pound boy. Mother and child are doing well.

THE OLD ROMAN BEREAVED.

Death of Mrs. Allen G. Thurman at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Mary Thurman, wife of Judge Allen G. Thurman, is dead. During most of the past week she had been unconscious, rallying occasionally. For some time there has been but little hopes entertained of her recovery. She was the victim of la grippe during the winter and her general poor health and attack. Advanced age prevented her from ever regaining her accustomed strength.

Mrs. Thurman was universally loved. She was a lifelong acquaintance. Mary Dun and Allen G. Thurman had been to school together, and their friendship in the years after her return to Chillicothe ripened into a tenderer feeling. They were married in 1844. Judge Thurman is much embedded and broken down, and it is the opinion of those who know him best and understand his condition that he will not long survive the death of his wife.

HOEY WILL NOT TALK NOW.

But His Statement Will Be Ready in a Few Days.

HOLLYWOOD, N. J., Oct. 19.—Ex-President John Hoey, of the Adams Express company, arrived at his cottage here Saturday night. His son Fred accompanied him and has been with him ever since. The ex-president refused to receive callers on Sunday, but sent word to a reporter that his statement would not be ready for publication for a few days yet. He refused to discuss in any manner his recent difficulties. Mr. Hoey returned to New York this morning.

Mr. Hoey has tendered his resignation as manager of the company, and it was promptly accepted. All the property, both real and personal, owned or in the name of John Hoey in New York and New Jersey has been attached.

Sponsner's Property Attached, Too.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 19.—All the property in this city of Clapp Spooner, the ex-vice president of the Adams Express company, has been attached for $700,000 in a suit brought by the company. The suit is returnable to the superior court of this county Nov. 3.

Heavy Damages at Long Branch.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Oct. 19.—The Long Branch commissioners have been forced to barricade Ocean avenue, the once beautiful ocean driveway, as it was dangerous to allow vehicles or pedestrians to use the road. Old Neptune has been steadily forcing a way into the famous ocean boulevard. It will cost thousands of dollars to repair the damage s if they can at all be repaired, which is doubtful.

Shot by a Liquor Spotter.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 19.—Frank Butler and William Jones were shot Sunday near a notorious resort in Hampden by Elmer A. Thomas, who has recently been employed as a liquor spotter. Thombs claimed that he was set upon by the two men and that he shot them in self defense. Butler's wounds are of a serious nature, but Jones is only slightly wounded. Thombs is under arrest.

Mrs. T. C. Platt Home Again.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Thomas C. Platt, wife of ex-Senator Platt, arrived in this city yesterday on the Normannia. Ex-Senator Platt was at the pier. Mrs. Platt has been abroad for the past five months on a trip to Europe for health and pleasure. She is an amateur photographer of merit and took a number of photographs.

The Fair Sex Will All Learn Here Just What They Wanted to Know About What Others Are Wearing and Doing.

Pale green is so fashionable that it is used for bridesmaids' dresses at weddings. At one of the earliest Lenox weddings the bride was attired in a dress of white satin draped with old Brussels point lace, over a court train of brocaded white satin and pearl and diamond ornaments. The bride's bouquet was composed of white lilies and roses. The bridesmaids' dresses of pale green gauze trimmed with a darker shade of velvet and ecru colored lace. They carried bouquets of pale pink carnations and wore hats trimmed with similar flowers.

The Ever Graceful Jersey.

TWO STYLISH JERSEYS.

Jerseys are always useful, for they can be worn with any skirt, and always become a trifle more stylish by adding a bow off the figure to such advantage. Blouses, too, are general favorites, and, when they are made in dotted or plain silks, nothing can be prettier for evening wear, as by their aid the plainest dress is transformed into a dainty costume, while they add a pretty finish to any gown.

The first is a very stylish black jersey; the basque is cut in tabs, which are trimmed with jet, and the same trimming covers the collar, and ornaments the top of the sleeves.

The other is a beautifully-made jersey in a brilliant shade of scarlet; the basque is cut in tabs.

THE BIG BICYCLE RACE.

Wheelmen Start the Great Six Days' Contest.

AMERICA AGAINST THE WORLD.

A Field of Crack Men Pushing the Pedals at Madison Square Garden, New York—Germany, England, Scotland, Ireland and Other Countries Represented.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The competitors in the great six days' international bicycle contest started off on their long journey at 12:05 this morning. A tremendous cheer rent the great garden as fourteen of the gamest and most famous wheelmen of two hemispheres bent to their task and faced the trial before them. All were fit and trained to the hour, and from the face of each shone that confidence which bespoke the sturdy stuff of which they are made. Not a single man bespoke a wheel last night whose heart has not beat faster as he heard the strains of praise which greeted some great triumph or glorious victory. Each has shown himself a giant in his own country, and all have done such great work as will warrant the prediction that in the race now on all former records will be left far behind.

Many Countries Represented.

Every man entered, Terront the French-

man excepted, leaped the starter's word came from him that he had missed the starter and could not reach this country in time. But a brilliant galaxy of world famed riders remained. William Lamb, of Hoboken; George Edlin and Willie Wood came from England; M. J. O'Flanagan and William Martin represent the Emerald Isle; Jacques Lalande, Jr., of Belgium, and J. D. Lumsden and Wallace Stagg came from the land of the thistle and the heather, while Albert Schock hailed from the fatherland. J. S. Prince, Charles Ashinger, Eddie McDowell, W. M. Boyst and J. Albert are our own representatives. If confidence counts for anything Prince will be well up at the finish.

A doubt was expressed as to his ability last night, and he at once met it by wagering $1,000 that he would not be worse than second at the finish. The doors of the magnificence garden were thrown open at 7 o'clock, and by that hour 4,000 people were seated discussing the prospects of the different competitors. The garden was brilliantly lighted. Myriads of lights shone from the great arched roof.

Arrangements for the Race.

The arrangements were favorably commented on. On a blackboard was posted the names of the starters and down below on the circle of the track were fourteen automatic scorers, one for each starter, and behind each machine was an official scorer to keep tally by daylight and see that the invention did not lie. The track itself was a marvel.

It is made of Georgia pine, is raised at the Fourth avenue and Madison ends and inclines to the center all the way round, rendering very little effort necessary to propel the machines. It is ten laps to the mile. The flags of England, Scotland, Ireland and Germany have been gracefully arranged at all parts of the building, and the Stars and Stripes fall from all quarters.

Off on the Long Journey.

It was just about midnight when the contestants appeared. The Englishmen, Lamb, Robb, Edlin and Wood, were the first to appear, and the band greeted them with "Rule, Britannia," the hearts of the sons of Erin, O'Flanagan and Martin, were warmed by the strains of "St. Patrick's Day," and the blood coursed more swiftly through the veins of the canny Scotchman as "Scots, Wha Hae" burst on them. "Yankee Doodle" and "All Columbia" were the Americans' inspiration, and Schock, the present world's champion, whose record is 1,405 miles, ridden in 142 hours, bowed low to "Wearin' o' the Shine." After making the circle once the men were sent away on their long and arduous journey.

St. Blaise Sold for $100,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—There was only one bid for the great stallion St. Blaise when he was led into the sales ring at Tattersall's. But it was a magnificent bid. It netted a new record in the turf history of the world and one that may not be equaled in the century to come. Charles Reed, the famous breeder of Gallatin, Tenn, and the owner of the Fairview stud, was the man man who made the bid, and his figure was $100,000.

To Apologize to Powderly.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 19.—The executive board of the Knights of Labor has compelled District Master Workman D. J. Campbell and Dr. Haggerty to make public apologies to Master Workman Powderly. Campbell and Haggerty are the largest stockholders in the Scranton Times, which recently bitterly assailed Mr. Powderly for accepting a Republican nomination for constitutional delegate. Campbell and Haggerty say they were not responsible for the article.

He Stabbed a Little Babe.

BROWN CITY, Mich., Oct. 19.—Thomas Early, of Cheyenne, while intoxicated, attempted to stab his wife. The blow missed her and the knife passed through the body of a two months old infant in the mother's arms. It died instantly. Early has not yet been arrested.

Hypnotized Into Suicide.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—It is now believed that young William H. Harrison, who was found dead in his room at the Wellington hotel, was either hypnotized into committing suicide or was murdered by a Mexican, William Ellis, with whom young Harrison was associated in business.

They Want Free Raw Materials.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—As a result of the anti-protectionist speech of Jules Simon, a committee of the French Exporters' union demand that the senate insist on the free admission of raw materials for manufacturing and of food supplies.

IRISHMEN HONOR PARNELL.

Sons of Erin in Chicago Hold a Big Memorial Meeting.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Central Music hall was crowded to the doors last night upon the occasion of the memorial meeting as a token of respect to the memory of the late Charles Stewart Parnell. The women in the audience almost outnumbered the men and at times many of them gave way to outbursts of emotion. W. McNally and John Devoy spoke. Ex-Congressman Lawler presided over by Richard O'Sullivan Burke and upon the platform were many of the representative Irishmen of Chicago and vicinity.

Appropriate musical selections were rendered and the principal address of the evening was delivered by Rev. C. J. Adams, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, and who paid an eloquent tribute to the patriotism of the deceased. The following resolutions were adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, no Irishman within the present century, including even the great O'Connell, labored so strenuously and successfully to secure from both the great English parties recognition for his country's demands as Charles Stewart Parnell, who by his surpassing ability as a national leader and statesman made Ireland both felt and feared in the councils of Great Britain; and,

Whereas, Charles Stewart Parnell with the comparatively short period of his public life, wrung from a rival and deadly hostile administration substantial concessions for his country, and heroically defended his followers "from the Spellys of Egypt and the "limering for spoils," uniting into a solid phalanx one of the ablest and best disciplined parties in political history, and he himself leading them in example, and as an Irish country gentleman without a peer, and as a public speaker by birth and interest he was identified to espouse as a patriot and a philanthropist the cause of his downtrodden countrymen; and

Whereas, the cause of these unparalleled services and sacrifices, Charles Stewart Parnell has been prematurely snatched from an immortal honor and undying gratitude at the hands of Irishmen at home and abroad; and because of the unbelievable baseness of his foes as a politician and his brilliant achievements as a party leader, many of his once trusted associates in parliament, after proving false to all of fidelity and eulogies of his greatness as a man, and his unswerving devotion as an Irish patriot, deserted him at the hour of trial, and at the dictation of Mr. Gladstone acting in the interest of an English party, and now these insincere followers slavishly emulated the Irish bashaw and the foreign enemies of Charles Stewart Parnell in heaping upon the last days of his life a living torture, and finally drove him to a sudden and unexpected death, be it therefore,

Resolved, That we, Irish-American citizens of Chicago, in public meeting assembled, deplore the great loss which Ireland has sustained by the death of her most devoted and illustrious son, and as a mark of our esteem for his memory and as a duty we owe to our native land, hereby pledge ourselves anew to the principles for which he struggled, and call on all Irishmen to preserve them in their heart of hearts and spread and perpetuate them by every legitimate means in their power.

Resolved, The ideal of Irish nationality handed down to us by our fathers includes control of all Irish affairs, foreign and domestic, legislative and complete civil and religious liberty guaranteed to all Irishmen without distinction to creed, and that no Irish patriot who falls in these principles should be specifically entitled to their platform.

Resolved, That a final settlement of the Irish question will require the united efforts of the whole Irish race, and that to effect a union satisfactory to all it must be based on the recognition of Ireland's inalienable rights—a policy of independence—and all Irishmen should eschew of a leader whose character and associations would command the confidence of the Irish race and the sympathy of the liberal fellow countrymen and insure respect from all English leaders and people alike.

Resolved, That the time has come when religious differences should no longer be the cause of separating the Irish people politically, or be a bar to a union for their common political interests, and therefore we regard the recent efforts of the Irish hierarchy to establish the ecclesiastical domination in the affairs of Ireland as a most dangerous obstruction to Irish self government.

New York Irishmen Meet.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—An adjourned meeting of Irish-Americans of this city was held at Lenhardt's hall last night for the purpose of arranging to publicly honor the memory of the late Charles Stewart Parnell. The meeting several times nearly broke up in a row, but finally an executive committee was appointed, including the existing committee, and the presidents of the delegates from their organizations. They will arrange for the memorial meeting.

The Clerical Party.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Pierce Mahony, the successor of Parnell in command of the Parnellite party, is said to have spoken of his opponents as "the clerical party."

HE WILL WRITE NO MORE.

The Life Work of the Late James Parton, Author and Biographer.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Oct. 19.—James Parton, the well known author and biographer, died at his home in this city Monday, Oct. 17 after an illness of several weeks. He was born in Canterbury, England, on Feb. 9, 1822. His father died when James was an infant, and his widowed mother brought him to America when he was only six years of age. His first literary work of note was the life of Horace Greeley, which he wrote in six weeks.

Mr. Parton then took to authorship, and elated with his first success, prepared another biography for the press. He was selected as his subject Aaron Burr. It appeared in 1856 and has run through a good many editions. His next work was a life of Andrew Jackson, in three volumes. Mr. Parton wrote the life of Franklin, in two volumes. He bestowed much labor upon his life of Voltaire and gathered much material from recognized sources.

Mr. Parton's first wife was the well known "Fanny Fern." His second wife was Miss Ellen Eldridge, the younger daughter of his first wife by a former husband. The marriage was within the forbidden degree of the Massachusetts legislature and caused much excitement. Mr. Parton was not aware that it was illegal.

Fatally Assaulted a Peddler.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Joseph Blum, a Hebrew peddler twenty-three years old, was fatally assaulted by two canal boatmen, who then robbed him. One was captured in Port Jervis and another in Pennsylvania.

Hit Him with a Spade.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 19.—John Meyer, German, of this place, got into a quarrel at the railroad station with some New Yorkers, one of whom knocked him unconscious with a spade and escaped. Meyer is badly hurt.

What the Fair Closed Sundays.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 19.—The Presbyterian synod of Pennsylvania and West Virginia has passed resolutions against opening the World's fair on Sunday.

Gutted by Fire.

NORWICH, Conn., Oct. 19.—The building of John A. Morgan & Son, coal and lumber dealers, was gutted by fire last night. Loss, $25,000; insured.

Ex-Convict Paterson at Liberty.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Robert Paterson, a young ex-convict, has been arrested charged with the murder of Miss Amelia Gregory, but he showed to the satisfaction of the court that on Wednesday last, the day of the murder, he worked all day on the new church at Bullville place. The justice therefore discharged the prisoner.

A Battle with New York Toughs.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—While Policeman Whitworth, of the Madison street squad, was taking two prisoners to the station he was set upon by the "Pike street gang," badly beaten and his prisoners rescued. Two of the rescuers afterward made a desperate resistance against arrest. Many shots were exchanged.

A WIZARD'S NEW WONDER

Edison's Electric Motor May Soon Supersede Steam.

ONE HUNDRED MILES PER HOUR.

That Is the Speed the Great Inventor Claims Can Easily Be Secured on Great Railroads—His Improved Scheme for Electric Street Car Lines.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Thomas A. Edison, the electrical wizard, has just completed two inventions before the wonderful and far reaching results of which all his other remarkable discoveries are comparatively insignificant. One is the practical application of electricity to great railroad lines, by which speed far beyond anything achieved by steam may be attained, and the other the application of electricity to the propulsion of street cars without the use of the dangerous, unsightly and inconvenient overhead construction.

Reducing the Voltage.

The general principle of the street car invention is that the electric current passes down through one line of rails, is picked up by the car, passes through the motor beneath it, and goes out on the other side and returns through the other line of rails to the central power station.

The question will naturally occur why the electric current does not dissipate itself in the ground. To this no positive reason can be assigned except the bare statement that it does not.

Edison's experiments have all been in the endeavor to construct a motor sufficiently powerful to do the work, in which the voltage was reduced to so low a point that the natural tendency of the electric current to fly off to the ground and be dissipated would be overcome, and the passage through the motor to the opposite rail would be easier for the current than to pass through the ground to the central station.

To Revolutionize Electric Traction.

The experiments were conducted at the great laboratory in West Orange. Here an experimental track nearly a quarter of a mile long was constructed. The experiments have now been fully completed and the invention passes out of the first experimental stage into the second stage—the adaptation to practical use. The voltage of the current will be very low, less than 100, while the average voltage of the overhead trolley system is an excess of 500. From this it will be seen how great a revolution the new invention will effect in the whole matter of electric traction.

The most remarkable feature of the invention is in the "pick ups," that take the current from one line of rails. A novel and ingenious mechanism has been arranged that it will work with perfect certainty and effect through six inches of mud or slush or water.

One Hundred Miles an Hour.

Mr. Edison's other great discovery is to obviate the difficulty in the attainment of high speed on the ordinary steam railway, which is due to the inflexion of steam. The injection and exhaust of the steam into and from the cylinders is so rapid in its alternation that beyond a certain limit it is impossible to work, and this is an inherent defect in all steam propulsion.

In the new electric motor this difficulty vanishes, and the limit of speed is only that of the endurance of the machinery and the strength of the tracks. With this invention of Mr. Edison a speed of 100 miles or more an hour will be more easily attained than the ordinary speed of fifty or sixty miles an hour. Negotiations are now in progress for the application of the system to one of the long lines of railway.

FEMALE PRISONERS FIGHT.

Twenty-five of Them Have a Lively Time in the Claremont Workhouse.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 19.—A free for all fight occurred among the female prisoners of the Claremont workhouse. Two women in the knitting department had a quarrel, which resulted in an incipient riot, friends of both women interfering. For about half an hour the twenty-five infuriated prisoners fought one another fiercely, scratching one another's eyes, tearing one another's clothing nearly off and pounding an adversary wherever an opening occurred. The three matrons in charge could do nothing with the women, who acted like wild animals.

Half a dozen officers of the prison were finally summoned by a matron who succeeded in escaping from the room and the belligerents were placed in dungeons. During the fight two of the worst prisoners, Maud Hutchison and Mamie White, escaped. They scaled a twenty foot wall and have not yet been apprehended.

They Pulled Hair.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Mary Ireland and Mrs. Louisa Ireland, sisters-in-law, engaged in fisticuffs at Carmanstown. The two clinched, pulled hair, scratched and punched each other until separated by relatives. Jealousy is alleged as the cause of the trouble.

She Wants $100,000 Damages.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Percival D. Griffiths, of Dewey, Teloite & Griffiths, brokers at 60 Wall street, was arrested in a suit for breach of promise brought by Margaret Delia Brennan, of 157 West Thirty-fourth street. Plaintiff demands $100,000 damages. The defendant, who is said to be a member of the Manhattan club, was placed in Ludlow Street jail. Later he was released on bail. Miss Brennan stands high in European society.

Mass on a Man-of-War.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Archbishop Corrigan presided at celebrated mass on the French warship Naiade, now lying off the foot of West Twenty-third street. A guard of honor of fifty marines was posted before an improvised chancel rail. During the service the crew of 400 men were ranged in three sides of a hollow square.

A COOLHEADED YOUNG FIEND.

Cow Albert Kohls Ruined a Girl, Killed Her and Hid Her Body.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 19.—Three weeks ago Annie Kodatzke, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the latest on a farm just north of the city, disappeared. Late last night her body was found in a hole beneath the cow stable.

The discovery was made by the father and mother of the dead girl. The latter is nearly crazed by the shock. Albert Kohls, eighteen years old, employed on the farm, has been arrested on a charge of having murdered the girl. His story was told with a stolidity remarkable for one so young. As to time did the boy show any signs of emotion, and he reveals the terrible details as calmly as though talking of every day affairs.

He said that he had been intimate with the girl. Recently he found that she was in trouble, and, fearing the anger of her parents, he determined to kill her.

On the day of the murder Kohls said he went out to the barn with a hammer and nails. Annie was there, and he asked her to hold a board for him to nail. She complied, and he struck her on the temple with the hammer. The girl fell to the floor, and as she was not dead the boy struck her again.

He then raised some boards in the floor of the barn and tumbled the body down into the hole, after which he covered it a foot deep with manure. Then, replacing the boards, he nailed them down. The day before the murder Kohls related to poison the Kodatzke family. Paris green was placed in the soup, but so much was used that the father, who ate first, was made sick, and no one else touched the soup.

As the girl could not be found, it was thought she might have poisoned the soup. Kohls was called to see if he knew where she was. He told the police he had been out in the barn and held a board for him to nail, after which she left. As a proof of his story he took the police to the barn and showed them the board. While he was telling the story the party stood over the body of the girl who had been murdered half hour before. During all this time the boy showed no signs of nervousness or excitement.

THEY LYNCHED THREE NEGROES,

And Now the Governor of Virginia Will Call Out the Militia.

CLIFTON FORGE, Va., Oct. 19.—The entire town is in arms and pickets are posted on every outskirt. The trouble comes over the rumored uprising of the negroes in consequence of Saturday night's lynching. Mayor Bowles has telegraphed to Governor McKinney to send the Monticello Guards here as a measure of precaution. Troops are on the way.

The negroes who were lynched were miners. They appeared in Clifton Forge during the time of the influence of liquor. A posse under charge of the town sergeant went to arrest them. They resisted and moved in the direction of Iron Gate. The posse followed. The negroes turned and began firing.

One white man, P. A. Bolling, a railroad man, was instantly killed, and a white man named Wilkinson seriously injured. Four of the negroes were arrested and taken to Clifton Forge.

About 2 o'clock Sunday about 100 men broke into the jail and lynched three of the negroes. The fourth, a boy, was released.

The Beecher Memorial Church.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 19.—One of the most impressive ceremonies witnessed in Brooklyn for years was the dedication of the Beecher Memorial church at the corner of Rockaway avenue and Herkimer street, yesterday. Three services were held, and perhaps at no other dedicatory services ever seen in Brooklyn have so many pulpit orators spoken on the same day.

Trenton's Big Failure.

TRENTON, Oct. 19.—Jonathan Steward, considered one of the wealthiest citizens of this city—and who was interested in all the enterprises manipulated by the missing Thomas A. Bell—and an officer in the Star Rubber company, the Trenton China company and several smaller concerns, has failed. Indorsements for these concerns crippled Steward. Appraisers have fixed the value of his possessions at $150,000. He is now eighty-two years of age. The assignment renders him penniless.

PETER MAHER THE IRISH CHAMPION.

Sadder Thinks Maher the Best Heavy Weight Boxer in the World.

A man, broad and thick and tall, at whom folks would turn around and look twice because of his air of confidence, is in New York city. This man would be noboby at all, and wouldn't have a line in the newspapers about him, much less his picture, if he didn't have a big fist, a strong arm and an extremely unpleasant habit of using the fist as a battering ram upon occasions.

PETER MAHER.

Maher has a very interesting record which begins with his fight with the porter of Dublin, in the yard of Guinness's brewery. He is a Galway man and is five feet eleven and a half inches in height. After he whipped the terror he entered Tony Baze's amateur competitions in the round room in the rotunda in Sackville street, Dublin.

The first man he boxed with was J. E. Sullivan, who was 6 feet in height and weighed about 185 pounds. Sullivan was announced as the middleweight champion of Ireland, but he was a beaten man in three rounds. Maher felt fresh enough on the same night to put on the gloves with Martin O'Hara, and after punching him pretty hard in the first round O'Hara announced that he had had enough. After that, whenever Maher was spoken of, he was called the amateur champion of Ireland.

It wasn't long before he turned professional and made a match with James O'Doherty, in Dublin. They fought six rounds and Maher had the better of it, when the police jumped in and stopped the fight. After that he entered for the English championship. Maher came out very well. He beat two men and in the finals was brought up against Robert Hair. The decision was given to Hair. Maher wanted Hair to come over to Dublin and make a match, but Hair declined.

Maher made a match to box Alfred Bowman of England for £30. The men came together in August, 1890, in Dublin, in a 20-foot ring. In the sixth round the Englishman was out and Maher was a favorite.

In the fall of the same year he was matched to fight Joe McAuliffe in San Francisco, but announced to nothing because of the objections of the police.

Then Tom Sage, of the Albert Club, Dublin, made a match for Maher to fight Lambert, of Canada, for £100 a side. They came together in the Pelican Club, of London, on Feb. 7, 1891. There was one round fought, and the contest lasted less than a minute.

Lambert landed the first blow, a body one, but Maher countered effectually. Maher followed up the blow after the breaking and landed a blow on his antagonist's face. When Lambert got up Maher advanced again and hit him on the cheek, upsetting him. Then he finished him, receiving the decision.

He came across the ocean to fight, and in the words of Billy Madden, "He'll fight when he is told."

Madden says he wants to get a go with Mitchell or Fitzsimmons, if he can. If not, he will be satisfied with James Corbett or any good man in the class.

Will the Good Old Nan Retire?

A remarkably brilliant baseball career is drawing to a close, and a unique figure will soon fade from view. Spectators at League games the past season have not failed to notice a falling off in the ability of A. C. Anson, admittedly the greatest field general who ever put on a baseball uniform, and doubtless the old man realizes that he cannot much longer keep up the struggle. As a field captain and manager, Anson has lost none of his powers; in fact, he is in that branch of the game keener than ever, but in the playing of his position he has deteriorated in a marked manner, and cannot hope to continue in the field much longer. It was this knowledge, perhaps, that made him so anxious to win the pennant this season, and there is a strong likelihood that had he been successful Anson would have retired from active participation in the game.

Two Clubs for Chicago.

It is a fact now that Chicago is to have an Association club next year. The Chicago Baseball Association was incorporated at Springfield, Ill., on October 9th, with a capital of $50,000, the incorporators being C. E. Rolling, an insurance agent, who is anxious to become a ball magnate; Malcolm McDonald, the son of a wealthy lumber dealer, and W. S. Johnson, a lawyer. The new association club will probably have to get along without Anson's disgruntled players, however, unless Anson chooses to release them, as it has been discovered that the contract signed by all the Chicago players last season virtually binds them for five years, the men having agreed to play with Anson for that length of time should he so desire.

A World's Record.

The remarkable feature of the annual games of the Brooklyn Heights Athletic Club held on October 10 on the old grounds of the Manhattan A. C., New York city, was the phenomenal throw of the sixteen-pound hammer by Champion J. S. Mitchell, of the New York A. C.

In medically following the regular competition with the hammer, Mitchell created a world's record. The best previous throw—128 feet 10½ inches—made by himself at Detroit, on September 30, was thought to be his limit, but at the second attempt he sent the sixteen-pounds of lead and wood a distance of 141 feet 3½ inches. This is now the world's record.

Swimmer Johnson Beaten.

W. C. Johnson, of the Manhattan Athletic Club, N. Y., the one hundred yard swimming champion of America, contested in the one hundred yard championship on October 10th, at the St. George's Baths, London, Eng. He was badly defeated, finishing fourth in the first heat. Evans, of Manchester, won the final in 1 m. 8 2-5s.

VARIOUS VERSES.

The Waiters.

She comes, she comes upon my yearning sight,
Like friendly beacon shining through the night.
What though thy hands and feet be large—thy head
And countenance alike be fiery red?
My joy at seeing you is past control—
Thou token of plenty to my famished soul!
She comes to inquire if I would prefer whim or wish
And murmurs.
"Soupertish!"

Daughter of Evin, skittish are thy ways;
Perchance my meal you'll bring some of these days.
Oh, why procrastinate? Why, why so slow?
Art waiting for the ham and eggs to grow?
At length she comes again upon the scene
And beams upon me with a smile serene.
Like champagne bottle popping out its cork
She shouts out,
"Beefforpork!"

Oh, fair one, tho' go drinking man am I,
I fain some mild, light beverage would try.
Not only hungry am I, but athirst,
And would drink until my hide would burst.
Oh, for ice water, milk or lemonade.
Some cool drink bring me, oh, thou lovely maid!
At last she sees my signal, and far off
Shouts at me,
"Teacreoff!"

Come, come, thou shy, coy maid, hear my appeal!
Have I come to the end of this my meal?
Is this small ration all I am to draw?
Must famine's tooth forever at me gnaw?
You think I've had enough—not so—not so!
Ah, little of a boarder's waste you know!
If you'd but listen—if you only would!
She answers,
"Pintopint!"

—London Table.

A Shame.

She has been to Saratoga and to Fort Ticonderoga.
Where they charge for breathing just about two dollars every breath.
She has visited the mountains and has drunk from healing fountains
Whose sulphuric odors make you think of something after death.

In white flannels and merino she was seen at the Casino,
Where her beauty was admired, and the costume that she wore
In the surf at Narragansett served to very much enhance it.
Till the button pressing kodak fiends were all along the shore.

On the Richfield lawns she flirted with the young men, flannel shirted,
And her dancing was delightful at the garden or the hop.
Now she's back home in the city, and it really is a pity
That, in spite of all, she didn't get a single man to pop.

The Autumn Girl.

She's left the bounding billows, and she's coming to the town,
Her mind filled up with visions of the latest autumn gown.
The pensive shirt and collar, and the n ckties that she wore
Were packed in saratoga on the day she left the shore;
And when we see her once again, to all it will be clear
The Summer girl has left us and the Autumn girl is here.

From mountain tops, where breezes have strewed roses on her cheeks,
From lake and grove and river, where the soul of Nature speaks,
From giddy summer circles, where the wheel of fashion rolls,
And Cupid wings his arrows at the gilded throng that strolls,
She's vanished like a vision—as the clouds that disappear
The Summer girl has left us and the Autumn girl is here.

The rocks that front the ocean look deserted now and bare
The breezes wander aimlessly in search of yellow hair;
The cruel waves have sought the sand and washed her prints away,
And autumn leaves have covered up her nook of yesterday.
We miss her—yes, we miss her, yet we do not shed a tear,
The Summer girl has left us, but—the Autumn girl is here.

A True Man.

"Are my biscuits light, John?" asks the charming young wife,
And she smiles on her husband, and he,
With emphasis, answers, "They're lovely, my life;
As light as the foam of the sea."

"Is the steak cooked to suit you?" she gently inquires,
And he says, as he smilingly nods,
"It might have been cooked at celestial fires,
And be tender enough for the gods."

"And the coffee, that pleases you, too, does it dear?"
She asks, overjoyed with his praise,
Which rather than strains of sweet music she'd hear,
"I never drank better," he says.

So she sits down beside him and with him partakes of the meal,
And her dancing was delightful at the garden or the hop.
Now she's back home in the city, and it really is a pity
That, in spite of all, she didn't get a single man to pop.

—Utica Observer.

Complimentary.

A woman on a bridge train had a baby about a year old in her lap, and next on her right sat an oldish man who was evidently fond of babies. The child looked at him, and he smiled and clucked in return. He was getting along finely, when all of a sudden the kid puckered his lip and began to howl.

"There, there. Don't cry, my precious lamb," said the mother in soothing tones.

"Seems to be afraid of me," observed the man.

"Yes, sir, he do, and I can't make it out. I had him up to the zoo the other day, and he looked at the big hippopotamus for half an hour and never uttered a whimper!"

The old gent wriggled around, looked foolish, and observing a large assortment of fall and winter smiles in that end of the car he went out on the platform to view the wonder of the Nineteenth century.—New York World.

Misinformed.

She (severely)—I have been informed that you intend to give a bachelor dinner to your friends on the day before we are to be married. Now, as I understand it, a bachelor dinner is for the purpose of taking leave of a gang of fellows whom no gentleman would introduce to his wife, and I should like to know why a gentleman should have such——

He—My dear, you have been misinformed. I haven't the least intention of giving a bachelor dinner or taking leave of anybody.

"You haven't?"

"Of course not. I shall meet them every night at the club just the same as before."—New York Weekly.

His Find.

A schoolboy of incorrigible laziness sur prised his parents the other day on returning home from school, by proudly informing them that he had secured the prize for English grammar.

"The prize for English grammar!" exclaimed his astonished father. "Why, I have always understood that you are the very last boy in the class."

"So I am, father," returned young hopeful, "and it was really Dick Porter who got the grammar prize, but he left it in the train when we changed at Chapman Junction, and so I collared it sharp."—London Figaro.

Heard in the Night.

"Mamma, please gimme a drink of water. I'm so thirsty."

"No; you are not thirsty. Turn over and go to sleep."

(A pause.) "Mamma, won't you please gimme a drink? I'm so thirsty!"

"If you don't turn over and go to sleep, I'll get up and spank you!"

(Another pause.) "Mamma, won't you please gimme a drink when you get up to spank me?"—Life.

Two Kinds.

An ordinary thunderstorm is said to travel at the average rate of thirty miles an hour. Of course, that is the plain, ordinary thunderstorm that merely goes loafing along for the purpose of souring milk and committing minor depredations. The thunderstorm designed especially to catch you out in your new fall suit and silk hat sweeps along at a much faster rate.—Detroit Free Press.

She Could Wait.

A Texas lady sent her servant over to the house of a sick neighbor.

"Mrs. Smith saunt me over to ask how your husband am comin on dis mawnin?"

"Very bad, indeed. The doctor says he may die any minute," was the reply.

"Den I reckon I had better wait a little while, as I hasn't got nuffin else to do jess now."—Texas Siftings.

A Clever Child.

Tale of a Tailor.

I knew a man whose name was Shaw,
Who lived two blocks away,
I saw his sign above the door,
As I went by that way.

I called upon that tailor man,
And, oh, how glad was he
When I gave him a coat and vest,
To cut and clean for me.

Next day he called and hoped that I
Would favor him once more.
He took another coat and vest,
And bowed me to the door.

When I go down to dinner now
My tennis suit I wear.
I haven't seen that tailor since,
To tell him where.

Mean.

To the large number of stories of "the meanest man" which are frequently related, one should be added of a certain Frenchman, famous for his habit of grumbling at everything and on every occasion.

He was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism, and was carefully nursed by his wife, who was very devoted to him in spite of his fault finding disposition. His suffering caused her to burst into tears sometimes as she sat at his bedside.

One day a friend of the invalid came in and asked him how he was getting on.

"Badly, badly!" he exclaimed, "and it's all my wife's fault."

"Is it possible?" asked the friend in surprise.

"Yes. The doctor told me that humidity was bad for me, and there that woman sits and cries, just to make it moist in the room!"

Strict-o-Frac.

The person who is inclined to boast of his valuable possessions is likely to have the laugh turned upon him on occasion. A wealthy man was once exhibiting proudly to some acquaintances a table which he had bought, and which, he said, was 800 years old.

"Then, nothing," said one of the company. "I have in my possession a table which is more than 3,000 years old."

"Three thousand years old!" said his host. "That is impossible. Where was it made?"

"Probably in India."

"In India? What kind of a table is it?"

"The multiplication table!" — Youth's Companion.

TALK OF THE TOWN

—One week from to-day will be registration day.

—The Choral Society held a meeting in Vincent Chapel last evening.

—Somerset street between Front street and the bridge is sadly in need of repairs.

—The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey is in session to-day at Long Branch.

—The Daniel Boone Company is advertised to appear at Music Hall to-morrow evening.

—A dealer in bicycles reports that there are 1,800 bicycles in use in Plainfield.

—The Union County Petit Jurors will not be called upon to attend court until next Monday.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The election on the question of borough or no borough for Westfield is taking place there to-day.

—Engine Company No. 2, will take their apparatus out for a "wash" this evening at half-past seven o'clock.

—All young men interested in joining the bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. are invited to the Olympia allies to-night.

—Anyone wishing to learn the German language would do well to read Miss Marie Classen's card in another column.

—The Rev. C. L. Goodrich's paper, "Our Church," is out for October and abounds with interesting reading matter.

—The Master Mason's degree will be worked in a meeting of Jerusalem Lodge No. 36, F. & A. M., to be held this evening at half-past seven o'clock.

—There is to be a "shoot" at the Campbell Club House next Thursday, commencing at noon o'clock. There will be live and inanimate targets to shoot at.

—There was a mass meeting at Westfield last evening to boom the borough question. Prominent speakers from Montclair and Rutherford delivered addresses.

—The case of the City Treasurer vs. Frank Rand which was to have come up for trial in the City Judge Codington this morning has been adjourned over for one week.

—Mr. L. W. Serrell will talk to young men about patents and inventions at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Thursday evening of this week. The admission is free and all men are invited.

—All young men interested in shorthand ought to apply at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening. It is expected that the announcement will be made to-night by which the younger members of the class at least can begin their work at seven instead of eight o'clock.

—Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, have decided to give literary entertainments at their meetings which are held every Friday evening. Twice every month the members of the Order will sit down to a collation. A committee of five have the matter in charge.

—The case of Patrick Dowd vs. Policeman Giese and Kiely was up before the Union County Grand Jury to-day. Dowd alleges that the officers assaulted him. They were called to quell a disturbance caused by Dowd, whom the police say causes them much trouble and has several times been arrested and fined for violation of city ordinances.

—VanEmburg & White are offering special inducements to buyers throughout every department. This firm has made many improvements in their large store this season. They have enlarged their cloak department to twice its former size and they claim to have as fine an assortment of jackets for ladies and children as many New York houses show.

Two Hacks Collide.

Yesterday afternoon two hackmen named Cornelius Guinee and John Fitzpatrick were driving in the vicinity of the railroad station when their hacks collided. One of the wheels on each vehicle was badly wrecked. Mr. Guinee says he will bring a suit for damages, as he claims Fitzpatrick collided with him purposely.

ELSIE LESLIE AT MUSIC HALL.

The Charming Child-Actress Warmly Welcomed.

Pretty Elsie Leslie won the hearts of theatre-goers in New York a few seasons ago, by her impersonation of the part of Little Lord Fauntleroy, in Mrs. Burnett's play of that name.

Last night she appeared for the first time in Plainfield. The storm made it very doubtful that there would be any audience at Music Hall at all, even with little Miss Leslie herself as the Prince and the Pauper, in Mark Twain's play of that name, but a little unforeseen circumstance helped over the doubt most pleasantly.

Miss Leslie and her Company yesterday stopped at the Albion. Now quite a number of Plainfield families take their meals there. Very few of them are theatre-goers—that is, they are not frequenters of Music Hall ordinarily, not taking that interest in local affairs of the kind that one would expect, or possibly being too fond of their generally lovely homes to care for the theatre attractions.

But when Elsie Leslie got among them at one of the hotel guests she won them completely, Mr. they turned out in sufficient numbers to make a very fine audience at the hall for such a stormy night, all going away delighted.

One lady said, "I have not been at the theatre for nearly fifteen years, but that pretty little girl completely won my husband and myself this afternoon, and we concluded to see her. She is but fourteen years old, and is as pretty off the stage as she is on it."

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Barrel of Cider Nearly Crushes Hugo Fisher's Life Out.

Hugo Fisher, an employe of Mr. Frederick Casper's hotel and restaurant, had a narrow escape from death at about nine o'clock this morning. Mr. Fisher attempted to roll a barrel of cider from the sidewalk down a flight of stone steps to the cellar underneath the hotel. The steps were wet and slippery from the heavy rain of this morning and before he had the barrel half way down he slipped and fell. At the bottom of the incline he struck a box and fell on the other side of it. In the meantime the barrel tumbled down the stairs after him, struck the same box and bounded over it.

Fisher was picked up and carried to his room upstairs. Dr. Hedges was summoned and after a careful examination he ascertained that two of Fisher's ribs were fractured and his left arm was dislocated.

Mr. Casper says that had the barrel struck Fisher it would have crushed the life out of him.

Baptists Young People's Union.

The Baptist Young People's Union of New Jersey will meet at Mt. Holly, on Monday of next week. There will be three sessions. The delegates will be entertained by the Young People's Union of the Mt. Holly church. The several churches of this city will be represented by delegations. There will be addresses by many prominent speakers, including Rev. Dr. Boyd, of Fedalia Memorial church, of Newark; John H. Chapman, president of the National Union, of Chicago, and Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell special excursion tirkets to Mt. Holly on the certificate plan. Certificate blanks can be secured on application to Rev. J. C. Buchanan, Pemberton.

The Emerald Convention.

Delegates from the various Emerald Beneficial Societies throughout the State are holding a convention here to-day. The delegates began to arrive early this morning and continued to come in on every train until three o'clock. The first session was held at four o'clock this afternoon. Another session will be held this evening. To-morrow the business will be brought to a close by the election of officers for the ensuing year. The delegates are being entertained by Branch No. 8 of this city.

The Storm.

A heavy rain storm visited Plainfield this morning. Most of the pedestrians who were caught in it were drenched to the skin. The streets in this city were flooded and some of the streets in North Plainfield were impassible. During the storm hail stones fell also. No damage is thus far reported but the heavy downfall of rain caused the water in the brooks to rise considerably.

Their Fiftieth Anniversary.

Elijah Chamberlin and wife of New Brooklyn, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their home in that place on Wednesday. Mrs. Chamberlain's maiden name was Phebe Manning. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain formerly resided in this city. A large gathering of clans is expected.

The Fanwood Club Entertains.

The Fanwood Club entertained a number of their friends in their Club House at that place last evening. A bowling contest was indulged in as well other games. The entertainment concluded with a collation. A number of young people from this city were present.

Dislocated His Knee-Cap.

During the foot ball game last Saturday afternoon, Mr. Roy Cox, a son of ex-Councilman Rowland M. Cox of West Seventh street, dislocated one of his knee-caps. He will be compelled to use crutches for some time to come.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Electric Light Company's Bid for Street Lighting Accepted.—The Ordinance Granting a Sewerage Franchise to J. M. Low & Co., Adopted on its Third Reading and Final Passage.—Other Business.

The city Common Council met in adjourned session last evening at eight o'clock. The meeting was called to order at 8.05 o'clock. When the clerk called the roll the president and Councilmen Ackerman, Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Johnston, Roberts, Rashmore, See and Spangenberg responded. Mr. Ginna was absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read.

Mr. Ackerman said that if he understood the reading of the minutes rightly they read that the rules were suspended in order to allow Council to place a certain ordinance on its second reading. He said that if that was the case the minutes had not been correctly recorded as no motion to that effect was adopted by Council. He then moved that the minutes be corrected by striking out that clause. The motion prevailed.

Cornelius Reagan and others petitioned Council to locate an electric light at the corner of Stebbins place and Fourth street. The petition was referred to the Committee on Public Lights with power.

Samuel Lowinski and Allan J. McGreachy petitioned Council to grant them peddlers licenses. The petitions were referred to the Committee on Licenses with power.

Dr. George W. Endicott petitioned Council for permission to erect a barn on his property, corner Seventh street and Park avenue. The petition was referred to the Fire and Building committee with power.

In a communication Chas. W. VanWinkle thanked Council for appointing him a member of the Election Board in the Second Ward but declined to accept the appointment owing to business engagements. His resignation was accepted.

Mr. Spangenberg from the Committee on Public Lights, presented the bond and contract of the Plainfield Electric Light Company to light the streets of the city from Nov. 1, 1891, to Nov. 1, 1892.

In connection with the above he offered a resolution to the effect that the bond and contract be accepted and that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to enter into contract with the company in accordance with the contract submitted. The resolution was adopted.

[The rate will be $15.50 per light.]

Mr. Spangenberg said that according to the contract the Committee would have twelve extra lights at its disposal, making six hundred in all, and he moved that the Committee be instructed to place them to the best advantage. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Ackerman presented the name of William Messerschmidt as a member of the Election Board in the Second Ward in place of that of Charles Van Winckle, resigned. Mr. Messerschmidt was confirmed as a member of the Board.

Mr. Spangenberg presented an ordinance amending Section 14 of an ordinance in relation to the Peace and Morals of the city. The amendment makes it a misdemeanor to break street lamps, punishable by a fine not exceeding $250, one half of which is to go to the informer. The ordinance was read the first time and then, owing to a slight error, was laid on the table.

Mr. Moffett moved to reconsider the action taken on Mr. E. K. Allen's application for a hack license at the last meeting. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Moffett moved that the license be granted. The motion was carried by a vote of 6 to 2, Councilmen Gallup and Roberts voting in the negative. This action does Mr. Moffett credit, especially in view of his action at the last meeting, which we strongly condemned.

Mr. Moffett moved to adjourn. Mr. See seconded his motion.

Mr. Hetfield arose to speak.

Mr. See said a motion to adjourn was not debatable.

Mr. Moffett said he would withdraw his motion.

Mr. See would not consent.

The motion was then put and lost by the usual vote of 6 to 4.

ALL TO SERVE J. M. LOW & CO., BUT NOT THE CITY.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the ordinance granting a sewerage franchise to J. M. Low & Co., be placed on its third reading.

Mr. Ackerman moved to amend the motion by laying the ordinance on the table and called for the ayes and nays on the question. The amendment was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield's motion was then adopted by the same vote.

The ordinance was read the third time and adopted by the usual vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the ordinance be adopted on its final passage. The motion prevailed by a vote of 6 to 4.

At 8.45 o'clock the meeting adjourned.

A Horse Killed.

The 6.30 p. m. passenger train, bound West, struck and instantly killed a horse in the Fanwood cut last evening. It was afterward ascertained that the horse belonged to William Linden, a resident of Graceland, and it was one of a team which he prized very highly. Mr. Linden valued the team at $900. The animal had strayed from the pasture field and wandered on the track.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest proposition, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BOROUGH BOARD WALKS

They Cause a Woman's Death.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The untimely death of Mrs. Giddis is a sad comment on the condition of our sidewalks in many parts of the town. As she was hastening home to prepare supper for her family, she inadvertently stepped on an upturned plank, from which protruded a nail which pierced her foot and death was the result. The lives of our citizens are in constant jeopardy because of the negligence of the authorities to compel safe walks. HER FRIEND.

[THE NEWS has repeatedly called attention to the condition of the board walks, and it is high time something is done to abolish them for something more safe and suitable.—ED.]

BLASIER VERY LOW.

The Aged Murderer Dying in Prison. —He Was in Two Wars.

Harmon Blasier, the aged boatman who is awaiting trial in the Union County Court for the killing of Thomas Wilson, and whose condition was such last week that the trial had to be deferred until January, is very low with dropsy and heart trouble. It is thought he will live only a few days.

Blasier is seventy-two years of age, and has a remarkable history. He was a favorite scout in the employ of Gen. Zachary Taylor in the Mexican war. He afterwards served in the Union army, and since has followed a seafaring life. His confinement of several months in jail has ruined his previously healthy, robust constitution.

He Couldn't Understand the Change.

A well-dressed, middle-aged man who had evidently been making repeated searches for the moon through a beer-glass, was plodding along Madison avenue in an eccentric manner last evening after the theatre. He occupied considerable of the sidewalk.

Between Fourth and Fifth streets, on the West side of the street, the sidewalk evidently being graded, takes an abrupt rise of about two feet, at one place.

It is a dangerous spot, and it was gross negligence on some one's part that a lantern, or inclined board was not put there at night.

The weary man, with his heavy "load" reached the rise and attempted to walk through it.

When he got up he was a little dazed. "Funny'sh thing-his-I ever saw" said he. "Never saw a hill here 'fore" approaching it like this——he meditatively regarded it for awhile, and then grasping his right leg below the knee with both hands raised it up to the original side-walk. Then he gave a jerking; got the other leg up, and pitched forward. The fence on his right saved him from a fall, but twisted him around, and when a moment later, he started once more, he fell all in a heap down the "hill" he had just climbed. His manulin good nature was proof against even this, however, and he was standing pondering deeply on this new "valley" he had discovered, when a passer-by who had been watching him, helped him to the level walk and started him homeward.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. George D. Blazier of Newark was the guest of friends in this city Sunday.

Nightwatchman Benjamin Wright is slowly recovering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

Mr. Richard Fitzpatrick formerly of this city but now of Connecticut is visiting friends here.

Captain of Police George W. Grant has so far recovered from his recent serious illness as to be able to sit up.

Mrs. M. M. Walker, accompanied by her son, will sail for Glasgow, Scotland, to-morrow per steamer Teutonic.

Grand Master Howard Sutphen of the New Jersey Independent Order of Odd Fellows was last evening the guest of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F.

George F. Opdyke and family who have been traveling since last march, are expected home this week. They will occupy their handsome residence on West Eight street.

Mr. John McNally of Arlington avenue and Miss Mary Quinn of Plainfield avenue were married in St. Mary's church this afternoon at four o'clock. The Rev. Father Smyth performed the ceremony.

James Wilson died at his home, No. 49 West Seventh street, this morning. Deceased was in the eighty-fifth year of his age. The funeral will take place from his late residence Thursday afternoon at half past two o'clock.

The Hillside Tennis Club gave their last tea of the season last Saturday afternoon. The Club House was handsomely decorated. Mrs. Robert L. Burnett was the hostess. She was ably assisted by Miss Wotherspoon, Miss Bain, Miss Ginna and Miss Lawrence.

—The case of Charles Lyman vs Levi Hetfield is to come up for trial in the Union county court on Nov. 4th. Mr. Lyman sues Mr. Hetfield for a percentage which he claims is due him for leasing a store to a tenant.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A $75,000 Fire at Highland Park.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 20th, (Special.)—Joseph Snyder's brewery, consisting of half a dozen buildings, were destroyed by fire at daylight this morning. Estimated loss $75,000. Insurance $27,000. Cause of fire unknown. Half an hour after the fire started several tanks of ammonia on the grounds exploded, the concussion shaking houses in New Brunswick, across the river, as though there had been an earthquake.

A $150,000 Fire.

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 20th. (Special.)—The Speer Wine plant at this place was destroyed early this morning by fire. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

She Finally Boiled Over.

A boarding house keeper on Fifth street has been pestered of late by six small gamins whose makeup seems to consist chiefly of dirt, freckles and mischief. They started in fun by doing small things, such as taking the gate off its hinges, but leaving it standing. The first person that opened the gate usually fell over it.

This was followed by tying a long string, of a dark night, to a door-bell. That was a joke of an hour's duration.

Next the gate was stolen, and a cow tied in the yard.

Through it all the landlady made no sign of anger. Like the man in the play she "boiled within."

When, however, the door knobs were tied, so that the doors would not open, and the scamps sat on the opposite side of the street and sang in a high pitched chorus, a vulgar ditty about boarding-house eggs, etc., then she got mad and rushed towards the door. She boiled over. She would annihilate them. She would—but she didn't, for the door wouldn't open, and when she finally got through a window the street was like the store that didn't advertise—quiet.

But if ever she catches those boys there'll be a funeral.

Quite by Accident.

A stylishly-dressed young man stood leaning on his walking stick and talking to young lady on Seventh street Sunday evening, just about dusk.

They were evidently enjoying themselves, judging by their frequent but sudden laughter.

Where'er he laughed the young man's weight was almost wholly on the cane.

During one of these periods a man with a "solemncholy" visage walked by. There was quite eighteen inches between him and the young man's cane, but suddenly the cane struck it. The young sat down so hard he thought the filling was knocked out of his teeth.

A Genuine Blackthorn.

Acting-Captain of Police Patrick Lynch is the happy possessor of a genuine blackthorn cane direct from the "auld sod." It was presented to him yesterday afternoon by Policeman Kiely, who brought it from Ireland when he emigrated to this country. Mr. Kiely says he cut the cane himself before he left for America. Mr. Lynch denies the report that he proposes to discard his old reliable night stick and hereafter carry the blackthorne stick.

Sunday-School Convention.

The East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-school Association is holding its convention in the parlors of the First Baptist church to-day. A large number of delegates are present. The session will be continued this evening.

—Three well-known Plainfield merchants went on a shooting expedition a few days since and one of the trio shot a screech-owl, thinking it was a pheasant.

Have you seen the Bannockburn Flannels? Nice goods they are. Just the thing for Children's wear, and for Ladies' house wrappers. Price 12 1 2c.

Special attention is called to our stock of Comforta ds. We handle nothing but white cotton fil ed quilts, and have them made in town, and are made of the best material.

'Tis the general verdict of all who have seen our display of Fall and Winter Jackets that our styles are the newest, that our garments are better made, and that our prices are the lowest.

We have made many improvements in our House-furnishing goods department and you will find many additions that will interest you. We have the largest assortment and sell at a closer figure than all others.

There are a few more of those Decorated English Porcelain Toilet Sets left, at $4.49 each, and if you want Hall, Parlor or Hanging Lamps, we are Rock Bottom on them.

Gentlemen we have received another case of those 4-in. Rich Shirts. Look at them.

Another good thing that we won't have long is 100 genuine hand made Turkish Rugs, that cost to import $9 each, our price $3.75.

How about Underwear? We have everything for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, in White, Red and the Natural Wool, in all Qualities and Sizes, and our prices are way below the lowest.

We commence this week another Sale of Granite Ironware, at about half the regular price

What Edison Is About.

He can crush a whole mountain, he says, by his new electrical mining idea. He will no longer have mines worked by the slow and painful process of following veins. He will simply blast the whole mountain down at one blow and then claw the mineral out of its ruins. Furthermore, he is going to have that kinetograph ready to astonish foreigners and natives at the World's fair by its ability to reproduce before an audience an entire opera, figures, costumes, scenes, singing and all.

He has a new electric street railway that will take the place of every other now in existence. It will need no storage battery and no trolley arms overhead. There will be simply plain electric motors under the cars and they will take the current from the common rails that do duty for street cars already. How this is done is Mr. Edison's secret. Moreover, while there comes from the rails sufficient current to propel a street car fast enough for the most exacting passengers, it will be so arranged that it will not shock a fly, and that, too, is the Wizard's secret.

He will have a street railway in operation soon, exhibiting his invention. Speaking of the cable cars which will shortly take the place of the present ones, drawn by horse power on Broadway, New York, Mr. Edison remarked to a World reporter:

They ought to have waited. If I had seen the shield on a lift, I would have had this digging and ditching thing'll have their cable real, and by that time my system will be in operation in some one of a dozen cities, and will have put with much more satisfactory results. I could simply have gone to work and taken that Broadway railroad, have used it for a week, and then in a block a night of my system. I could have changed the road all over, and you would never have known anything about it.

He has yet a greater scheme on foot for transporting passengers over long distance railways. He is full of this, and said to The World attache:

I am also building a large electrical locomotive, several hundred horse power, and have devised a system of conduction without trolley, for a big railroad for Henry Villard. A small section has been laid. An electrical locomotive is much more economical than a steam one. A steam locomotive is not economical by reason of the conditions it has to work under. That is the trouble with it, whereas take one of these triple expansion engines on a solid foundation, with all the economical appliances, and the result is you can get horse power delivered to a train for much less than what the cost that you can do it direct with a steam locomotive. They have every advantage in an electric locomotive. Instead of running a train of six coaches every two hours, split it up. Make it two coaches and run it oftener. They are going to put this locomotive on some road in Chicago—between Chicago and Milwaukee, I think.

I am going to take the currents from stations twenty miles apart.

I was the first man in the United States, you know, to build an electric railroad. I believe there is no longer any doubt about that. I took Mr. Villard over the road at the rate of forty miles an hour. We ran so fast that he wanted to walk back. My idea then was to put the system on large steam roads, but I was a little too far ahead of the times. They are evident ly going to do it now, at last.

I can take the Pennsylvania railroad, for instance, between Jersey City and Philadelphia, and I begin by putting up the electric train on it, and they can go on running steam, too, and gradually replace steam by electricity without any trouble at all. Then I can go anywhere you want to with electric trains. It is only limited by the distance of the conductor of the steel. There are no other limitations to electric as there are to steam locomotives.

Once more it falls to the task of the secular newspaper to regret that, as in the Briggs case again, Christian ministers allow their tempers to become heated, and accuse one another of falsehood and tricks only resorted to in political conventions. It is most unfortunate for the cause of the Christian church in general. Agnostics, infidels and skeptics of all shades will read every word of the Briggs controversy and gloat over the fact that the most devout doctor of divinity has not yet learned from Christianity any more self control than the commonest man who gives way to a fit of passion on the street. This is of course not the fault of Christianity, it is on the contrary the fault of not enough Christianity, but it will not be so regarded by the scoffers, who will inevitably say, "If this is all the Christian religion does for its purest and highest examples, what is there in it?"

"A mere glimmer of childish obstinacy." That is what the mind of Karl, king of Wurtemberg, was from 1866 till his recent death. The kings of Bavaria are crazy; one after the other. The Russian czar has frightful attacks of what is declared to be incipient insanity; the heir to the imperial throne of Austro Hungary committed suicide or was killed in the midst of a disgraceful intrigue; the heir to the British throne has set all devout Christians to praying for the queen's health with renewed fervor. Who would not live in a monarchy! Especially, who would not be a king himself?

It has a bad look when people begin to accuse other people of plotting conspiracies to ruin them, just contrary to their will. Most persons are too busy with their own affairs to sit up nights plotting against others. Accusations of dark plots and deep laid schemes are sometimes an evidence of incipient insanity, sometimes an attempt to cover up unworthy transactions. The fearless man who attends to his own business has nothing to dread from anybody's plots. He very fearlessness and honesty protect him.

You must not say "undertaker" any more. It is "funeral director" now, and the funeral directors of this planet have just been holding a convention at Philadelphia to decide on the fashion for coffins next year.

MORTGAGED AND LEASED

John Hoey Covers Up His New Jersey Property.

HIS LETTER OF RESIGNATION.

The Deposed President of the Adams Express Company Declares That He Has Been Wronged and Says He Will Meet the Charges in Court.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 20.—Ex-Mayor Wilbur A. Heisley, of Long Branch, a prominent lawyer of that city, came here, and as counsel for John Hoey, the deposed president of the Adams Express company, filed in the county clerk's office three documents which had been executed by Hoey. The papers will have a most important bearing upon the suits being instituted against Mr. Hoey by the express company to recover the heavy amount it is claimed he took from the company by improper methods.

Hollywood Park Mortgaged.

One is a mortgage to Michael Quirk and Frederick C. Hoey, as trustees, for $48,000. Owing to Mr. Hoey's extensive real estate transactions it is impossible to say exactly what property the mortgage covers beyond Hollywood park, his county country seat, and that Hollywood, and that the cluster of beautiful cottages. The documents say the mortgage was given to the trustees because it is stated Hoey may hereafter desire to borrow money from the Long Branch Banking company upon his promissory notes.

Frederick C. Hoey is the youngest son of John Hoey, and has for three seasons managed the Hollywood hotel and its seventeen cottages. Michael Quirk is the superintendent of Mr. Hoey's property.

The Other Mortgage.

The other mortgage was to William M. Flues, as trustee. It is for $30,000. Mr. Flues is not known at Long Branch. No mention of any farm is made in the mortgage. The third document filed by Lawyer Heisley was a lease of the Hollywood hotel and its cottages and Hollywood park to Frederick C. Hoey for twelve years. Frederick C. Hoey is authorized to conduct the hotel and rent the cottages. He is to control all the drivers and grooms and own big swimming pools built last year by his father, and is bound to keep the cottages and property in good repair and pay all the taxes and insurances. Before Oct. 1 of each year he must pay over to his father 35 per cent. of the residue of the proceeds from the property.

Sheriff Smock says he has received no papers of attachment against Mr. Hoey. There are no papers on file here showing that the Adams Express company has instituted civil proceedings against Mr. Hoey, and thus far no one has appeared before the Monmouth county grand jury to secure criminal indictment against him.

In the New Jersey Courts.

TRENTON, Oct. 20.—The affairs of the deposed president of the Adams Express company, John Hoey, of Long Branch, have reached the courts of this state. President Gould has filed a bill in the United States circuit court in this city against Hoey, calling for an accounting by Hoey for about $700,000 taken by him, and alleged to belong to the Adams Express company. The bill further sets forth that a part or nearly all of this amount was used to build, furnish and equip the property known as Holly wood, a fashionable resort just south of Long Branch, and the managers claim that they have a right to it.

Besides this a mortgage for $100,000 was executed by Josephine Hoey to the Guarantee Trust company of Philadelphia. This, it is alleged, was paid off by check of the Adams Express company. This latter action on the part of Hoey is claimed to have been a breach of trust on his part while acting as president of the company.

Papers Served on Hoey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Mr. Hoey was taking breakfast at Delmonico's when Deputy Sheriff Stevens served upon him the summons in the suit brought by the company for the $700,000.

Mr. Hoey's letter of resignation as a member of the express company's board of managers was given out last night. It is as follows:

Mr. Hoey's Letter.

To the Adams Express Company and Clarence A. Seward, Esq., Secretary of the Adams Express Company:

SIRS—After more than forty years of faithful service to the Adams Express company I have been removed from the office of president by a majority of the board of managers, and I am informed that large claims are about to be made against me by the express company, based upon several alleged transactions. I have been grossly misrepresented as to these transactions, and I am prepared to maintain, and shall maintain at the proper time and in the proper way, my full vindication and complete fairness in my conduct in regard to all of them. I invite a judicial determination of any claims which may be asserted against me in behalf of the company. If the proper tribunals shall say that I owe anything to the Adams Express company I shall promptly pay it.

I find myself in the meantime placed in a position of antagonism to a majority of the board and to the official management of the company. It is manifest that under these circumstances and during such a controversy I cannot properly discharge the duties of president, and I herewith tender my resignation of the office of manager. Very respectfully,

JOHN HOEY.

Clapp Spooner Served Also.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 20.—Sheriff Cole Monday afternoon served upon Mr. Clapp Spooner, the ex-vice president of the Adams Express company, papers in the attachment suit to recover $750,000 instituted by the Adams Express company.

Musical Critic Stein Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Gustave Stein, the musical critic of the New York Staats Zeitung, who was recently bitten by a spider is dead. Death is said to have been due to pneumonia and heart failure, the physicians, Drs. Balzer and Jacoby declaring that the poisoning was not a cause of the fatal result. They admit, however, that an operation performed upon him had a tendency to weaken Mr. Stein.

The Clerks to Dismiss.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The noted telescope makers, Alvan G. and George B. Clark, of Cambridge, are to dissolve partnership. This step is said to be the sole reason that Mr. George B., the senior member, is physically unable to continue in active business, and desires to be relieved of all responsibility.

Trouble in the Golden Grail.

DEADHAM, Mass., Oct. 20.—An attachment for $50,000 has been filed upon the estates of Frank E. Steadman, of Needham, and others, officers of the Golden Grail, by the receiver of the order.

MRS. HARRISON'S SYMPATHY.

The President's Wife Approves of a Woman for Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The movement in behalf of Mrs. Maybrick has aroused a great deal of interest here, and now the wife of Mr. Blaine, living in Lafayette square, Washington that interest is certain to increase rapidly. Mrs. Harrison was preparing to attend the opera last evening, but hurried long enough to reply to questions regarding the case of Mrs. Maybrick. She said:

"I am most emphatically in favor of securing, if her guilt is even seriously doubted, and I approve of a new trial because the question of her guilt has been seriously mooted.

"I have not studied the case carefully," she said, "but have trusted to Gail Hamilton for my views on the subject. I have perfect confidence in her ability to get at the truth of the question, and I feel convinced she would never have gone into the matter as earnestly as she has without feeling convinced herself of the justice of Mrs. Maybrick's cause.

"I was first interested in the trial through a personal letter from Miss Dodge. I have been very much impressed with her statement of the case.

"Circumstantial evidence alone should never convict anybody. I do not intend any criticism of the English jury which decided the case, but it seems to me that if Mrs. Maybrick was not guilty as charged there is no reason why she should be broken on the wheel.

"I have not yet subscribed to the fund which is being raised to reopen this case, and I shall not do so. The subscription will be an anonymous one. Miss Dodge has written to me several times on the subject and I feel a deep interest in the matter."

A WAR CLOUD IN CHINA.

Russian Troops Have Already Invaded the Pamir Territory.

TIEN-TSIN, (Oct. 20.—A frontier officer at Chang reports that he recently met a Russian expedition descending the Alai plateau near the confluence of the Nurgiasu and Kaun rivers. The officer adds that he protested against this invasion of Chinese territory, but the Russians, being in greater force than the Chinese, disregarded the protest and pushed on.

One division of Russians proceeded to Alichar, in the Pamir territory, and another division marched toward the Great Pamir territory.

Russians and British Will Meet.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 20.—The Vovoe Vremya says that a meeting between the Russians and the British in Pamir was inevitable, adding:

"Chinese pretensions and Afghan and Chinese raids, violating the conventions forbidding them access to Pamir, now make it imperative to determine the exact frontier."

Walked with the Wrong Man's Wife.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Clarence Ballou, aged twenty-two, was walking along the street last night with Mrs. Samuel Newell when the husband of the Newell woman appeared and struck young Ballou into. Ballou's neck, inflicting a wound that will prove fatal. Mrs. Newell is twenty-eight years of age, while her husband is fifty.

Dead in the Hall Bedroom.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Edward B. Young, thirty-seven years old, of 421 West Twenty-first street, was found dead in bed in the Manhattan Athletic club last evening. The room was filled with gas. He was a member of the club.

Scarlet Fever in Girard College.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—An epidemic of scarlet fever has raged for several weeks in Girard college, though without fatal results. Nearly forty of the young orphans have been attacked, and the fever is yet uncontrolled.

Smith Accuses Dr. Patton.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Rev. M. Frank Hyatt Smith, who was a student at Princeton when Dr. Patton delivered his now famous address, contradicts some of Dr. Patton's statements about it and insists that it was an heretical utterance.

Delay for Murderers and Anarchists.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The United States supreme court has advanced the cases of the murderers Nicola Trezza and James McIlvaine for argument in December, and the cases of Fielden and Schwab, the Chicago anarchists, undergoing sentences of life imprisonment.

Folly of Present Dress Styles.

A woman whose mind is so constituted that it asks for reasons, and is uneasy when the reasons do not appear, speaks in this wise:

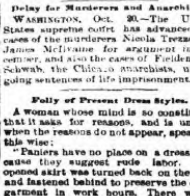
"Paniers have no place on a dress, because they suggest rude labor. The bustle has no place on the back, on the hips and fastened behind to preserve the overgarment in work hours. There was a significance in the Watteau pointed paniers on his mock shepherdesses which is lost when the idea of bumble service is not to be suggested.

"The overskirt has its origin in the apron, or perhaps in the habit domestics have of tucking up the skirt to keep it clean. The front must be so made, therefore, that if let down it would fall back to the edge of the underskirt, for if longer or shorter it has no excuse for being.

"A dress should never have a hood at the back, unless it is a hood that could really be drawn up over the head, so that the eye seeing it in folds on the neck may be satisfied that it has fallen from the hair and can be replaced at any time.

"Skirts should never be caught up in festoons unless some purpose can be suggested. The only logical reason that I can see for looping is that the skirt is too long, so that it must be apparent to the eye that if the looping were let out the skirt would more than reach the floor. Loopings in a skirt, which also have trains have no meaning."

Ridiculous But Fashionable.



LATEST THING IN BELTS.

This novelty has been christened the "Coney Belt." It is made of four leather straps, connected as shown in the illustration, and each fastened by a buckle. A whole arsenal of pretty and useful articles may be swung on this belt by straps or chains

LIVE POLITICAL NEWS.

Flower, Fassett and Sheehan Speak at New York.

FLOWER AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

His Explanation of the Alleged Manner in Which the Metropolis Was Worsted by Chicago—Fassett Addresses Three Meetings in a Single Evening.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—A big World's fair mass meeting, so called, was addressed last evening at the Belmont riding academy by Hon. Roswell P. Flower, Democratic candidate for governor. When Mr. Flower appeared he was cheered for fully two minutes.

Mr. Flower's Speech.

Mr. Flower in beginning his speech referred to the meeting as a nonpartisan one, composed of men who had not forgotten the loss of employment to laborers and loss of business to mechanics and traders and farmers by the location of the World's fair in Chicago. Continuing, he said:

Your chairman has said that I was instrumental in trying to locate the World's fair upon this site, gentlemen, I made an honest endeavor. This site was selected for its many advantages. Its natural advantages were incontestible, its beauty unsurpassed by any rival site, and it would have gratified our American love of fourth street." Following Mr. Washington chose this spot to meet the British and here prepared for the battle of Harlem Heights.

I never knew the cause of the anger of disappointment, which, if I am not much mistaken, will bear the bitter fruit of resentment —resentment against the men, who, having risen to prominence by their people's choice, have sold out their people's interests for selfishness in a personal fight. Gentlemen, this is the truth, a truth too long, too wide, too deep and too rich to be covered by the hide of a Tammany tiger. Fellow citizens, we are frantically trying to skin for this purpose. It is a truth too serious to be dispelled from your minds. I could have told you this last winter, and they could thus influence the presidential election in 1892. The presidency was then and the Democracy tiger were then, and are now, but cloaks to hide the real designs of those who despoiled you. I will speak to you more of the fair.

The Loss of the Fair.

When those interested in defeating New York dragged politics into the question in connection with the location of the fair, there was no place in three United States where the fair could be held and not affect political elections except right here in the city. And the reason was that time was an important element, and we had a year and a half the start. I showed them that a year and a half had been spent in guttering, paging and sewering the ground that was offered for the fair at a cost of a million and a half dollars, and that no other city that did not have this foundation work to start on could possibly hold the fair short of 1893. I showed them that we could have the fair brought to a close by May, 1892 have the fair brought to a close by May, 1892 and then let the people go home to their elections. When the World's fair committee from New York arrived in Washington Senator Dolph, Miller name of Cockran and the president of the State Agricultural society made speeches before the senate committee presenting the claims of New York.

They guaranteed $5,000,000 in cash and that the city would build the Grand Central depot that the bill prepared—prepared by a committee of which the majority were Republicans—would be immediately passed by the legislature. Gentlemen, that settled the location of the World's fair, and Chicago boomers went home in disgust. The friends of New York in Washington looked to the legislature of their state to pass the bill. The Republican machinations of the state set to work at once to obstruct the measure in the legislature by Fitzsimmons amendments to the bill. Then it was that Chicago saw her opportunity. No matter what the final vote was, that delay robbed New York of the World's fair. Our bill was disintegrated, because the Republicans of this state had forced local politics into the bill and bring it up at Albany.

The Alleged Reason Why.

Fellow citizens, jealousy between the big four in the Republican party existed. The fair Depew and Miller were actively and earnestly working for it. Depew was made chairman of the legislative committee. Platt was on that committee, but when Platt found that Depew and Miller were getting a great and growing boom from the citizens of New York and the state for espousing the fair, he and Hiscock had to invent some thing to break their power; and so the Hon. Frank Sloat Fassett the leader of the Republican senate, acting for them, succeeded in robbing you, fellow citizens of this prize that would have come to you in a square way—robbing your real estate owners of a hundred thousand prizes and all the laboring labor of double wages during its continuance, robbing merchants of a holiday trade, hotel and boarding house keepers of their harvest, upon the Hudson, the remnant mines of Ulster, the farmers of Dutchess and Orange counties, the lumber dealers and furnishers of building materials—in fact robbing every farmer, every trade and every industry in the state of New York.

Senator Hiscock and the Exposition.

The speaker charged that Senator Hiscock seemed very anxious to revise his record on the World's fair, and had stated that he (Flower) owned some railroad stocks in western roads, and that that was the reason why he was for the last the fair. Mr. Flower asserted that Hiscock had never favored the fair for New York, and that Hiscock and Platt did not want the fair, and had played into the hands of party by permitting Mr. Depew and Mr. Miller to get too much of a boom, or to permit them to become too prominent in giving this state the fair. Continuing, the speaker said:

When driven to the wall by public indignation two years ago I did in New York the opponents of the fair played a delicate piece of finesse by amending the bill, asking that two-thirds of the commissioners should be Democrats. Before the Republican majority of the committee controlled its action; by that adroit move the Republican Platt, Hiscock and Fassett, placed it in the power of the forty-two Democrats to control the fair, as forty-two of the 100 were Democrats.

It is only just to say that Mr. Belden, my colleague in congress, worked heartily and earnestly for the fair, as did Messrs. Miller and Mr. Depew. At that time we knew that the delay caused by Fassett in the state senate just the time to say. There were seventy-three Republicans living within ten hours' ride of New York who voted for Chicago. Had those votes been cast with those of the friends of the fair New York would have won the prize. Those votes were lost, that is the fair came to New York it would be controlled by Democrats, and instructed to send it west they obeyed the mandate of Thomas C. Platt and sent it west.

These are the plain facts in regard to the history of the World's fair. Deny them he who can. Talk about protection to American labor! Why, here were $30,000,000 about to be thrown into the lap of labor and all the different industries of this state. This money was diverted from New York, spurned, sacrificed to the jealousy of Platt, Hiscock, Fassett & Co. for fear that Depew, Miller and Belden might get a little nearer to the people than themselves, for fear that the octopus of Plattism should lose its grip.

Mr. Sheehan Speaks.

William F. Sheehan also spoke. He echoed Mr. Flower's charges concerning the World's fair and said that Thomas C. Platt was a "small, conceited man" and J. Sloat Fassett was "his child and plaything." He also charged that Messrs. Platt, Fassett, Hiscock, Quay and Dudley had consulted and decided that the Republicans would get too much honor out of the World's fair in New York, and if New York's fair aspirations were knocked in the head the Republicans could elect a president in 1892.

Fassett to the Colored Men.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The meeting of colored people to indorse the Republican nominations at Cooper Union last night filled the large hall to overflowing. Charles W. Anderson, a well known colored orator, presided, and in a neat speech introduced Hon. J. Sloat Fassett. Mr. Fassett said he was moved with feelings which he could not fully describe at the thinning of many great men who had stood on the platform now beneath his feet.

Thirty-one years ago this fall Abraham Lincoln had spoken there, and in the ensuing years men of the party like Chase, Seward, Grant, Blaine and Sumner had addressed their fellow citizens from the same rostrum. In that thirty-one years, he continued, we have flown a stainless flag and cemented the union of forty-two states. He would refer to no party prejudice caused by the Democratic position in the race question in previous years. He would address them as citizens looking for honest government.

The Two Issues.

There were two issues to which he desired to call their attention: First, an untrammeled ballot and the peoples, privilege given under the blanket ballot. Second, Tammany Hall, which he alluded to as the "Highwayman of Fourteenth street." Following Mr. Fassett, Henry Hedd and John M. Langston, of Virginia, also made brief speeches.

Then He Spoke in German.

From Cooper Union Mr. Fassett was driven to the Germania assembly rooms, where a dense crowd had already packed the hall to suffocation. Mr. Fassett was at once introduced upon his arrival. He spent until time for the train increased expenditure under Democratic rule in the state and city governments. He first addressed the meeting in German, which called forth much applause, and then delivered a speech in English. He then referred to Mr. Flower, who, he had seen it stated, was to deliver an extempore speech in Harlem that night. He would hold up some five columns of printed matter and said here is the extempore speech, which I have had ready for the last week. He read several paragraphs from it. Flower had not had much experience in the legislature, he said. Mr. Flower had been in congress to long for the good of the party. They threw the blame for the loss of the fair on the Republicans, and yet Tammany had renominated Ahearn and Dinkelspiel, who voted as he did on the measure.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Fassett took an elevated train for the Republican meeting in Harlem.

Mr. Fassett Reached Time.

Mr. Fassett reached the mass meeting at Nebach's hall, One Hundred and Seventieth street and Third avenue, about 10 o'clock. When he entered the hall the negro band played "Marching Through Georgia," and he was long continued cheering for "Fassett." Mr. Fassett spoke briefly.

Mr. Rulkeley's Friends Hopeful.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 20.—Chairman Herbert E. Benton, of the Republican state committee, says: "I don't think the quo warranto proceedings affect the president. There is no question in Mr. Morris' complaint about the power of the general assembly. Unless the assembly makes some new law to meet such a conjuncture as the present, the supreme court can do nothing whatever. The court has no authority to compel the assembly to come to an agreement.

Crisp Speaks in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 20.—Congressman Crisp, Democratic candidate for speaker of the next national house of representatives, and Governor Campbell, spoke here last night. Crisp denounced the McKinley bill as iniquitous an the most un-American measure ever framed by the American congress. No class was protected except the manufacturers, he said, and they were not in the long run. Mr. Crisp closed by saying that if the state of Ohio shall go Democratic on the first day of November next it will bring joy and happiness to million of farmers, laborers and factory hands all over the country.

Mr. Blaine's Alleged Attitude.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Joseph Manley, of Augusta, Me., is quoted as saying that the Maine delegation would not present the name of Mr. Blaine as a candidate before the Republican National convention. Mr. Blaine having expressed a desire that the Maine delegation should not make him a candidate.

However, if his name was presented by some other delegation and he were nominated he would not decline.

Congratulated by Mr. Platt.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 20.—The Morning Palladium, after issuing a certainly an eight page blanket sheet, today appears as an eight page paper under Henry Alloway's management. The paper will be Republican in politics. A letter is published from Thomas C. Platt who congratulates Connecticut Republicans upon the paper's new management, who he is sure will make a vigorous and intelligent champion of the party.

James R. Townsend for Congress.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Mr. James B. Townsend, general manager of the Press News association, has been nominated for congress by the Republicans of the Tenth district.

Brooklyn Republicans Ratify.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 20.—A large and enthusiastic Republican ratification meeting was held at the Clermont avenue rink last night at which Chauncey M. Depew, General Stewart L. Woodford and others spoke.

The Methodists Adjourn Today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The conference of the Ecumenical Methodist council will close today. Judge H. L. Sibley, whose thesis was "Marriage and Divorce Laws," maintained the proposition that the right of divorce is the necessary outcome of the right of marriage, not only in the case of adultery, but of desertion.

Shot by Mexican Troops.

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex., Oct. 20.—On the Mexican side James Brown were shot by the Mexican forces under command of General Lorenzo Garcia. Two of them were cowboys who have been working near Victoria and who unintentionally crossed the river without a permit from the Mexican consul on this side.

Secretary Rusk Hopeful About France.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Secretary Rusk believes that the French government will at an early date remove the embargo on American pork.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Athletics, the Americans Here and Today.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The hardy loyalists in the six days' race at Madison Square garden have settled down to business and are riding steadily and determinedly. Long sight Martin, the Irishman, who took to his work so coolly and quietly at the start, stole into the lead and Brown placed some distance between him and his nearest competitor, Ashinger. At 10:30 o'clock Martin scored his 400th mile. Every Irish heart in the building swelled with pride then and the members of the big crowd greeted the game young Irishman as he crossed the mark and urged him on to greater feats.

Ashinger, the American, who held the lead continuously from the first fifty miles, soon took to the track again after a rest, and at 2 a. m. today was in the lead and seven miles ahead of Martin. At 3 a. m. Ashinger had covered 332 miles; Martin, 325; Prince, 294; Schock, 307; Edlen, 290. Eddie McDowell has dropped out. The men are fast while riding their wheels.

Martin, the Irish boy, seems to have an especially good appetite, and takes draughts from the spout of a miniature teapot while he guides his machine with one hand.

In the early hours of yesterday morning fourteen men, looking the picture of health and strength, mounted their wheels. Today they present a most jaded appearance, the gigantic task leaving its mark on the strongest.

A. E. Bobb and W. Robb attempted what seemed a ridiculous feat in a six days' race. The record for the longest ride without dismounting is 200 miles. This he attempted to break. He never left his wheel from the time he mounted at 12:10 yesterday morning until a few minutes of 4 yesterday afternoon. Then he had scored 232 miles; but the record was so temptingly near that he urged himself on. His physique could no longer stand the strain and Baseball Contracts for 1892.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—President Nick Young has announced the following baseball contracts for next season: With Boston—H. E. Staley, T. J. Tucker, W. M. Nash, Joseph Quinn, H. D. Stovey, W. S. Brodie, C. W. Bennett, C. W. Ganzell, H. Long, C. A. Nichols, Robert L. Lowe.

With New York—John Sharrott, W. E. Coughlin, John B. Taylor, M. J. Tiernan and Daniel Richardson. The name of James O'Rourke was inadvertently omitted from the reserve list of the New York club. Also the names of Joseph Mulvey, A. B. Sanders and William Hallman from the list of the Philadelphia club as players reserved in former seasons, but who "failed or refused to enter to contract."

Toff Wall Turned Coward.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—It was expected that Toff Wall would meet Billy McCarthy, the Australian pugilist, at the National Sporting club last night in a twenty round fight for £300, but Wall turned coward at the last moment and his backers supplied a sound boxer in his place. It was Arthur Bobbett, who was knocked out by McCarthy in the twelfth round.

Not Pauline Hall's Husband.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The story of the marriage of George B. McLellan, Pauline Hall's manager, to Miss Hall, is denounced by him as a falsehood.

TREASURER BOYER'S EXAMINATION

The Senators Decide to Hear His Case First on Account of the Illness of His Mother—The Taking of Testimony Began at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20.—A large party of Philadelphians accompanied the Philadelphia senators to Harrisburg. The party included Mayor Stuart, District Attorney Graham, Francis B. Reeves, Experts Fanuce and Brown, Chairman Van Osten, of the council committee; Attorney Rufus E. Shapley of counsel, for McCamant and Boyer, and all the accused magistrates except Neall. The magistrates came up to be investigated, and the others came up in obedience to subpoena of the senate, bringing with them the books, papers, letters and memoranda in their possession relating to the Bardsley investigation.

The Attorney General Objects.

The senate met in the senate chamber at 4 o'clock. Lieutenant Governor Watres occupied the chair. Mr. Flinn stated that when the senate adjourned on Thursday afternoon the case of Thomas McCamant had been called for investigation, but in view of the fact that State Treasurer Boyer's mother was very sick and her son was liable to be called to her bedside at any time, he moved that the Boyer case be taken up first. This brought the attorney general to his feet with the statement that the understanding with the senate committee and the counsel for the accused had been that both cases would be heard together, and with that view he had brought evidence and prepared a plan of investigation which would be somewhat disarranged if the two cases were investigated separately.

To Hear Mr. Boyer First.

Mr. Hall, Democrat, offered an amendment that both cases be taken up at once. This amendment was advocated by Messrs. Hess and Herron, Democrats. Mr. Goblin was opposed to trying the cases together, as was Mr. Grady, and on the call of the yeas and nays Mr. Hall's amendment was lost—yeas, 20; nays, 30—a straight party vote. Mr. Flinn's motion was then adopted.

To Summon John Bardsley.

Mr. Hall offered a resolution that that part of the answer of the accused which denied the jurisdiction of the senate be overruled, and declaring it to be the sense of the senate that all questions of malfeasance and misfeasance in regard to the official acts of the officers were the proper subjects of the present investigation.

Mr. Ross offered a resolution that the attorney general be instructed to use his best endeavors to secure the attendance of John Bardsley, and it was adopted.

Mr. Herron then presented the report of the senate committee appointed to confer with the attorney general and counsel. The attorney general, after saying he was here not as a prosecutor, but as the invitation of the senate merely to assist in its investigation, called for the production of the books and papers connected with the investigation of the Bardsley defalcation. The documents were brought into the senate chamber, and the attorney general called for the immediate production of the letters of William Livezy and Henry K. Boyer to John Bardsley. It was then 6 o'clock and an adjournment was taken until 8 o'clock.

Bardsley and McCamant.

Experts Vollmer and Faunce were examined to show the interest received by John Bardsley. It was shown that $202,000 were received by him in one year, of which $90,000 was for city moneys. The object of Attorney General Hensel in introducing this testimony is to show that most of the large monthly payment of interest Bardsley's bank stubs indicate that he regularly sent checks for different amounts to the sheriffs generals.

At the funeral of Mr. Menard, a member of the senate, takes place today, the senate adjourned to meet on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

THREE MEN WERE KILLED.

Terrible Explosion of an Engine Near St. Clair, Pa.

POTTSVILLE, Oct. 20.—At 6:45 o'clock last evening a terrible accident occurred at Tucker's Watch Box, a short distance below St. Clair, in which three men were killed and several injured. Mountain Ridge engine No. 955, on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, was drawing a train of empty cars up the grade when the boiler exploded, completely demolishing the engine, tearing up the tracks and doing great damage to telegraph lines and surroundings. The names of the killed are:

Charles Hunsicker, fireman, St. Clair.
Harry Wagner, engineer, Port Carbon.
Mahlon Reese, fireman, St. Clair.

Charles Bauer, brakeman, St. Clair, is fatally injured. The men were in the engine cab when the explosion took place. No cause is assigned for the explosion. The engine had just come out of the shops.

ANOTHER RAUM STORY.

A Washington Paper Says the Pension Commissioner Has Resigned.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The Post this morning states positively that the resignation of Pension Commissioner Raum is in the hands of Secretary Noble, to take effect Nov. 30.

Raum, who has just returned from Chicago, denies the story. It is also stated that ex-Governor Steele, of Oklahoma, is on his way here to succeed him.

She Says Bolton Is a Bigamist.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 20.—President William C. Bolton, president of the Bolton Dress company of Brooklyn, was married Sept. 26 last to Miss Lillian V. C. Shuler, in this city. On Friday last a well dressed woman visited the Newark city clerk's office and said that Bolton married her seventeen years ago. Bolton is on his wedding tour. Mrs. Bolton No. 1 said that she would have the couple arrested on their return.

An Aged Couple Killed.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 20.—William Huyler and his wife, an aged couple, were killed at the West shore crossing near Bergen Fields. Huyler was driving across the track and did not see an approaching train, which struck his vehicle, smashed it to atoms and killed its occupants.

A LIFE LESSON.

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have taken your doll, I know;
And your tea set blue,
And your pet house, too,
Are things of long ago;
But childish troubles will soon pass by;
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your slate, I know;
And the goal, and the play
Of your schoolgirl days
Are things of the long ago;
But life and love will soon come by;
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your heart, I know;
And the rainbow gleams
Of your youthful dreams
Are things of long ago.
But heaven holds all for which you sigh;
There! little girl, don't cry!
—James Whitcomb Riley, in Kansas City Journal.

"DON'T BE TOO QUICK."

I said this to my friend Searle, after he had been detailing to me some difficulties under which he was laboring, the first being the loss of money and the second a suspicion that one whom he very much liked was the thief.

Searle kept an establishment where he manufactured certain goods, and attached was an office, where oftentimes they were sold to transient customers, who paid in cash. This cash was always entered upon a sales-book, then put in the money drawer, whence it was taken every day on the closing of the office. Of late much of this money had been missing, and in spite of every effort to find out the appropriators, the thievery still went on.

"I am willing to suffer the loss of the money," says Searle, "though it is no small amount, nearly three hundred dollars to this time; but it is the idea that I have a thief about me, that is the trouble."

"And nobody comes about the money drawer, you say, but Dale?"

"Not a soul."

"It may be, perhaps," I answered, "that the temptation of having money always open to him has been too much of a temptation, but don't be too quick. I know you would rather lose thousands than accuse any one wrongfully."

"That is exactly what has kept me back; but still the circumstances are powerfully against him."

"Well," said, "I will tell you a little incident that occurred to myself some years ago that made a wonderful impression on my mind, and will always act towards making me give the advice I am now giving, which is never to convict on circumstantial evidence, unless there is something positive to back it."

"Soon after I commenced business I was sitting in my room one night, and counting out and sorting a large amount of money, some of which was to deposit in bank next day, and some to pay bills, etc. While I was doing this a knock came to the door, and at my response there came in an old friend and schoolmate of mine, Sam Nichols.

"This evening he came in to say that he had an opportunity of becoming cashier for a mercantile house of high reputation, and had come to me for a letter of recommendation. I was delighted to give it to him, for the position war much better than what I could offer, and was sincerely desirous of seeing Sam do well. While he was asking me this I was still busily sorting my money and laying it in different heaps about the table. Among it was one $500 bill on a New York bank, which I laid separate, intending to keep it for an especial purpose.

"I got up from the table and crossed the room to my desk, where I wrote the letter, while in the meantime Sam read one of the books that lay upon the table. When the letter was written I handed it to Sam, who, apologising for having come in on me when I was busy, and saying that he would not stop to interrupt me farther, went away, as I thought, abruptly.

"Sam was scarcely out of the house when, in putting up my money in packages, I missed the five hundred dollar bill. I jumped as though I had been shot, and instantly ran through my money again. It was not there! Then I searched the floor—it might have been blown down by the shutting of the door, for the windows were not open and no other air could have been made. No! there was no taking everything from the table and make a thorough examination. All this time there was a sickening sensation about me, and I could not bear to give up.

"When morning was about dawning I sat down and thought of Sam Nichols as a thief! I could not afford to lose five hundred dollars; but the most fearful thing for me to contemplate was whether it was my duty to make the thing known and to openly accuse him of the crime, or whether I had better bury the knowledge in my own bosom and be content with shaking him off abruptly, leaving his own conscience to tell him the cause.

"I chose the last course, and went about my business without mentioning my loss to any one, feeling all the time as though I had an unhealed wound in my breast.

"About a week after this I was almost driven crazy to hear that Nichols had got the situation for which he had applied, and that it was my letter that got it for him. The idea was a horrible one to me. What could I do now? After a day of consideration I determined on what I thought was a middle course, which was to get a friend, who, while being intimate with me, was particularly so with the house that had employed Nichols, to go to them, and while telling the story to ask from them a suspension of opinion until something more positive could be known. It was a vain idea, and I may as well have attempted to quench a burning building with a pint of water. But one week afterward I heard of the discharge of Nichols, and within a month that he had left the city, nobody seemed to know exactly how or where.

"A year passed over, and one night I was sitting alone in my room, reading, or rather attempting to read, that I might drive away a feeling of gloom that was over me, and an unpleasant recurrence to all the unpleasant things that happened to me in lifetime. Among those things that came up was that of Nichols, and having once flashed across my mind I could not seem to dismiss it. I tried first one book and then another, and finally took down from the shelves a volume of Browning that had become almost a stranger to me. The instant I drew it from the shelf I saw that something was upon the farther cover. I turned it over to the light, and quick as thought peeled off from the varnished side—my five hundred dollar bill!

"Never shall I forget the effect of that moment! It was the most terrible shock I had ever received. I saw the whole thing in an instant. I had taken down that volume of Browning upon the very night that Nichols was in the room, and that was the book he was reading while I was writing the letter. In his haste to receive the letter he had laid the book down upon the $500 bill and covered it. I, not seeing the bill, had laid the book aside, and the bill had clung to the cover, and when I had put all the books upon the shelves, that I might look for the bill, I had put this among the rest.

"This night was a longer one than that upon which I was searching for the lost money. All I thought of now was to seek Sam Nichols, if he was still alive, and do him justice. This was no easy matter, and was only accomplished after a delay of about two months, for Sam had gone off South; but when I was done, and Sam Nichols once more sat in that room with me, I told him the whole story, and implored pardon for my share in it, a pardon that was instantly granted.

"He never knew anything about it more than he saw and heard that I avoided him, and was disposed to cast him off, and he supposed the cause must be from his discharge, though he did not know for what he was discharged.

"I did the best I could for Sam Nichols, and, though I could not reinstate him in his old position, I could give him the situation I originally intended for him, and go to his employers and relate the solution of the lost money. I have never forgiven myself for my want of faith in Sam, and from that day of justication until now I have never lost sight of the chance to do Sam Nichols some good as a compensation for the injury I did him."

Searle rubbed his hands over my story and went away without a word. I did not see him again for nearly three weeks, though I often thought of the matter, and was anxious to hear of its unraveling. At last one day he rushed into my private office, with signs of high excitement on his face, and, speaking in a rapid tone, said:

"It's all out! The thief is discovered! Now who do you think it was?"

I was glad to know by his way of speaking that it was not Dale, but I did not venture to guess.

"I'll tell you the story," he said, after waiting a moment; "it will be a very short one. I found it necessary to make some alterations in the office, and I had to remove the desk, which, as you remember, connected with the wall. In so doing the drawers were all taken out, but in removing the one next the cash drawer—which has not been open for a year before—we heard the squeak of a mouse in mortal agony. We could not stop, of course, for Mrs. Mouse, and the result was that, in pulling the drawer entirely out, the lady, who proved to be the mother of an interesting family of six, was executed even unto death. In one of the back compartments of the drawer she had made her nest, and was raising her family with my money. She had stolen it piece by piece, and had only met retributive justice for the theft. I have got all back except about $60, which has been so mutilated that it is impossible to put it together. And now, my dear fellow, let me thank you for your story, for without it I should have been too quick, and would now have to regret that I called poor Dale a thief, when I really believe him as honest a man as there is in the world.—J. W. W. in N. Y. News.

Curing a Rose Cold.

Did you ever hear of rose cold? Well, there are some persons so constituted that they are affected with a violent sneezing fit when they inhale the odor of a rose, others are attacked with a sort of asthma. I knew a lady once who fainted at the smell of a pineapple, says a writer. Oh, the best way to cure it is to get away from the neighborhood of the flower, of course, but people who are liable to rose cold should always carry a vinaigrette containing aromatic vinegar, or else a bottle of smelling salts whenever they go into company during the rose season.

Would Leave It to the Court.

A short time ago an old negro was up before Justice Guerry of Dawson, charged with some trivial offence.

"Haven't you a lawyer, old man?" inquired the judge.

"No, sah."

"Can't you get one?"

"No, sah."

"Don't you want me to appoint one to defend you?"

"No, sah; I jes' tho't I'd leab de case to de jedgance ob de co't."—Quitman (Ga.) Free Press.

Decorates His Own Grave.

It is said there is a man who goes to Gettysburg every Memorial Day and decorates "his own grave." The story runs thus: "During the battle he was thought to be killed, and another soldier took his papers from his pockets. The second soldier was buried for the first, and No. 1, who recovered, goes to the place every year to keep green the grave which is marked with his own name."—Rochester Union.

Case of Miss Alcott's Stories.

Then went into Miss Alcott's sitting room one day a young woman in all the glory of a new and modish costume, of which she was unmercifully proud. Wrote upon Miss Alcott, a dress reformer of stern principles and long habit, read this frivolous young woman an impressive lecture on the sinfulness of the corset and the high heeled shoe, as in her cherished costume exemplified. "It's all very well, my child," said she, with the queer little twist of the mouth and "shake of the mane" which belonged to her especially earnest moments. "It's all very well now, when in the vicious pride of your youth you've nothing to do but prance about and amuse yourself. But when the duties and the tests of wifehood and maternity come upon you, where will you be, with your health sacrificed to your vanity? Let me emphasize my moral, ma'am, after the manner of the saintly Miss Edgeworth, by a simple tale drawn from the riches of my personal observation:

"There were once two young girls whom we will call Caroline and Sophronia. Caroline from her infancy dressed as becomes a rational female, with unconfined waist and feet shaped as heaven has ordained. Sophronia kept her waist down to eighteen inches—at what cost to herself, to my love, we will not inquire—and tilted herself aloft on French heels like those I see before me. Mark the result."

Here the speaker's voice deepened ominously, and she shook a warning finger aloft. "Both these girls married, and in due time were blessed with offspring. Caroline, the sensible, the hygienic, all but died from the ordeal, and is an invalid to this hour. Sophronia, the fashionable, the frivolous, is the mother of seven daughters, and confines to dance all night in an 18-inch corset!"

"But good gracious, Miss Louisa!" gasped her startled interlocutor, "it seems to me that tale turns out its moral wrong end so!"

"My dear," said she, her gray eyes all a-twinkle, "I realized that fact too late to change my unfortunately selected illustration. 'But,' says I to myself, 'let us be truthful. Louisa, though the heavens fall!'"—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Carlyle as a Writer.

I do not know whether I am singular in not indorsing very heartily the enthusiastic admiration of his wife's genius bestowed upon her after the death by Carlyle. In my private intercourse with her she seemed to me a bright, clever, intelligent woman; but as to any comparison between her mental powers and those of the two great geniuses of our day, George Sand and George Eliot, it was really absurdly inadmissible. She either had caught from Carlyle, or was naturally endowed with, a fine general contempt for the intellects of her acquaintance, and in her letters, I think, displays an effort at brilliancy and point quite destructive of its object.

A very small instance of this with reference to myself will illustrate this tendency: "Mrs. Butler paid me a visit," said she, "with a new gift. She has learned to keep her hand in." I was dressed in my habit, and just going out on horseback, and necessarily carried my riding whip, which I am not aware of ever practicing. Keeping my hand in in the use of) with any creature but my horse. The desire to write something smart, such as this observation of hers exhibits, seems to me unpleasant and unsuccessfully and frequently apparent in Mrs. Carlyle's letters. I wish clever people had a higher and juster respect for simple stupidity.—Frances Anne Kemble.

Save Your Finger Nails.

"You must enjoy breaking your finger nails off," said a lady to her friend, who was pulling and tugging at the heavy cord around a large parcel. "Why don't you invest twenty-five cents in a pair of pincers and keep them in your workbasket? You will find them the greatest imaginable saving of finger nails, temper and time in any nothing of cord. I used to have no end of bother in getting my parcels undone, and almost invariably hurt myself, and then got desperate and cut the cord all to pieces, but I found that didn't pay, for when I wanted a bit of twine there was nothing but odds and ends to be found.

"Finally, one day a parcel came while I was using the pincers for some other purpose, and, merely because it was the handiest thing to do, I undid the string with them. The result is that I keep a pair, indeed, three or four pairs, around the house ever since. The habit of cutting cord from bundles has its disadvantages, as when one needs a piece it involves an often unsuccessful search. Nowadays I untie all of the strings, roll them in little bundles and put them in a corner of the kitchen drawer. It has saved me many a minute of time and much vexation to be able to lay my hands on such trifling conveniences."—New York Ledger.

The Appearance of the Cossack.

"The Cossack in his village," says a Russian traveler, "lives and works like all other peasants, but he can be distinguished in a crowd of other villagers. The Cossacks and their women have straight, stalwart, wiry figures. In comparison with them the other peasants are angular, undergrown and flabby. The Cossack's face is beautiful, too, although it is somewhat colorless; but in this regard it is like the average Slav. The Russian countenance is not decorative, so to speak; it is not attractive at the first glance; you must look at it to see its comeliness. Look at the Cossack's face and you find it beautifully oval in form, with large, bold eyes of a bright blue color, with a straight, sharp nose. The whole expresses nobility and determination. It reminds one of a bold beast of prey. The beast of prey cannot easily be tamed, but it learns to submit even to the influence of love, and yields with all grace to its demands. Such is the case with the Cossack too."

Just Like a Woman.

"That's a nice cat," said a man passing the door of a small shop on Woodward avenue.

"Everybody seems to think so. Here, Tom, come and drink your milk," said the proprietor of the shop aged of the cat.

"Must have been a fine breed," said the stranger, patting Tom's sleek sides and admiring his handsome spiked collar.

"That's where you are wrong," said Tom's owner. "He was a poor little gutter snipe, as thin as a crow, and my wife saw him and took pity on him. That's like a woman, she can't think about it, but she took the kitty in and gave it fresh milk and a bath every day, and now I wouldn't take $100 for the cat. Yes, he don't for sale at any price. He's one of the family, Tom is. But I tell you, stranger, my wife don't value it now as much as she did when it was a poor, forlorn little kitten. And that is like a woman too."—Detroit Free Press.

It is said that Mme. Patti and other women of high standing on the stage preserve most carefully the boots they wore at their debut, which they consider lucky to wear on the first nights of engagements forever after.—Newark Standard.

THE FIRE LAST NIGHT.

A Fanwood Dwelling House Destroyed.—Another One Damaged.

A two-and-a-half-story frame dwelling situated at Fanwood and belonging to Mr. Charles Richardson was destroyed by fire at about half-past eight o'clock last evening. The origin of the fire could be plainly seen in this city and at about 8:45 o'clock an alarm was sounded from Box No. 15, situated at the corner of Washington and Second streets, and the department turned out. Before the apparatus had proceeded far, however, a recall was sounded.

In the meantime another dwelling house on Second avenue caught fire and the Fanwood fire department telegraphed to this city for assistance. Alert Hose Company, No. 2, responded to the call for aid. The second fire was easily extinguished, but Mr. Richardson's house, together with its contents, were destroyed.

The family was absent at the time the house caught fire. Mr. Robinson had been at Westfield and when he returned home and opened one of the doors he saw that the interior of the house was all afire. An alarm was quickly sounded, but the flames had gained too much headway.

Mr. Richardson had but recently completed the house. The fire is supposed to have started from an open fire-place in which a wood fire was burning.

The loss is estimated at about $6,500. The building cost $4,700. Col. C. R. Moore, while assisting at the fire had his overcoat badly burned.

FRATERNITY NEWS.

IVANHOE COUNCIL, NO. 1074.

American Legion of Honor Entertains State Officers.

This Society met in session last evening with a large membership present to entertain the grand officers of the State of New Jersey. Grand Commander Hilton, Deputy Grand Commander Rahaff, Grand Secretary Clinton and Grand Treasurer Durmont. Telling addresses were made by each of these gentlemen. They were enthusiastic over the advancement the Order had made in the last few years, showing by statistical reports that it was one of the most solid fraternal insurance orders in the United States; having a membership of 65,000 and not one dollar in debt; having a reserve fund of $500,000; having paid to widows and orphans over $18,000,000, and this year 1891, paid $1,000 to the members who have been in the order for five years. So satisfactory were these reports that there were many congratulatory addresses from the members of the order present.

Music and recitations were given in the course of the evening. Mr. Robert Gorton, organist, and Arthur L. Tilsworth, organist. Mr. Gorton sang—"Anchored," by Watson. The piece was beautifully rendered and received hearty applause. Then Mr. John Carney gave his side-splitting "Dutch Friends" conversation. Mother Liberty and old Jersey at her back.

At the close of the good and welfare part of the programme and the last stroke of the gavel, the entire company retired to the supper-room, where a fine collation was served by Mr. Stephenson. The company adjourned at seven p. m. smoking the pipe of peace and Good-Will, to allow the visitors from out of town time to catch the 11:30 train for home.

All were very happy over the evening's enjoyment.

THE BIENNIAL CONVENTION.

The Emerald Beneficial Societies of the State in Session in this City.

The biennial convention of the Emerald Beneficial Associations of New Jersey began in this city yesterday and is still in session to-day. The convention was called to order by President John Murray of Burlington. Seven branches were represented. Elected delegates were from Phillipsburg, Lambertville, Oxford Furnace, Florence, Burlington, South Amboy and Plainfield.

The Rev. J. J. Brady of Perth Amboy, the Spiritual Director of the Grand Division and Grand Branch, spoke in laudatory terms of the good work of the organization. The next session will take place in this city at the convention was done to the organization.

The Rev. Father Smyth, the Spiritual Director of Branch No. 8 of this city, welcomed the delegates to our beautiful city and hoped their visit would keep up the good work.

The Committee on Credentials was then appointed as follows:

Wm. Ryan, of Lambertville; William Mills, of Florence; Thomas Hurley, of Burlington, and James Hurley, of South Amboy. After the committee had reported the following officers were elected for the ensuing two years:

Spiritual Director—Rev. J. F. Brady, of South Amboy.

President John C. Sheehan of Plainfield.

Vice President—Wm. Ryan of Lambertville.

Secretary and Treasurer—T. C. Dinan of Phillipsburg.

The objects of the organization are: First, to assist and benefit members, and, second, to establish free libraries.

The convention adjourned this afternoon and the next convention will be held at Florence, N. J. This evening Branch No. 8 will tender the delegates a reception in T. A. B. Hall.

NEW ODD FELLOW LODGE.

Elizabethport's Crack Team to do the Work.

Queen City Lodge No. 226 will be the name and number of the new lodge of Odd Fellows that will be instituted next Monday evening, the 26th inst., in this city. Grand Master Howard Sutphen and the Grand Lodge at Trenton, have officially invited and requested the "Crack Team" of Elizabethport Lodge No. 116 of Elizabeth to institute and confer the Three Degrees on the sixty odd candidates.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Leonie A. Martin of Park avenue has just returned home after a pleasant season at Lake Saranac, in the Adirondacks.

Mr. David Kenney, formerly of this city but now of Bayonne City, is the guest of his son-in-law, Mr. John J. Kenney of East Second street.

Miss Lizzie Piker, formerly of this city but now of Orange, left for her home yesterday, after a brief visit with her parents and friends here.

Several members of Franklin Council, 41 Jr. O. U. A. M. of this city, will pay a fraternal visit this evening to Middlesex Council of Perth Amboy.

Mr. L. W. Serrell will give an interesting talk to young men about patents and inventions at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday evening. The admission will be free.

Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Rowland will celebrate the twenty-sixth anniversary of their marriage at their residence in Somerville next Monday evening. Many guests will be present from this city.

Mr. Chapman, the popular leader of the Melopoia, was receiving congratulations last evening, it being twenty-one trotter, "Conrad," a recent purchase, had just captured from many competitors three prizes for beauty and speed. The Globe, of Baltimore, in a half-column article gave the colt's pedigree and a brief sketch of the owner.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

WESTFIELD ELECTION.

THE VOTERS DECLARE AGAINST BOROUGH GOVERNMENT.

Some Things of Interest in This Vicinity Brought Out During the Campaign Discussion. Borough Citizens Not Required to Pay Township Taxes.

The election to decide the question of whether or not Westfield should be incorporated as a borough was held at that place yesterday. The vote resulted as follows:

Votes cast	338
For Borough Government	144
Against	257

Two ballots were rejected.

The result is attributed to the opposition of the farmers who were in the majority, and fortified themselves with the opinion of a prominent New York lawyer, residing in New Jersey, who convinced them that they could refuse to pay people of the borough pay a share of the expense of township improvements outside the borough. We give the lawyer's letter on the subject below, as a matter of general interest in this locality:

Luther Shafer, Esq., Rutherford, N. J.,

DEAR SIR:—Answering the above inquiry, I state, 1st, that our borough is entirely separate and distinct from the township and the taxes levied by special act of the legislature. Therefore, we have no rate of township taxes within the borough. Before this can be done we do not, however, pay any township tax, the act providing that we should be free from township taxes. I think, however, that in some of the borroughs of the State the act is misunderstood and the township taxes are assessed with the borough. We do consider the borough system a great improvement over the township system of government; it gives to the officers ample authority to make improvements. It is better adapted to village government, the territory being smaller in dimension, we do not have the objections of the agricultural element. The township government is for agricultural districts, but the borough government is for village districts. Our rate of school and county taxes for this year will be ascertained in about two or three weeks. If you desire, I will ascertain that year if you do not. I will remain that year if you do not. I will remain that year if you do not. I will rem

EDITORIAL NOTES

Soon the season will be here when people's noses begin to redden and their fingers begin to blnen.

A prominent lecture agent regrets greatly the mint of money that was never coined because Harriet Beecher Stowe lost her voice early and was of a retiring disposition.

Six hundred quarts of beer a year is what goes down the throat of every inhabitant of Munich. The people of that city are said to be developing a tendency to heart disease.

The first joke on record from the lips of ex-President Cleveland was heard when his new baby came. At A speech soon after the happy event he told a Democratic club that for some time past his interest had especially centered in a young person who would never be able to help the Democratic party till the prohibition against woman suffrage should be removed.

Worried Out of the World.

Charles Stewart Parnell did not murder anybody. He was never charged with embezzlement or with any kind of dishonest financial transactions. Yet for the sins he did commit he suffered a punishment compared with which the one the law metes out to a murderer is merciful. If the true story of his death were to be written it would probably be, Worried out of life. Though a man were made of iron or marble he could not endure such a storm as Parnell passed through. And Parnell was not iron or marble, but very fine grained flesh and blood, with nerves quivering at every touch.

If man be guilty of sins against the best interests of society, punish him by all means. Give him the full extent of the legal penalty. Then drop him socially, too, but drop him. Let him go out of sight and ignore him thenceforth as a member of the social world. But to hound a man as Parnell was hounded suggests the fiendishness of Indian tortures rather than Christianity. Political jealousies added to the keenness of the pursuit in his case, until it becomes altogether a tale which a humane person would rather forget. A fiend seems to possess men and women anyhow sometimes. Not the rattlesnake and the cobra can strike such deadly venom into a human creature's veins as can the tongue of scandal let loose. If we could only see ourselves from it degrading ourselves by peddling scandals!

At any rate, Parnell, the greatest champion of Ireland in his generation, is dead.

The Year of Great Crops.

It is to be hoped there is yet many another year like it before the people of the United States, but as far as we have gone 1891 stands on record as the all-round year of the greatest crops ever produced in this republic. As an instance it may be mentioned that from an area covering six counties in the state of Ohio the farmers will receive from their tobacco crop alone $1,500,000.

Of course the great crops are wheat, corn and cotton. The shortage of wheat in Europe and India has heightened as if purposely to afford a fine market to American farmers for the greatest crop in their history. While the price for wheat has not touched the high figure universally expected for it, it is sufficiently good to pay off many a mortgage and to amount for the whole country to $600,000,000. This is estimating the average price at one dollar a bushel, as the crop will reach half a billion bushels. The reciprocity treaties with Brazil, the Spanish West Indies and San Domingo will afford to our farmers a better wheat market than they ever had before on their own continent. Brazil cannot raise wheat at all and is almost altogether dependent on us.

As to corn, there will be not less than 2,000,000,000 bushels. At fifty cents a bushel this will amount to $1,000,000,000 in the pockets of American farmers. When in the history of nations were ever agriculturists so favored before? The corn, however, will not be shipped abroad to any overwhelming extent. We use the bulk of it at home to feed stock and to make into whisky and corn starch. Last year's crop was only half of what this year's will be, consequently during the summer months of the present season corn fed beef will be scarce in the markets. But it will now be plentiful, while the corn fed pork will be drives to market from the overflowing farms by the hundred thousand.

Of cotton there will be in the neighborhood of 7,250,000 bales. This will be less than the crop of last year, which was 8,000,000 bales, but greater than the yield of 1889. 7,017,707 bales, which up to that time had been the greatest the cotton states had produced. While the crop this year is not so great as last the price will be better.

Oats are expected to return $350,000,000, and the total value of the farm crops will certainly not be less than $2,400,000,000, on the whole bringing to the farmers nearly half a billion more dollars than they had last year. The price of beef cattle is also better than it was last year. For fruit of nearly every kind there never was such a year of abundance known. Farmers are accused of being chronic croakers, but it will be interesting to know what they will have to complain of this fall.

GOV. HILL AT ATLANTA.

The Grady Statue Unveiled by Admiring Southerners.

ALL BUSINESS WAS SUSPENDED.

A Very Warm Reception Throughout the South Awarded to the Executive of the Empire State—The City of Atlanta Thronged with Interested Visitors.

ATLANTA, Oct. 21.—Governor David B. Hill, of New York, delivered the address today at the unveiling of the statue of the late Henry W. Grady. Governor Hill's tribute to the great southern editor and author was an eloquent one and was heartily appreciated by the people of Atlanta. The city is packed with visitors and business was suspended today. Military and labor organizations, with the school children and the Young Men's Democratic league, participated in the ceremonies.

A Dinner to Governor Hill.

The league will give a dinner to Governor Hill in the evening, when he will respond to the toast of "Democracy." Mayor Hemphill, of Atlanta, will speak for "The Welcome of the Democratic City of Atlanta to Its Democratic Guests." Governor Northen will respond to the sentiment, "The Empire State of the South Greets the Empire State of the Union May their Democratic majorities never grow less."

Colonel John A. McCall, of New York, will reply to the toast, "The National Business: It means prosperity, and its measure of prosperity is its measure of safe, just and conservative government. It looks with satisfaction upon the ascendency of Democratic principles." General Slocum will respond to the toast, "The Veteran: Whether he be Federal or Confederate, he rejoices in a reunited country, and thanks God for the blessing of his citizenship."

Governor Hill expects to be back in New York Friday evening.

Governor Hill's Warm Welcome.

The entire journey of Governor Hill from Richmond to Atlanta was marked by evidences of enthusiasm and hospitality. The train flew through a succession of small towns, where the whole population was gathered at the depot. Word had been telegraphed down the line as to when the train would pass the various points, and that the name of David B. Hill was well known through the south was evidenced by the widespread desire of the people to see him.

Description of the Statue.

The statue of the great editor is of colossal size, being nearly 10 feet in height. It stands upon a massive block of granite which in turn rests upon a terrace with molded edges 16 feet square by 4 feet high. The terrace is surrounded by four curved seats and a handsome railing. The pedestal proper is about 11 feet high. It consists of three bases, the top one of which is molded and supports a polished die with a molded cornice, on which rests the statue of Mr. Grady. On either side of the pedestal is a projecting buttress, on which are seated two bronze statues, representing Memory and History. On the front is a panel bears the inscription, "Henry W. Grady, Journalist, Orator, Patriot," and a warm tribute to his worth and his achievements and a selection of his famous speech in which he referred to the loyalty which "knows no south, no north, no east, no west."

The Heap Will Again in Court.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Oct. 21.—The will case of Eunice R. Heap is up for a third trial. The will is contested by nephews and nieces on the ground of incapacity and undue influence, alleged to have been exercised by E. M. Will Cushman, a beneficiary. At the first trial the will was sustained, but the supreme court of errors ordered a new trial. In the second trial the jury disagreed.

Attorney R. P. Stockton Dead.

TRENTON, Oct. 21.—Robert P. Stockton, a lawyer, forty-five years old, son of Attorney General Stockton, died of pneumonia Oct. 20. Deceased was a grandson of the late Commodore Robert Field Stockton. He leaves a widow and four children.

A Bride of a Day Murdered.

TRENTON, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Archie Parks was married to-day to Samuel Ryan by Justice Abbott. Tuesday her body was found in the Sturgeon pond below the city. It is believed that she was murdered. Ryan, the aged bridegroom, has disappeared.

The Last Erie Train Out.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The last train went out of this city for Dansville and Mount Morris on the Erie. On that day the Erie privileges on the Erie and Genesee Valley railroad between Mount Morris and Dansville will cease.

The Harvard-Yale Agreement.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 21.—After a long consultation with the officials of Hampden park, the Harvard-Yale representatives have signed an agreement to play here annually for four years.

THE METHODISTS ADJOURN.

End of the Two Weeks' Session of the Ecumenical Conference.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The topic of the last day's session of the Ecumenical conference was "The Outlook." The secretary of the business committee announced that certain amendments had been made upon the memorial appointing an executive commission to look after the business of the next ecumenical conference. The memorial as amended was adopted. A resolution providing for sending a delegation to the Pan-Presbyterian council at Toronto next fall was also adopted. An essay on "Christian Resources of the New World" was read by Chancellor Edward Mayes, of Oxford, Miss. He said that south of the United States all of the New World was Roman Catholic excepting the English possessions. In the United States and British possessions the principal religion was Protestantism, with about one-seventh of the whole population Roman Catholic.

When the regular programme for the day was completed the Rev. T. B. Stevenson, of England, offered a resolution of thanks for the hospitality of the church to the citizens of Washington and the press. He characterized the visit of the president to the conference as a historical event, and he extended thanks for the great honor he had done them, as well as himself, and from St. Paul. Mr. Dean, who is a noted bicyclist, made the journey, a distance of over 1,000 miles, on his wheel. Mr. Dean will continue the trip to New York on his wheel, from which place he will sail next month for Freetown, Sierre Leone.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

What Acting Governor Bulkeley Says About the Quo Warranto Suits.

HARTFORD, Oct. 21.—Acting Governor Bulkeley, referring to the criticism evoked by his filing quo warranto suits against Judge Shipman, said:

"My position is this: I am governor of the state of Connecticut, elected with authority to continue in office until my successor is duly elected and qualified. I am waiting for such a man.

"Personally I believe him to be Samuel E. Merwin, but that when presents as an authoritative claim for this office may have it. I am not anxious to continue as governor. I want the muddle cleared as much as the next man."

The Campaign in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Messrs. Fassett and Vrooman addressed three enthusiastic Republican meetings last night on the familiar theme, the alleged corruption of Tammany Hall, and Mr. Flower attended the opening exercises of two church fairs, speaking on both occasions of the loss of the World's fair to New York.

St. John at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The Prohibitionists held a ratification meeting here last night, and ex-Governor John P. St. John was the principal speaker. He made light of the Republican fight Against Tammany Hall, saying that it was only a question of dollars and cents for one side or the other. He spoke a good word for the ninguwnp as a man who did his own thinking. Between the Democratic and Republican parties there was, he said, no difference on the tariff question, one of them being for tariff reform and the other for the reform of the tariff. As far as the Liquor question was concerned it would make no difference, he said, whether Fassett or Flower were elected.

Early Winter Dresses.

French dresses imported for early winter are new versions of the elaborate corsages and very plain skirts now in favor. Seamless waists, fanciful coats, princes gowns with corselets and bodices trimmed to suggest suspenders, or with a vest, yoke, plastron or guimpe all reappear, each with some fresh touch that makes a difference between the old and the new. Collars are again cut high, and are close rather than flaring. There are many fancy sleeves softly bouffant at the top, and odd sleeves of velvet or silk are again seen in wool gowns. But the leg o' mutton sleeves still prevail, whether matching the waist or of different material, and bishop sleeves are made wider than ever, to droop over close cuffs that are usually richly trimmed. —Harper's Bazar.

Jewelry Notes.

Elsie Bee says in Jewelers' Circular: The mosquito ornaments a new stickpin. The body is of small diamonds and the wings of tiny olivines.

Bars and buttons, double buttons and single buttons seem to share favor in sleeve buttons.

Combs gold mounted for the back hair copy antique styles and are sprinkled with diamonds and olivines.

Mantel or Easel Drape.

A most dainty and exquisite drape for a mantel or easel is shown in the cut here reproduced from Decorator and Furnisher It is of silk mull, is forty-one inches in length and twenty inches wide.

PAINTED SILK MULL DRAPE.

The ends are hemstitched and finished with beautiful silk lace three inches in width. Where the lace is sewed on five silk tassels (pale pink and green on one end and straw color and green on the other) are fastened, thus falling over the lace.

Eleven perfect pansies are painted on one end with grasses. On the other end is a most graceful spray of Rosea nigella and its leaves. Heliotrope color ribbons are used to tie this drape.

SUNOL THE TURF QUEEN

She Has at Last Trotted a Mile in 2:08 1-4.

THE REIGN OF FAMOUS MAUDS OVER

Her Great 2:08 3-4 Mile at Cleveland July 26, 1884, Has Come Down Before Sunol's New World's Record on the Track at Stockton, Cal.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 21.—The whole turf world will be electrified by the news that Sunol has trotted a mile in 2:08¼, thus lowering by half a second the world's record. That peerless mare Maud S, after reigning supreme with the exception of a single day, as turf queen for over eleven years, has at last been dethroned. The single day mentioned was on Aug. 1, 1884, when Jay-Eye-See trotted a mile in 2:10 at Narragansett park, Providence, R. I., then breaking the record of 2:09¾, made by Maud S at Chicago Sept. 18, 1880. The day following Jay-Eye-See's feat, Aug. 2, 1884, Maud S again went at the record and lowered it to 2:09¾ at Cleveland and resumed her sway. At Cleveland, too, on July 30, 1885, Maud S made the great 2:08¾ mile that until yesterday was the world's record.

Sunol's 2:08 1-4 Mile.

Late Tuesday afternoon Dr. Marvin sent Sunol over the kite shaped track here, the horse doing the mile in 2:08¼, thereby clipping a clean half second from the world's record. The weather conditions in the morning looked very unfavorable for record breaking. The day was fair and bright, but a breeze was stirring, and Marvin said he would not speed Sunol unless all conditions were favorable. About 5 p. m. the wind died out. The track was in first class condition and Marvin decided to make the attempt.

Less Nervous Than Usual.

The mare was carefully prepared, and when she came out she looked less nervous than usual. She got off at the first attempt, moving easily and gracefully. Old horsemen exclaimed that nothing could exceed the beauty of her pace. The first quarter was covered in :33½, and the same even beautiful pace was maintained to the half which all the watches marked at 1:04 flat. This looked bright for record breaking.

At the half the flying mare was met by the runner, whose presence seemed to encourage her, and she passed the three-quarter's pole in 1:36. Then Marvin began to urge her and with the runner doing his best to keep up she made the last quarter the fastest of the mile. As she rushed down the stretch for home the men were holding watches on the great test said, "she'll break the record," and they were right, for when the great young mare passed under the wire hundreds of watches clicked as they stopped at 2:08¼, half a second better than the record held for so many years by Maud S, who is also owned by Mr. Robert Bonner, the proud owner of the late queen of the turf.

Sunol's Career.

Sunol's career has ever been indicative of imperial greatness. As a 2-year-old she made the then record of 2:18, and as a 3-year-old reduced it to 2:10¾, which was the world's record for that age. Robert Bonner was one of the first to appreciate her worth. He was in thorough accord with the theory of her breeder, Leland Stanford, that a dash of thoroughbred blood was of exceeding virtue in maintaining the highest flight of speed, and as Maud S was growing old he was anxious that the world's record should be held in his stable.

He had paid $40,000 for Maud S, and in his opinion the trotter who could equal it would be worth as much. He approached the old ex-governor with an offer of $41,000, and in a moment of haste it was accepted. From that day Mr. Bonner has never ceased to proclaim his faith in the filly's ability to beat the record, and from that day never has Mr. Sanford ceased to wonder what made him sell the peerless filly that had brought so much fame to Palo Alto, where she had been foaled.

Electioneer Her Sire.

Last year, when some doubted Sunol's ability to surpass the record, Mr. Bonner intimated that he might send Maud S to further remove her own record from danger, but after consultation with Marvin he decided to send Sunol as first to essay it, and he mated Maud S to Ansel, the son of the phenomenal Electioneer. Maud S was reduced with her record undimmed and now her stable mate brings in the new one of 2:08¼.

Sunol was bred by Leland Sanford at the Palo Alto farm, in Santa Clara county, Cal., thirty-two miles from San Francisco. She was foaled April 14, 1886.

Her sire was Electioneer, and her dam was Waxana, by Geo. Wilkes. Her grand dam was Waxy, a thoroughbred out of a mare bred by Philip Swigert, the father of the present owner of the Elmendorf stock.

A Powder Mill Kills Two Men.

FARMINGDALE, N. J., Oct. 21.—One of the mills of the Columbia Powder Manufacturing company, located about three miles from here, blew up with terrific force at noon. G. A. Van Note and George Woolley, who were in the mill at the time, were instantly killed by the explosion. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

Omaha Negroes Angry.

OMAHA, Oct. 21.—The Afro-American league of Nebraska has passed resolutions denouncing the lynching of Smith, the negro rapist, as an "outrage, disclosing a vitiated state of public spirit that renders safety of life decidedly precarious."

WAS HOEY TOO LATE?

The Adams Express Company Ask Ahead of His Mortgagees.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 21.—A race against time between the Adams Express company and its deposed president, John Hoey, took place at Freehold on Monday. The company won, and its lawyers filed a lis pendens or action on Hoey's property in Monmouth county, pending the outcome of a suit on the claim that Hoey's property had been bought by money belonging to the Adams Express company. Two hours later Hoey filed the mortgages on his property.

A force of clerks is now investigating and mapping Hoey's numerous real estate transactions in Monmouth county, which work will take a week. The investigation has already disclosed that Hoey owns over 800 acres of land. There are no judgments recorded against him, and the property is mortgaged for less than one-sixth of its value.

John Hoey Talks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—In an interview John Hoey denied that he had mortgaged or transferred any of his Hollywood L. I. property or any other property to avoid the payment of any claims that the Adams Express company might have against him.

"My Hollywood property," he continued, "has never been put out of my hands, and I do not intend that it shall be. It is worth at least $1,000,000, and is encumbered by only one small mortgage of $100,000."

"How long has it been, Mr. Hoey, since you owned stock in the Adams Express company?"

"I sold out all my stock sixteen years ago. I haven't owned a dollar's worth since then. A man with whom I just had if he doesn't own stock in the concern he is with. That made no difference to me. When the people say that I have ruined Improved Hollywood with Adams Express company money they tell a falsehood."

"How do you explain the Sherburne deal, which is made the basis of the suits against you, and in which you are said to have made nearly $250,000?"

"I bought some stock in the Massachusetts express companies in conjunction with Sherburne and Spooner. Taft was the man who held it and transferred it. The first batch we bought was sold to William B. Dinsmore, then president of the Adams Express company. Mr. Dinsmore held that stock for two years, and then turned it over to the Adams. In the mean time we had secured an option on the rest of the stock, and the Adams Express company, through Mr. Dinsmore, decided that the company should own it all.

"My only sin was voting as a trustee to buy that stock for the company. But, mind you, I did not own a dollar of it. William B. Dinsmore owned it all. They try to make out that I engineered a deal by which Sherburne, Spooner, Taft, and myself sold to the company for $250,000 stock that was worth only $150,000. That is all false. That stock had been purchased by President Dinsmore and by him transferred to the company. It had appreciated largely in value after Mr. Dinsmore bought it, but it seems a good time now to jump on me and poor Spooner."

SUN AND TRIBUNE OUT.

They Have Seceded from the Associated Press.

PRESIDENT SMITH'S STATEMENT.

He Says the Trouble Between the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Associated Press Has Been Adjusted and That Leased Wires Are Working.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The New York Sun and the New York Tribune have withdrawn from the New York Associated Press, of which they have for years been members, thereby voluntarily giving up franchises that within the last two years have been each valued at $250,000. The reasons for this sudden act lie deep. The alleged motive, however, was the action of the Western Union Telegraph company, Monday night, in cutting off four wires leased by the New York Associated Press, the rentals for which had been in dispute and were unpaid despite repeated demands and two extensions.

The News Service Crippled.

The wires included the two to Washington, one to Chicago, one to New Orleans and the south and one from Washington to Richmond and Norfolk. The dispatches that naturally go over these wires in consequence had to be sent over the general wires of the company, and the news service was therefore crippled.

Two Big Papers Seceed.

The Sun and Tribune then, after cablegrams had been shot back and forth between the Printing house square offices and Messrs. Charles A. Dana and Whitelaw Reid in Europe, seceded from the Associated Press and formed a new association yesterday called the National Associated Press, with Charles A. Dana as president and William M. Laffan, publisher of The Sun, as vice president and general manager.

President Smith's Statement.

The new association will undoubtedly avail itself of the services of the United Press. The developments today will be exceedingly interesting. William Henry Smith has posted the following bulletin at the Knox building:

"The differences between the New York Associated Press and the Western Union Telegraph company have been adjusted and the leased wire system is now fully restored."

NEW YORK RAPID TRANSIT.

The New Roads Will Be Constructed Under Ground.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The rapid transit commissioners made a report to the board of aldermen in which they described and illustrated their scheme for solving the problem that has so long bothered New York.

Above the city hall the west side road will consist of four tracks to Spuyten Duyvil creek, and two tracks beyond that to the city limits.

There will be a loop around the Battery, another at the City Hall, allowing of close connections with the Brooklyn bridge and a third around Union square, forming a junction with the east road which begins there. The east side road will have four parallel tracks up to the Harlem river, and north of that to the city limits two tracks.

Under Broadway below City hall will be three tracks, and instead of having open cuts above Fifty-ninth street in the Boulevard the tunnels will be roofed over.

Carnegie to Fight the Standard.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 21.—It is said here that a route has been surveyed for a pipe line from Pittsburg to Philadelphia, and men are now going over this route securing the right of way. The cost of the line, which will have a carrying capacity of 40,000 barrels a day, is estimated at $1,000,000 and it is to be finished by March 1. Branch lines will also be laid into the West Virginia fields. Andrew Carnegie and the Mellon brothers are said to be the backers of W. L. Mellon, who will fight the Standard Oil company.

Beautiful Beatrice Breaks Jail.

READING, Pa., Oct. 21.—Beatrice Collins, the mysterious New York beauty who was in the penitentiary here serving a two years' sentence for passing counterfeit money, and John Pugh, alias John Miller, a well known thief, have escaped from jail. The woman evidently received assistance from the outside, as her cell door was unlocked by some one in the corridor. Guard Reuben Hoffman was arrested charged with aiding the escaped prisoners.

ELKINS HIS CHOICE.

The President Again Said to Have Appointed Proctor's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Your correspondent here has received reliable information that the name of Stephen B. Elkins, of the war portfolio to Stephen B. Elkins, and that that gentleman has the matter under advisement. The intelligence came from a government official who is very positive in asserting that Mr. Elkins would succeed Secretary Proctor when that cabinet officer takes the seat in the senate made vacant by the resignation of George F. Edmunds.

Mr. Elkins came to Washington Sunday, and was the guest of the president. He was said to have been summoned to the White House for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Harrison as to his assuming the secretaryship of the war department. Not long ago it was reported that the president would appoint Mr. Elkins to the position he is now said to have been offered.

Signed with Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Secretary Young, of the National Baseball league, has effectually silenced at least the rumors that the star players of the Chicago League club would be members of the American association club in that city next season by announcing the following contracts, made by President Hart, of the Chicago club, with players for next season: John P. Lady, William Sunday, A. C. Gumbert, J. J. Cooney, W. R. Wilmot, T. E. Burns, M. J. Kittredge, Thomas P. Vickery, James P. Ryan, W. F. Hutchinson, N. F. Pfeffer, William F. Dahlen and Cliff S. Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. I have found them very good as when new.
WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
WM. MCCANN,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HALL, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS MAPLE, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

LET LITTLE ONES READ.

MATTER THAT HAS BEEN CAREFULLY SELECTED FOR THEM.

Entertainment and Information, Prose and Poetry, Fun and Fact, All Delightfully Mingled so as to Surely Please All Tastes.

There was a very timid little girl among the many new pupils who applied for admission to a Brooklyn school when they opened recently. She was from the country. It was her first month of living in the city. The teacher took down the names of the new children. The little girl from the country gave her name shyly. No one heard it but the teacher. She also told her the name of the street wherein was her new city home, but when she was asked the number she hesitated. She had never heard of numbers to the houses. The houses in the country didn't have numbers. But a bright idea struck her, and she answered brightly, "If you mean the rent, we pay $10." Then everybody laughed—and the little country girl colored and was sorry she had come to the city.

MULTIPLYING SHADOWS.

How a Very Curious Effect in Shadow Pantomime is Produced.

We explain herewith a curious optical illusion called "The Multiplying Shadows" sometimes also called the witches' dance from one form in which it is presented.

A glance at our illustration will go far to explain it. A dummy figure (suppose that of a witch, riding on the conventional broomstick) is suspended by fine threads or wires on the side of the screen remote from the spectators. Behind this are ragged, one behind the other, and at right angles to the screen, a row of lighted candles. Being all in the same line, they throw one shadow only on the screen. The figure is now made to oscillate slightly, so as to impart some little motion to the shadow. One of the candles is now removed from its place in the row, and waved gently about, now high, now low, the effect to the spectators being that a second shadow springs out of the first, and dances about it on the screen. A second and third candle is then removed, and waved up and down, each candle as it leaves its place in the line producing a separate shadow. It is well to have three or four assistants, each taking a candle in each hand.

ODD BITS OF INFORMATION.

Things That It Will Do Little Boys no Harm to Know.

Licorice comes from Asia Minor, where it is found growing in great abundance all along the flat, uncultivated, and almost uninhabited lands of the rivers Tigris and Euphrates. It is a small shrub not more than three feet high, with a light foliage, and never found far from the water.

The season for collecting the roots is generally during the winter, although it is possible all the year round. When the root is first dug, it is full of water, and must be allowed to dry, a long, tedious process, often taking a year. It is then sent to Bagdad, where it is pressed into bales and shipped to London, and from there to America, quantities of it being used in this country in the manufacture of tobacco.

The black licorice stick rolls which we see in the confectionery and drug store comes mostly from Spain, and are ma of pure juice mixed with a little starch, which prevents it from spoiling in warm weather, and before packing, each stick is wrapped in bay leaves.

The word licorice means "sweet root," and is of Greek origin.

HELPING EACH OTHER.—A very quaint incident, and one worth repeating, is that of two little dogs, who, while out for their afternoon airing, became thirsty, and finding themselves near a city park fountain, decided to have a drink, but neither of them was tall enough to reach the water. So, after talking the matter over in true dog fashion—that is, by running round and round, jumping, and nodding on their hind legs, and indulging in all sorts of strange antics—they suddenly solved the problem, and in the funniest way.

One of them ranged himself under the edge of the basin, and the other, by resting his forefeet upon his companion's back, was just able to reach the water. When he had finished, he hopped down, and, taking his companion's place, allowed him to satisfy his thirst as he had done. Then they both trotted off to meet their master, who stood by in silent wonder and admiration at his pets' performance.

MICROSCOPIC WRITING.—Not long ago Joseph English of Boston, Massachusetts, wrote with a pen an entire speech containing 4,162 words on the back of a postal card. On another postal card Willis E. Bowers of Boston wrote eight chapters of the Bible which contained 301 verses or 8,238 words; while W. Frank Hunter of Topeka, Kansas, succeeded in writing the 8th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and part of the 10th chapters of St. John, or 6,301 words in all, on a space of equal size. But all these performances, remarkable as they seem, sink into insignificance when compared with that of Walter S. MacPhail of Holyoke, Massachusetts, who claims to have transferred to the back of a postal card 10,293 words. These comprise the 9th to the 20th chapters of St. John inclusive, and are written with a pen so as to be perfectly legible.—through a magnifying glass.—Harper's Young People.

Ethel Was Not Particular.

Little Ethel was in Europe with her parents. She was very fond of dogs and wanted her father to buy her one in Paris. He finally told her to wait until they went to London, which satisfied her. Upon arriving in London, as her father was going out in the morning, Ethel reminded him that he could get the dog now that they were in London. After putting her off two or three times he told her that he could not find the kind he liked. She quickly replied: "Well, then, I'll take the other kind."—Boston Journal.

HOW TO CHOOSE LACE.

The Most Fashionable Fabric Now—How to Clean It.

Point lace is never washed until after it has been worn. The makers take the utmost pains to keep it white and clean, and generally succeed in so doing. In spite of them, though, sometimes it turns yellow or gets soiled, in which case it is either chalked or lauded into whiteness. Chalk is comparatively harmless. It is easily beaten out in wearing. If it list undistorted for long, though, it injures the texture by eating the threads. Lead is simply deadly. It is rubbed into the fabric and stiffens it to the point of breaking. Besides it turns dark by contact with illuminating gas, thus spotting and ruining the lace. Before buying lace, especially a costly piece, strike it smartly against a dark colored surface and cross a thick woolen flounce betwixt the bare thumb and finger. Chalk leaves a faint mark on the wool; lead is palpable to the finger tips. If either is present in quantity let alone that particular pattern.

Lace of less than the first water can be cleaned beautifully by putting it in a glass or earthern vessel, covering it with strong white soap-suds and sunning it one or two days. Do not rub or ring it. When it looks clean rinse it in plenty of blood warm water, fold without wringing and press out the water by laying it under books between thickly folded towels. Then pull out the edge between the fingers and thumb and pin out to dry upon a bed or pillow. Never touch it with an iron. Pin it like sheets of sacrilege.

Lace curtains can be washed in the same way. Hang them to drain without wringing, starch when half dry, rubbing it in well. Cover your spare-room carpet with a clean sheet and pin out your curtains smooth and square upon it. You will save several times the cleaners charges in wear and tear, not to mention a result very much more satisfactory at all points.

George Gould's Domestic Wife.

Mrs. George J. Gould, who was a Miss Edith Kingdon, is a famous young housekeeper, says the Ladies' Home Journal. She cares nothing for society—none of the Gould do, no matter what is said to the contrary—but devotes all her time to her husband, her children and her home. She does all her own marketing, knows how to select a good joint, and herself, knows how to cook it. Mrs. Gould is the wife of the prospectively richest man in America. She has millions at her command, yet she does not employ a penny. Her husband gives her a fixed income for household expenses, and a liberal allowance each year for clothing. She keeps a little book in which is set down the sums of money she receives and spends; and once each month she balances it, pays all bills and begins a new account. She purchases every piece of clothing worn by her children, and often makes a special article of wear for them herself. Mrs. Gould is a firm believer that all wives should have a fixed allowance from their husbands for household and clothing expenses. It may be much or little, just as the husband can afford.

For Bodices.

Never use eatine as lining for a bodice which is to be tight always pain. In cutting both lining and material, see that each piece has the waist-line straight across the goods, so that the back will pull firmly in a close, even line around the figure. If the armholes is large in the back make alterations in the side pieces. In tacking lining and material always keep the lining the looser of the two, and below the waist-line downward pull the material down until, though material and lining are cut exactly the same, the material is fully a quarter of an inch longer than the lining. When the figure is thin the front of the shoulder should be strained in tacking to the back, and the curved side piece should be held a little more tightly than the back to avoid wrinkles. A very important matter in the lining of a bodice is the boning. The Prussian binding, used as a casing, should be thin and put on slightly full. The whalebone should be fastened at the bottom first, then push down hard and fasten at the top and also at the waist.

The Fall Hair Color.

"Reddish brown hair will be worn this fall," said the proprietress of a Baltimore hair-dressing establishment whose opinions are regarded as decrees.

Glossy, well-groomed braids of a rich reddish brown color will be coiled around the shapely heads of Baltimore women who wish to be in fashion, says the Sun of that city. Bleached hair is entirely out of favor, and with it all the dry, chippy, straggly effects that have been popular so long. A color and tint will be so prepared which will bring the color of the blonde locks back to the desired color. The liquid is put on with a small brush, drawn across a few strands at a time, from the roots to the ends. The day after the varnish is put on the hair is washed, and the color is then permanent, or at least for so long as Dame Fashion decrees that reddish brown is to be the favorite color.

Trimmings In Fashion.

In Paris the manufacturers are making quantities of gold and colored spangles, which are used to trim portions of fantasterie trimmings. A new cape trimming for the coming season shows two broad square front pieces reaching down to the middle of the waist, showing flowers made from small beads. This set is trimmed all around the edges with square-cut jets. The front is embellished with long bead fringes with intermingled ovoid beaded moulds. On the sides are five rows of long strings of large jet balls instead of sleeves.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Some Old Recollections Revived and Duly Related.

"I see," said Mrs. Bowser, as she sat reading the paper the other evening, while Mr. Bowser was trying to dig a peg out of his shoe—"I see that another Brooklyn man has run away and left his wife."

"Has, eh? Well, I don't wonder at it," replied Mr. Bowser.

"Did you read the item?"

"No, but I know how it all happened. He found out that he couldn't take a bit of comfort in his own home, and he left it. No one knows the misery that poor man suffered before he took that step."

"It doesn't say he was unhappy."

"Of course not. No husband ever gets justice, to say nothing of pity. I'll bet he suffered a thousand deaths before he walked away to die in some lonely spot by his own hand."

"Well, dear, you'll never be driven away by any act of mine," she said, as she went over and kissed him.

"We-ha! in thunder are are you doing?" shouted Mr. Bowser, as he dropped the shoe and sprang up.

"Why, I kissed you."

"Well, I don't want any one blowing into my ears or spitting on my chin! What struck you all at once?"

"There was a time, Mr. Bowser—there was a time when"——

"When what?"

"When you said that if I would kiss you you would be the happiest man in the whole world."

"Never! Never even hinted at such a thing! I wasn't that sort of a noodlehead."

"Mr. Bowser! Why, there was for three months, while I was waiting to make up my mind to marry you, that you said you could hardly live from day to day!"

"Waiting! You waiting! Well, that is cool! That tickles me—ha! ha! ha!" he shouted, as he held his sides.

"Yes, waiting."

"Wy—ha! ha! ha! you said 'yes' so mighty quick you bit your tongue in doing it! The idea of me pining and wasting away because I feared you would say no!"

"Do you remember the pet name you used to call me?" she asked.

"Pet nonsense."

"You called me your red wild rose."

"Red wild pigweed! Are you getting soft in the head, Mrs. Bowser?"

"It seems curious to me," she continued without noticing his sarcasm, "that when a young man is courting a girl no one can make him believe that she is not a perfect angel. He can't work days nor sleep nights for thinking of her, and the sight of her a mile away sets his heart to beating like an engine."

"It does, eh? It might in the case of a spoony young noodlehead, but it wouldn't with a sensible fellow. I never lost any sleep on your account."

"Nearly all your letters to me were dated anywhere from midnight to 4 o'clock in the morning, and"——

"Never! Never once put a letter except in the afternoon, when I hadn't anything to do and wanted to use up half an hour's time," replied Mr. Bowser.

"And every one of them speaks of how lonely you were, and with what joyous anticipations you looked forward to your next call."

"Lonely! Joyous anticipations! I'd be apt to be lonely when there were a dozen or more mighty good looking girls after me, wouldn't I?"

"But in a few brief years after marriage how the average husband does change!" observed Mrs. Bowser, as if speaking to herself.

"Yes, that's it. You hunted me down and got me to marry you, and now you are trying to make my home happy. If you are feeling badly why don't you go and make yourself some catnip tea?"

"Do you remember that Fourth of July evening when we sat on the verandah?" she asked.

"I shall always remember what you said that night and how much the situation affected you."

"Affected me! What on earth are you talking about?"

"You took my hand in yours, Mr. Bowser, and you asked me to please try and learn to love you."

"Never! If you'd swear to that on sixteen family Bibles I wouldn't believe it."

"You said that life was but a dreary waste to you before I crossed your path, and"——

"I never did—never! never! never" he shouted as he sprang up. "No one but you ever charged me with being an idiot or a lunatic!"

"Mr. Bowser, didn't you say that if I didn't marry you you'd kill yourself?"

"No!"

"Didn't you once show me some baking powder in a pill box and tell me it was strychnine, and that you'd take it if I married any one else?"

"Never! Never cared two cents whether you married me or not!"

"And you deny that when father came out one evening and threw you off the stoop and told you never to come back that you wrote me you"——

"Threw me off the stoop! Your father! By the great hornspoon, but this is too much, Mrs. Bowser! Threw me! I'd like to have seen the whole caboodle of your relations throw me off a stoop!"

"Perhaps you don't remember how you used to compare my eyes to stars and tell me that it would be like one effort of your life to make me happy?"

"Eyes! Stars! The idea of my talking any such bosh! I came home expecting to spend a happy evening in the bosom of my family, and you're gone and knocked it all over! That's the way with the tarnal women—always kicking and complaining about something."

"There was a time when you used to pet me, Mr. Bowser."

"That's it. Keep right on harping on that same old string! If a husband don't tells his wife forty times a day that she's his shining star she's ready to kick and make his home miserable. I may be driven out any day now. I've seen it coming for the last two years, but I was helpless. I'm going to lock up and go to bed. Good night, Mrs. Bowser!"—M. Quad in New York World.

What Keeps Women Young.

A woman is happy just in proportion as she is confident. The sun has a way of changing the spots upon which it shines. Especially is this true of our land, where one is up today and down tomorrow, and vice versa. The most successful is he who trusts in a tomorrow, but never looks for it. To sit down and wish that this might be, that that would be different, does a woman no good. It does her harm in that it makes her dissatisfied with herself, unpleasant to her friends, and makes her old before her time. Happiness is not always increased in proportion to enlarged success. This may sound like an old saw, and I think it is, but there is a world of wisdom in many of the old proverbs. Content. Contentment is a wonderful thing to cultivate. There would be fewer premature old women in the world if it was given more of a trial and it became a more universal quality in womanhood.—Edward W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

—The largest shipment of goods, ever received in one day by any house in Plainfield, was received yesterday by Van Emburgh & White. They received by freight sixty-seven cases of goods.

—The Somerset County Prohibitionists have filed a petition with the County Clerk containing over 300 names. This will entitle them to name a candidate for Assembly, as the law requires that such petition must be filed with at least 200 names.

—A quartette from Princeton College will sing at the men's meeting to be held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., in the First Baptist church, Sunday at four p. m. The quartette, who is a session and a member of the University Glee Club, will sing a tenor solo.

—A mending department is the latest novelty in connection with the Woman's Exchange in this city, were, in addition to the furnishing of home-made bread, pies, preserves and other wholesome goods, individual and family mending will be done quickly and at reasonable rates.

—It is only about two weeks before the gunning season for quail and rabbits opens. Of course the usual quantity of New Yorkers will be out to shoot before the season opens. They should all be prosecuted. Let all true sportsmen endeavor to see that the law is not violated.

—Last evening, Branch No. 8, Beneficial Society of this city, entertained the delegates who attended the biennial convention which was held here Tuesday and yesterday, with an evening sociable, which was held in T. A. B. Hall. Everybody apparently enjoyed themselves.

—Some private coachmen either through ignorance or carelessness make it a habit of stopping their vehicles on crosswalks, thus compelling pedestrians to walk around the wagon. When the police see they order them off the walk, but the policemen have something else to do besides watching careless drivers.

ROOM FOR SEVEN.

Another Chance Offered to Join the Class in Music.

A meeting was held in the Unitarian church last evening to form a class in music. The number of members is limited to a certain figure. There are but seven vacancies. The class will be composed of both ladies and gentlemen and will be taught by that successful teacher in music in the public schools, Prof. T. E. Hazell.

The first meeting for practice was to have been held to-morrow evening, but as the ladies of the Unitarian church are to give a tea then, the class will take its first lesson Friday, Oct. 30. Until then names will be received for enrollment as members by the leader, Prof. T. E. Hazell and the secretary, Prof. F. G. Wieland.

Those members not wishing to sing in the choir of the Unitarian church will be charged a small sum for the course of lessons.

THE SEWERAGE SCHEME.

"WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?"

That Is What the Tweed Ring Said, And Now We Are in the Same Fix Ourselves.

The Tribune of yesterday truly says:

"Plainfield's Democratic autocrats, the Big Six, dropped another big plum into J. M. Low's pocket on Monday night. They granted to him the sewer franchise, and as usual got nothing for the city's interests. The Republicans to a man voted against the measures, that has placed this city in no enviable position. The contract which Low, aided by the Big Six, has made with the city, has been condemned by every official expert who has looked into it. It gives Low an opportunity of placing into operation any makeshift of a sewerage works, while the city authorities can do nothing. One of the provisions of the sewer contract is that Low shall also have the water franchise."

Of course our only salvation is in the Mayor's veto and an appeal of the citizens to the Supreme Court. It is a question whether the Mayor can be compelled to sign a contract which his judgment disapproves as pernicious and dangerous to public health.

He has already seen the vicious nature of the scheme, and it is the patriotic duty of every citizen to oppose the schemers tooth and nail, or it will prove a sorrowful thing for the city.

CHICKEN THIEVES AT NETHERWOOD.

Michael Uhdal's Hennery Robbed Tuesday Evening.

A short time ago two chicken thieves who were arrested in this county and convicted were sentenced to long terms in State Prison. Their incarceration, however, does not seem to prove a warning to others of their type. Last Saturday night thirteen chickens were stolen from the hennery in the rear of Mr. A. G. Vogeller's meat market on West Front street. The police have been unable to obtain any clue to the identity of the thieves.

Mr. Michael Uhdal of Netherwood is the last victim. Mr. Uhdal is the owner of some valuable game fowls which he prizes very highly. Tuesday afternoon two young men called at his home and inquired of Mrs. Uhdal whether she did not want to sell some game chickens. Mrs. Uhdal told them that she did not know, as her son was not at home. The young men then left, but who is a secret as yet. Mr. Uhdal will endeavor to find out more was thought of the matter. About eleven o'clock that night the family heard an unusual noise in their hennery. One of the girls raised a window and inquired who was there. She received no answer, but the noise ceased. Early next morning two young men leaving the place with several chickens in their hands. The next morning the family missed three of their most valuable game fowls. The police have been notified.

In view of the fact that the platform adopted by the recent Sussex County Democratic Convention should have read: "We endorse the administration of Governor Leon Abbett, and family, and emphatically express, etc."

Another Concern in Trouble.

The National Custom Clothing and Merchandise Company, in which several persons in this city are financially interested, is now in trouble.

A large number of certificates are held by persons in this city and they are beginning to feel that they are not right. The Elizabeth office is closed up and its agent has made himself scarce for the time being. People who have called attempting to withdraw from the concern have been baffled.

The Victim of the Runaway.

Peter Kane, the boy who was so seriously injured at the time that the horses attached to Higgins' stage ran away, has so far recovered as to be able to walk out. It required fourteen stitches to close up the gaping wound which was inflicted in the forehead by coming in contact with a stone when he was thrown from the stage. Yesterday Dr. Snowball, who has been attending him, withdrew the silver threads, the wounds having healed up.

Speaker Bergen's Opponent.

The opposing Assembly candidate to the speaker of the last Assembly, James L. Bergen, is George A. Dilts, of Raritan and some Somerset county people think Mr. Dilts will make a winning run. He is young, popular and a "hustler."—Trenton Times.

Mr. Dilts is a brother to the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, the popular pastor of the Park avenue Baptist church.

The Van Zandt Will Admitted to Probate.

The VanZandt will has been admitted to probate. The case was heard by the Orphans Court at Elizabeth yesterday. Mrs. VanZandt had filed a caveat against the will on the grounds of undue influence and want of testamentary capacity, but at the hearing the evidence satisfied her counsel that she could not succeed and the contest was dropped. Craig A. Marsh and J. R. Coward were for the will and W. K. McClure against it.

AMID SILENT COMPANIONS.—V.

A Plainfielder's Critical Observations on Poets and Poetry.

Having thus ascertained in the four preceding essays that the purity of classic poetry consists in the prevalence of beauty, of expression, of conscience and high morality and genius, of great beauty of soul and of felicitous imagination, it is easily deducible that the radiating and central point is the soul. The soul in its purity is lightsome, not gloomy as the over-pious and degenerate wish to imply, but full of light and strength, full of that sublime wisdom which is a mystery even to the wisest. Imagination has its worth in poetry, and Wordsworth judged all poetry by the quality of its imagination, as did also Arnold and Lowell, yet imagination plays a minor part when the soul makes its claim. In times past, imagination has been termed the soul of poetry, but the idea that imagination is the just and only test loses point in the light of a noble belief that the soul is the fount within us. The time has come when the soul is recognized by the brain as the superior power behind the throne of the mind, and that the mind in understanding and seeking to fathom truth and beauty, must be guided by the higher instincts of the soul. Without the soul the mind is profane; great thought arises from within and flows outward. Without the soul poetry is weak, the life-blood of thought does not flow red and ruddy, thought loses all its freedom, for the will of man is never stronger than the soul within him. Saint Francois de Sales used to say to the nuns who asked his leave to go barefoot, "Change your brains and keep your shoes."

Life is best considered as an irresponsible convulsive contamination of bodies, but intellect makes it a renewal of dead thought; culture makes it an exchange of that revived dead thought; and above all the soul of genius makes it a mingling of the human Hosea-seeking, for unsomuch as we reverence the great, the pure, the divine and beautiful, do we gather about us the air-built domains filled by the imagination, made permanent by the enduring soul of truth. The soul in poetry becomes poetry permanent; nor are souls at first misunderstood, doomed for oblivion, for

"God sends his teachers unto every age
* * * * *
With revelations fitted to their growth," yet it may be that those misunderstood souls may in later ages find their interpreters. It is so among all men, but the duty of the poet is to let all light flow into his soul and flow out again, and to allow that part of the Great Unslumbering within him to make his soul permanent, for the soul in thought makes knowledge wisdom—

"stern sorrow's patient child,
And empire over self, and all the deep strong charities that make men seem like gods"

it makes the artist a moralist and a teacher of men.

As in all else, so in poetry, many are called but few are chosen: many read poetry, but few feel the pulse of its great radiant spirit, incomparable to aught else in the world of man, and in many only being greater by being of all things divinest. No man can boast of his soul's safety; no man can say his soul is free from corruption, but in all instances, in all criticism of what is just and noble and beautiful, we must look to the soul. Purity alone should be the standard, and that which is least evil must be given the laurel. Plato's pure, exalted soul still shines into the minds of so few that they who may be truly called Platonists should be accorded high place, but his soul has been shining these twenty centuries with its ever steadfast light. Emerson truly says the mind revives the Past and embalms it. Talent is boisterous, exaggerative, self-important; genius is strong, gentle, silent, sure of its critical superiority within itself, ever eager for absorption of more truth and great and pure thought, that the more it has the more it may give.

We say we live when we exist for mere purposes, when the outward and visible worldly purposes,—yet men do die for the success of an idea, and they are heroes; and men do suffer for the truth, and they are like Job and Dante. We see, we feel, we breathe, we eat, but the soul is not interested; noblest souls die of starvation, for the soul seeks its own other in a natural sphere where to itself it is untrammelled by any flesh, which is its carnal home, but if it finds not in that other a companion soul, its hunger pinches and its death is quick. Books of genius and particularly poetry aid the soul in its flight, yet many a soul cannot arise above bdoks. The Jack and the Beanstalk romance is no miracle, for the soul exists daily.

Poetry is the voice of the soul; and insomuch as the soul is the purest essence of purest existence, so is that poet whose great soul makes permanent the highest truths ever to be accorded one of the Lights of the world, for

"The gods talk in the breath of the woods,
The talk in the shaken pine,
And fill the long reach of the old sea-shore
With dialogue divine.
And the poet who overhears
Some random word they say,
If the fated man of men is he Whom the ages must obey."

Greek art and Greek poetry, the most unadorned art and poetry of all time, will remain classic; but there is a lack of surface warmth and color which to this century seems affected and devoid of soul. poetry is great in what it suggests. This is partly due to its being unadorned (and beauty unadorned is adorned the most), and partly to the profuse styles of poets and artists of these times. The French are likened to the Greeks in these respects, but without their destination of fullness of soul and absence of it.

The Greeks, in their purity of form and color and expression are a distinct classic,—because they adored art in all things, uniting the morals because they are the virtues of art—and their renown will not be succeeded by the warmer tones of Italian or Teutonic or English Elizabethan or Victorian eras,—they will never be disturbed from their "peake of Parnasse." They are pure in form and color and expression, they are great in morals, in statesmanship, in all forms of thought, but our own compartments must go forth to warm their coldness. This coldness, this absence of visible soul, the French have copied, believing it to be the true spirit of all arts. It is not. What was a major fault of the Greeks is now the minor fault of the French. Soulful feeling in all art, in all literature, must be the all-powerful power behind the throne of the mind wherein lodge the germs of the genius of men like Plato, Homer, Æschylus, Shakespeare, Dante, Chaucer, Spenser, Tennyson, Emerson, Lowell, Browning. Their souls have made their works permanent; and as long as we have the Iliad and Hamlet and the Faerie Queene and the Divine Comedy and In Memoriam and the Rhodora, and Pippa Passes, poetry will be understood by the few and scoffed at by the many. But it is its own calm and patient spirit which will carry it on through the breaches in many men's minds, and its pure light and sweet charm and influence will raise many a soul above the shock of men into an ether wherein only that which is divine may enter.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. Peter Varian, formerly of this city but now of Orange, spent yesterday with friends here.

At the home of the bride's parents in New Market, yesterday afternoon Miss Carrie Schenck of that place and Mr. Edward G. Crowell formerly of this city, but now of Port Jervis, were united in marriage by the Rev. Theodore B. Morrison, pastor of the methodist Episcopal church in this city performed the ceremony. The happy couple went to Boston on their wedding tour. They will reside at Port Jervis.

Miss Mary Quinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Quinn, and John A. McNally, were married on Tuesday afternoon at St. Mary's church, the Rev. P. E. Smith officiating. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march. The bride leaning on the arm of her father, proceeded by her attendants, was met at the altar by the groom. The bride was attired in a gown of white faille en train, and wore a veil fastened to her hair with a spray of orange blossoms. In her hand she carried a beautiful white ivory prayer-book, the gift of the groom. Miss Margaret Geraghty was maid of honor, and Miss Sara Geraghty brides-maid. Both wore gowns of cream-colored India silk, trimmed with chiffon, and carried bouquets of white roses and ferns, and yellow chrysanthemums, tied with yellow ribbon. Mr. Frank McNally, brother of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Plainfield avenue. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns and Autumn leaves. Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Newark and Boston. The presents were numerous and valuable. The happy couple took an early train for Pushaw Lake, where they will remain a few days, and then proceed to Washington to spend the remainder of their honeymoon. On their return they will for the present reside with the parents of the bride.

The Duckworth Children Matter.

Mrs. Keating yesterday through her counsel, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., applied to the Orphan' Court of Union county for the guardianship of the Duckworth children. The motion was opposed by Messrs. Jackson & Codington, who asked the court to refer the matter in order that testimony touching the case might be taken. The court thereupon after hearing argument of counsel referred the matter to George T. Parrot, Esq., Surrogate of Union county.

That Petroleum Explosion.

The reports from Martinsville concerning the fatal explosion of a barrel of petroleum there have been greatly exaggerated. Up to yesterday only one of three sons of Mr. Andrew Lapo had died from his injuries.

The oldest boy, who thrust a burning paint brush into a pail of petroleum, thinking it was water, will recover. The youngest boy still lies critically ill, and if he recovers he will be a cripple.

The Escaped Prisoners.

Acting-Captain of Police Lynch of this city a few days ago received ten portraits of prisoners, who escaped from jail in St. Louis a few weeks ago. Some of the prisoners were charged with murder, others with grand larceny, and others with highway robbery. The accompanying circular gives a description of each prisoner and offers a reward of $50 each for their capture.

A Broken Axle Did It.

A coal train was broken into kindling-wood last night on the Jersey Central at Bound Brook. It was running at a high rate of speed when a broken axle caused a car to jump the track and thirty others followed it into the wood-pile, most of them being smashed. The tracks were blocked for several hours.

The Victim of Poor Walks.

The funeral of Mrs. Giddis, who died at her home on Pearl street, North Plainfield, Monday morning from lockjaw, caused by having run a nail in her foot while walking along that thoroughfare took place from her late home yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. Interment was made in evergreen cemetery. It will be remembered that at the time of the accident Mr. Mrs. Giddis was hurrying home to prepare her husband's dinner. The latter is an employe of Mr. P. M. French.

The Case Adjourned.

The case of the City Treasurer vs. Cornick Caufield was put over for trial in the Supreme court this morning. Caufield is charged with fracturing Dominick Duffy's jaw in two places while in a fight a few weeks ago. Duffy was unable to appear and the case was adjourned over. Duffy is Caufield's brother-in-law.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What They Think of Us.

If there are any two great moral engines that ought to be in sympathy and work together it is the press and the pulpit. It is always of interest therefore to know how they regard one another. What the press thinks of the pulpit is not easy to be gathered. What part of the pulpit thinks of the press we learn from a session which the Methodist ecumenical at Washington devoted to us.

At that council Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, of London, read a paper called "The Religious Press and the Religious Uses of the Secular Press." He made at first the very flattering admission that the daily press was the greatest engine in the world, and had become so subtle, out the aid and blessing of the church. In truth, the church must now face the fact that this great engine was in the hands of men who are in some cases indifferent to the church, and in others "absolutely full of hatred for it." This last seems a very sweeping assertion indeed. Why should editors hate the church? Their busy lives are full to overflowing with their work of giving the world all the news and defining public opinion, as Mr. Hughes himself would say. Editors have to work so steadily that they rarely have time to hate anybody or anything, least of all the church. They see so much of the underside of human life and affairs that they are apt to have a grand contempt for humbug and to become skeptical about claims to disinterested pure goodness, but that is certainly not their fault, and least of all is it a reason for their leading the Christian church. One wonders where Mr. Hughes got his facts and figures for this statement.

Mr. Hughes thought perhaps the saying might be true that the daily press had more influence than the pulpit. For this reason he thought the pulpit ought to cultivate the press more. Journalism enlisted on the right side would be an incalculable power in the service of God. Well, editors are quite willing to meet preachers half way in being a united moral engine. Editors, in common with all good people, devoutly hope that the prophecy uttered by Mr. Hughes may prove true, that the day of the coming of the kingdom of heaven on earth is at hand. But one thing they may be permitted to say in their own defense with due meekness: The harmony for which Mr. Hughes hopes between the two great moral forces will not come any the sooner for ministers standing in their pulpits and denouncing the secular press as the representative of the evil one on earth.

CARLES ON THE STAND

Why He Objected to a Marriage Settlement.

TOO MUCH LIKE BUYING A HUSBAND

His Says Lawyer Stillman Fled Proposed Contract—It Became Mrs. Searles Had Said She Wished Some One to Look After Her Property.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 22.—That the Searles will case has not been settled as reported was evidenced by the resumption of the hearing. Edward F. Searles took the stand. When asked why Timothy Hopkins had not been notified before Nov. 5 of the proposed marriage, he said he never dictated to Mrs. Hopkins anything in regard to her son. He first heard of the marriage settlement from Mrs. Hopkins. "Did you ever authorize the communication to Timothy Hopkins that you would release any claim to her property in case he married?" asked Mr. Burley.

"I think it was, because Mr. Stillman was to go to California and look up the property before the deeds were made."

Mr. Harley then called for the letter received at Newton with the deeds. Witness said that he had found it in his desk at Methuen. As he recalled it Mr. Stillman had been sent to California to investigate the affairs. The letter from Mr. Stillman was read and gave a reason for the deeds.

MRS. HOPKINS-SEARLES.

that as under the marriage settlement the title was to her at once it was not the insured over in case of loss by fire it might be troublesome to collect the insurance, and the writer had a repugnance to recording the marriage settlement as would stimulate public gossip.

Stillman Proposed the Copartnership.

There was also a long explanation of matters relative to the Byron Field transaction to the Washington building and The Mail and Express.

On April 15, 1889, Mr. Stillman wrote that he had got rid of her interest in The Mail and Express, and they ought to thank Providence that it raised up men with more money than brains to relieve them of their sad investments.

He stated that Mrs. Searles could, without trouble, receive an income of $60,000 per year, and with care for 20 years that would be doubled. On the return from Europe Mr. Stillman followed them to Methuen, and he there had a consultation with Mrs. Searles.

Witness knew that Mrs. Searles had said that she wished to arrange some plan whereby Mr. Stillman could manage her affairs. At the time of her marriage Mrs. Searles had said that she had understood that her property was in peril and wished to go to California to look it up. The first idea of the copartnership witness supposed came from Mr. Stillman, growing out of her expressed wish that some arrangement would be made to manage her business affairs. Witness had confidence in the parties who drew the copartnership papers, which he had read, but endorsed a mistake in the substance of it was, and so signed it without reading it.

About $2,000,000 for the Lawyers.

Witness did not understand that under the copartnership he was to turn over any property acquired from others than his wife. He knew that property was sold in California and that there was some profit from his wife, while these deeds were unsecured. He did not understand that these lawyers were to get, in any event, $50,000 a year, but understood that they were each to have 5 per cent. of the income, and thought that was also his wife's understanding. The number of the marriage contract trusteeship was never settled. If the property was worth $30,000,000 it was giving these gentlemen $2,000,000 for services rendered under the copartnership.

Tom Was Living in Style.

In the afternoon session the will of Edward F. Searles, dated Nov. 22, 1887, was produced. This will gave a sum sufficient to yield an income of $10,000 to no mother during her life. At her death this sum was to be set apart for a mission school for boys of the Episcopal church. The residue of the estate was left to his wife, Mary F. S. Searles, 1885. His will was a codicil appointing Mrs. Searles, Thomas Hubbard and Thomas H. Hubbard as executors. This was dated June 18, 1888. Then Mr. Burley called for letters written by Stillman & Hubbard to Mrs. Searles. There was a letter book containing copies of letters between Mr. and Mrs. Searles in March, 1887, and March 12 last.

The first letter read was dated in San Francisco, Feb. 11, 1888, and was addressed to Mr. Searles. It was from T. E. Stillman, and in it he states that Mrs. Searles' property at that date was about $60,000,000. The income was stated to be $1,500,000 annually, and Mrs. Searles had a right to draw it all for her own use. Mr. Stillman stated that Tim was then living at Sherwood Hall. The labor bill on the place was about $18,000. He stated as the first thing then he needed an income of at least $30,000 per year to pay running expenses.

JUSTICE FOR THE AMERICAN HOG.

France's Action Looks Favorable and Italy Has Relented.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The action of the tariff committee of the French senate in recommending a duty of twenty-five francs per 100 kilos on salted meats of all kinds imported from the United States is regarded as an official declaration for the purpose to lift the embargo from American pork. Secretary Rusk expresses the opinion that the committee of the French senate will agree in conference with the committee of the chamber of deputies to the rate fixed last session by the chamber of deputies. According to that rate there is a sliding scale, fifteen francs being the minimum and twenty francs the maximum. The action of the senate committee Tuesday was, he thinks, simply a proposition to raise the maximum. The fixing of the minimum will be left to the cabinet. And this rate, the secretary believes, will be twenty francs.

"If I am right," he said, "the duty will be about seventy-five cents less than the duty fixed by Germany."

The secretary has hopes that the rates of Germany and later of the others will be the same for one year before lowered. The next country after France to raise the embargo is expected to be Austro-Hungary. Overtures have already been made to the country by the agents of Emperor Francis Joseph.

The Italian Pork Rumor Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Mr Whitehouse, charge d'affaires of the American legation at Rome, has cabled his authority to state that the Italian government had removed the restriction against swine products accompanied by certificate of inspection. The decree against the importation of live swine is still in force.

HOEY HAS PLENTY OF PROPERTY

His New Jersey Realty Exceeds the Mortgage by Over $1,250,000.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 22.—County Clerk Haight's searchers have cleared up all titles of John Hoey's property. The mortgages against his property aggregate $257,000. The property, including the furniture and brick-brac in his country mansion, his cottage hotel and cottages, is worth at least $1,500,000. One deed to Mr. Hoey is from Gould, another from Helen Gould. All of Mr. Hoey's titles are sound. He gave the mortgage for $100,000 now held by the Adams Express company. There are no chattel mortgages on file.

Hoey Means to Fight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—It was reported that John Hoey had negotiated a loan which would place him in a position to satisfy the claims of the managers of the Adams Express company against him and lead to an abandonment of all litigation. The rumor doubtless rested upon the fact that Mr. Hoey has practically arranged to have the $100,000 loan on part of the Hollywood property, for which the Adams company is secured by a mortgage, taken up by the Mutual Life Insurance company. This action indicates that the deposed president of the Adams Express company is not in a humor to compromise, but is prepared to fight the formal fight against the men who turned him out of office.

Novelties for Little Girls.

White frocks are made up piped with blue, red or some other color, having white revers and full frills, the bosque pointed. A kilted skirt, with a bretelle plain in the front, has been adapted to girls, made in blue serge tucked or in camel's hair, worn with a white guimpet and a full shirt, with the collar deep and turning upward. Some new washing bodices are plaited like a Swiss jacket, the collar cut horseshoe shape, a band around the waist and at the cuffs.

Capital little cloaks for girls under thirteen of fawn cloth, with deep Jaeger collars, deep capes and the fullness stitched down to the figures at the waist. Long caped cloaks are also made with plaited flounces, and the hood with a plaited frill form, finished off with frilling, are as little cumbersome as a cloak of any kind can be.

Rings for men, with seals like checker boards, are observed. The squares are sometimes filled with diamonds and sapphires enmeshed in the gold.

The Afternoon Tea Table.

Among the latest novelties and fads is the afternoon tea table, which is a most attractive piece of furniture. It can be found in all the Fourteenth street stores, and among home furnishing goods. It varies in price from three to ten dollars, and is found in many designs and styles.

The one shown in the illustration here reproduced from The Decorator and Furnisher is of rattan and white, and has the end shelves on brackets at the sides for plates. The cost of one in that style is about eight dollars. It is covered with a snowy luncheloth of damask, which is beautifully fringed. On table are found a teakettle over an alcohol lamp, a chocolate pot, a sugar bowl and creamer of Royal Worcester ware, six after dinner coffee cups and saucers of handsome china, some plain and others decorated, and ten cunning souvenir spoons from St. Augustine, Jacksonville, Fla., Charleston and other points.

Standing in a corner of the back parlor, it presents a most cozy and delightful picture to drop in for or friend coming in from a walk or drive.

Mr. Parnell's Will.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—It is announced that Mr. Parnell made a will in favor of Mrs. O'Shea before he married her, but the marriage annulled the will and, therefore, he died intestate. Mrs. Parnell is entitled to half the income of the residue of the real estate left by Mr Parnell.

Shot by Former Reporter.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Rasmus Morry, formerly a reporter, forty years old, shot Annie Ward, twenty-eight years old, at their lodgings last evening. Morry then shot himself, but only succeeded in inflicting a painful wound. The woman's injuries are serious.

THE TREASURER TALKS.

Henry K. Boyer on the Stand at Harrisburg.

HE TRUSTED MUCH TO LIVESEY.

Proceedings of the Senate in Its Investigation of the Charges Against Messrs. Boyer and McCamant—Philadelphia Citizens Anxious to Hear from Foster.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 22.—State Treasurer Boyer was subjected by the senate to a rigid examination and largely on his connection with the drawing of the Philadelphia school warrants for $620,000 and the delivery of his check for that amount to John Bardsley, who used $300,000 of it in paying an old debt to the school district of Philadelphia, but still owed it $445,000, all of which was lost.

Treasurer Boyer Testifies.

Treasurer Boyer said that William Livesey, his chief clerk, whose whereabouts is at present unknown, was the first to suggest to him the payment of the money in order to prevent it from going into the sinking fund. In pursuance of a conference between them, he said, Livesey visited the department of public instruction and asked for the necessary warrants. Anything done by Livesey, he declared, was within the scope of his authority and he (the witness) was responsible for it. He deferred greatly to his chief clerk, who had much experience in the offices in view of this fact he believed that he was left in ignorance of $150,000 paid to John Bardsley on Dec. 31, 1890, in addition to the drawing of warrants of $420,000 for the same party.

Annoyed by the Delamater Failure.

He was also much annoyed about that time by the failure of the Jamison bankers and Delamater Co., involving a loss to the state of $125,000. To a question of the attorney general he answered that according to his best recollection he had no talk with J. Q. Stewart, deputy superintendent of public instruction. These questions were asked because the attorney general intended to show by Stewart that he had, at the state treasurer's instance, gone to the private office of Mr. Boyer and been requested to issue the warrants for the $420,000. The warrants were shown to have been marked "paid" at the treasury department on Dec. 31, 1889, although they were not casted until the 3d or 4th of January. The attorney general laid much stress on this point, and a question may arise as to whether $420,000 was not payable into the sinking fund on this account.

The Money He Said Bardsley.

Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction Stewart testified that the state treasurer made personal application for the Bardsley warrants and H. Hollowell, secretary of the public school board, testified that he had prepared the certificates on which the warrants were issued at the instance of Bardsley. The state treasurer, by advice of his counsel, claimed that the money he paid to Bardsley was for the year 1890 and not for the year ended on the first Monday in June, 1891, as contended by the attorney general, and that consequently the Philadelphia school district was entitled to over $400,000 for this year.

No Precedent, He Claims.

Attorney General Hensel submitted a number of letters and telegrams to the senate from State Treasurer Boyer and ex-State Treasurer Harrity, to show that they had permitted John Bardsley to retain the state moneys when they knew he was largely indebted to the commonwealth. Statements from the department of public instruction were presented to show that for the past twenty years there was no precedent for the payment of Philadelphia's share of the school appropriation as early as the one State Treasurer Boyer made to John Bardsley.

In many instances these payments were made after the execution of the school year recognized by the state authorities.

The $420,000 school fund, which John Bardsley embezzled, was paid him by State Treasurer Boyer on Dec. 31, 1890, six months before the money was due, according to the attorney general's construction of the law. The state treasurer's plea is that the money was due to the Philadelphia school district at the close of the year, and that he was anxious to pay out the money before that time to prevent it from going into the sinking fund on the first of January, and thus diminishing the power of the general fund to meet its obligations.

They Want a Reply from Foster.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The members of the Bardsley investigating committee of the council are getting impatient over Secretary Foster's delay in reply to their request that the experts employed by them be permitted to examine the books of the Spring Garden National bank.

Chairman Van Osten has sent the following telegram to Secretary Foster:

"The subcommittee of the committee of finance of councils that is investigating the city deposits direct me to respectfully ask for reply to our request made by letter Oct. 12."

Before the telegram was sent nearly all the members of the committee were seen and all heartily indorsed it.

State Succeeds Livesey.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 22.—At a meeting of the state sinking fund commissioners a resolution was adopted reciting that in view of the approaching maturity of a portion of the Pennsylvania state loan, and of the fact that moneys sufficient to redeem such loan are idle and unproductive, the state treasurer is directed to apply to the attorney general's construction of the $3,928,000 of Pennsylvania state bonds (5 per cent.) which are reimbursable on Dec. 31, 1891. John N. Stott was appointed cashier in place of William Livesey, who resigned after the printing of the letters implicating him with the Bardsley business.

Bunco'ed Out of $8,000.

COLTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 22.—George Fitts, a farmer at McLean and a stockholder in the Second National bank of Cortland, has been bunco'ed out of $8,000. The sharpers represented themselves to be nephews of the late Judge Boardman, of Ithaca.

Bitten by a Mad Cat.

HADDONFIELD, N. J., Oct. 22.—Charles S. Haines and his little daughter Julia, of this city, were attacked and bitten on the hands by a mad cat which they have been mad. Its brain has been sent to Philadelphia for analysis.

These Chinamen May Come In.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Acting Secretary Spaulding said that he would not ask for an appeal in the cases of two Chinamen who had been admitted into Oregon on habeas corpus proceedings before a circuit judge in Portland.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Foster Direct Easily Defeats the Great Hal Pointer.

NASHVILLE, Oct. 22.—Ten thousand people were present at the Cumberland park races when the two famous trotters, Hal Pointer and Direct, met on a hard and fast track for a purse of $6,000. The weather was beautiful, and there was not few Tennessee-ans among the great crowd but that felt sure of Hal Pointer winning. Direct, however, won all three heats with comparative ease.

Hal Pointer had the pole in the first heat, but after going a quarter Direct assumed the lead and won without trouble. The second heat was won by Direct quite handily, and it is believed had the California horse been passed he could have made the mile in 2:08. Direct led all the way in the last heat. Time, 2:10, 2:09¼, 2:11.

Palo Alto in 2:11 1-4.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 22.—Stanford's trotters had a great day at the Lake shaped track. Belle Bird, a yearling; Arion, 2-year-old, and Palo Alto all broke their own records. Belle Bird, whose record was 2:27½, made the mile in 2:26¾. Arion, the fastest 2-year-old filly in the world, then had a try at her record of 2:15¾. She made the mile without a skip in 2:14½. Orin Hickok said after the race: "That is the horse that will make the two-minute mark if any horse ever does." Palo Alto, sca-ns-t his record of 2:12¼, covered the mile in 2:11¼ easily.

Cornell's Alleged Team.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 22.—The president of the Yale university, accompanied by the commodore of the Cornell navy that Cornell, Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania have decided to form an intercollegiate rowing association, which will hold its annual regatta somewhere on the Hudson, and asking Yale to send representatives to a meeting in New York next Monday. It is not believed that Yale will be represented, as the matter is looked upon as a ruse of Cornell to bring about a race with Yale.

Chicago's Association Team.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago American Association Baseball club officers were elected as follows: President, George R. Wilson; vice president, Addison Hickey; treasurer, Samuel G. Morton. Fred Pfeffer will manage and captain the team and will also choose the players. Hugh Duffy, last and probably best player of the Chicago League team, may join the new team.

Carriage Men Choose Officers.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 22.—The carriage men elected the following officers: President, Frank H. Hooker, of New Haven; secretary and treasurer, H. C. McLear, of Delaware.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union held on Thursday, October 1, 1891, at 2:30 p. m.

Present—Director Osborn, Freeholders Beaney, Briant, Doty, Howard, Haldsy, Jones, Hitch, Person, Roll, Russell, Sullivan, Thomas, Tuttle and Vanderbeek—15.

Absent—Freeholders Kyte and West—2.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 1, 1891.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

Gentlemen—I do hereby certify that the year during which Morris avenue, Union township, Bernard Hillis contractor, was required to be kept in repair, expired on September 30, 1891.

As the proper repairs have been made and the road is now in a condition satisfactory to me, I do hereby release the said contractor and contract, the ten per cent. reserved, less the cost of repairs, is now due and payable, for which amount I have given a certificate this date.

F. A. DUNHAM,
County Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Vanderbeek received and placed on file.

Application was made by the township committee of Summit township to open the county road for the construction of sewers on Morris and Springfield avenues.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Howard:

Resolved, That the bill of Mr Edward J. Ward in the sum of $12 50 for attending court on summons be paid.

Resolved, That the following description be adopted as an accurate description of the aforesaid road for the purpose of having the same recorded in the office of the county clerk as directed and required by the aforesaid act.

Beginning in the centre line of Newark avenue where the same is intersected by the northeasterly side line of North Broad street in the city of Elizabeth; thence running north easterly along said Newark avenue to a point where the same is intersected by a line which intersects the southerly line of Essex county, dividing the same from Union county; and be it further

Resolved, That said road be laid down; marked and designated as a county road leading from North Broad street in the city of Elizabeth to the dividing line of Union and Essex counties, as shown on the map entitled "Map of Union County, showing the roads designated as county roads, and adopted by this Board on the 1st day of September, 1891, under the provisions of the aforesaid act;" and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution, certified by the clerk of this Board, be filed in the county clerk's office.

Freeholder Roll moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Howard:

Resolved, That the bill of Bernard Mahon, contractor for Jacques avenue, Union township, amounting to $3,254.07 be paid when properly sworn to.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

Governor Hill's Response to the Toast "Democracy."

MR. BLAINE'S HOME IS A WELL MAN

He Roots for Washington, Fully Recovered in Health and Strength, to Resume His Duties at the State Department.

Mr. Jones Temporarily Governor.

ATLANTA, Oct. 22.—Last night a banquet was given to Governor Hill at the Kimball House by the Young Men's Democratic league. Covers were laid for 100.

Governor Northen responded to the sentiment, "The Empire State of the South Greets the Empire State of the Union."

The inspiring toast of the evening—"Democracy"—was responded to by Governor Hill. He said that the Democratic party had a history of which Democrats are justly proud, beginning in the days of Jefferson, and Democrats were proud of the great father and founder of the party.

Until the last thirty years all that had been accomplished for the glory and prosperity of the country was accomplished by our Democratic forefathers, he said. The largest acquisitions of territory which this country has ever made were accomplished under Democratic auspices and statesmanship. The great battles after the establishment of independence were fought by Democratic generals and Democratic administrations. It laid out the course of policy which has been adopted to this hour. Jackson fought in the early days against monopolies and for the people. Jefferson contended against the aristocracy of early times. Other leaders have adhered to those principles.

The Democracy at Work.

Continuing, Governor Hill said: "At the present time I think we have no reason to complain of what is being done by the Democratic leaders in the various states. In Massachusetts Governor Russell [cheers] is fighting the Puritanism of New England with the prospect of success. In Ohio Governor Campbell is fighting the high protective tariff of Mr. McKinley and fighting in favor of the principles of a constitutional currency. In Pennsylvania the Democrats under the leadership of Governor Pattison is exposing Republican corruption. In Iowa Governor Boies is standing up for the rights of the people against monopolies and to relieve the people of the burdens of unjust taxation. And in gallant little New Jersey Governor Abbett, ever faithful, is fighting the good fight of Democracy. [Prolonged cheering.]

The State's Rights Question.

"Speaking for the Democratic party, I can say that we have never interfered with the rights of the states. We believe in the sovereignty of the states. Never under Democratic national rule has a blade of grass been taken from a citizen except by due process of law. Recently, what was attempted to be done by our opponents in congress? We have recently seen the house do business for over three months without rule. We have witnessed the spectacle of the speaker deciding every question according to caprice; refusing to recognize Democratic speakers, who desired only a respectful hearing. The Republican party sustained him in this. While Speaker Reed is not the hero he was a year ago, he has not been repudiated by his party, though he has been thoroughly repudiated by the people. I do not know what our Democratic friends in the next congress propose to do. I would not advise retaliation in any improper spirit, but I do hope we shall witness in the lower house at the next session a vigorous, aggressive Democracy."

Governor Hill predicted victory for his party in New York state and said that he believed the Democracy could win in 1892 by hard work and earnest organization. Overconfidence, he said, had lost more political battles than treachery, and it was on the young men that the Democracy must rely in this fight. Speaking of the Democracy of the south he said: "I know it is said that the south is solid, as though that was an objection. It is solid for good government, popular liberty, the rights of the people, equal taxation, state sovereignty and the perpetuation of the American Union. And that solidity meets with the applause and respect of the American people."

The conclusion of Governor Hill's speech was greeted with cheering of the wildest description, which lasted for several minutes.

Jones Governor for a Time.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The fact that Lieutenant Governor Edward F. Jones is now, under the constitution, the lawful governor of this state, and will probably continue to be such until Oct. 28, when Mr. Hill returns from the south, invests the first named official with increasing interest.

The report that the acting governor is intending to assume his office was confirmed when he said:

"The constitution of the state of New York provides that in the absence from the state of the governor his powers and duties shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor. I will exercise the functions of the office to such extent as the public good may require."

He added that he would not assume any of the functions of the governorship unless some emergency demands it.

Depew Honors Mr. Blaine.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Chauncey M. Depew spoke here last night to an audience of between 4,000 and 5,000 persons. His speech was devoted largely to a defense of the McKinley bill, the advocacy of the blanket ballot and a general arraignment of the Democratic party. He spoke of James G. Blaine as the leader of his party and the glory of the whole country. Tremendous applause followed the mention of Mr. Blaine's name.

Secretary Blaine's Return.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 22.—Secretary Blaine and family have left for Washington. Mr. Blaine came down from Bar Harbor on Sept. 26. His step then was feeble, but today his walk was like the Blaine of four years ago. His out of door exercise, riding and walking, has brought color to his cheeks and strength to the limbs that almost tottered when he came here.

A Well Man, He Says.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Secretary Blaine's private car arrived in Boston last evening. Mr. Blaine looked as if he were in perfect health.

"I have never felt better," said the secretary, "and I have enjoyed every moment of my stay in Maine. I go back to my work invigorated and completely restored in health." Secretary Blaine left for New York today. He will reach Washington Friday and resume work Monday.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired one lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HESS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish for.
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as for us sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants.

HINTS FOR THE HOSTESS.

Something Entertaining and Novel in the Way of a Phantom Party.

The successful hostess has in readiness a mental programme for the entertainment of her guests. That is, she will have the evening's amusement planned before the arrival of her company. If it be a german or card party no planning of the nature will be necessary. But there are many who suppose neither of dancing nor of cards, and when pastimes of this character are not to be, something else must be provided.

One who frequently entertains is ever eager for something new and original. A phantom party may be old, but renovate it with a "web of fate" and it is both original and unique. A detailed description of the phantom costume would be superfluous. All it calls for is a large sheet, pillow case and mask. By arranging the pillow case over the face the mask may be dispensed with for the sake of comfort.

Costumed in this spectral drapery the hostess receives her guests. No words are exchanged. She makes them welcome by gesticulation and motions them to their respective toilet rooms, whence they soon emerge, pinned in a similar attire.

Upon being ushered into the parlor or reception room each phantom is given the end of a string, which, as he winds, is leading him to his fate, unraveling to him his mission in life. This "fate" is a mystic roll of paper, on which is written his destiny or the mission he is to fulfill. The amusement of this feature is greatly heightened if the hostess be familiar with the various "hobbies" of her guests. She is thus enabled, with the aid of an accomplice, to give to each guest the string which will reveal to him his own special fad. These "fates" or "missions" should be written in a highly humorous style. This will prove a vast field for ingenuity. Should the pen of the hostess lack in fluency in this respect she may have recourse to quotations with almost equal effect. The productions of Pope and Shakespeare are most prolific in lines of this nature.

The strings all differ in color and should start from a web of all the strings, suspended horizontally in the folding door or from some other conspicuous point. Each string takes a varied and roundabout course, over pictures, book cases and doors, down the wall and along the floor, through numerous rooms, up and down the stairs, through the windows, out under the trees in the garden, etc. The strings have a common starting point, but each leads to an entirely different quarter. They are fastened along their course by means of small pins. Each string must be of a decided and different color, that it may easily be traced in its windings. Wrapping twine, which comes in such beautiful shades, is preferable for the purpose.

The strings must all be of equal length, as a prize is awarded to the one first find ing his mission. A booby prize may also be given. Twenty yards will be found quite long enough for each string. A convenient means of measuring, to obtain fairly equal lengths, is to give a certain number of wraps around a board of a foot or so in width. It must be admitted that it is quite an undertaking to perfect all arrangements with a "web of fate," but the pleasurable result will amply repay the hostess for her labor. Of course the "web of fate" is a pantomime," not a word to be uttered.—Chicago Herald.

How to Cook a Husband.

More than a decade ago, in the Baltimore Cooking school, the following receipt for "cooking a husband so as to make him tender and good" was contributed by a lady, presumably of experience. We commend it to our lady readers:

A good many husbands are utterly spoiled by mismanagement. Some women go about it as if their husbands were soldiers, and blow them up. Others keep them constantly in hot water, others let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference. Some keep them in a stew by irritating ways and words. Others roast them. Some keep them in pickle all their lives.

It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated. In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, or by having marked, long and golden tint, as if you wanted salmon. Be sure and select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go to the market for him, as the best are always brought to your door. It is far better to have none unless you will patiently learn how to cook him. A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is best, but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin it will do, with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings nicely sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong silk cord called comfort, as the one called duty is apt to break. They are apt to fly out of the kettle and be burned and crusty on the edges, since, like crabs and lobsters, you have to cook them while alive.

Make a clear, steady fire out of love, tenderness and cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he spatters and fizzes do not be anxious, some husbands do this till they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of what confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves them, but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instrument into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently; watch the while, lest he lie too flat and close to the kettle, and so become useless. You can not fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children, and he will keep as long as you want, unless you become careless and you set him in too cold a place.—Hall's Journal of Health.

What She, Wouldn't Do.

"What would you do?" asked one woman of another, as the wise in the ways of bread winning, "if you were a young girl and had your living to earn?"

"I don't know," was the answer; "but I can tell you some things I wouldn't do.

"I wouldn't teach unless the call was almost deafening, because then I should be carrying my little napkinful of talents to a market sadly overcrowded.

"I wouldn't study stenography or typewriting unless I knew or had opportunity to learn two or three modern languages besides English, and unless I was to start uncommonly well educated, for unless I fit myself for one of the few extremely good places I should find the other places had little money in them.

"I wouldn't go behind a counter unless I needed four dollars or five dollars or six dollars a week so urgently that I couldn't do without it, or else I was learning a better business. If I did turn saleswoman I wouldn't do my work languidly or negligently, for I hope I should know that the employer who could not combine ways to earn six dollars and who should earn forty dollars would be conditioned by that other question, out of 940 or 1,000 who were the half dozen that had most intelligence and capacity for application.

"Whatever I did I wouldn't do with an eye to that and nothing more. I would remember a certain assistant bookkeeper who does her work with perfect exactitude and punctuality, yet sees every lad who enters the office promoted above her head, because the lads open their eyes in many directions and are ready and eager the moment there is a chance for advance, while every afternoon she bookkeeper rolls up all thoughts of her work with the methodical rolling of her soap and white apron. She isn't really interested in it, and does her seeming duty is satisfied she goes home to embroider things for charity fairs and absorb herself otherwise. She is absolutely faithful, and, like a majority of women workers, absolutely without intelligent ambition

"Whatever I did, I would remember the saying of one of Brooklyn's big dry goods men, 'Of all my employees the best women are the very best, but the average woman ranks far below the average man.'

"If I wanted to succeed with any success beyond a bare living I would try hard not to be an average woman."—Chicago Post.

Hints on Letter Writing.

A crucial test of early advantages—it had almost been written "the" crucial test —especially in the case of a woman, is note writing. In no one way does the veneer show through more plainly than when madam seats herself at her writing desk. There is an indescribable something about the elegant note or little letter," as the French call it, which, it would almost seem, one has to be born to. It cannot be really acquired, as one learns a new step in dancing or a fresh trick of managing one's train. Yet the faultless note is worth striving for; it conveys to the cultured reader a multitude of pure intelligence.

The actual hand writing is immaterial so far as it conforms or not to the temporary dictum of fashion. It should not, however, be crude or unformed, which at once betrays the writer's want of practice in the art. Plain, good, unruled stationery in white or delicate cream or other pale tint is always safe. It is equally wise to confine one's self to the use of black ink. The closing of a note is the rock upon which novice and unskilful writers of tenest split. "Yours respectfully" ought never to be used to an acquaintance or friend. "Very truly yours." "Sincerely" and "Cordially yours," are admirable gradations of intimacy, while either prefaced by "With regards" or "With warm regards," becomes more familiar. "Your attached friend," "Faithfully," "Devotedly yours" and "Affectionately" strike yet closer notes of friendship.

The best authorities absolutely veto the signature of a woman by her social title, except on a hotel register or in the visiting book of a public place where it is practically leaving her card. If you are married sign yourself always Ellen M. Smith or E. M. Smith, and if the person to whom you are writing does not know your formal title, put [Mrs. John Smith] bracketed at the left and somewhat below the other signature. If you are a widow the simple Mrs. before the signature is sufficient. An unmarried woman uses the prefix Miss in the same way to convey similar information as to her sex and condition. From this rule, like that of returning your parlor's trump card at whist, nothing but youth or inability to write excuses one. The frequency, however, with which is is violated is the only condition always to earn six dollars and who should earn forty dollars would be conditioned by that other question, out of 940 or 1,000 who were the half dozen that had most intelligence and capacity for application.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Feminine Queerness.

There is one feminine queerness which strikes one, in Shakespearean phrase, as so out of all whooping queer, that it seems as if it must be rooted deeper than in the accidental. I mean the slavish fetich-like subservience to the fashion in dress which happens at the moment to obtain, regardless absolutely of what the fashion, or whether the fashion be hygienic or hurtful, ugly or beautiful. Man may be so far controlled by the reigning mode as sometimes to wear, without protest, a hideously, a positively painful hat; he may prefer to be noisily ugly thing only because his fellows wear it; as witness, O laughing posterity! the stovepipe hat. But man neither consents nor is originally so disciplined as to submit to any form of dress that interferes with health or usefulness; an arm binding sleeve, for instance, or a corset tight waistcoat would promptly condemn him a tailor to regions tropical, so far as words have power so do so.

But feminine queerness crushes its ribs with steely, pins camel-like humps upon its back; drapes masses of false hair into "waterfalls;" sweeps the littered streets with gowns that trail; grounding after hours of free of dust; wears heaven eclipsing hats to public places where decent courtesy to one's neighbors demands the most unobtrusively possible headgear; and does all these absurd and discourteous and awful things for the same reason and no better that sheep—one is moved to say other sheep—him jumping over a fence.—Boston Commonwealth.

How Some Mothers Treat Children.

If the sights one sees on the streets are any criterion, one must come to the inevitable conclusion that about half the mothers in this city are not fit to be intrusted with the care of a child than with the rearing of a calf, for if they pursued the same unnatural methods with the four footed infant that they do with their own offspring there would never be a decent cow in the world. They take a child who has just learned to walk, dress it in clothes, and then, grasping it by one hand, so that the child's arm must be extended it full length above its head, drag it up and down the pavements for hours.

The poor youngster's legs are so short that it cannot possibly take a step more than a third as long as its mother, yet it never lets up for an instant the ordinary gait of the adult is adhered to, without a thought of the suffering caused the child. Frequently the poor youngster loses its balance, and it is then dragged along by main force for a block or two, and if it stumbles at a crossing it is given a sound shaking by way of variety.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Bread Making.

"I have never been able to make good bread since we moved into this house!" exclaimed a woman who had been noted for her excellent bread. "I think there must be something out of gear with the range, although it seems to bake well enough. I use the same flour, the same sort of yeast cakes, and work by the same process as far as I know, but my bread has lost its old time flavor and lightness. I really cannot account for it." And she spread a napkin over some freshly baked loaves and turned away from them with a sigh of disappointment.

"Where do you keep your flour?" asked the friend to whom she had been speaking. "In the store closet, at the end of the hall."

"And you lived in a frame house before you came here and had your kitchen above ground and with a dry cellar under it and a store closet on the sunny side of the house. Here you live in a basement house, and your flour barrel stands against a stone wall at least three feet below the surface of the earth. The dampness kills the life of the flour, or as all events, keeps it from rising, and you blame the range and everything but the location of the flour barrel.

"Put your flour up stairs excepting a bag for immediate use; that may be hung on a nail or placed on a shelf in the kitchen as high up on the wall as possible. Do this, and as soon as the flour is thoroughly dried out your old time skill will return to you."

Keep the Head Clean.

Keeping the head perfectly clean is a great aid to health. A distinguished physician, who has spent much of his time as quarantine, said that a person whose head was thoroughly washed every day rarely ever took contagious disease, but when the hair was allowed to become dirty and matted it was hardly possible to escape infection.

Many persons find speedy relief for nervous headache by washing the head thoroughly in weak soda water. We have known cases almost wholly cured in ten minutes by this simple remedy.

A friend finds it the greatest relief in case of "rose cold," the cold symptoms entirely leaving the eyes after one thorough washing of the hair. The head should be thoroughly dried afterward and drafts of air should be avoided for a little while.—Salem Gazette.

The Name Jane.

Jane, as borne by the royal families of Europe, has always been a name of ill omen.

Lady Jane Gray was beheaded for treason; Jane Seymour was one of the victims of King Hal; Jane Beaufort, wife of James I of Scotland, was savagely murdered; Jeanne de Valois, wife of Louis XII, was repudiated for her want of personal beauty; Jeanne d'Albret, mother of Henry IV, was poisoned by Catherine de Medici; Jane of Castile lost her reason through the neglect of her husband, Philip the Handsome, archduke of Austria; Jane I of Naples caused her husband to be murdered and married his assassin, and Jane II of Naples was one of the most wanton of women. —American Notes and Queries.

Kansas Women Not Afraid of Work.

Kansas women are not afraid of work. They like it, and they are admirably adapted for it. They have the utmost dislike for a man that does little or nothing.

In the country towns women run stores, millinery, grocery and dry goods, mills, bakeries, factories. A Severance girl trains horses. At Cottonwood Falls a Miss Snow, assisted by her brother, runs a bank. She also writes beautiful verses.

At Washington two women act as runners for the leading hotel, which is owned by their father. It is successful are they that the other hotel had to quit for want of patronage.—Kansas City Star.

Why She Lectures.

Eva McDonald is one of the brilliant young women orators of the Western Alliance possessing a remarkable familiarity with economic questions and authors. A part of her experiences she gained as a factory girl, the rest as a newspaper writer, and she effectively prefaces many of her statements with, "All of which I saw and part of which I was." In her opinion women are out of place on the public platform, but adds, "I shall stay on the platform so long as it is necessary to plead for a chance for woman to stay at home."—Exchange.

Horrors of Dishwashing.

It is a fact that dishwashing is the one great irksome fact of housework. It makes the wife determined that she will have a servant, and makes the servant hate to be one. Dishes and knives and forks are the great curse of our modern civilization. Without them there would be no servant girl question; there never was one before they were introduced. A society for the abolition of dishes might do a good deal to abolish the servant girl question.—Boston Transcript.

Trials of the Younger Sisters.

A woman well past her youth records as one of the chief trials of her childhood the sitting still for two hours each morning to allow her curls to dry in shape. "And my sister improved the shining hour," she says, "to go over my whole catalogue of sins." Many of us have "been there" so far as the non faithful government of elder sisters was concerned. But perhaps that accounts for our present perfection!—Boston Commonwealth.

If meat is properly roasted in the oven there is very little difference in its flavor and the flavor of meat roasted before the fire in the old way. But if it is allowed to sizzle slowly in a half heated oven and thereby allowed to dry and lose its juices it represents one of the worst features of bad cooking.

To allay itching in some cutaneous affections a very pleasant application consists of the freely expressed juice of a lemon diluted with four or five times its bulk of water, to which a few drops of cologne have been added, or the same quantity of rose water. This is very cooling.

Javelle water used to remove tea and coffee stains, grass and fruit stains from linen is made as follows: Mix well in an earthen vessel four pounds of sal soda, five cents' worth of chloride of lime and two quarts of soft water.

It will not astonish any one to hear that of fowls a pullet is to be preferred, while drakes are fatter than ducks. But it may be news to some to be told that old cocks and hens make the best soup.

The great proportion of the government inspectors who examine pork for trichinæ through microscopes are women, they having been found to do the work much more satisfactorily than men.

Nellie Arthur, daughter of the ex-president, has a well rounded figure, sparkling brown eyes, and her hair rolled back from a low brow, a sweet smile and a pretty, girlish manner.

AN UNPLEASANT PREDICAMENT.

Two Men Narrowly Escape Injury.—They Devote Into a Brook.

Last evening Henry Burnett and a companion named Stoot, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. They were returning to their home in Stirling and it is alleged both were under the influence of liquor. Near Union village a bridge crossing a stream is being repaired. A lantern was hung out as a danger signal, and the place was fenced in. Burnett, who was driving, is said to have compelled his horse to jump the fence, and the animal, wagon and occupants brought up in the brook.

Several farmers were aroused, and with their assistance the horse and wagon were extricated from their unpleasant position. Strange to say neither of the occupants of the carriage were injured, but the horse was badly cut about the legs. It is said that Burnett had a similar experience some few months ago.

THE GRAND JURY FINISH THEIR LABORS AND ARE DISCHARGED.

They Bring in Thirty-Three Indictments, and a Presentment Against the Standard Oil Company.—Pleadings of Some of the Indicted To-Day.—Ex-Mayor Cooley and the Publishers and Editor of the "Press" Among the Indicted.

ELIZABETH, Oct. 23, (Special.)—The Union county Grand Jury finished its work and presented thirty-one bills of indictment and one presentment, yesday afternoon.

The latter was against the Standard Oil Company for maintaining an oil storage tank in the populous portion of Elizabeth, against the wishes of the property owners.

The presentment declares that the tank must be removed, as it is a menace to life and property, and directs the Standard Oil Company to see that this order is complied with before the January term of court.

An indictment was found against Dr. Justus H. Cooley, assessor, and ex-Mayor of North Plainfield, for maintaining a nuisance his new private asylum for the insane being so considered. He is retained Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed to defend him. Several indictments were found against Messrs. W. L. and A. L. Force, publishers, and James A. Demarest, city editor, of the Daily Press, for criminal libel. They have retained Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh to defend them.

Judge VanSyckel discharged the Jury with the thanks of the Court. At noon yesterday the Foreman of the Grand Jury took the members to Russ' Cafe on Broad street, where an elaborate banquet had been prepared at his expense.

THE MORNING'S SESSION.

The court met this morning, Judge McCormick presiding, and Associate Judges Hyer and Wiley on the bench.

A number of those indicted by the Grand Jury which concluded its labors yesterday afternoon were before the court this morning, as follows:

Charles Elston of Plainfield, for robbery. Pleaded not guilty. Trial set down for Oct. 28th.

Michael Mitchel, John Schultcis, August Schultcis and Charles Geaugaren for indecent assault on a young colored woman. Pleaded not guilty. Trial set down for Oct. 30.

David Pratis, colored, for petit larceny, stealing five chickens. Pleaded not guilty. Trial Oct. 26th.

William Tevlin, for assault and battery. Pleaded not guilty. Trial Oct. 26th.

Charles Wood, colored, for atrocious assault and battery. Pleaded not guilty. Trial Oct. 26th.

Lewis Stetson, for cruelty to animals. Pleaded not guilty.

The court announced before taking the noon recess that it would remain in session daily for the remainder of the week to issue naturalization papers.

THE TROPHY.

Presented to Alert Hose Company Last Evening.

Chief Astfalk of Elizabeth and a committee from the Elizabeth Fire Department visited this city last evening and presented the Alert Hose Company No. 1 the handsome silver card basket, which was awarded to them at the firemen's parade in Elizabeth for having the handsomest hose carriage in line. Chief Astfalk made the presentation speech and in behalf of the company Foreman Moore received the trophy, thanking the Elizabeth firemen for the present and for the manner in which the company had been entertained during their stay at Elizabeth.

An Early Morning Fire.

The large stone crusher, belonging to Smalley Bros., situated in Washington Valley on the west side of the notch was destroyed by fire at about four o'clock this morning, together with the buildings, machinery, etc. The loss will reach fifteen hundred dollars. There was an insurance of $1,000 on the buildings.

Seventy-Five Prisoners.

There are seventy-five prisoners at present incarcerated in the Union county jail, thirteen of whom are women. Jennie Wiley and her colored paramour are still in the prison awaiting the decision on their application for a new trial. They were convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to ten years in State prison.

Two Freight Cars Wrecked.

Two large freight cars were wrecked last night on the Central Railroad, near Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, by a misplaced switch. The cars jumped the track, toppled over on their sides, and were demolished.

City Judge Codington Appointed.

City Judge W. R. Codington was yesterday appointed by the Surrogate of Union county administrator of the estate of Joel R. Briant, deceased.

MUSIN, THE VIOLINIST.

WITH HIS TALENTED WIFE AND COMPANY, AT MUSIC HALL.

Despite the Inclement Weather the Hall Was Filled Last Evening, to Hear and Enjoy the Treat Announced.

WIND and weather vied in making a disagreeable night outside, but the large concourse of people gathered in Music Hall last evening minded them not. They braved the elements to hear the great and justly renowned violinist, Ovide Musin, who, as announced previously in THE NEWS, was to be present, with a select company of vocalist and musicians.

Anna Louise Tanner-Musin, the violinist's bride, was also to appear. She is aptly termed "the American Nightingale."

What a novel bridal tour this newly married couple are taking!

The following talented persons completed the company: Inez Parmater, mezzo-soprano; Emil Senger, basso; Roger Dupuy, tenor; Eduard Scharf, pianist.

The vocalists were all in good voice and were recalled, as was the accomplished pianist also, upon each appearance.

And Ovide Musin! Thunderous applause followed the marked silence of the audience while he played, and he was compelled to respond again and again to the encores.

There's a vast amount of talent in the members of the Musin family present at Music Hall last evening.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Lizzie Dunlap of Millstone is visiting friends in this city.

Miss Maltby entertained a number of her friends at her home on Plainfield avenue, Tuesday evening.

The residence of Mrs. Warren Ackerman, at the corner of Seventh street and Central avenue, has been beautified by a coat of paint.

Ex-Councilman C. D. Wadsworth has removed the fences surrounding his property, at the corner of Central avenue and Sixth street, greatly improving its appearance.

Miss Lillian Hetfield of Fanwood and Mr. Isaac Seely of Westfield were married at the residence of the bride's parents Wednesday evening. The Rev. Mr. Martin performed the ceremony.

Mr. George Thatcher, the proprietor of Thatcher's Consolidated Minstrels, is having an addition built to his pretty little villa at the corner of Seventh street and Central avenue.

Miss Lizzie Mattis of Spooner avenue celebrated the nineteenth anniversary of her birth Wednesday evening. A number of her young friends were present and assisted in making the occasion a joyous one.

Mr. Charles Bullman of Third place and Miss Louise Meyer of SanFrancisco, Cal., were married at the home of the groom Wednesday. The Rev. Asa Reed Dills performed the ceremony. The happy couple went to Washington, D. C. on their wedding tour.

Mrs. W. H. Sprague of Muhlenberg place yesterday received a message announcing the death of her father, which occurred at Scranton, Pa., that day. She has the sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Mrs. Sprague will leave to-night to attend her father's funeral.

The Hon. John Ulrich and family have returned from Belmar and will reside on LaGrande avenue near Washington street. Mr. Ulrich finds that the demands of his business makes a residence in Westfield impossible, although he considers that prosperous village a most beautiful spot.

Miss S. Kate Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Potter of Mt. Pleasant, and Mr. Harry T. Edgar of New York City, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents last evening at seven o'clock. The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, the pastor of the First Presbyterian church in this city performed the ceremony. Miss Florence M. Titsworth of this city was the bridesmaid and Mr. T. Edgar Wood of New York was the best man. The bride wore a white faille, en train and a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was attired in yellow faille trimmed with beaded chiffon. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Emma West, of Haverstraw, N. Y. Guests were present from this city, Boston, New York, Oxford, N. Y., New Haven, Haverstraw, Montreal, Providence, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Rahway, Metuchen, Orange and other places. The ushers were Mr. S. McKenzie Scott and Charles O. Lane. The bride is a graduate of the Plainfield High School.

Republican Primaries.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to the city convention and to nominate one Councilman from each ward will be held as follows: First Ward, Thursday evening, Nov. 5; Second, Third and Fourth Wards, Wednesday evening, Nov. 4.

—There are some places in town where large roots of trees project and elevate the walk and are sources of no little annoyance and perhaps injury to pedestrians. Let the walks be put in good condition for the Winter.

WHAT A PATENT MEANS.

AN EXPERT'S INSTRUCTIVE TALK TO MEN.

Mr. L. W. Serrell at the Young Men's Christian Association Rooms Last Evening.—An Interesting Subject and an Interested Audience.

Mr. L. W. Serrell spoke very interestingly of the relation of inventions and patents to civilization at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. He spoke in part as follows:

The origin of the patent system was in the despotism of ruling monarchs.

Patents in England were originally land grants and monopolies to favored individuals and are still viewed there in that light while in the United States they are considered as inherent right of the inventor and are constitutionally protected.

An article to be patented, when described at the patent office necessitates examining an immense literature. If not new it may be described in any published periodical. The thirty examiners and their assistants refer to the class and subdivision till it is ascertained that nothing has before been made that would annul the patent applied for.

A real desire to supply some want, or to do it in a better manner, should be the motive that actuates the invention.

Modern civilization is but the every day use of modern inventions. While but few inventors get rich the world is made richer by their inventions.

PROPERTY IN DISPUTE.

A Railroad Company and a Property-Owner Disagree as to Damages.

The case of Eden Laing of Rahway vs. the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is occupying the attention of Judge Van Syckle and a struck jury in the Union county court. It appears by the testimony that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company required some property from Mr. Laing and that the commissioners, appointed to assess the damages, awarded him $7,000. Mr. Laing was not satisfied with the amount, hence the suit.

The members of the jury from this city are John C. Meeker, John F. McIntyre, John King and J. Fred McDonald.

The jury in charge of Sheriff Hicks went to Rahway yesterday and looked at the property in dispute. They missed the train they proposed returning to Elizabeth on and sooner than wait an hour or two Sheriff Hicks stopped a freight train, packed the jurors into the caboose, and took them back to Elizabeth, thereby saving about an hour's time.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

The Duckwork Children Matter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Whoever gave you the impression that in the matter of the guardianship of the Duckworth children Mrs. Keating was yesterday thwarted in her efforts before the Union County Orphans' Court, and that Messrs. Jackson & Codington succeeded in inducing the court to refer the case after argument and in opposition to motion of her counsel utterly misled you.

There was no argument on the motion to refer because both sides moved for a reference. Pursuant to instructions, I moved that the reference be to a particular person, viz., the Surrogate, to take testimony for use on the argument before the Orphans' Court, and it was that motion which was granted. It is quite natural that interested parties on the other side should seek to weaken the force of the two decisions against them heretofore made by the Somerset Orphans' Court and the Prerogative Court can scarcely hope to have misleading statements as to what took place in open court go unchallenged. Precisely what Mrs. Keating desired, and what her counsel asked for in the Orphans' Court was done. The other side undoubtedly desired the reference also, but this was denied by the failure of their counsel efforts to have the case tried somewhere else. In Mrs. Keating's view, this correction is important and for that reason, I request that it be made.

CRAIG A. MARSH.

He Shot the Bull.

The case of Margaret Falconer and James Sherman, David Moore was on trial to-day before Justice Sperry. The action was brought by the plaintiffs to recover $200 damages, which they allege a bull belonging to them sustained at the hands of David Moore. The bull it appears trespassed on Moore's property, fighting a notice to the effect that "no trespassing was allowed." Moore saw the four-legged animal and hastily procuring a gun, charged it with powder and beans and emptied the contents of the gun into the bull's side, hence the suit. As we go to press the case is still on.

Central vs. Port Reading.

In the Middlesex County Circuit Court the suit of the Central vs. the Port Reading Railroad is still dragging its slow length along. The Central finished putting its testimony yesterday morning and the Port Reading is now producing evidence to sustain their side of the case. Their contention is that the Central can let them have the crossing at Carteret without cost to them or prejudice to any vested rights they may have.

The New Church.

The Grace Episcopal church is being wired for electric lighting. It will require between three hundred and fifty and four hundred lamps to properly light the new edifice. The church will have a seating capacity of nearly eight hundred.

Threw a Stone Through a Window.

John Sullivan, a shoemaker, has his shop on the first floor of his dwelling on Madison avenue between Front and Second streets. At about seven o'clock Wednesday evening as Mr. Sullivan was sitting on his bench repairing a pair of shoes, some miscreant threw a large stone through one of the panes of glass in the window. The stone narrowly escaped striking Mr. Sullivan. He immediately ran to the door to see, if possible, who it was that had thrown the stone, but the street was deserted. He reported the matter to the police.

A Disgraceful Fight.

Henry Wendell and a man named Sullivan, while under the influence of liquor, at about half-past one o'clock this afternoon, engaged in a disgraceful street fight in an alley near Bimm's Hotel. Both the men were badly cut and bruised about the head and face. Sullivan's coat was nearly torn from his back. A bad gash was cut over Wendell's left eye which looked as though he had been struck with a stone.

Secretary Randall Goes Astray.

Joseph C. Randall, Secretary of Plainfield Lodge, No. 305, Order of Tonti, is missing with some of the funds of the Society. He left town one day last week. A letter to his wife received this week told her he was not return. Besides she turned the Secretary's books over to the Trustees of the Lodge. The books were examined Wednesday and it was found that $150 was missing, the amount of the last assessment.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Plenty of them, such as they are," is the verdict of an expert jeweler on the rubies and sapphires found in quantities in Montana.

Be it understood that no Texan ever uses the expression "to hum," which was put into the mouth of a native of this state by a Yankee novelist. A real Texan calls this Texas dialect from Cape Cod.

During the month of September the United States shipped $34,000,000 worth more of breadstuffs to Europe than in the corresponding month of last year. This will help pay off some of those mortgages.

Electric street car motors are invented so rapidly one after another that before long we shall certainly get the right one. Westinghouse, of air brake fame, says he has devised one that will pull a weight of 28,000 pounds.

It is with an infinitely superior air that British newspapers criticised the horrible American journalistic fashion of interviewing. Yet now they are at it themselves, if not in the sprightly American way, still in the graceful manner of a gambolsome porpoise on the high seas, and they really make a fair success of it. There is nothing which changes not the truth so materiallyside and forcible a manner as the interview set down verbatim from the lips of the person interviewed by a first class, conscientious reporter.

As English View of Lowell.

Perhaps the most remarkable contribution to periodical literature this month is the character sketch of James Russell Lowell by W. T. Stead in his Review of Reviews. Mr. Stead says that America has lost her last great poet, one who "had no compeer since Emerson, and who left no successor." In his own land Lowell was not in his last days in touch with his countrymen as he had been before he was minister to the court of St. James. Rightly or wrongly, they felt that he had fallen somewhat from his first works and his first love for freedom and human brotherhood, that British social distinction and British dinners had weakened his republicanism.

The mighty influence he exercised on one Englishman will therefore be learned now for the first time with interest by Lowell's fellow countrymen. Stead says that on that side of the Atlantic still linger veterans who in poetic power are the compeers of Lowell. He adds this, however, "But neither on one side of the Atlantic nor on the other is there any poet left whose verse is instinct with so much inspiration, or one who has in him so much of the seer of these latter days."

What this inspiration was to his own life, Stead tells us. He writes, "This article is simply the fervent expression of the gratitude of one among the thousands whom he has helped." Stead was only fifteen when he first felt the inspiration of Lowell's word. Lowell's preface to "The Pious Editor's Creed" helped Stead to determine his occupation in life, he believes. Three or four years later he happened on a volume of Lowell's poems. Stead was then threatened with blindness. He was obliged to give up all serious study, and life looked dark indeed to him. Among the poems in the volume was that entitled "Extreme Unction," and now when the distinguished journalist goes back to the book which so filled his boyish dreams he finds a line drawn in pencil around "Extreme Unction" and the words written, "This poem shaped my life." A dying man says to the holy man who would shrive him:

> God leave me, Priest; my soul would be,
> Alone with the consider, Death.
> For sudden eyes than thine will see
> Pale trembling clay yield up its breath;
> Those shriveled hands have deeper stains
> Than hath on thousand years can wear;
> Hands that have plucked the world's coarse gains
> As erst they plucked the flowers of May.
>
> They my dead Youth does wring its hands,
> And there, with eyes that goad me yet,
> The ghost of my Ideal stands!

Stead was at the most impressionable time of his life. The poem filled him with horror, this youth of eighteen, at the thought that hitherto he had lived for himself alone, and for the "working out of his own ambitious day dreams. The mental process through which he passed with his enfeebled health and failing eyesight was not unlike that described by religious persons as conviction of sin and conversion. Mr. Stead writes of it:

> At that same time this remorseful horror would sometimes abate somewhat, probably owing to occasional better health and then an immense thirst for the things of the inner life of the lions. On this bowed head the awful Past
> Once laid its consecrating hands
> That touch is yet upon me last,
> Though now it stands
> Unused, waiting my supreme commands,
> If I perceived any purpose did not fail,
> Perhaps after all, I might feel live to better purpose. But what purpose? The answer came in the next lines:
> God bends from out the deep and says,
> "I gave thee the great gift of life;
> Hast thou not called it many ways?
> Are not my heaven and earth at strife?"

The idea that everything wrong in the world was a divine call to use your life in fighting it sank deep into my soul. And there, in the darkness of that time, the ghosts of Time of weakness and trial, I put away from me, as at the evil one, all dreams of fame and the literary ambitions on which I had fed my boyhood, and resolutely set myself there and then to do what little I could, where I was, among those who surrounded me, to fulfill what trust for good high ones given." It was one of the decisive moments in my life. Since then I can honestly say that I have never regarded literary or journalistic success as worth a straw, excepting in so far as it enabled me to strike a blow for law in the cause of those for whom I was called to fight.

TO DRIVE OUT REV. DILL

The Alleged Plot to Tar and Feather Him.

A DETECTIVE PREACHED TO THEM.

He Occupied the Pulpit Vacated by Dill While on the Track of the Latter's Persecutors—Then Drew a Pair of Handcuffs and Made an Arrest.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 23.—Rev. Arthur C. Dill, of Stirling, recently lodged a complaint with the grand jury of Morris county charging Herbert Gray Torrey, an employe of the United States assay office, of New York. Gray Torrey, his son Dick Thomas, Frederick Taff and others with conspiring and then drew a pair of gyves but the jury has indicted those complained against and has found an additional count against Herbert Gray Torrey and against Clarkson B. Moffett, one of the justices of the peace of Stirling, for conspiracy.

The trouble between Dr. Dill and his neighbors is the outgrowth of a row in the little Presbyterian church at Stirling. It was said that Dr. Dill manifested an over zealousness interest in certain women of his flock, and the report was circulated by young men of the parish that they began a systematic persecution of the clergyman.

Defied His Tormentors.

The scandal resulted in a hearing before Dr. Wm. Ule, of Summit, the moderator for the district. Dr. Dill was asked to resign his charge. The young clergyman remained in Stirling after he vacated his pulpit and defied his persecutors. The residents of Stirling who favored Dr. Dill procured a hall for him in which to hold services. He preached there for sometime.

In the meantime several young men stole the clergyman's horse one Sunday night and, after painting the town red, white and blue, left it away in a lonely spot. Dr. Dill stood these attacks as patiently as he could and did not attempt to have his tormentors arrested.

Yet Tarred for Dill.

Dr. Dill's brother, James R. Dill, is a New York lawyer, and began quietly collecting evidence against the unsuspecting young people. He had warrants sent out in all directions, and a fusillade were obtained from persons who knew all about a plot to tar and feather Dr. Dill on the night of July 4.

A Detective in the Pulpit.

While the detectives were hunting evidence it was noised around that the Presbyterian church was to have a new pastor, and the members of the church, who had been anxious for a good old-fashioned revival, were overjoyed. The new incumbent appeared at the appointed time. He preached acceptably for three consecutive Sundays, and then his store of Biblical knowledge was made use of. No one ever heard him use a profane word, and then it was discovered that the congregation had experienced the novelty of hearing Scripture pronounced by a full fledged detective.

Another detective called on the sister of one of the conspirators a few days before long was in possession of a receipt the young lady held for a pistol that her brother had purchased. As soon as the Dill party had secured all the evidence necessary four of those concerned were asked to make affidavits. When the case was presented to the grand jury a great deal of contradictory evidence was given by the young men, who did not know of the existence of the affidavits. One of these affidavits follows:

The White Caps' Threat.

One of the affidavits described how at midnight on July 4 last the young men hailed the Rev. Arthur C. Dill in front of his own house. They were masked. Some of them pointed pistols at him. There was talk in the crowd of tarring and feathering Dill's minister. Then a voice from the throng said:

"Leave here within seven days or we will make it hot for you!"

The preacher backed up the garden walk, across the porch and into his own door. There was a rattling fire of pistol shots. Then the White Caps walked and rode away.

The Detective Clergyman.

It appears that the detective clergyman preached until he had found out just what he wanted to know. Then the White Caps were that had offered tar and feathers to the Rev. Arthur C. Dill. That night the same drama was played out of the clerical profession. He still wore ministerial black, but he deftly jingled a pair of steel bracelets as he walked to the farm house where Klemmenta and Ludwig Kaupta was employed. Klemmenta was delighted when the new dominie invited him out for a walk. Klemmenta gasped and said "Jawohl" when the parson slyly slipped the handcuffs on his wrists and told him that the jail doors were open for all the fellows who had White Capped Dominie Dill.

Klemmenta was tearfully thankful when he found that he might hope for mercy if he confessed and told all he knew and made affidavit to the facts.

Another affidavit stated that Torrey proposed that the crowd catch Dr. Dill and the latter be forced to carry him off over the mountains into the woods and to tar and feather him and to leave him there.

The indicted men were formally arraigned and released in $300 bail each. Their trials will be had very soon. The maximum penalty for the offenses the men are charged with having committed is five years in state prison.

What Torrey Says.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A reporter called upon Herbert Gray Torrey at his office on Wall street. Mr. Torrey said he had been actively instrumental in bringing Dr. Dill to Stirling and had felt bound to be respectful to him. He had entertained him at his house, where he was always welcome. Until quite recently Dr. Dill's purpose was guiltless of indiscreet acts and was lowering himself by associating too freely with the people. He still grieved that he didn't speak to Mr. Dill any sooner after the latter had forbidden him his house. Herbert Gray Torrey will be tried on two indictments. The date for the trial has not been fixed.

SECRETARY BLAINE AT NEW YORK.

He Appears to Be in Good Health and Spirits.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Secretary James G. Blaine came to town last evening. He was accompanied by Mrs. Blaine and Private Secretary Dent. The secretary of state reached the Grand Central depot just before 8 o'clock on the South Shore limited from Boston. The secretary, as he stepped from the drawing room coach, assisted Mrs. Blaine to alight. Taking her upon his arm the secretary shoved his way through the cheering crowd, and was soon being driven to his hotel.

A reporter saw the secretary soon after he had dined. Mr. Blaine appeared in fair health and spirits and was when he departed from Washington during the summer.

"Talk about Mr. Blaine being ill!" remarked Mr. Lovejoy. "Why, he jumped up the stairs as spry as I could, and I'll run any man around the block for $100."

Mr. Lovejoy was asked to speak about Mr. Blaine making at least one speech in the city. Chairman Brookfield and Secretary Kenyon, of the state committee, said they doubted if the matter could be arranged.

He May Speak at Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Secretary Blaine received several of his friends at a dinner at his house. He is part of the political situation in New York, Massachusetts and Ohio, and seemed to feel a strong confidence that in all these states Republicans would win. Mr. Blaine met a delegation from the Merchants' association and talked with them upon the reciprocity question.

He made a conditional promise to speak thereon in Boston some time during the coming winter, qualifying his promise with the statement that he did not wish to be overexamining about his physical reputation, and that he could not put his requisite test upon his strength until after the resumption of his Washington work.

Only Four Jurors for Rev. Mr. George.

CARPENTER, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The first two days of Rev. Mr George's trial for causing the death of his adopted daughter Miss Lotta Townsend, by a criminal operation have resulted in the procuring of only four jurors. It is evident from the questioning of counsel for defense that if Mr. George cannot be cleared on some legal point in an attempt to prove that as a confessed kleptomaniac his client was not responsible for the act. Mrs. Henry Naylor, of New York, who bailed Mr George, has withdrawn her bond, and Mr George again languishes in jail.

FASHIONS

NEW FRENCH LINGERIE.

Elaborate Confections of the Finest Silk, Cambric, Lace and Ribbons.

A dozen nightdresses for one customer at a total cost of something under $300, given as a gift of the elaboration attained in the making of this garment. These elaborate French confections were of the softest and finest silk imaginable, and were liberally trimmed with real Valenciennes lace. No two were alike in color. There was a blue, a pink, a green and a white gown with flowers in a contrasting tint. Many were of quaintly figured cashmere silk. All had flows and ruffles of lace and ribbon strings to tie at the neck. There was plenty of room in each garment. The prettiest nightdresses have a deep turned over collar shaped like a frill, which is continued as a trimming half down the front. Fine ribbon is used liberally for it. The daintiest garments are adorned with exquisite stitchery. Sarah Bernhardt nightdresses may be had in pink, blue, heliotrope, green and other pretty shades.

NIGHTDRESS IN COLORED CAMBRIC.

One first cut depicts a very elaborate nightdress in colored cambric, enhanced with tiny tucks, fine plaitings, vandyked and buttonholed, with ribbon bows at the throat, wrists and waist. In the second cut is shown a pretty gown for an invalid. Is is of pongee silk trimmed with braces and flounces in white crepon cloth, cut out in vandykes and embroidered with silk matching the shade of the ribbon bows and belt.

A plainer nightdress is in the Russian style. It may be of longcloth, cambric or washing silk, is finely tucked at the throat and waist and fastened at the left side under a band, which displays a colored feather stitching like that on the straight collar and cuffs.

INVALID'S NIGHTDRESS.

Silk petticoats are wonderfully elaborate. Some of them are flounced half their depth with lace and silk. Stiff cloth silks that rustle with every movement of the wearer are preferred for day wear. Surah is the material of which evening petticoats are mostly made.

AGAINST FREE COINAGE.

Secretary Foster's Views on the Silver Question.

HIS FIRST SPEECH OUT IN OHIO.

He Believes That Unlimited Coinage Would Bring the World's Silver Here, Drive All the Gold Out and Cause a Sad Condition of Affairs Generally.

FINDLAY, O., Oct. 23.—Secretary of the Treasury Foster made his first speech in the Ohio campaign last night to an audience of about 6,000 people. Upon the secretary's introduction he was greeted by an ovation which lasted fully five minutes.

The Money Question.

On the money question Secretary Foster said:

The question of honest money is involved in the subject of silver coinage, which is now and some between the two parties in Ohio, and in most of the states of the Union. The Democratic party in Ohio have declared, in favor of unlimited coinage of silver. The Republican party stands upon conservative ground, and in favor of the present law upon that subject. I think it may be safely assumed that the mass of our people, of all parties, favor the use of both gold and silver as money. The object we sought is how to best obtain this result. So far by conservative management, the Republicans would join with the Democrats in both houses in keeping within silver dollars, coined since 1878, in domestic circulation, as par with gold in every case. The danger to be avoided is such legislation as will place us upon a silver basis. The Republican party has a basis upon which to conduct the business of the world must be apparent to every thinking man.

It is safe, I think, to assume that members of the Democratic party of Ohio and of the country, whose occupation and modes of thought lead them to investigate this question, are not of such judgment upon questions of finance, are, almost with an exception, opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Such a course by this government, without an international agreement with other countries, would result in placing us upon a silver basis—a basis of measurement of values fluctuating with the market price of silver bullion. The standard gold dollar by which to measure values would be elastic and uncertain.

The Two Silver Dollars.

I can best illustrate the condition of affairs by exhibiting two silver dollars of two different countries. The first, which I now hold in my hand, is a United States dollar; it contains 412½ grains of standard silver, and is worth at the present market value of silver bullion about seventy-four cents; that is all it would bring in any other country but our own. But in this country, because the secretary of the treasury has maintained the parity between gold and silver on the basis of sixteen to one, and two years of law have been also in maintaining gold payments, this dollar is worth as much as a gold dollar to the man who wants to use it.

The other dollar I have obtained in Mexico. It has nearly six more grains of pure silver in it than the United States dollar. You cannot use it in Mexico the United States or any other country for any more than the bullion value of the silver that is in it, which is about seventy-seven cents. The great danger of free and unlimited coinage is that the silver dollar which I first exhibited will be worth less than the Mexican silver dollar. It is an undoubtable law of finance that the poorer dollar is the dollar that will be used. If silver bears would exclude the $600,000,000 of gold now in our country from use as money. It would not long be there. It would go, the silver would be sent to us from foreign countries.

I know it is enjoined by the advocates of free coinage that there is no silver abroad. My investigation lead me to believe that there is in Germany, Austria and other countries of Europe more than $1,000,000,000 of silver, and nothing of the vast hoards of silver in Mexico and South American countries in the shape of silver dollars. That would be sent to this country the moment we were ready to pay $1 per ounce for it, or seventy-seven cents.

The influx of silver which would inevitably be the result of free coinage here would very soon make silver as cheap as gold and lead to put itself upon a silver basis. What does an limited free coinage mean? It means that the owner of seventy-five cents worth of silver may take it to any of our mints and have it coined into a legal tender dollar, a dollar that, if the world's trade is to be settled in gold payments as these free silver advocates contend we must, gives the holder of seventy-five cents worth of silver the purchasing power of a dollar. If we are to have unlimited coinage, we may as well give the privilege to all peoples, rather than to the individual holder of the bullion. It is the effect of the government that gives the coined dollar the value that it has and will be made in gold.

Quality Not Quantity.

The advocates of free coinage said it was necessary to give the country a larger volume of money, but the experience taught quality not quantity was first to be considered. Poor money, however plentiful, would soon prove to be a grave disaster, and the first in the land to feel its disastrous effect would be the laborer and the farmer. The United States, too, today had a per capita circulation greater than that of any other civilized country on earth except France. Besides that, by the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver we were adding about $4,500,000 to the legal tender treasury notes monthly to the volume of our currency. None of the civilized countries of Europe at this time, he said, permitted the free coinage of silver except in limited quantities. Unlimited coinage would bring us the world's silver. We could not maintain the parity of the metals and would soon be placed by the side of Mexico and the Asiatic countries with a currency fluctuating in value and having an ever increasing downward tendency. The $600,000,000 in gold we now have, and the $700,000,000 to $750,000,000 we are soon to have, would vanish, creating the most disastrous contraction of the currency which this country has ever seen.

Continuing, Mr. Foster said:

Concerning the Present Policy.

Let no one deceive himself into the belief that we would not deluge us with silver. Under the stimulus of the present law silver advanced fifteen to twenty cents per ounce. The effect was to promptly bring to our shore over $27,000,000 of foreign silver, thus flooding our market and compelling a decline in price to the point from which the advance began. Add thirty cents per ounce to the present value and it will not be long before the silver ought to forth. The Republican party proposes conservative action. It has, in my opinion, gone as far as prudence will permit in the matter of silver legislation. But for the loosing exciting action that public sentiment in this country is such as to compel the adoption of unlimited free coinage, we could make some agreement with other countries of silver, if not a complete international agreement.

I do not see any immediate danger from the present policy. The redemption in silver dollars of paper issued for the purchase of silver bullion on equal dollar's worth of bullion behind it. The act does not require coinage for the purpose of redeeming the treasury notes issued in payment for bullion—the coinage of silver dollars.

Modern civilization, together with the legislation of the Republican party, have demonstrated the value of gold as the representative over gold or silver coin. When we coin gold and lay it up we stand up the product in the treasury of the United States, and issue certificates for these gold and silver dollars, which the people use in preference to the gold and silver coin itself, and if you are offered more than five dollars in silver you absolutely rebel against taking it. Look, then, what is the use of going to the expense of coining either gold or silver, and after it is coined to stack it up in the treasury and issue certificates against it? Why not issue certificates for the bullion and save the trouble and expense of coinage?

In the recent elections in Maryland and New York the latter state has declared for free coinage by a majority of 47,000. In Maryland and New York the Democratic party has declared for free coinage in their state platforms, and in one state only has the Democratic party declared itself in favor of a sound currency. The success of the Democratic party in Ohio this year means that unlighted free coinage of silver will be the issue of the next election in 1892 and Democratic success in the nation means that this country must go upon a silver basis. Let us contribute what we can to the work going on a silver standard. When Europe is convinced that we will not adopt the policy of free and unlimited coinage we will be able to come to some agreement for the better use of silver, if not at once to an international agreement, by which the parity of the two metals upon an agreed rate may be maintained. The Republican policy is the policy of safety. The Democratic policy the policy of demoralization and disaster.

The McKinley Bill.

Mr. Foster said the McKinley bill has been in force eleven months. He read the utterances of leading Democrats in congress when the bill was under considera tion, declaring that it would require a very powerful microscope to find the figures of outlay. Every farmer will understand the advantage of being able to quickly see the movements of his employees or stock. It saves almost one-half of his farm, to observe insects upon fruit trees, &c. In the QUEEN'S FARMER'S FIELD GLASS he will have an instrument essential for these purposes.

REDMOND TO RULE NOW

He Announces That He Has Succeeded Parnell.

BLACKTHORNS AND PISTOLS READY

Fears That Blood May Be Shed by the Rival Factions of the Irish Party in Ireland—The Stock of Shillalahs Has Nearly Run Out.

CORK, Oct. 23.—John E. Redmond announced last night that he spoke "as the elected leader of the parliamentary party." Mr Redmond is the Parnellite candidate for the vacant seat of Parnell in the house of commons. Pierce Mahony, member of parliament for North Meath, in addressing a meeting of the National league yesterday, declared that he was ready to follow the new leader, Mr. John E. Redmond, as loyally as he had followed Parnell.

Who Redmond Is.

John E. Redmond is a young man under forty, a native of County Wexford. His father represented the borough of Wexford at one time. John E. Redmond is a fluent and able speaker and a man of sound judgment. With his brother, William, also a member of parliament, he visited Australia in 1883 and organized 200 branches of the National league, where there had been none, and sent $75,000 home to aid the cause. One their way home, in 1884, they spoke in all the large cities of this country and aroused great enthusiasm. In jess the Redmond brothers were arrested at Wexford for offenses under the crimes act and sentenced to five weeks' imprisonment without hard labor.

Made Him Pray for Parnell.

During the altercations that attended Redmond's progress to the hotel last evening an excited McCarthyite uttered aloud an assertion that Parnell was in a place the reverse of heaven and that his followers ought to be there too. This so angered a crowd of Parnellites that they captured the McCarthyite and compelled him to kneel down in the street and pray for Parnell until there were other incidents almost equally indecorous and exciting.

The Stock of Blackthorns Exhausted.

General Wolseley, who commands the troops in Ireland, will spend much of his time in Cork until after the election. The stock of blackthorns and heavy sticks is almost exhausted and the dealers are ordering more. These handy weapons are to be used, it is expected, as arguments in the coming election. Partisans on both sides are armed with pistols.

Anna Parnell's Fright.

Miss Anna Parnell, sister of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, writes a letter to the press in which she expresses her disbelief in the sincerity of Liberalist professions of a desire to secure autonomy for Ireland. Miss Parnell declares that ever since the perpetration of the Phœnix park outrages she has been frightened at the tendency among a certain class of Irish politicians to adopt an attitude of servility toward England, and to contribute to the monstrous growth of the Gladstone boom.

TELLER GARCIA'S BIG SHORTAGE.

He Is $190,000 in Arrears—How He Fooled the Bank Examiners.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 23.—The Louisiana National bank has made public the fact that it had been robbed by its paying teller of $190,000. The theft was discovered six days ago by the bank officials through an accident. The robbery in some respects is so peculiar that there is hesitancy in accepting the story told by the paying teller, Eugene Garcia, as to why and how he stole the money. He is an old man of excellent creole family, and has held the office for many years.

According to his story he discovered sixteen years ago that he was $50,000 short in his accounts. By some mistake which he never understood he had overpaid some check. Fearing that if it was discovered he would be accused of dishonesty or held responsible for the loss, Garcia decided to conceal it, hoping to make good the money in some way.

He resorted to a simple but dangerous trick. In making up packages of money he would place a few hundred dollar bills at the top and bottom, the rest of the package being composed of one dollar bills. These packages were marked "$5,000 and $10,000," although containing only $500 and $1,000, and were stored in the vault of the bank, only occasionally being sent to other banks.

Finding that his scheme was not discovered, Garcia became bolder. He took a position in the bank and has used it in various wildcat schemes. The defalcation grew larger and larger, until it reached a total of $190,000.

The national bank examiners examined the bank a dozen times, but could see nothing wrong about it, and not the slightest suspicion was caused until six days ago. Having need for some money, a package in the vault supposed to contain $10,000 was opened by one of the officials, when it was discovered that instead of containing $100 bills all but two of the bills were of the ten-dollar denomination. A second package and a third disclosed the same fraud. Garcia is under arrest.

MRS. SEARLES' DIARY READ.

She Thought Edward the Most Distinguished Looking Gentleman in Europe.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 23.—More business letters from Stillman & Hayward to Mrs. Searles were read in the continued hearing of the Searles will case. Mr Burley then questioned Mr. Searles concerning the books of accounts of the copartnership. Mr Searles did not know anything of the contents of the books. Witness did not know where the suggestion came from to stop Timothy's income from the executors of Mrs. Searles' estate of June 18, 1888.

When Timothy arrived at Methuen witness had already made arrangements to go away, but did so in order to welcome him; and witness then told Timothy that he had to go to Barrington to look after the work and went there. There was no secrecy about the partnership; never heard his wife, between June 1 and July 16, 1888, express any wish as to the disposition of any part of her property.

Mrs. Wilson read the diary kept by Mrs. Searles during the wedding tour in Europe. The diary started off very briefly after their arrival.

"Nov. 8, 1887. Married at Trinity chapel. 11 a. m., breakfasted at Delmonico's. The next day they were paid visits and from there to Methuen. On Nov 23, 1887, they were on the Atlantic ocean etc.

On Jan. 18, 1888, she had the blues, and said so in the journal. On this day she wrote, "The Bible says of love that many waters cannot quench it," and again she wrote in a solemn strain, "Man should write it in capitals 'Christ loved the church.'" Once in Germany she wrote that the harmony of their lives was something remarkable, for which she fervently returned thanks.

At Florence she went out to ride. There were princes, princesses and dukes. When Edward introduced her she thought him the "most distinguished looking gentleman" she had seen in Europe. Mr Searles laughed aloud when this was read.

Soon after reading of the diary was finished William W. Dodge, the man who drew the will for Mrs. Searles, was put on the stand.

Mr. Dodge, was the phraseology of this will original with you?" asked Mr Burley.

"Yes, sir. No one said anything to me about the language in which I was to couch the will."

Mr. Searles then took the stand. He said that when he left the employ of Hooper Brothers in 1865 he considered himself worth from $500,000 to $300,000 in real estate and stocks. He considered that enough to take care of. He went west entirely for his health, and delivered the letter to Mrs. Hopkins during the first week of his stay in San Francisco. He was invited to visit Menlo park, about thirty miles from San Francisco, with her Mr. Timothy Hopkins brought this invitation to me.

He called at the house the evening he left and stayed after the ease. The next morning a servant called at his hotel and gave him a note from Mrs. Hopkins. This was in May, Mrs. Hopkins soon came east to Great Barrington. Searles met her by appointment there.

He went to supper at her house, and while there went with his package to Mrs. Hopkins' house from his hotel, and after that he was domiciled at the house. Mr. Searles said that in 1884 Mrs. Hopkins decided to have him build a house for her. He supposed he would be paid as usual, but learned later that he would not. "I thought I would be paid in the end some way," said the witness.

READING THE TESTIMONY.

Senators at Harrisburg Listen to What McCamant Said at Other Examinations.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 23.—The senate discussed for several hours a proposition to admit all the testimony taken by the state treasury and the Philadelphia councilmanic investigating committee, which has not before been accepted as evidence. The attorney general stated that if all the testimony were ordered to be printed the extra session would not end for several months. A number of senators insisted that unless they knew the character of the evidence given by Auditor General McCamant and other witnesses in connection with the charges made against that official they would not be in a position to properly pass on the case. Finally the proposition to admit the large volume of testimony was modified so as to admit a portion of it, excluive of all the remarks made by the members of the investigating committees, which the chair thought it was adopted.

At the afternoon and night sessions the time of the senate was occupied in having the testimony read for the information of the senators. The reading of the record of all this testimony admitted was made by one of McCamant's counsel, and the attorney general was of the opinion that its purpose was to shut off a further examination of the auditor general, or at least to prevent a repetition of much of this evidence, which has been given three or four times without material variation. The attorney general is determined, notwithstanding the action of the senate, to conduct the examination without regard to the character of much of the evidence.

JOSIE MANSFIELD.

TWENTY YEARS AGO HER FAME WAS WORLD WIDE.

Colonel Fisk's Favorite—E. S. Stokes Was Too Attentive—Fisk and Stokes Quarrel and Fisk Is Killed—Her Recent Marriage Recalls It All.

People do not seem to tire of gossiping about the recent marriage of "Josie Mansfield, nor is this matter for wonder, as twenty years or so ago her name was a familiar one in New York city, and, for that matter, throughout the Continent.

Her fame, too, extended to foreign lands. As she dashed, in the later sixties and early seventies, through Central Park in a splendid equipage, provided by James Fisk, she was the cynosure of all eyes. Her rich costumes were envied by women who love dress. Her faultless limbs was reviled even more. Resplendent in diamonds and finery, the gift of Erie's king, her fame was in every mouth.

But this seeming blaze of glory was fugitive and soon passed away. There was a quarrel between Fisk and Miss Mansfield. Edward S. Stokes, Fisk's expartner and companion, was too attentive to Josie, and Fisk who furnished the gorgeous apartments where the woman lived of his choosing, became jealous.

He remonstrated, and was answered only by a threat that his letters to Miss Mansfield would be published. He got out an injunction to prevent this. The final scene was on the staircase of the Grand Central Hotel on Broadway, when Fisk was shot by Stokes. It was Stokes's passion for Josie that was believed to have inspired the act.

JOSIE MANSFIELD.

After his death the woman sued Colonel Fisk's widow for $200,000 which she claimed the dead man owed her, but she did not win her suit. She went to Boston. The populace hooted her as she passed through the streets, and she finally found a more congenial exile in Paris. There she still lives in a little house near the Avenue Perriere. Three years ago it was reported that she was dead.

The announcement of her marriage at St. George's Church, London, sent a thrill through those who remember her as she was in her prime. It seemed indeed, one said, as hearing of one who had risen from the dead. Her husband, Robert L. Reade, a lawyer, having an office in New York City, attended by a party of friends before he sailed for Europe, that Miss Mansfield was the only person who could save him from drinking himself to death. His sister married General Strachan, Governor of the Bermudas. His mother is a cousin of Mrs. Levi P. Morton.

OLD TIME STAGE ROBBERIES.

When Prominent Merchants Became Highwaymen

Stage robbing was almost a legitimate business in early days. Big merchants in San Francisco and other cities of the Pacific slope had a hand in it and made a lot of money out of Wells, Fargo & Co. There were lots of men whose notions of right and wrong got queerly twisted in the rough and tumble pioneer life, and they considered it no stain on the character of a gentleman to go out and hold up a stage when he needed a stake.

A merchant would say to one of these men, "I am going to ship $20,000 by Wells, Fargo to-morrow. You get it and we'll divide." You see, the express company had to make good the loss, and the shipper would get his money back, with a clean profit of $10,000. It beat selling goods all hollow. The road agent would go out and hold up the stage, and if he happened to get caught he was not in much danger of doing time for it. Powerful influence was used secretly in his behalf, and the chances were that a man or two would be put on the jury to save him.

The express company lost a great deal of money in that way, and at last James Gannon was sent up to Virginia City to break up the business. He was a shrewd man, and he devised more schemes for outwitting the road agents than you ever heard of. He sent treasure in sacks of potatoes, which were loaded on prairie schooners, and even the drivers were suspected that they were carrying anything more valuable than potatoes.

He was known to drop a bar of bullion into a cask of molasses and send it through safely when he knew the agents were watching for it. It was Gannon who thought of sending shotgun messengers on the stages, and he made them carry their guns with the muzzles resting on their toes, so that they didn't dare to fall asleep. He broke up stage robbing as a branch of the general mercantile business by making it too risky.

A Group of Kingly Giants.

The most remarkable feature of the assemblage of royal and imperial personages at Copenhagen recently is their enormous stature. With the exception of the Prince of Wales, of his son George, and of his uncle-in-law, the Duke of Fife, who seem like three pygmies among giants, all the men including the Czar, the King of Greece, the King of Denmark, the Crown Prince of Denmark, Prince George of Greece, and Prince Waldemar and Christian of Denmark, are over six feet high. Towering over them all, however, is the Crown Princess of Denmark. Her stature is absolutely gigantic, being over six feet three.

In a hotel not 100 miles from the top of the Rigi, the following announcement given great satisfaction: "Misters the venerable voyagers are advertised that when the sun him rise a horn will be blowed." The announcement sufficiently prepares the visitor for the following entry in the wine list: "In this hotel the wines leave the travelers nothing to hope for."—Notes and Queries.

A WONDERFUL RUNNER.

James Kibblewhite, the Great English Amateur Champion.

Probably the greatest amateur runner in England, in fact the world, from one to five miles, is James Kibblewhite of the Spartan Harriers. He was born at Purton, near Swindon, Wiltshire, Eng., Feb. 6, 1866, is five feet nine and a half inches in height, and weighs 144 pounds. His success as a runner must be classed as remarkable, and he has won so many prizes that at all the prominent affairs in the neighborhood of his town the numerous and costly trophies are placed on exhibition. He is employed as a machinist in the Great Western Railway Works at Swindon, and through the interest of those in authority is permitted plenty of leisure to get in first-class condition. He has won the one-mile championship of England three years in succession, Southern counties cross-country championship, this year's National cross-country championship, and 1890's four and ten-mile championships, besides several sectional county championships. His success in handicaps has been great. He holds several of the world's distance records, his fourteen minutes 22-5 seconds for three miles being probably his best performance. What was undoubtedly the most sensational performance in the annals of sport since W. G. George's great mile in 4 minutes 12 2-5 seconds, was Kibblewhite's win at the games of the Finchley Harriers on Aug. 17, 1889. He had won the scratch mile run in fast time and came out for the handicap mile run. He was, of course, on the mark of honor, and stretched out in front of him on the narrow quarter-mile path 190 runners with various long starts. It seemed incredible that the scratch man could work his way through this struggling mass, and everybody was astonished to see Kibblewhite come out of the ruck in the finishing straight in the astonishing time of 4 minutes 22 3-5 seconds. He must have run considerably over a mile, being on the outside of his men, and when it is considered that he must have been interfered with a dozen times or more the performance becomes wonderful.

JAMES KIBBLEWHITE.

"His Highness."

Now that the racing in New York State has ended, owners and trainers have a letup for four months in which to count up their profits. Away ahead in point of interest, because of his tremendous winnings and of the grand style in which he met and conquered his field, is "Hi" of the year, was the phenomenal His Highness, grandest colt that ever trod the turf. His Highness is here with the guiness stamp of royalty upon him. There is none to dispute his claims to imperial sovereignty. He won them in battles that will live as long as the bridle path to the memory of great struggles of royal thoroughbreds.

First as he is in gameness, fleetness and all that makes a great colt the champion of the year, he deservedly leads all in the amount of money won for his owners. In stakes and purses he placed to his credit more than $105,000, the greatest sum ever won in a single season by any racehorse of any age in this country. And what grand contests they were in which he was victor! Who that saw them will ever forget the sensational double event, his victory in the brilliant Great Trial Stakes, his gallant and successful fight with a mountain of weight in the Amboy Handicap, his crowning victory in the greatest of our Futurities? It mattered not who he met nor what the conditions of track and weight, his peerless speed and heart that knew not failing carried him through in regal style. True he was handled well, but withal was as great as Tremont and was greater far than ever was other two-year-old. It is but just in speaking of him to add a tribute of praise for his trainer, John Hyland, and for the jockey, Marty Bergen, who piloted him so often to victory. The trio were unbeatable throughout the year.

Another Famous St. Bernard.

The New York St. Bernard kennels have just bought of H. H. R. Chapman the famous St. Bernard bitch Princess Florence. Princess Florence is the best descendant of old Dictimnon, being by Prince Regent out of Lady Ida, who also claims as a sire Emmett's famous dog. As a puppy she beat at the age of nine months the famous bitch Peggotty. She excels in every way all the St. Bernards that figure in her pedigree. Her markings are everything to be desired. She was bred by Thomas Smith, of Birmingham, England, and soon after passed into the hands of Hedley Chapman, who has won every honor of the show ring with her.

Young Keeper has also been purchased by the same kennels. This dog is a very promising puppy and should be a good one. The price paid is not known, but is in the neighborhood of $3,000.

The New York St. Bernard kennels have now captured the well known Prince Regent stock in America, and will, with Kingston Regent, Marquis of Ripon, Princess Florence and Young Keeper of Republican Belle make a very strong bid for the kennel prize in the coming shows.

Windle Breaks a Record.

The one-mile world's bicycle record has been lowered by Willie Windle at Springfield, Mass., on October 17. He lowered the American one-mile record from 2 minutes 18 seconds, held by P. J. Berlo, and the English record of 2 minutes 18 seconds, held by F. J. Osmond.

Windle rode a mile in 2 minutes 15 seconds. He was paced by George Taylor, H. C. Tyler and H. B. Arnold. The track was in splendid shape, and the weather favorable for fast time.

H. C. Tyler, in an attempt to lower the half-mile record, succeeded in equaling Arthur Zimmerman's record of 1 minute 6 seconds. Windle has been in active training for this event, and from his exhibition it is assumed that he will be able to ride the mile in 2 minutes and 12 seconds.

Players Who May Shift.

If the rumor is right, Brouthers and Joyce will play in Brooklyn next season. The same authority gives Tom Burns to Milwaukee. Beckley is to play elsewhere than in Pittsburg, Latham and McPhee are two men booked for Von der Ahe's aggregation, and it is said the latter has an eye on Dan Richardson. Cincinnati, New York and Pittsburg will be thoroughly reorganized, Indianapolis will want Brouthers, a Conner or a Beckley to play first.

How to Shop for One's Wife.

To do a lady's shopping is one of the most difficult and disagreeable tasks which ever falls to the lot of man. A man, unless he be a "man milliner," is no judge of the articles he is usually asked to buy, and he even has no intelligent opinion about them. Nor does he know what they should cost. There is no chance whatever that he will make a bargain. So as to reduce the chance of mistakes to a minimum a man when shopping for his wife should get from her before he starts out the minutest directions as to each article and write these directions in his notebook in full. He should learn what each article ought to cost and also inform himself wherein and how far he was to use his own discretion. With such directions, if a man will go to a shop and confess his ignorance and exhibit his orders, he will be taken charge of and provided with everything he desires. Some men are troubled with an inclination to think that they know it all. No better school of discipline could be devised for such men than to have to do a lady's shopping. That will take all the conceit out of them.

How to Save Stair Carpets.

Place a strip of very thick paper over the edge of each step, so that is where the carpet wears fastest. It should be about five inches wide and within an inch or so as long as the carpet is wide.

How to Dress for a Rainy Day.

This is one woman's way: She has discarded all sorts of rubber cloaks and wears a long woolen or waterproof circular, with pointed hood to wear while, except in winter or a very hard rain. She has a rainy day dress of good though not very expensive woolen material, which is not hurt by mud or rain. This comes out with the falling of the barometer. A little knack at lifting enables her to lift it when going up or down wet steps, so that it does not get very muddy. Of course there is a dark petticoat underneath it. After these garments are wet and muddy they are hung to dry, brushed and, if necessary, pressed. Rubber overshoes and gaiters protect the feet, and an umbrella and hat, minus ostrich feathers and velvet, both of which are changed by rain, completes this weather defying costume.

How to Remove a Particle from the Eye.

Take a horsehair and double it to make a loop. If the particle can be seen, lay the loop over it, close the eye gently and draw out the loop. It will nearly always bring the object with it. If the particle cannot be seen, raise the lid as high as possible and place the loop on the ball, widely extended, then close the eye and let the ball be rolled about a few times, after which draw the loop as before.

How to Clear Sugar.

Take a little gum arabic and a little isinglass dissolved in hot water and pour it in the sugar while the latter is boiling. It will cause all the sediment to boil to the top of the pan, where it must be skimmed off. Loaf sugar may be cleared with the white of an egg, isinglass or gum arabic.

How to Make a Cheap Paint for Outside Use.

Farmers will find the following a good receipt for making an excellent and cheap paint for outdoor buildings, fences and poultry houses: Take one-half bushel of good unslacked lime; slack it with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process, so that as little of the steam as possible may escape. Strain the liquid through a sieve and add to it a peck of salt dissolved in warm water and three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste. Stir in boiling hot one-half pound of Spanish whiting and a pound of white glue and five gallons of hot water. Let the mixture stand a few days, covered from dust, and apply hot with a whitewash brush. If another color than white be desired, Spanish brown, yellow ocher or other colors may be added with the exception of green. This is a good paint for all outdoor woodwork, brick or stone.

How to Cure Rattlesnake Bite.

Out of many experimented with, the following receipt has proved the greater success: Iodide of potassium 4 grains, corrosive sublimate 2 grains, bromine 4 drams. It must be kept in a glass vial well stopped, as the air affects it. Ten drops diluted in two tablespoonfuls of whisky or brandy is the first dose. It may be repeated in one hour or two if relief is not secured, or a third the amount may be given sooner. Dr. Hammond often had occasion to test this in the Rocky mountains and gives it the preference.

How to Make a Good Salad Dressing.

Be a niggard with vinegar and a prodigal with oil. In these few words lies the secret of salad dressing. Take one-quarter of a tablespoonful of salt; three drops of tabasco sauce or an equivalent amount of red pepper; half a salt spoonful of black pepper; one tablespoonful of vinegar and three and one-half tablespoonfuls of oil. Rub all these ingredients together in the bottom of a soup plate with the back of a fork, and the dressing is made. A salad is usually much improved by the addition of a piece of bread on which garlic has been grated or by the insertion of a few slices of onion.

How to Make Pillow Shams Stay Up Without Holders.

Fasten tapes or narrow elastics at the upper corners of the shams, placing them across the corners so they cut off triangles. The elastics can then be slipped over the upper corners of the pillows, and if the latter are show pillows, big and fat and stuffed with excelsior, they can be lifted off, shams and all, at night.

This Date in History—Oct. 23.

LORD JEFFREY.

1641—Uprising of the Irish against the English occupation; frightful massacres followed, and Cromwell confiscated four-fifths of the land of Ireland.

1642—Battle of Edgehill, the first between Charles I and the Parliamentarians; the latter retreated.

1773—Francis Lord Jeffrey, eminent critic and chief founder of the Edinburgh Review, born at Edinburgh; died 1850; he fought a duel with Tom Moore, had a savage controversy with Byron, but became reconciled to both.

1861—"Bleeding Kansas" at West Liberty and Hodgensville, Ky.

1864—The militia of Kansas and Missouri and a squad of regular cavalry fought Price's rear guard at Westport, Mo.

1874—Commander Austin Pendergast, of the receiving ship Potomac, died; also Commodore William Inman, who was famous in 1858-61 for having taken 3,000 negroes from slavers and returned them to their homes.

Changed the Subject.

One of the most difficult things to do gracefully is to change the subject in unpleasant conversation, but the small boy can do it if circumstances make it necessary.

"Thomas, will you please tell me why you pulled up the onions from my Danvers onion bed? How many times have I told you to keep away from the garden?" Thomas saw that the case was bad, and his grandfather went on to depict the evil fate that was sure to befall boys who went around destroying what their elders had planted.

Meantime, Thomas had pulled himself together, and as the harangue was concluded he said, with a smile, referring to an event of the previous week:

"Pity our old rooster died, wasn't it, grandpa?"—Youth's Companion.

Minced or stewed potatoes or any preparation of that sort should never be stirred with an iron spoon, as it is in many kitchens. A plated silver fork kept for the purpose or a wooden salad fork is much better

Ovens will not bake well unless the flues and bottoms are clean. When an oven burns on the bottom cover it half an inch with clean sand; if it burns on the top put a layer of sand or ashes over it.

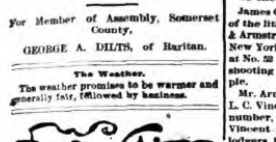
The Weather.

The weather seems to be warmer and generally fair, followed by business.



—There will be a "Stuggaragnette" time at the F. B. Ch. House to-night.

—Mr. C. H. Miller of this city has been granted a patent on a link valve motion.

—A number of Plainfielders will go to New York this evening to witness the closing of the six days' bicycle contest.

—Mr. Gable, the wife of John B. Gable, who eloped with Mrs. Wm. B. Avery, went to Jersey to plain the wedge for families.

—"Our Boys" will be presented at Music Hall Monday evening under the auspices of Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3401, Knights of Honor.

—"Esmeralda," the fame of which is more than ordinary, promises to attract one of the finest audiences ever seen at the Casino.

—Smalley Bros. expect to have everything in readiness to order and to be able to furnish crushed stone, as heretofore, within two weeks.

—Sportsmen while out gunning should respect "no trespass" signs and bear in mind that it is a farmer time and money to build fences.

—Judge Paschal of Texas has refused to grant final naturalization papers to a man who is a Socialist and a believer in the teachings of Herr Most.

—Testimony has been taken this week before Mr. E. S. Atwater at Elizabeth in the case of the Plainfield Gas Company against the city of Plainfield.

—The handsome silver card receiver presented to Alert Hose Company at the recent parade in Elizabeth is on exhibition in Hallock & Davis' window.

—The Salvation Army has leased the old Council Chamber on West Front street and on and after November 1st, they will hold services therein.

—At the next regular meeting of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, W. O. of I. O. L., to be held Monday evening, Oct. 26th, four candidates will be initiated into the order.

—The interior of Mr. J. B. Dumont's handsome residence corner of Seventh street and Broadway is being handsomely decorated by Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co.

—Hear the tenor solo by Mr. Bennett at the men's meeting in the M. E. church to-morrow at 4 p. m. He is a Senior at Princeton and a member of the University Glee Club.

—The tract of land belonging to the estate of the late Eugene V. Lorton on West Fifth street is to be sold early next month by the administrators, Messrs. Washton & Buckle.

—A number of the Swedish residents of this city have organized themselves into a society and hold meetings every Friday evening in Mr. O. U. A. M. rooms on East Front street.

—The "shoot" which was to have taken place at the Campbell Club House last Thursday was postponed until next Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, on account of the storm.

—Kelly, the tramp who was arrested yesterday afternoon by Policeman Bloy for vagrancy, was this morning given twenty minutes to get out of town by Chief Justice Codington.

—The storm of Thursday prevented the proposed bowling match between the Middlesex and Dunellen bowling teams, for the Middlesex challenge cup. The match has been postponed indefinitely.

—In another column Mr. N. B. Smalley offers a reward of $300 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set fire to his stone crusher at an early hour yesterday morning.

—The Citizens' League of the State of New Jersey has just issued an earnest appeal to the moral and religious people of the State, which intimates that an energetic effort will be made to elect a Legislature friendly to fair race tracks.

—Mr. Wood, who is one of Princeton's most prominent foot ball players, will be one of the delegation of six Princeton students who will take part in the Y. M. C. A. Meeting in the M. E. Church to-morrow at four p. m. Mr. Wood has played on the University team for the past two years.

—Major-General O. O. Howard, U. S. A., will have been identified with the Young Men's Christian Association for nearly thirty years, and his sincere conviction is that it is one of the most practical and useful institutions in existence, and the more I know it the more decided is my admiration for it."

—There were 230 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 198 in the preceding week and 202, 190, 208 and 215 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures to the United States January 1st to date is 2,616, against 3,187 in 1890.

—Miss Marie Wainwright has met such brilliant success at Palmer's Theatre in New York in her presentation of "Amy Robsart" that her engagement has been twice prolonged. It will end on Oct. 31st. The matinees have been so crowded that extra performances have been given on Wednesday next Oct. 28.

—Van Emburgh & Wyth have another improvement in their house-furnishing goods department. There they have added many new lines of goods that those interested in, by keeping a clothes-horse, and from the amount of business they are doing they must be selling goods at prices that are popular with the people.

DEATH BY SHOOTING.

THE MAN SAID TO BE A PLAINFIELDER.

His Name, James G. Armstrong, not Found in the Directory.—Financial Trouble and Despondency Said to be the Cause of the Suicide.

James G. Armstrong, once a member of the lithographing firm of Korff Bros. & Armstrong, of No. 107 Liberty street, New York, committed suicide yesterday at No. 52 West Twenty-Sixth street, by shooting himself through the right temple.

Mr. Armstrong rented a room from Dr. L. C. Vincent, who lives at the above number, about five weeks ago. Mrs. Vincent and Miss Powell, one of the lodgers, heard a pistol shot coming from Armstrong's room at ten o'clock yesterday morning. They found Armstrong upon the floor unconscious. By his side lay the revolver. He died two hours later. Deputy Coroner Jenkins viewed the body this afternoon and issued a permit for its removal.

Mr. Armstrong was forty-five years old and a bachelor. He had lately been a resident of Plainfield. He came originally from the South and it had been his custom for several years to spend his Winters in Florida. He was a member of the firm of Korff Brothers & Armstrong for twenty years.

He had lived at the Astor House and Hotel Brunswick. He had the reputation of being a free liver and capable of being prodigal with his money. He had been known to spend $100 over a single bar for drinks in an evening. His weakness was champagne.

About a year ago a misunderstanding arose between Mr. Armstrong and his partners. Mr. Armstrong went out and the firm became Korff Bros. & Co. Mr. Armstrong received a liberal sum for his interest. This he soon squandered in the most reckless manner.

He secured employment about six months ago as a solicitor for Klim, Linder & Bauer, of No. 10 Water street. But for his extravagant tastes and love of drink he might have done very well. His old habits, however, overcame him and he was in poor health and lance.

He left some keys in an envelope directed to F. M. Eppley, No. 140 Nassau street. The only evidences of his intent to commit suicide were two scraps of paper. They were evidently intended for any of his late friends who might inquire themselves in his behalf. One stated that he had pledged his watch with the barkeeper at the Gedney House for $2 and that his bar bill there was $5. The other referred to some portraits left at an uptown auction house and contained a brief request to "sell everything and pay what I owe."

The funeral will take place to-morrow. The body will be buried at Greenwood Cemetery at the expense of friends.

THE CRESCENTS WON.

An Interesting Bowling Contest on the Alleys Last Evening.

One of the closest and most interesting bowling contests that has ever taken place in this city was the one which was rolled on the Crescent League alleys last evening, between the Crescent League Bowling team and the Elizabeth Athletic Club's team. The Crescents won by sixty-three pins. The individual scores are as follows:

CRESCENTS.	R.	A.	C.

A New Base Ball League.

At a meeting held in Elizabeth Thursday evening, a league to be known as the Central New Jersey Base Ball League was formed. The clubs will include Plainfield, Westfield, Somerville and Elizabeth. The following officers were elected:

President—William A. Codding of Westfield.

Vice President—Charles A. Reed of this city.

Secretary and Treasurer — Louis C. Mack of Somerville.

It was decided that each club should play six League games, none of which are to be played on holidays.

The Grand Orient Degree.

The team from Crescent Division, No. 13, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, at a meeting of Perseverance Lodge No. 74, Knights of Pythias, held last evening, conferred the Grand Orient Degree on eight candidates. The team was made up as follows: Acting Grand Orient George H. Polhemus, Grand Vice Orient Morgan Turton and Sir Knights J. E. Flannery and Jacob Blimm, Jr.

Wrecked the Wheel.

Wednesday George Belyeu and a companion hired a rig and went to Bound Brook fishing. When the were returning in the evening one of the wheels of the vehicle caught in the railroad track which they were crossing and was wrecked. The occupants of the carriage escaped injury.

ACTION ON SEVERAL PLAINFIELD CASES THIS MORNING.

Dr. Cooley, and the Publishers and Editor of the Press, Plead to the Indictments Against Them.

Wm. L. Force, Albert L. Force and James A. Demarest were called upon to answer to the indictment found against them for criminal libel before the court at Elizabeth this morning. Craig A. Marsh answered for them by pleading not guilty, reserving the right to defendants to withdraw the plea and move to quash or demur to the indictment as they might be advised. Prosecuting Attorney Fred C. Marsh said that he could not try the case this term, later than Nov. 4th or 5th. Defendants counsel replied that the court was aware of the fact that his engagements in court would make it impossible for him to try the case for the defendants before the middle of November. Defendants were extremely desirous of having the case tried this term, but they would have to ask Prosecutor counsel to defend them unless they were willing to have the case go over to January term of court. Mr. A. L. Force said that they would not be satisfied with other counsel. They wanted Mr. Marsh to try the case for them and made a postponement necessary. Upon this, the court ordered the postponement.

Bail was fixed at five hundred dollars for each defendant and was furnished by Frecholder Vanderbeek.

Dr. Cooley Pleads Not Guilty, and Announced Himself Ready.

Ex-Mayor Cooley was present at the Union county court this morning with his Counsel, Mr. Chas. Reed, and pleaded not guilty to the indictment charging that he was maintaining a nuisance, in keeping a private asylum for the insane. His counsel announced that he was ready to proceed, but the court set the case down for trial on the third Tuesday in January at the next term of court. Dr. Cooley was released on his own recognizance. He regards the complaint as a bit of persecution, as he had already prepared to remove as quickly as possible.

Indicted for Assault.

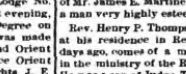
Thomas Dowd was taken to Elizabeth by Constable Rockafellow this morning to plead to an indictment charging him with assault and battery on a woman residing at Cranford. Dowd pleaded not guilty and furnished bonds for his appearance at trial. He is the same fellow who tried to have Plainfield policemen indicted for arresting him for disorderly conduct, and in whom the combine seemed to have special interest.

Suing Mr. Colthar.

The case of R. G. Chase & Co. vs. Isaac Colthar came on for trial this morning. The plaintiffs sued defendant for ten dollars, money alleged to have been due on fruit trees ordered by him. The defense was that he had ordered the trees but they had not been delivered to him but stored in a dark shed, and that when he found them all but two of them were dead. The jury rendered a verdict of $1 for the plaintiff's and ordered that they should pay the costs of the suit. Ridley & Hane represented the plaintiffs and Wm. A. Coddington, the defendant.

An Engine Disabled.

Thursday afternoon the Washington express for New York, slowing up at Bound Brook station, ran upon an open switch and into some empty freight cars. The engine was disabled and one empty car wrecked.



Miss Louise Kuenlin of Dunellen is enjoying a few weeks' visit with friends in New York.

Mr. George Benson, an employe of Messrs. Woolston & Buckle, the painters, is the happy father of a boy, who first saw light last Wednesday morning.

Mr. Fred. Cutter of this city was a guest at the wedding of Miss Alice W. Gray, daughter of ex-Councilman Gray of Rahway, and Mr. Harry T. Crawford of Williamsport, Pa., which occurred at Rahway last Tuesday.

Ex-Director C. W. L. Martine, of the Union County Board of Freeholders, died very suddenly at his home in Fanwood at about one o'clock yesterday afternoon. Apoplexy is assigned as the cause of death. Deceased was a cousin of Mr. James E. Martine of this city, and a man very highly esteemed.

Rev. Henry P. Thompson, who expired at his residence in Readington, a few days ago, was one of a ministerial family in the ministry of the Reformed church. He was a son of Judge Thompson, late of the Somerset Co. court, and had been for many years an invalid through a stroke of paralysis, which cut short a promising career. He was for a time a Methodist church at Peapack. Since then he has led a retired life at the old homestead in Readington, where he contributed frequently to the religious press and periodicals. He was buried to-day in the family plot at Readington, his relatives in this city attended the obsequies.

—A lecture by Mr. Max O'Rell, entitled "America as Seen Through French Spectacles," will be given at the Casino, Nov. 5th, (Thursday evening), under the auspices of the Hillside Tennis Club.

HOW TO PREVENT IT.

THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH'S ADVICE RESPECTING SMALLPOX.

Means that Should be Adopted to Prevent Its Spread.—How to Act in the Sick Room.—Persons Who are Susceptible to the Contagion. The Great Merit of Vaccination.

The circular of the State Board of Health, of which Dr. E. M. Hunt is President, gives the following facts in regard to smallpox and how to prevent its spread. The disease is communicated from one to another from the pustules chiefly of the skin. Its contagion is very diffusive and continues for a long time in the scabs and pustules.

Smallpox appears about twelve days after the exposure. Every person suspected or known to be sick of smallpox should be isolated at once and the clothing of nurses should be of such material that it will admit of boiling and washing in order to disinfect.

Persons entering the sick room should not take off such garments as hats, coats or gloves, as they may thus enfold and convey infective particles when put on again. Persons who are hungry or fatigued or without food in the stomach are more susceptible to contagious diseases than others.

Nurses should be scrupulously clean and if compelled to mingle with others should first wash with some disinfectant and expose themselves to the air for a short time. The finger nails need great care and women having long hair should keep it covered by a cap when in the sick room. Any nursing in smallpox should have the beard shaved off.

The bed room should be cleared of all unnecessary furniture, plenty of fresh air admitted and good disinfectants used.

The circular further states that the cost of local quarantine for smallpox is very great, besides the peril to life and public health, but that the preventive for the whole is to vaccinate each of all. It advises in the strongest terms that all persons should be vaccinated, and that nurses, schools, factories, etc., should be kept in as healthy a condition as possible.

Vaccination is the only successful preventive, and in most cases, if done successfully, will prevent the disease, even after a person has been exposed to it.

Seven cases of small-pox are reported at Trenton.

$50 FOR SHOOTING THE BULL WITH BEANS.

The Ammunition Produced in Evidence—17 Witnesses Examined.—Likely to Prove a Costly Animal.

If a bull gets on your property, don't get mad and shoot it, even with beans. It's too costly. If you feel that shooting is the only way to satisfy yourself, buy the bull and then make a lead mine of it if you want to.

A bull walked on Mr. Moore's property over the mountains, a short time ago, and, as published in THE NEWS at the time, David Moore put some beans in a gun and shot the trespasser.

The owners, Margaret Falconer and James Stewart brought suit in tort, placing damages at $300.

The case was tried before Justice Sperry yesterday. Mr. Wm. A. Coddington appeared to the plaintiffs and Mr. Wm. M. Stillman for the defense. The court room was crowded.

It took from 10 a. m. to 4.30 p. m. to hear the case. Seventeen witnesses gave testimony. According to the statements the bull's fore-shoulder and hind-quarter were badly lacerated by the beans. A handfull of these were on exhibition.

After deliberation the jury awarded the plaintiffs $50 and cost s.

Mr. Moore has brought a counter-suit for damage done his property by the bull. The case will be tried next week before Justice Crossley.

The bull will represent quite some money before the contestants get through "lawing."

FRACTURED HER ANKLE.

A Little Girl Named Hefferan Ran Over by a Coal Wagon.

Just before six o'clock last evening a girl named Hefferan, aged about twelve years, met with a painful accident on West Third street near Liberty, on the thoroughfare and evidently did not heed the approach of a coal wagon. The front wheel of the vehicle struck her and knocked her down. The hind wheel passed over her right ankle and fractured the bones. Mr. Edward Harding picked her up and carried her to her home near-by. A physician was summoned and set the fractured bones.

A Small Fire.

At 12:15 o'clock the roof of the house situated on West Third street near Liberty, owned by Patrick Gavin and occupied by the family of Martin McCarthy was discovered to be afire. An alarm was sounded and the department turned out but the flames were extinguished before a stream of water was thrown on the building. The fire is supposed to have originated from a tinner's fire pot. The damage is slight and is covered by insurance.

The firemen had some trouble in getting Gazelle No. 1's horses to draw the steamer out of the engine house and when they finally did move, they caused the steamer to collide with a large tree which stands near the house.

Less than Half the Commissioners' Award.

In the Union County Circuit Court yesterday the jury in the appeal suit of Eden Laing of Rahway, against the Pennsylvania Railroad, gave a verdict in favor of the defendant. The jury assessed the value of Laing's land taken by the company at $800, and the damages to his other property at $3,381.84, making a total of $3,181.63, or less than one-half the award of the Commission, which was $7,500.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Sketch in Black and White.

A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch cannot sufficiently wonder at a scene which he encountered in a respectable restaurant in London, on the Strand, where the best classes of people go for their meals. While he sat at a table in this leading restaurant, waiting for his order to be served, a party entered and sat down near him that almost took away his breath. Two coal black negroes, evidently from the United States, dressed in the height of fashion, accompanied by two well dressed, good looking white women—this was the sight. It stirred his Virginia blood to the quick, and he immediately arose to depart, but thought better of it when he saw that nobody else arose to depart or took any notice of the two couples. Then curiosity got the upper hand and our Virginian sat down to watch the sequel. All the party were in high feather. The women especially were immensely amused, and the two darky men, in order not to lose the quiet, undemonstrative manner in vogue in considered the swell thing in London, were frequently obliged to stuff their napkins into their mouths to keep from breaking into the loud guffaws characteristic of their race.

The correspondent writes further:

In London a negro can go into the best restaurants and be served like a white man. He can sit at any public table if he is quiet and can pay the bill. White waiters serve him without a murmur and the American darky imagines he is sitting sideways on a stool picking away with one hand at a cocoanut with the other when he is turned loose in the English metropolis with fifty dollars in his pockets.

Why They Are Skeptics.

An editorial in The Christian Union says that mankind in our time is skeptical because this is an analytical age. Its method is the scientific one, and all things—facts, discoveries, theories and theologies—must be passed through its test tube. Such an age produces students, not seers, scientists, not prophets. The Christian Union makes an unusual admission. It is that the immortality of the soul cannot be proved by the scientific method. We must look elsewhere for that proof, to the vision, the intuition, the indwelling consciousness of man. The analytical faculty does not discover, it only tries and tests. The seers, the enthusiasts and the dreamers make the great discoveries, and the analytical faculty tests their work.

Criticism never painted a picture, and an age which produces only critics produces no art. Criticism never discovers religious truth, and an age which produces only critics will create no religious convictions. Our critical age is trying to reconcile what past ages have bequeathed to us, and is finding considerable hay and straw and stubble in the inheritance. This is not discouraging. The task of assorting what is unconfortable one; for no man enjoys the process which proves his wealth less than he thought it to be. But the critics, valuable as in their service, can give us nothing new; for that we must look to the prophets. "Prove to me that the soul is immortal," says Physical, "or the scientific method is incompetent to prove that the soul is immortal." And the scientific method can only measure the inherent probability of that vision of immortality which all the world's prophets from the days of Job have seen and to which they have witnessed.

A gardener of Newburg, N. Y., has had the luck to grow a second crop of strawberries, ripening in September, from the vines that yielded abundantly in spring, and is trying to find a name for the strange fact. Perhaps if an attempt were made to perpetuate shoots from the plants that bore strawberries in September a new variety might be obtained, and the American people in time be able to eat these berries six months in the year. In Paris it is not uncommon to find luscious strawberries on the table in September and even October. America ought to be able to grow anything that another country can.

Somebody is clamoring now for a permanent United States census bureau, which shall have trained assistants who can take their time and collect facts at their leisure. We have enough balreaus now. The right way to get all the matter of information that must now be obtained to make a satisfactory census will be for the individual states to collect it year by year and hand it over to the national government.

We blame the lawyers bitterly because they get nearly all the offices, yet what happens when people other than lawyers are elected? The lady mayor of Kiowa, Kan., attempts to shut every saloon in town, law or no law, and a judge in the same lively state not long since defied the whole supreme court in one of his rulings. So we see it is necessary to know a little law when one wants to be a mayor or judge, anyhow.

Let us hope the story is true that an English chemist has succeeded in making artificial gold. The substitute is not quite the same, however, but a compound which will take the place of gold in all industrial uses. It can be hammered and drawn equally with gold and wears and keeps its color. There will be a boom in gold lined presentation cups when it comes on the market.

A signal service officer makes a melancholy observation which is true of more things than weather predictions: "Everybody notices it just as soon as a fellow makes a miss. But they never pay any attention to his bullseyes."

BOSTON'S JOINT DEBATE

Governor Russell and Congressman Lodge Cross Swords.

R. P. FLOWER ON BALLOT REFORM.

His Reply to an Inquiry as to His Views on the Australian System of Voting. What He Says He Will Do if He is Elected.

BOSTON, Oct. 24—The joint debate between Hon. John E. Russell and Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge upon the administration of Governor Russell took place last night at Tremont temple. The house was crowded, seats together on one side of the hall while the Democrats were on the other. Colonel Allen acted as chairman, and announced that each speaker would have forty five minutes to open the debate and thirty to close it.

Russell Opens the Debate.

Mr. Russell opened the debate and said that it had been the claim of their opponents that all political virtue was vested in the Republican party. The administration just passed had proved that either party is competent fairly to administer the affairs of Massachusetts.

The administrator is to be judged on his recommendations of legislation, his vetoes, his appointments and his appearance before the people. The governor's inaugural message marked the beginning of an administration of positive ideas. No less than seventeen of his recommendations were acted upon. Mr. Russell asked his opponents to point out a Democratic state stood upon the ballot question. The governor recommended a uniform and accurate system of counting votes to perfect our present ballot system. The application of the lobby law to general legislation, greater power given to cities and towns, and in the interest of free public schools he recommended manual training and raising the compulsory age. In regard to the governor's appointments Mr. Russell read figures to show that Democrats looked were reappointments with but a small number of Democrats appointed.

The speaker referred briefly to the Davis claim on the return of the direct tax, stating that Davis had received $80,000 in commi sions for collections which it was the duty of congressmen to make. He passed by saying that the governor has brought to the people's attention that the government is largely carried on by commissions without power of removal or responsibility, and urged a change, giving the power of removal to the governor who is responsible to the people.

Lodge Takes the Floor.

Mr. Lodge began his response by saying that he always supported the abolition of the poll tax. He then criticised Governor Russell's inaction in not calling special attention to the signing of the bill incorporating a Gloucester trust company and his veto of a bill granting bounties to soldiers. Mr. Bridgeman Fuller, after having signed a similar bill with reference to Randolph. Continuing the speaker said the governor refused to make the executive departments for commissions and wished for himself a larger power of removal, but said nothing as to which commissions he would remove.

With the exception of one the work of each of the five commissions whose members he appointed could be done as well by the governor. He had appointed to a number of alleged bad appointments made by the governor, and asked, "Are we to have the statement advanced that in consideration of certain good appointments, a governor is to be allowed to make a number of bad ones?" Mr. Lodge said the Republicans were adopted of the law appointing the police commission in the interest of good order and temperance. It had accomplished good work. The Democrats opposed that law on the ground of local self government, and undertook to break down the commission by attacking a commissioner's character, the governor sustained the responsibility of recommending the removal, and asked the council to investigate. He then set aside his own record of integrity and manliness and he would ever sway the power of the police commission in favor of Democrats at elections.

Mr. Blaine May Speak.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Secretary James G. Blaine was a very busy man during the day. Scores of distinguished personages called at the Fifth Avenue hotel during the day to see him. Among the callers were ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, ex-Senator Warner Miller, General James S. Clarkson, General James W. Husted, Congressman James S. Sherman, William Brookfield, Cornelius N. Bliss and Murat Halstead. The secretary was asked by some personal friends if he could not remain over until Monday and speak at the Madison Square Garden mass meeting that night. He replied that he would be pleased to do so, were it not that business of importance awaited his attention at Washington.

Mr. Blaine expressed the utmost interest in the New York and Ohio campaigns. The Republican managers have not yet abandoned hope that Mr. Blaine may at least remain over tonight for the Cooper Union meeting.

The Work Before Him.

Upon his return to Washington the secretary will at once attend to the alleged outrage committed by Chilians upon the Baltimore's sailors, and a formal demand for reparation will, it is said, undoubtedly be made upon the new government. Mr. Blaine will also devote himself to an extension of reciprocity among the South American nations. Nicaragua, Bolivia, Guatemala, Salvador, Peru, the Argentine republic and other governments being very anxious to conclude commercial agreements similar to those already entered into by Brazil, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rica and San Domingo.

Fassett and Vrooman at Newburg.

NEWBURG, Oct. 24.—The Republicans of this city and vicinity were addressed at the Academy of Music last evening by J. Sloat Fassett and John W. Vrooman. They were late in arriving and in accounting for the delay Mr. Fassett said: "This is the first time during the campaign that Mr. Vrooman and myself have been behind time, but as we were not much polite enough to stop a fast train we had to take a slower one." As he said this some enthusiast in the audience shouted out, "Turn the faucet on 'em." Mr. Fassett stopped a moment and then remarked, "I consider it a very bad taste to pun on a man's name."

Referring to the claim made by the Democrats that Mr. Fassett and his friends were unwilling to discuss the tariff or other national questions, the speaker said they very wisely refrained from doing so, not because of their fear to attempt the same, but owing to the fact that they were issues of next year, when a president and congressmen were to be elected. It was not a question of fear, but one of propriety. For the present the attention of voters would be called especially to the doings and wrong doings of Tammany Hall. Tammany forced the issue by stretching out its hand for additional power. Not content with a New York city it endeavored to get the state in order that it might eventually strive for the nation.

Flower on Ballot Reform.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Roswell P. Flower, in reply to a letter from a member of the People's Municipal league asking him what his course would be if elected governor on the question of the Australian ballot system, says, in substance, that he does not think it proper in advance of responsible and definite legislative debate to bind himself to the precise form of a proposed law, that the Democratic party is committed to the declaration of the late Saratoga convention to the extension of the system of secret voting; that if elected governor and the general sentiment of the people should favor an amendment to the law he will support it.

A Secret and Unbought Vote.

In conclusion Mr. Flower says: "In my opinion practical experience, not only by ourselves but by almost all other states, has shown that the Democratic party and the principles which it represents are most favorable to a majority filled with the spirit of free and unbought vote."

Sheehan and Lockwood Speak.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 24—William F. Sheehan and Daniel Lockwood, of Buffalo, delivered addresses here last night before an audience which completely filled Washington rink. Mr. Sheehan was enthusiastically received. He said:

"But a few weeks ago in this hall was nominated the Republican candidate for governor at the dictation of Thomas C. Platt. Among all the names that had been presented for that position previous to the convention the name of Mr. Fassett did not appear. Mr. Fassett, if elected, will continue to be the subservient tool of Platt. I desire to sound a note of warning to those Republicans opposed to Platt. If Fassett is successful such leaders as you need have no fear, but if Fassett is defeated you will be lost, night and such men as Warner Miller will be forced to the rear."

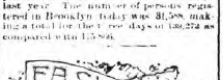
In the course of his speech Mr Sheehan intimated that Fassett was afraid to discuss state issues.

Depew at Fassett's Home.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Chauncey M. Depew addressed an immense Republican mass meeting here last night. He arrived early in the afternoon and was driven to the residence of Senator Fassett, where he was entertained by Mrs. Fassett. The Elmira Gazette asked Mr. Depew in its afternoon issue a number of questions for him to "duck" in fair. He said he had received a marked copy of the newspaper, but as it was a dead issue he would not discuss it.

Heavy Registration in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The third day's registration in this city was 64,845 making a total for the three days of 215,106 as compared with 192,454 for the first three days last year. The number of persons registered in Brooklyn today was 31,588, making a total for the two days of 136,272 as compared with 115,968.



The Bodice Waist.

Waists of cloth dresses continue to be extremely fancy. Black velvet is extensively used for trimming them. Entire sleeves are made of it, also vests and portions of the waist, so that very little of the cloth is seen. One of the newest models is the bodice waist—the regular old-time peasant girl bodice. This is generally of velvet, while the upper portion and sleeves are of cloth or silk. The bodice has a pointed basque to which the flares appear larger, and it is therefore suitable only for the slenderest women.

Fall Millinery.

LATEST IMPORTATIONS.

Here is the latest millinery of the season. These are the styles that will be most fashionable during the late fall and early winter. The first hat is of velvet in brown cross and tan color with ostrich tips. Then there is a very becoming felt hat in all colors trimmed with ribbon and a quill. The shamrock bonnet is very fashionable and is made of green velvet with jet edge and ostrich tips. The dainty little bonnet has a crown in yellow velvet, and folds of the same velvet round edge; loops and osprey at back.

Mr. Wanamaker's Report.

YANKEE TARS WERE SLAUGHTERED

Captain Schley, of the Baltimore, Tells the Story of the Recent Killing of His Men by the Murderous Chilians on the Streets of Valparaiso.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Secretary Tracy, after submitting the cablegram received from Captain Schley, of the United States steamship Baltimore, about the affray in Valparaiso between the American and Chilian sailors last week to the president, made public the substance of the dispatch. The dispatch from Captain Schley stated that he had made a careful investigation of the assault on our sailors on the 16th inst. The investigation shows that Petty Officer Charles Riggen, while riding in a street car, was assaulted and dragged from the car and shot and murdered by a mob of about 100 men. Apprentice Talbot was assaulted and cut dangerously several times in his back, two cuts penetrating his lungs. Coalheaver Etherson was robbed and cut dangerously in the back several times. Seaman Turnbull received eighteen wounds in the back, two penetrating his lungs. He is in a critical condition. Petty Officer Hamilton was wounded several times in the back and other parts of the body. Coalheaver Panter and Landsman Davidson were dangerously injured by cuts with knives, scores of knives, and a number of other men were dangerously injured.

Bayonetted by Local Police.

Thirty-five seamen were arrested by the authorities, and from information made of them cannot be learned from inability to translate the cipher dispatches. The surgeons of the Baltimore are of opinion that some of the men will be killed by bayonets, showing clearly the participation of the Chilian police.

Unarmed and Defenseless.

The Americans on shore were without arms and defenseless. The investigation shows that they were sober and were in no respect guilty of misbehavior. Two of the seriously injured are in the hospital. In several instances the sailors of the Chilian fleet rendered assistance to the American sailors and several of them were arrested. Secretary Tracy would not say whether any action in the matter had been decided upon.

Minister President Weary.

President Harrison has grown weary of Chili's dictatorial and arrogant treatment of our government and its representatives, and has determined that it must stop, and stop quickly. More than this, he has demanded satisfaction for the recent assault upon our sailors at the port of Valparaiso, and he will have it. The Chilian will be responsible for the consequences. There is abundant evidence to show that the assault was preconverted and that it grew out of the intense feeling of the Chilian people entertain for the United States and for any representative of the United States. Captain Schley has cabled us that our sailors, to the number of forty or more, were separated in groups in different parts of the city, and the fact that the murderous attacks occurred at practically the same hour furnishes the strongest proof that they were deliberately planned in advance.

The Secretive Much Displeased.

When Captain Schley's dispatch was laid before President Harrison he read it carefully several times and his indignation was plainly visible in reading. No special reference was made to the matter at the cabinet meeting, but at its conclusion the president had a special conference with Secretary Tracy, Mr. John W. Foster, of the state department, and Attorney General Miller, and it was decided that our government should take a strong and aggressive stand.

It was in a tone of exceeding bitterness that President Harrison referred to Chili's continued hostility to us, a hostility that had culminated in the murder of not one of our sailors, the wounding of a dozen or more and the arrest and incarceration in jail of forty or five others. He said the time had come when we must teach the Chilian people that our patience in dealing with them is exhausted. He instanced their treatment of Minister Egan. They have subjected him to espionage and insult because he has given an asylum to certain Chilian refugees.

What the Government Demands.

When the conference closed a cable dispatch was sent to Minister Egan at Santiago. It instructed him at once to communicate to the Chilian provisional government the indignation of the government at the assault upon the sailors of the Baltimore. It further instructed him to demand—first, an indemnity in money to be paid to the families of the the dead sailors and to the families of such of the wounded as may die; second, the arrest and punishment of the participants in the assault, and third, a suitable apology to the United States.

The tone of the dispatch indicates that the administration will brook no delay in securing a settlement of the matter. Chili must do what she is asked to do, and do it speedily. The Baltimore is at Valparaiso and the San Francisco only four days' sail distant, at Callao, and the Yorktown and Boston on the way to Chili's shores.

The Boston Off for Chili.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The United States cruiser Boston sailed for Chili today at noon. On Wednesday Captain Wiltse received orders from the navy department to proceed to Valparaiso as soon as his vessel was ready for sea, and report to the senior naval officer there. The voyage of 11,000 miles will be made in about two months. The Boston's armament consists of two 8 inch breechloading rifles, six 6 inch breechloading rifles and eleven rapid fire and machine guns.

Ecua's Demands Denied.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Oct. 24.—Minister Egan has been informed by the Chilian government that his application for safe conduct of the refugees in the United States legation will not be granted. Mr. Egan will continue his demands. A settlement between the two governments appears as far off as ever. It is stated that the Chilian government made the refusal on the ground that the refugees were criminals.

Receiver Ryan Wants $70,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Counsel for Michael J. Ryan, receiver of the Annual Benefit society, has filed a petition in the common pleas court for the purpose of recovering $70,000 which, it is stated, should be in the treasury of the Annual Benefit society, and which, it is alleged, its officers have failed to turn over.

TO HONOUR YORK OFFICIALS.

It Is Said Governor Pattison Wants Them Investigated.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 24.—It is understood that Governor Pattison will include the York county appraisers and York police magistrates, charged with a number of offenses within the scope of his investigation now under way, if a careful examination of the allegations should warrant such action. The governor has already started an inquiry into the matter. Counsel for Auditor General McCamant have determined to object to his examination on subjects on which he has already testified, the senate having the testimony in its possession. It is not believed that the senate will thus circumscribe the examination.

The governor has received the report of the board of charities regarding their recent investigation into the charges against the State Lunatic hospital management. The board reports that no evidence was adduced showing mismanagement by the trustees, but that the medical supervision was inefficient, and that this has now been remedied.

The Councils Must Wait.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Chairman Van Osten, of the councils' investigating committee, has received the following reply to his letter to Secretary Foster asking that the experts be allowed to proceed with the examination of the Spring Garden National bank:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, }
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22. }

William Van Osten, Esq.:

Awaiting further information I must delay action on the request contained in your letter of the 21st inst., permission to place experts in the Spring Garden bank.

Respectfully, O. L. SPAULDING,
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

HOPKINS DID NOT TESTIFY.

He Closed His Case Without Taking the Stand.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 24.—The contestants in the Searles will case finished their case without putting Timothy Hopkins on the stand. General Thomas H. Hubbard was called by the counsel of the latter to explain the true inwardness of the partnership out of which he and his law partner Stillman were to draw $65,000 a year and assets of $2,000,000.

The witness said it was only after Mr. Stillman had told him how necessary it was for them to come to the rescue of the Southern Pacific and scores of other properties that Mrs. Searles had her money invested in that he agreed to sacrifice a more lucrative law practice. He said plainly that they could do nothing with the obstinate Stanford, Crocker and Huntington, the late Mark Hopkins' partners, unless they also became partners.

Near the close of his examination Searles said that his wife when she made her will specifically disinheriting her son Timothy had said to her husband: "I shall leave Tim in your hands, as I know you will act more generously by him than I would."

Searles acknowledged that while by the terms of the partnership with Stillman & Hubbard he was obliged to put in all his property of whatever nature, he had never invested a cent. He was worth at the time of this agreement from $150,000 to $200,000, and said that his only reason for not complying with the agreement was that he did not understand that it applied to any property but such as he received from his wife.

HOME RULE AS AN ISSUE

Gladstone's Platform Will Be His New Bill.

MORE LIBERAL THAN THE FIRST ONE

The New Measure Is Said to Be a Far Better Bill Than the One of 1885. Michael Davitt Will Run for Mooney's Vacant Seat.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Mr. Gladstone has revised his home rule bill, and the measure has now assumed such definite form as to enable Mr Gladstone at any moment to place it before the country. Lord Rosebery hastily declined to assist till recently, when he was informed that he must define his attitude toward the project of the Liberal leaders. He then assented to confer on the matter. Harcourt and Morley accordingly visited Lord Rosebery this week and obtained his adhesion to the project. Had he refused his assistance the service of some other peer must have been obtained to lead the party in the house of lords.

Not a Leap in the Dark.

As to what time the scheme in detail will be divulged depends upon the fate and character of the government's Irish local government measure, but the fact that the scheme has been perfected and is expected to be announced by Mr. Morley next week will deprive the Unionists of their stock argument that Mr. Gladstone has no definite idea of what the bill will be and that his colleagues throughout the country, relying upon him, would take a leap in the dark. If dissolution came now the measure would be published with such completeness as would leave the Conservatives no chance to say that the country had been deceived on any important point.

Home Rule the Issue.

When the general election does come the issue will be fought on definitely declared home rule lines. If the popular vote places Mr. Gladstone in power the course thus adopted will fully paralyze the opposition. The house of lords will not dare to reject the bill on the ground that the vote of the electorate had not been especially taken thereon.

Better Than the Bill of 1885.

Regarding the principles of the new measure, enough has been officially ascertained to enable one to state that it gives the proposed Irish legislature fuller powers than did the bill of 1885. It retains the lower and upper houses of the Irish parliament, with the appointment of the judiciary in the Irish executive and maintains a larger representation of Ireland in the imperial parliament. The complete questions of the financial relations and the control of the police are also settled.

Michael Davitt Accepts.

DUBLIN, Oct. 24.—Michael Davitt has consented to stand for the northern division of Kilkenny, the seat in the house of commons made vacant by the death of Sir John Pope Hennessy. Mr. Davitt expressed his confidence that the vast majority of his countrymen in Ireland and America will approve of the course pursued by the Irish parliamentary majority under recent trying circumstances.

To Run Against Redmond.

DUBLIN, Oct. 24.—The McCarthyites selected Martin Flaven, a local butter merchant, to be the contesting candidate against John E. Redmond, the Parnellite candidate for election to the house of commons from Cork.

BIG LOTTERY MEN INDICTED.

Warrants for General Beauregard and His Fellow Officers.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 24.—The grand jury has reported eleven separate indictments each against the officers of the Louisiana lottery. Among the list are General Beauregard, Paul Conrad, president, and Joseph P. Horner, secretary. The indictments are for transmitting lottery advertisements through the mails, which is a violation of the lottery law passed last winter by congress.

The department at Washington brought the charges before this court for the reason that their efforts in other states before United States grand juries had been frustrated. The United States marshal and his deputies have left for New Orleans to arrest the president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and directors of the lottery. The extreme penalty in case of conviction is five years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine.

Defaulter Garcia Arrested.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 24.—Eugene F. Garcia, cashier of the Louisiana National bank, who was yesterday discovered to be a defaulter to the amount of $190,000, was arrested at his residence last night. He procured bail in the sum of $65,000. Garcia still says the shortage was brought about by his having overpaid checks, and claims to have no vices beyond a slight liking for a game of poker with a small limit played with friends.

A BRIBE OF $100,000.

Very Sensational Testimony in the Canadian Railway Scandal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—The most sensational evidence before the royal commission, now investigating the "boodle" charges against the Quebec government, has been given by Ernest Pacaud, chief organizer of the Liberal party in Quebec, and bosom friend of Premier Mercier. Pacaud, when examined in regard to his connection with the Baie des Chaleurs railway matter, said he had first met Contractor Armstrong in New York, and Armstrong had asked him to get a settlement of his claim against the government. On March 19 last he met Armstrong at the Hotel Brunswick in New York. Provincial Secretary Langelier and Attorney General Robidoux were present. Witness told Armstrong that he was willing to take up his claim and secure a settlement.

After Armstrong then offered him $75,000, but Pacaud demanded $100,000, and the additional $25,000 was readily agreed to. The claim was finally afterward settled by the government's paying Armstrong $175,000. Pacaud received $100,000 in five checks of $20,000 each.

Pacaud said much of the money had gone to pay election expenses. He gave $5,000 to Provincial Secretary Langelier to help him build a house. Other sums were used to pay legal expenses incurred by the Liberals.

Pacaud's evidence is expected to lead to the retirement of several ministers.

WM. MCCLANE, Jeweler for J. T. Clawson

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HESS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

THE CHAMPION ROLLER SKATER.

"Eddie" McDowell of Philadelphia. Who Is an Athletic Phenomenon.

EDWARD M'DOWELL.

"Eddie" McDowell is a Philadelphia boy, and is now only 19 years old, being an athletic phenomenon. "Eddie" is backed in all his races by a Philadelphia merchant of large wealth, who has practically adopted the young athlete, and when he enters a race his backer provides the necessaries with a generous hand.

Edward McDowell first put on the rollers in February, 1891, and rapidly developed a speed which has placed him at the head of the fastest roller skaters in the world. In 1891 he won the championship of America, defeating K. A. Skinner, that time the recognized champion, and has successfully defended that title against all comers, none of whom have been able to defeat him in a championship race. The races, however, in which the greatest interest has centred have been those between him and J. Bell of Cleveland, who, up to his defeats by the Philadelphia favorite, had been considered invincible.

These races created great excitement and were witnessed by thousands. Both of these flyers had many victories to their credit and met in an open question as to which was the better man. So much interest was manifested to see them in a match race for the championship of the world that Thomas Alberth, the pedestrian, proprietor of the Forest Street Rink, Cleveland, got both men together on January 19, 20 and 21, 1893; best two in three race for the championship of the world, $300 in cash and a gold and diamond belt, McDowell winning easily.

On November 26, 1892, he won a five-mile race for the championship of America at Elite Rink, Philadelphia, defeating K. A. Skinner, Day of New York and John Tynan of Philadelphia. Time, 15m. 18s., world's record for five miles.

On Nov. 28, 1892, he defeated K. A. Skinner, a champion of the world, in a one-mile race at Christian Street Rink; time, 2m. 9s.

Davis the Winner.

The much talked-of fencing match between Feltz P. Davis, of Providence, R. I., and Alberto Lewis took place at Providence, on the night of September 30, and Davis won.

Prof. Rondel, the instructor in fencing at Harvard College, was referee. Clark Noble, the artist, was the second for Lewis, and Eugene McAuliffe was the second for Davis. The match was one long bout to win twenty-one points first, and at the end of one hour and twenty minutes Davis had twenty-one points to fourteen for Lewis.

It was an exciting contest towards the finish, especially as all the betting portion of the Italian community had large stakes in favor of Lewis. It was hardly announced by a prominent Italian in the papers that over $11,000 had been staked on the event.

There was no doubt about the result. Both men showed considerable skill and worked hard, but Davis, when once he had gained confidence, constantly made the advantage and repeated the more heart of the two. The young Roman was a trifle taller, but Davis was the quicker man.

There was a purse of $300 jointly contributed.

A CRACK BICYCLIST.

John Bensinger of Brooklyn, N. Y., and His Remarkable Record.

JOHN BENSINGER.

Brooklyn, N. Y., has become a great city for wheelmen, and among the large number of clubs John Bensinger is the champion. He is a member of the Kings County Club.

Bensinger's cycling career started in April, 1887. He joined the Kings County Club a year later. The first club run he attended was to Bath Beach, when he gave the best rider a close rub for first place.

When the first annual twenty-five mile handicap race of the club was run, on Election day, 1888, over the famous Irvington-Milburn course, Bensinger rode second to Charley Murphy. This spurred him on to reach the top.

The following Spring he started on the same track with Murphy. Taxis and Stevens in the first annual twenty-five-mile open handicap and made the distance in 1 hour and 31 minutes. This was the best time made. There were twenty-four riders, but Bensinger secured the 15-inch silver cup trophy.

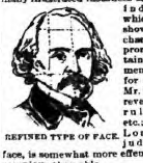
He won the Kings County Wheelmen's race at the meet in June, 1889, and the three-mile handicap on June 27, 1890. On November 22, 1890, in company with Henry I. Hall, Jr., of the Manhattan Athletic Club, he established a tandem record. The time was 1 hour 34 minutes for twenty-six miles. This was faster by one minute per mile than the previous record.

Science Progress

A POPULAR SCIENTIFIC FAD.

How to Read Faces, as Told by Mr. James Contes in His Mental Science Series.

Numbered with fashionable popular scientific fads is that of reading faces. We all know a little, and that little perhaps only intuitively, of this interesting science or art, and there are few persons who would not like to know a little more, since man's favoritest study is mankind. Mr. James Contes, who makes this the subject of the third volume of the mental science series, attempts to assist the reader of character by extending the knowledge of the meaning of lines and features of hands and faces. There are many illustrated instances of well known individuals, by which the author shows that certain characteristics are prominent in certain men and women. He tells us, for instance, that Mr. Parnell's face reveals a decided ruler, ambition, etc.; that Lord Londonderry, judging by his face, is somewhat more effeminate and ceremonious than able.



REFINED TYPE OF FACE.

From out a number of rather amusing illustrations and their explanations we give some specimens. Nathaniel Hawthorne's is given as "a most intellectual, moral and refined type of face—witty, gentle and never aggressive."

If the breadth of the face is greater than two-thirds its length, there will be too much vigor and energy and too little intellectual refinement. A line drawn across the face from the corners of the eyes should divide the face into two equal halves. In this case the intellectual and moral control largely the executive forces. When the upper half is less than the lower, the want of "character" will be very manifest. Look, for instance, at the second head, that of "Johnny, an idiot," or the third, that of "a swineherd." "The bias of the mind," says Mr. Contes of this last face, "will not be to purity."

A Substitute for Ivory.

Hitherto none of the persistent efforts to produce a good and reliable substitute for ivory have been successful. The Engineer, however, now calls attention to a patent process based upon the employment of those materials of which natural ivory is composed, consisting, as it does, of tribasic phosphate of lime, calcium carbonate, magnesia, alumina, gelatine and albumen. By this process quicklime is first treated with sufficient water to convert it into the hydrate, but before it has become completely pulverulent or slacked, an aqueous solution of phosphoric acid is poured on it, and while stirring the mixture the calcium carbonate, magnesia and alumina are incorporated in small quantities at a time, and lastly the gelatine and albumen dissolved in water are added. The point to aim at is to obtain a compost sufficiently plastic and as intimately mixed as possible. It is then set aside to allow the phosphoric acid to complete its action upon the chalk. The following day the mixture, while still plastic, is pressed into the desired form in molds and dried in a current of air at a temperature of about 150 degs. C. To complete the preparation of the artificial product by this process it is kept for three or four weeks, during which time it becomes perfectly hard. The following are the proportions for the mixture, which can be colored by the addition of suitable substances: Quicklime, 100 parts; water, 300 parts; phosphoric acid solution, 1.05 sp. gr., 75 parts; calcium carbonate, 16 parts; magnesia 1 to 2 parts; alumina, precipitated, 8 parts; gelatine, 13 parts.

The Dulling of Jewels.

It is generally known, says The Jewelers' Circular, that machinery has an almost human faculty of getting tired at times, and it is then to men that shares that names must have their season of rest to develop their best edges. All jewelers are aware of the susceptibility of precious stones, how they will occasionally go off in appearance. Cleaning will not help them, while if they are sent to a different atmosphere they frequently brace up of their own accord and come back looking bright and lustrous. This curious fact has a higher bearing and application than its relation to physics. It is a true with respect to the vital jewel of human health as of any other jewel. Human health needs a change of air and surroundings at certain intervals, or it will fade and lose luster. The lack-luster eye of the person who is not sick but merely "run down" is the dulling of the jewel.

Heat from the Moon.

Popular Science News calls attention to measurements of the heat of the moon, made by Mr. C. Burnham Boys by means of his very delicate radiomicrometer. His method was to focus the rays of the moon on the face of the radiomicrometer by a reflecting telescope of 16 inches aperture. In the case of a new moon, he found that the heat coming from its disk diminished as you passed from the center to the edge, or cave edge, and that from the dark surface was so slight as not to affect the apparatus. The maximum radiation of heat came from points of the disk itself, not from its limbs. At full moon the maximum point was at the center of the disk. The side of the moon which had been exposed to the sun for fourteen days was not warmer than that which had been exposed for seven days. No sensible heat was observed to come from the stars.

Iron Paper.

It will not perhaps be remembered, says The Paper-Maker, that in the great exhibition of 1851 a specimen of iron paper was exhibited. Immediately a lively competition ensued among treasurers as to the thinness to which cold iron could be rolled. One ironmaker rolled sheets the average thickness of which was the 1-1800th part of an inch. In the next trial only the 1,800 sheets of this iron, piled one upon the other, would only measure one inch in thickness. The most wonderful feature of this work may be more readily understood when it is remembered that 1,800 sheets of thinnest tissue paper measure a fraction over an inch. These wonderful iron sheets were perfectly smooth and easy to write upon notwithstanding the fact that they were porous when held up in a strong light.

THE HOUSEHOLD

DECORATIVE AND USEFUL WORK.

A Convenient Laundry Bag—A Present for a Wooden Wedding, Etc.

Double bags for soiled linen are very handy in a bedroom and take very little space, being made to hang flat against the wall. The bags shaped like a huge rectangular pocket are made out of a doubled piece of stout cretonne, the two parts, back and front, having a deep slit or aperture, through which peeps out the sateen lining of some cheerful hue, like the panel or partition added inside to form two receptacles. Through the deep heading is inserted a wooden rod, and against this firm line are sewn at the back rings, to be suspended to a corresponding number of nails or hooks.

A quaint device which furnishes a good "wooden wedding" present is the "spoon pincushion." It is made in this way: Two large wooden spoons are crossed together with fancy ribbon and hung to the wall with fly bows; in each bowl is displayed a silk pincushion.

Newspaper racks in wickerwork are prettily decorated with two ribbons in contrasting tints, on which are painted daisies, buttercups, etc. White ribbons, similarly adorned, serve for sachets, curtain holders, etc.

On an uncommon table cover in claret cloth is delineated a border of arabesques, with curtain rings caught down with wool or filoselle in striking tints.

Green Tomato Pickle.

Take one peck of green tomatoes sliced, one and one-half ounces of black pepper, one ounce of whole allspice, one-quarter pound of ground mustard, a dozen onions sliced, one ounce of whole cloves and one ounce of mustard seed. Put a layer of tomatoes, then a layer of onions, then a sprinkling of salt, then another layer of tomatoes and so on; let stand over night. Next morning drain off all the liquor, put them in a porcelain lined kettle with all the other ingredients, cover with vinegar and simmer gently fifteen minutes. Put away in stone or glass jars.

Peach Jelly.

Following is a recipe for peach jelly which Marion Harland recommends as very fine for jelly cake: Grate one-third of the kernels and put them in a jar with the peaches, which should be pared, stoned and sliced. Heat in a pot of boiling water, stirring from time to time until the fruit is well broken. Strain, and to every pint of peach juice add the juice of a lemon. Measure again, allowing a pound of sugar to a pint of the liquid. Heat the sugar very hot and add when the juice has boiled twenty minutes. Let it come to a boil and take instantly from the fire.

Pickled Pears.

Dissolve two pounds and a half of sugar in a quart of cider vinegar, and drop into it a bag filled with a tablespoonful of ground cinnamon and half a grated nutmeg. This amount of syrup will cover a little more than two pounds of fruit. If the pears are small pickle them whole; if large, cut them in halves and take out the cores. Pare, slice or halve and remove. Cover closely, simmer till tender, skim them out into cans or jars, cook the syrup fifteen minutes longer, pour over them and seal.

Apple Gingerbread.

Boil ginger root tied in a thin muslin bag in clear water until the water is well flavored; make a syrup of this water and sugar, adding to it a little lemon juice and allowing three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of apples. When the syrup is skimmed clear boil in it a few quarters of apples at a time until they become clear—no longer. Replace the apples in the syrup when it becomes cold. Golden pippin apples should be used.

Household Helps.

When cane chair seats have become limp and stretched so that they sink in the center, but are entirely unbroken, simply wash them well with hot water and place the chairs in a strong draft. This will cause the seat to tighten up so effectually that it will be stretched quite flat when dry. It may then be further stiffened with a coat of varnish.

To remove mildew from white goods dampen the spots and rub them well first with soap and then with finely powdered chalk; lay the goods in the sun and dampen it from time to time.

To prevent salt from caking in damp weather or when it is put off through pour cruets, mix about a large teaspoonful of cornstarch with half a cupful of salt for the table.

To rid ivies, oleanders, etc., of scale insects wash freely with whale oil soap and water; then, after a little while, rinse off with clear water.

Soda is much nicer than ashes to clean tea stained dishes.

Hot fat will soon dull the edge of the sharpest knife.

Time No Object.

"By getting your ticket over our line," urged the traveling passenger agent of the X., Y. and Z. railway, "you will save sixteen hours' time on the trip."

"On the A., B. and C. route," said the agent of the rival line, "you get 397 miles more riding for the same money."

A Prudent Man.

There was a man sitting on a bench in Union square the other day with the index finger of his right hand tied up in a rag. He kept resting on his knee, with the finger pointing across Fourth avenue, when a policeman came along and seized the rag and pulled it off. The finger looked exactly like all the rest—large, wrinkled and dirty. There was no sore or wound or other reason why it should have been tied up.

"Have you been begging on the strength of that?" asked the officer.

"No, sir."

"Is your finger sore?"

"No, sir."

"What's your object in wrapping it up this way?"

"Well, sir, that's the finger I allus use to scratch my head with. The nights are getting cool now, and I wrapped it up last night so's I'd have to get cold in it. I've bin using that finger forty-three years now and have got too old to change."

The officer looked at him a long time, and then moved on with the remark that since the papers had raised such a great howl about people being clubbed for nothing no patrolman had any show to enforce the respect due to his position.—New York World

Jewelry, Silver, Etc.

Elsie Bee notes the following new things in jewelry and articles for the boudoir in Jewelers' Circular:

A curved bar formed of small silver ostrich tips is the pin for one of the new chatelaines. The feather makes the ornamentation for the different pendants.

Gold beads are very fashionable for young girls. One of the latest varieties has what the wearer calls an irritated skin breaking out in spots of enamel.

Radiating scroll forms set with pearls are seen in one of the newest brooches, and between each scroll is a small sapphire set so lightly that it almost appears to be without support.

Round boxes in silver gilt with enameled imitations of the famous and fashionable old snuff boxes, are intended for toilet tables and serve as receptacles for rings and small pieces of jewelry.

Shoehorns of silver with perforated tops are becoming indispensable.

Russia leather portfolios and arabesques, with curtain rings caught down with wool or filoselle in striking tints.

Russia leather portfolios and writing desks are covered with rich designs in perforated silver.

English Fashions for Men.

Heliotrope, coral pink, forgetmenot blue and plum are the fashionable colors in men's scarfs. The last named is the newest. Dice patterns are in favor; so are bird's-eyes, spots, rings and scrolls. There is a shape in vogue among the dandies which is a good deal like the "Ascot." Instead of being a made-up scarf though it is tied on the wearer's neck. Unless a man has deft fingers he finds it a difficult matter to compass.

There are two novelties in collars. One is something like the old "tandem" collar, and is cut away at sharp angles in front. The other is a close fitting collar, as deep, if not deeper, than that worn by Prince Albert Victor. Evening shirts are now usually made with pique fronts. Dress ties are wider.

A BURGLAR CAPTURED.

STOLEN PROPERTY FOUND IN HIS POSSESSION.

The Burglar Held for the Elizabeth Authorities His Domicile Searched and More Property Found.

Yesterday policemen from Elizabeth visited this city in search of a negro named Harry Devine, who is wanted there for burglary. This morning Acting Captain of Police Lynch espied the fellow as he was walking along Somerset street toward North Plainfield. Mr. Lynch promptly arrested him and escorted him to the station house. Upon searching him he found a silver watch, a pair of gold-plated bracelets and several other articles of jewelry.

Mr. Lynch then went to the house where Devine had stopped over night and found two satchels, both of which were loaded with jewelry and wearing apparel. In the bottom of one of the satchels.

Mr. Lynch found a diamond used by glaziers in cutting glass. The Elizabeth authorities have been notified.

It is thought that the fellow came to this city intending to follow up his nefarious business. Therefore his arrest is considered an important one.

With an Infant in His Arms.

An amusing incident was witnessed at the depot yesterday afternoon. The 3:30 p. m. train, bound east pulled into the main station and when it was on the point of leaving two women rushed up and boarded it. A few seconds afterwards an old man, with an infant in his arms, rushed up, but seeing that the train had started he began motioning for it to stop and gesticulated wildly. One of the brakemen saw the old man's predicament and stopped the train near the Peace street bridge. The old man boarded it and went on his way rejoicing. Previous to the train stopping, however, a more dejected-looking man could not be found for miles around. He first looked at the infant, then at the departing train and was on the point of turning away when a bystander told him that the train had stopped. The incident caused the bystanders to smile very broadly.

Mrs Schneider's Troubles.

Mrs. Jacob Schneider, complained to City Judge Codington this morning that the members of a family who reside in the next house with her were in the habit of leaving the door open and that the cold air which entered her apartments played sad havoc with her enfeebled frame. The city judge referred her to Corporation Counsel Marsh. That gentleman informed her that he could do nothing in the matter. She next complained to Policeman Giese who advised her to have a sign painted and pasted up with the word "Please Shut the door" on it.

Remembered by Fellow Workmen.

Charles Newman, who for some time past has been employed as the tool-maker at the Scott Printing Press Works in this city, on Saturday severed his connection with that establishment to accept a similar position at Bound Brook. Mr. Newman was very popular among his fellow workmen and on Saturday, previous to his departure Mr. Charles Smith's "gang" made him a handsome present. Mr. Newman's family will continue to reside in this city.

The Y. M. C. A. Meeting Yesterday.

Mr. A. C. LaBoyteaux of this city, and Messrs. Houston and Wood of Princeton, addressed a large audience of men in the M. E. Church yesterday afternoon. The singing by the quartette from Princeton and by the local choir under the leadership of Mr. T. E. Hazell was greatly enjoyed. S. H. Hadley, Superintendent of the old Jersey McAuley Water Street Mission, will speak at the same place next Sunday at four p. m.

Harboring Young Girls.

A resident of West Second street complained to Policeman Giese this morning that persons connected with the merry-go-round which is now holding forth on the Crescent Park harbored his two daughters in that building all night Saturday and a portion of yesterday for immoral purposes. He went before City Judge Codington and swore out a warrant for the arrest of the parties concerned.

The eldest girl is reported to be seventeen years old, and her sister fifteen. There is said to have been another girl in the party age only fourteen.

His Household Effects Sold.

The household effects belonging to Joseph Randall of Liberty street, were sold Saturday afternoon by Constable Amos Moffett to satisfy a chattel mortgage. Randall absconded about two weeks ago and it is alleged that he embezzled funds belonging to the Order of Tonti to the amount of $60. His whereabouts are unknown. His wife and children have gone to Westerly, R. I.

Robbed a Barroom.

Some sneak thief effected an entrance into the barroom of Laing's Hotel a few evenings ago and stole therefrom an overcoat and a gold watch. The thief left no clue to his identity. The police have been notified.

The C. B. L. Convention.

The State Convention of the Catholic Benevolent Legion, of which there is one Council in this city, will be held at Paterson to-morrow. Delegates from this city will attend.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

Mr. E. A. Laine Probes His Wife's Hand With a Pair of Scissors.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Eugene A. Lane and his wife, of East Second street, in company with a friend, went driving. Before returning home Mr. Lane purchased several pair of chickens. In order to carry them he tied their legs together. When the party arrived home it was dark. Mr. Laine procured of pair scissors and a lamp and went to the chicken-coop in company with his wife for the purpose of cutting the bonds which held the chickens captive. Mrs. Laine was holding the fowls, when the scissors suddenly slipped and one of the blades penetrated her left hand to the depth of about an inch. The hand began to swell immediately and Mr. Lane, thoroughly frightened, hastened his wife to the office of Dr. Field, who dressed the wound. Although the wound is very painful no serious results are apprehended.

During the excitement which followed the accident the lamp which Mr. Lahe was using upset and exploded. No damage resulted.

Later in the evening while Mr. Lane was engaged in opening a fruit jar, he badly cut one of his fingers.

Marcus W. Smalley, who addressed the meeting in Reform yesterday afternoon, and preached in the Washingtonville chapel in the evening, is a divinity student in preparation for the Baptist ministry.

The Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, the pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and the Rev. D. J. Yerkes, the pastor of the First Baptist church, exchanged pulpits yesterday morning. Both divines preached eloquent sermons.

A pretty wedding took place at the parsonage of the Baptist Church at Perth Amboy Saturday evening, when Mr. Charles S. Greer, the foreman of The News office, and Miss Anna L. Tallaint of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, were united in marriage. The Rev. W. A. Bronson performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Greer will reside in North Plainfield. They have the best wishes of a large number of friends and acquaintances.

The Rumor Denied.

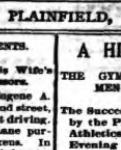
For several days past there has been a rumor on the streets to the effect that Mr. F. M. French would sue the borough for damages in behalf of Mr. Giddis, an employ, whose death resulted from lockjaw, contracted by stepping on a rusty nail while walking along Pearl street, North Plainfield. Mr. French informed a News reporter that there was no truth in the rumor.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

A HILARIOUS TIME.

THE GYMNASIUM FILLED WITH MEN SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Successful Entertainment Given by the Plainfield Bi. Club.—Music, Athletics and Fun.—A Very "Quiet" Evening Enjoyed by All.



THE gymnasium of the Plainfield Bicycle Club was the scene of hilarious gayety Saturday evening.

In response to cards of invitation issued, a large number of young men, representing the best families of Plainfield, were present, either on the gymnasium floor, or in the gallery, to be amused by the "concert-athletiques and staggarsquette" announced on the admittance card.

Messrs. Brooks and Demarest accomplished banjoists and Mr. J. Silberg, the talented accompanist, furnished the instrumental part of the programme.

Mr. Thos. F. Casey, the well-known comic singer, aided by the whole club, (the latter not on the programme) furnished the vocal share of the concert.

Prof. Whewal, the club's instructor in gymnastics last Winter, Mr. "Bob" Stole, the ex-amateur champion on the flying rings, assisted by Messrs. Ed. French, Lew Walz and Bob Pound gave a short exhibition on the bar and rings.

Then the "staggarsquette" part came in. This consisted of boxing. There were two bouts between Messrs. Howard Bebe and "Ev." Tracy, Messrs. Lew Walz and Joe. Sandford, Messrs. H. Morrison and W. Hendricks and Messrs. Lee Simmonds and Gus. Marsh.

For pure, unadulterated, howling fun, the last bout was supreme. Almost the whole audience was on its feet, cheering when it could, and shouting advice to the two popular members on the floor, who clinched so desperately at one time that it took the combined efforts of half a dozen young men to get them apart.

The previous bouts were two, two minutes rounds each. The time-keeper in the last bout, however, "accidentally" forgot to time the puffing boxers, who stopped only when exhausted, shook hands and took off the gloves.

The patriarch—Mr. T. S. Burr—was around in his glory, and assisted by Messrs. "B." Murray, Fred Walz and the club members generally, looked to the comfort of the guests.

OBITUARY.

Cornelius W. L. Martine.

Cornelius W. L. Martine who died very suddenly at his home in Fanwood Friday afternoon was 66 years of age. He was a native of New York State, and some years ago was engaged in the hardware business in New York. His father was John H. Martine, and the family took up their residence in Westfield township in 1850, their home being in that section which was at the time set off by the act of legislature as Fanwood.

The elder Mr. Martine was a public-spirited man, and he immediately associated himself with the interests of the township, and did much for its material advancement, holding positions on the town committee and other local offices. The son imitated his father in devoting himself to the welfare of his neighbors, and was likewise always active in affairs that promoted the best interests of the place. He was also honored with local responsibilities, and was first chosen to the Board of Freeholders from Westfield township. He continued its representative until Fanwood was apportioned off, and he was appointed from the new township. His associates in the Board recognized his executive ability and selected him as director in 1878, and continuously until 1887 he held that office, with the exception of one year, when Mr. Parse was elected by the republicans. Mr. Martine was re-elected the next year, and remained a member of the Board and its director until defeated by Mr. George Kyte.

Mr. Martine was a Democrat, and while a man of decided convictions he was a man of strict integrity and fairness, very courteous, and was greatly respected by his political opponents as well as those connected with him by party affiliations. He was a faithful public official, and while a member of the Board was very attentive to the county's business. He was regular in his attendance at the county buildings, every day spending a portion of his time in this city, and supervised all the work of the Board. A very large percentage of the personal attention to county affairs he gave gratuitously, for during retired from active private engagements, and devoted himself to public business without any expectation of remuneration but with sincere interest and as a means of occupying his time. All this was, however, done with much sacrifice. His administration of affairs was frequently commended by those politically opposed to him, and his terms of office were in years of prosperity to the county.

After his defeat as a freeholder he was a candidate for the Legislature, and Mr. Kyte was also his opponent, defeating him in that contest likewise.

Mr. Martine was foreman of the May term of grand jurors. He was in attendance at court the opening day of the present term, and was in the city on Thursday. He seemed well, and was not in opposition to the moon."

—"An Analysis of the Book of Genesis," will be the subject for study at the Bible Normal Class, which meets in the First Baptist Church at eight o'clock this evening. Any one interested in Bible study, will be cordially received as members, and those joining now, will be supplied with full notes of the work already gone over. Applications may be made to Mr. C. B. Brown.

—The bowling section of the Y. M. C. A., will meet a team of the Mt. Olympic allies to-morrow evening. The payment of one dollar per month in addition to the two dollar membership in the association entitles any one to bowl.

—While the gateman at the Washington avenue crossing in Dunellen was lowering the gates after a passing train on Saturday, a boy named Apgar made a foolhardy attempt to cross the track. The wagon in which he was seated striking a part of the gate and smashing it.

—We received this week from H. F Schive, of Fanwood township, a basket of fine, large, red raspberries, the second crop of the season. They were all large, fully ripe and of excellent flavor; this is something quite unusual for this time of year.—Railway Union-Democrat.

—The rumor published Saturday that Queen Victoria was dying happily proves to be untrue. The New York afternoon papers had extras Saturday announcing that Her Majesty was dead, and such an announcement was read to the audiences in several New York theatres, at matinee performances.

—The electrician of the North Plainfield Electric Light Company it seems has the name of reverend also. He has a mania for putting out the lights at the faintest appearance of the moon. When remonstrated with, his invariably reply is "that the lights have no business to run in opposition to the moon."

Burned to Death.

TAUNTON, Mass., Oct. 26th. (Special.)—Alpheus Hunt, an aged man, was burned to death here this morning by his house catching fire.

Boys Club Notes.

The average attendance at the club last week was forty six boys. The largest attendance fifty-six and the smallest twenty nine. The number of visitors was sixteen. Four boys joined during the week making the total membership four hundred and four.

All the parents and friends of the boys are invited to the entertainment this evening. It begins at eight o'clock.

As we had expected the class in scroll sawing has proved a great success. The class is filled and twenty more are anxious to join and names are being received all the time, but as we are cramped for room these will be obliged to await the dismissal of any of the regular class for any good reason. We not only instruct the boys in a regular course of lessons but let them also know that they must be good boys to remain in the class. We should be glad to have our friends see the boys at work. They work every evening from seven to nine o'clock. We hope to be able to start other classes soon. The rooms have been draped in mourning for Matthew McLernon, the member who was killed lately by the cars.

A Dangerous Bridge.

Between this city and New Brunswick on the public highway there is a bridge, spanning a small creek, which is sadly in need of repair. Several parties who were driving to the former place yesterday narrowly escaped severely injuring their horses while crossing the structure. The Middlesex county authorities should have the bridge repaired before they are called upon to pay damages.

Struck by a Bicycle.

While crossing LaGrande avenue yesterday, Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, who resides on that thoroughfare was struck by a high bicycle and more or less injured. The rider also took a "header" and was slightly bruised. The machine was badly damaged.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It was an English paper that said it about the money appropriated by the British government for the Columbian fair: "The money is squandered on feasting, traveling and other expenses for the personal comfort and glorification of the commissioners." But of course American commissioners to Europe do not spend money in that way.

Carroll Wright on divorce: "I do not believe that divorce is a menace to the sacredness and purity of the family, but I do believe it is a menace to the infernal brutality of human nature, which at times makes a hell of the holiest of human relations, and if society would perpetuate the beautiful enshrinement of Lamartine's trinity—the father, the mother and the child—which of itself completes and perpetuates the race, it must also take the disgusting medicine labeled divorce."

Among the most interesting of the conventions of the month was the annual reunion of the descendants of the old Pennsylvania Germans. In communion brotherly and sweet met the Grumbines, the Slaymakers, the Brinkerhoffs, the Pennypackers and the Hilestanders. The Pennsylvania Germans furnished an element unique to the mixture of races that go to make up the American people. Large, strong, set in their ways, fond of and full of the material comforts of life, they yet carried in their souls also a deep, passionate ideality and a fervor out of which poets, metaphysicians and religious enthusiasts are made. Bayard Taylor had a large strain of Pennsylvania German blood in him. Its staying qualities are unexcelled on this earth. It is with pleasure we read that a movement is in progress in the society to preserve the early literature and the proverbs and sayings of the Pennsylvania Germans. It is a rich vein of local literature that has never yet been worked fully.

Is There Too Much Athletics?

Writing on this theme in the New York Herald, Dr. Morell Mackenzie says:

Any system of bodily discipline is likely to be hurtful, first, if it is begun at too early an age; second, if it is too severe or too prolonged; third, if, owing to special circumstances, it is unsuitable to the person subjected to it. Under these three heads all the evils which may be caused by training are comprised, but it must, of course, be borne in mind that there are innumerable individual peculiarities of constitution and conformation which have to be taken into account. It cannot be wondered, therefore, that even while the light of medical science to guide them the most experienced trainers occasionally make mistakes.

Hitherto the most frequent victims of the young thoroughbred horses that are started in to racing before they reach maturity are ruined. The same observation will hold good with regard to young humans. Young fellows may have a momentary strength that is greater than that of an adult, but the grown man has a staying power that beats the youth out of sight.

What is the proper age at which a young man may begin athletic training? Not till his bones and muscles are matured. The shafts of the limb bones do not finish ossification till the eighteenth year, and the bony framework of the body is not fully matured till from the twenty-fifth to the thirtieth year. The young man's growth, therefore, may be stunted and deformities may supervene if he be put to severe exercise earlier than this. To early or too severe training induces an actual disease of fatigue, also what is known among physicians as the "irritable heart."

Still, the evils that result from overexercise are as nothing compared to those that come from no exercise at all. This is Dr. Mackenzie's summing up of the whole matter.

Last Days and Best Days.

Every human being's last days should be his best days. If he has wisely used the earlier half of his life, with the average opportunities accorded to mankind for amassing property, he will have money enough to maintain him without grinding toil. The first half of man's life may be devoted to working for others and doing their will, but by the time he enters on the second half he will be able to spend the rest of his years in pleasing himself.

The laws of hygiene are now so well understood that anybody may learn them. A man should have learned so well how to take care of himself during the first half of his life that during the last half he will have perfect health.

Experience will have knocked off the rough corners of his nature and sweetened his temper. He will have met so many disappointments and lived safe through them all and come out happily, that at length he will have learned that no sorrow can be eternal and no misery is so great that there will not yet be a good deal of fun on the after side of it. The crude passion and fierce greediness of raw youth will have exhausted themselves. Care and disappointed hope can no longer eat the heart out and ruin the digestion. The experience of years will enable the man to take his fellow man and the events of life harmoniously and kindly. His face will reflect the content and repose of his soul, and he will be better looking than he was in his youth. He will also have learned to be more careful of his manners, to take care of personal appearance, for that will be one of the lessons taught by wise experience. Oh, yes; a man's last days are his best days.

JACK THE RIPPER AGAIN.

This Time His Work Was Done in Berlin.

A WOMAN SLAIN AND MANGLED.

The Crime Bears Every Indication of Having Been Committed by the Whitechapel Fiend or by an Imitator—Portions of the Victim's Body Carried Away.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The body of a woman well known in the haunts of the dissolute was found lying on the floor of her room Sunday frightfully mutilated. The police have offered 300 marks reward for the detection of her murderer.

Like Jack the Ripper's Work.

It is believed in police circles that the woman was a victim of "Jack the Ripper," of Whitechapel fame. Portions of the body of the murdered woman were carried away by the murderer. The victim was seen to enter the house with a stranger about 2 a. m. and shortly afterward the man was seen to run away.

Discovery of the Corpse.

Fifteen minutes later the woman was found dead, lying on the floor, dressed even to the matter of her gloves. The woman name was Hedwig Nitsche, her residence in Rixdorf, a good trade for awhile by exhibiting the remains to the public for a small sum of money until the police interfered and stopped the horrible business.

Without a Clew, as Usual.

Blood was spattered all over the ceiling and walls of the room, and it seems impossible to account in any other conclusion than that the deed was the work of a mad man. The police have already arrested several suspicious characters, but they have in all cases been discharged for lack of evidence, and the authorities are still hopelessly without a clew to the tragedy.

John O'Connor Attacked.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The Parnellites and anti-Parnellites held numerous meetings in Cork Sunday. The most singular incident of the day was the mud pelting which John O'Connor, the Parnellite M. P., received at the instances of some priests. O'Connor was guilty of canvassing for Redmond, when he was followed by Canon O'Mahony and two curates, each with an open prayer book in his hand.

The priests urged the people to eject O'Connor from their houses. Upon O'Connor's refusal to retire, he was pelted with mud. O'Connor perceived that the attack was excitement was growing he concluded to retire.

A Swiss Town Wiped Out.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Fire has destroyed the flourishing town of Meiringer in the canton of Berne, Switzerland. The flames curled fiercely around the church, and the devout Switzers made one more rally to extinguish the conquering flame. Almost as if by a miracle the fire was borne by the gale in another direction and the church escaped destruction. Besides the church but few houses were left standing. More than 3,000 people are homeless.

Anti-Parnellites Win Their Suit.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Two anti-Parnellites named Clarke and Kennedy brought an action against Treasurer McWatter, of the Dunmore, Cork, to recover certain contributions which, they alleged, had been devoted to purposes contrary to those for which the money was subscribed. The recipient of the money gave judgment for the plaintiffs with costs. The case caused considerable sensation.

Common People Cannot Play Baccarat.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—There is a good deal of quiet comment on the privileges of royalty and aristocracy to do what they please in connection with a raid just carried out by the police on an east end gambling den where baccarat is the favorite temptation. Thirty people, not acquainted with the Prince of Wales, were arrested.

Bismarck Will Make It Lively.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The reichstag session is expected to develop but two features of special interest, and they are the opposition of Bismarck and the fight of the Clericals for the Jesuit and Redemptorist bill. It is expected that Bismarck will make it lively for the government in the discussions.

Another Blow at the Russian Jew.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 26.—An order has been made prohibiting Jews from supplying spirituous liquors to the crown, and the Jews are also prohibited from selling liquors, except when intended for export.

Brigands Demand 50,000 Francs.

ROME, Oct. 26.—The police of Caltanissettes, Sicily, have received a message from the bandit who held the Marquis Gribaldi a prisoner demanding 50,000 francs as a ransom.

Walt Whitman Hopelessly Paralyzed.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 25.—Walt Whitman is hopelessly paralyzed and but a shadow of his former self. The doctors say he may live for years, but is liable to die at any time, as paralysis is slowly approaching his heart. Whitman is nearly seventy-three years of age, and besides being paralyzed is afflicted with gastric and catarrhal maladies.

Mystery Surrounds Williams' Death.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The death of Horace Williams, whose body was found floating in the creek at Lafayette Mills, still remains a mystery. John Dobbins, who lives near the late Mr. Williams, has not yet turned up. The general theory is that the men while drunk drove too close to the water and fell in.

Dr. Orpheus Still Dead.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Dr. Orpheus S. Still, wife of James Still, to death. Dr. Still was born in Rush, Dec. 19, 1832. In 1861 she was graduated from Hahnemann Medical college, Chicago, and afterward pursued post graduate studies in that institution. She built up an extensive practice in this city.

President Gompers' Call.

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—President Samuel Gompers has called the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor to meet at Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 14 next.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

Austin Gibbons, lightweight pugilist, took out his second papers in Passaic county, N. J., and is now an American citizen.

Attorney General Miller has completed an argument upholding the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff bill, which he will file with the supreme court of the United States in the suits brought to test the legality of that act.

John McGowan, twenty-one years old, was arrested by the Brooklyn police last after he had set fire to a tenement house in Phillips alley and a stable at 39 John street. At the station house McGowan confessed, and he is thought to be the incendiary who has caused many fires among the big tenements in Brooklyn the last three months.

Secretary Blaine has gone to Washington and his friends say he is surely a candidate for the presidential nomination next year.

Mayor Gleason, of Long Island City, caused the arrest of George F. Spaeth on the charge of illegally acting as election inspector. County Judge Gaffney ordered the release of Spaeth, who says he is a lawful inspector.

The report that Queen Victoria was dead was a canard.

Commander Palmer, of the G. A. R., will issue an order against G. A. R. men parading in processions where Confederate flags are carried after Decision.

Gen. Luce Fitzsimmons, who was found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Detective Gilkinson, was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary at Pittsburg.

The Russian Consul Challenged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 26.—The Russian colony here is in a state of excitement over a challenge to mortal combat sent to the Russian consul by Nicholas Russell, a Greek photographer. The affair has arisen from troubles in the Russian Greek church in this city, which is in charge of Bishop Vladimir, of the diocese of Alaska.

Heavy New York State Registration.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Dispatches from Rochester, Binghamton, Syracuse, Elmira, Utica, Troy, Buffalo and other cities show very heavy registration, in some places reaching, and even exceeding, that of a presidential year.

Editor Carter Harrison.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Carter Harrison is ambitious to be an editor, and says that next spring he will assume control of the Chicago Times.

FOR FAIR WOMEN.

THE VERY LATEST FADS REGARDING FALL FASHIONS.

New Styles—New Gowns—New Materials.

New Fashions in Hair—New Gossip for and About the Fair Sex Briefly Told.

Sealskin is now so expensive that it has increased the price and created a demand for the furs of humbler animals. Mink will be most popular this winter. It is seen in charming little boas and collars, ornamented with heads and claws of the animals. Gluiton is another fur that will be extensively used for dress trimming. It is long-haired and durable, but lacks the fine texture and rich shading of the better grades of mink. The beautiful sable fur is always desirable, but its high price renders it beyond the reach of most purses.

NOVEL AUTUMN GOWNS.

Sketched from Life—Improvements at the Fashion Plate.

GRACEFUL IN EVERY LINE.

Here are two very interesting sketches made on a fashionable avenue by an artist. The first sketch shows you an out-door costume, with a cape of dark chestnut brown cloth, lined with pale yellow satin. The gown is of dark chestnut, and paled pink striped silk, some parts being more narrowly striped than others. The place where the two kinds of silk join is outlined in dark brown velvet ribbon. The gown, white gloves are worn, and a white crepe de chine hat, with white satin strings and jetted buckles. A long mantle shows very severely the whole gown, and made in black and pale yellow striped Ottoman silk, with black feathers and a trimming of black velvet. The gloves are gray. The hat is made very prettily with alternate bands of pale yellow and black satin ribbons.

The Hair.

Much is said pro and con as to the effect of salt water on the hair.

Those who severely applied salt water is not only not injurious, but it is an excellent tonic. If allowed to remain in a damp state, however, it will cause a coarse hair to fall out. The strands should be carefully combed after the bath and not put up until perfectly dry.

Tar soap rubbed into the scalp before going in bathing helps to keep blonde hair light. In such cases it is well to dry the hair in the sun. A three-cornered handkerchief of rubber that costs $2.50 is the only means of keeping the hair dry in diving and bathing. It should be tied tarbo-fashion as tightly as possible.

The hair curled constantly in one place engenders a fever which causes it to fall out. The wise, therefore, change from top-knot to Psyche, and thence to Langtry as frequently as possible.

WASHINGTON WAR TALK

Great Interest in the Recent Chilian Complications.

THEY MAY INJURE RECIPROCITY.

Julio Foster Ridicules the Talk of Hostilities, Admits That Uncle Sam Could Blow Chili Out of the Water, but Thinks Blaine's Scheme Would Suffer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Not since the threatened complications with Italy last spring has so much war talk been heard in naval and administration circles as over the brutal assault on our sailors at Valparaiso. That the administration is in earnest is evinced by the peremptory instructions cabled to Minister Egan. He will doubtless lay his instructions before the junta today. Then the administration will wait a reasonable time to learn the result of the junta's investigation.

The administration is not disposed to act arbitrarily in demanding a speedy reply from Chili. President Harrison appreciates the embarrassments attending such inquiries; but, on the other hand, he is determined that there shall be no unnecessary delay, and great satisfaction was expressed here today at the intelligence that the investigation had already begun. If Judge Foster, who has it in charge, pushes it rapidly, a good deal of the present irritation in administration circles will be removed. Minister Egan will keep the state department fully informed, and in this way the information will be largely influenced by his reports.

Force to Combat Force.

Naval officers express the opinion that the presence of a strong fleet of war vessels at Valparaiso would materially expedite a settlement of the affair. The hostile spirit which the Chilians generally display toward the United States and the representatives of the United States is one that can be subdued only by fear. Fortunately congress will assembly in six weeks. By that date we shall have four cruisers at Valparaiso. If in the meantime Chili has failed to satisfy our demands President Harrison will probably lay the matter before congress, and, like President Buchanan on a similar noteworthy occasion, he will no doubt say that the chief executive shall have authority to use other than peaceable means" in the event that Chili still declines to make proper reparation.

The Miantonomah Is a Terror.

Chili must then either come to terms or our fleet will be ordered to shell the city of Valparaiso. It is quite probable, if so extreme a course as this were necessary that the monitor Miantonomah would be quickly dispatched to the scene of trouble until the battleships could follow. The Miantonomah will stand alone as the most formidable fighting ship we have in our navy.

Yesterday Captain Montgomery Sicard was formally assigned to command her, and it is expected at the navy department that she will be ready for commission next week. The United States will be her first iron clad ship. Her first service will be of an experimental nature. She will be sent to Gardiner's bay to test her great guns and far enough to sea to test her seaworthiness.

Chili Could Not Destroy Her.

Although built for home protection, naval officers generally consider her available for offensive purposes, and in view of the serious turn the Chilian affair has taken, a look over her capabilities may be timely. With this formidable fighting ship in the harbor of Valparaiso the United States would be in a better position to grant the demand of Egan to meet with all the cruisers we possess. All the Chilian vessels combined could not destroy her, while she could lie off at a distance of six miles or more and practically destroy the town with her four 10-inch guns. The emergency would be a great one that would induce Secretary Tracy to send this vessel out of home waters, for he looks upon the Monitor as purely a coast defense vessel and unsuitable for fighting at sea.

Why Not Cut Off Water?

With proper enterprise there would be nothing to prevent the concentration of a fleet of at least a dozen modern cruisers and gunboats in the South Pacific. The Philadelphia, Kearsarge and Concord, comprising Rear Admiral Gherardi's squadron; the Chicago, Atlanta and Boston, of Admiral Walker's squadron; the Newark, fitting out at Boston for the South Atlantic, and the Petrel, at New York, could all, if the emergency demanded, be sent from the station to Valparaiso within ninety days. These, with the Baltimore already at Valparaiso, the San Francisco, Callao, the Boston and Yorktown en route to Valparaiso, the Yantic en route to Montevideo and the Thetis, Ranger, Mohican and San Francisco, would give a fleet of sixteen services.

All of the number are modern except the last four and the majority of them are superior to the best ships in the Chilian navy, with the exception of the Esmeralda, which compares favorably with the Baltimore.

Where Chili Is Strong.

In one respect, however, the Chilian navy is strong where we are weak, and this is in torpedoes and torpedo boats. Besides the Almirante Contell and Almirante Lynch, the two steel torpedo gunboats of 730 tons each, Chili has eleven first class torpedo boats similar to our little Cushing. It is there our cruisers would have the greatest cause to fear, for, being without nets, they have no protection against the deadly work of torpedo, rapid fire guns. In addition to the torpedo vessels the Chilian navy comprises three armored vessels of seven unarmored vessels, the Blanco Encalada, Almirante Cond

A BIG GREEN GOODS GANG

Two Shrewd Operators Bagged by Inspector Byrnes.

THEY DID A BIG POST OFFICE BUSINESS

An Intricate Set of Books Containing 50,000 Names Were Kept, a Printing Office Was Owned by the Sharpers and They Had Just Issued 500,000 Circulars

New York, Oct. 26.—Frank Brooks, alias "Pretty Frank," and Terrance Murphy, alias "Poodle" Murphy, have been arrested by Inspector Byrnes for being "green goods" men. Both men are ex-convicts, having served sentences for pocket picking and shoplifting.

Once Robbed Ex-Secretary Robeson.

Murphy was once arrested for having robbed ex-secretary of Navy Robeson of a gold watch in Philadelphia. The two men are probably the cleverest green goods operators in the business. Some idea of the extent of their operations can be gained from the fact that their outfit contained forty-six large books filled with the names of past and prospective victims, together with a lot of circulars and newspaper clippings. The books contained the names of more than 60,000 well to do persons in nearly every town and village in the country.

They Did a Big Business.

About 6,000 letters and telegrams were found from various parts of the country acknowledging the receipt of circulars and making appointments for meetings in this city. Inspector Byrnes estimates that at least $3,000 has been paid for postage stamps by the two men within a month. When the men were arrested they were in the act of addressing circulars.

They Owned a Printing Office.

One set of books contained the right names of proposed victims and their addresses, while another set had a cipher entry. Brooks and his confederate have done during the past few months an immense business, or rather a preparation for it. They have recently mailed 500,000 circulars to various parts of the country. Some time ago they purchased a second hand printing office, and with the outfit produced his own circulars at a reduced cost. When he had finished his work he resold the press and material.

Replies will be coming in from the 500,000 circulars very soon, but not one cent of good will Brooks or his confederate realize from them, for without the records and the cipher number the game cannot be worked with success.

The Gangs Circular.

The circular which the gang has distributed so liberally holds out the usual alluring bait. Customers must come to this city and do their business personally or the goods and rates are described as follows:

My prices are as follows: $200 by $1,000; $650 by $10,000; $1,500 by $20,000. These goods are as fine as human skill can make them. Not one of my agents have ever had the least difficulty in handling them, and many have acquired independent fortunes.

All communication with the "gang" is by telegraph, using a cipher furnished with the circular, and prospective customers are strongly warned not to use the mails, as discovery is the inevitable result. Among the letters found was one from John F Reed, who claims to be the superintendent of the Elgin Home Stock Farm, Elgin, Ill., and asks the writer to send fifty dollars for a small consignment of the "stuff" to try it and see how it works. If successful, he will engage in larger transactions, he says.

IN THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Methodists Celebrate Their Anniversary in the Old John Street Chapel.

New York, Oct. 26.—The 125th anniversary of Methodism in this country was celebrated Sunday in its original home—the first Methodist church ever built in America, known as the John Street chapel and until one of the oldest and busiest sections of the city. The morning's service was conducted by Rev. William Gorrie, who came from the birthplace of the church's first pastor in Ireland. The whole day was devoted to holding anniversary meetings, participated in by many of the clergymen who have been in attendance at the Ecumenical conference in Washington and hailing from all parts of the globe. The old clock which stands in the lecture room, and which was sent to the society by John Wesley 130 years ago, was one of the chief objects of interest to those present.

A Catholic Cemetery Consecrated.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The first Roman Catholic cemetery was consecrated Sunday. Bishop Ludden, of Syracuse, officiated. After high mass in the church the congregation and religious societies marched to the cemetery, where the usual ceremonies were held. The cemetery is the largest in the county.

Tuft's New Divinity Building.

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—The corner stone of Tuft's new divinity building was laid on Sunday in the presence of a large and enthusiastic crowd. Among those present was President Capen, A. A. Miner and T. J. Sawyer Deah, of the Divinity school. President Capen opened the exercises with a history of the Divinity school, being followed by representatives of the trustees and students.

These Chinamen Escaped Arrest.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Chief of Police Wright received a telegram Saturday from a deputy sheriff of Jefferson county announcing that he would be in Syracuse that afternoon in search of seven Chinamen who had crossed from Canada. The deputy did not arrive, but the seven Chinamen were seen as they alighted from a Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg train, dressed as Americans. As yet none of the Chinamen have been apprehended.

Miners Wanted to Ohio.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26.—John Costello, president of District No. 7, United Mine Workers, now on strike, received communications from two firms in the Hocking valley (Ohio) district asking him if he could send 800 of the striking miners to that valley to mine coal at regular union wages in addition to their own men. Action will be taken on the matter today.

Four Prisoners Break Jail.

PITTSBURG, O., Oct. 26.—D. R. Goodwin, indicted for bigamy; Eck Evick, maiming, and Robert Thuing and Charles McCarty, burglary, broke jail yesterday by sawing off the cell bars with a burglar's saw. After gaining admission to the general apartment, it required but a few minutes work to saw the window bars off and gain their liberty.

Paid in Kind.

A Hoosier lad of twelve years was industriously at work upon a pile of wood in his mother's back yard, when he was approached by a playmate.

"Hello, Ben," said the youngster, "do you get anything for cuttin the wood?"

"Well, I reckon I do," replied Ben. "Maybe me a cent a day for doin it."

"What you goin to do with yer money?"

"Oh, she's savin it for me, and when I get enough she's goin to get me a new ax."—Youth's Companion.

SEARLES GETS THE DECISION.

The Will of His Wealthy Widow Sustained at Salem.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 26.—The will of Mrs. Mary F. Hopkins-Searles has been admitted to probate, and the case goes up on appeal to a judge of the supreme court and a jury upon the evidence produced before the lower court. The sudden termination of the case was a surprise, because the lawyers had asserted that they had volumes and volumes of evidence yet to be produced. But it seems that the contestants are satisfied to go to the supreme court upon the case which they have presented.

It was a great disappointment that Timothy Hopkins did not go upon the witness stand. He was subpœnaed some weeks ago by the counsel for Mr Searles, but at the request they concluded that they did not want him.

The case was submitted without argument, and Judge Harmon simply voiced the popular feeling when he said that the charges of conspiracy to influence Mrs. Hopkins against her adopted son had utterly failed of proof, and that the allegations of fraud and undue influence had absolutely no evidence to sustain them. The case cannot be reached by the supreme court before May next, and not even then unless the court consents to advance the case upon the docket.

The Davis Contestants Must Wait.

HELENA, Mon., Oct 26.—Judge McHatton, of the Silver Bow district court, has denied the motion for the contestants for an immediate trial of the Davis will case, and set the date for April 18, 1892. The first trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

DEADLY AFFRAY NEAR PITTSBURG

One Man Killed and Another Wounded by Two Negroes.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26.—James Buckley, a young married man, was shot through the head and instantly killed in front of Stein's hotel at Sparksburg, and Harry Stein, the proprietor, was shot in the thigh Saturday night by Henry Akens and George Morris, two colored men, who were ejected from Stein's hotel because they would not pay for their drinks.

The negroes called for two drinks of the "best whisky in the house," but refused to pay the price asked, twenty cents each. John Stein, the barkeeper, ordered them out of the place. They replied there was no one in the room that could put them out, whereupon young Stein started to eject the negroes. Henry Stein, the proprietor, and Jerry Buckley, a steel worker, came to the assistance of young Stein. A terrific affray ensued, the whole party finally getting out into the street. Here the negroes began firing and the crowd scattered. Four shots were fired, when George Morris took to his heels. When a policeman arrived young Stein was grappling with the other negro.

The officer after a hard fight put Akens under arrest. At this juncture the dead body of young Buckley was found in the street with a bullet hole through his head. Instantly there went up a shout from the crowd, "Lynch him!" "Lynch him!" Wiser counsel prevailed, however, and Akens was landed safely in the lockup. Henry Stein was also shot in the leg, and his son was badly beaten. Morris was arrested later, and the two men were brought to Pittsburg jail a little later, as it was feared they would be lynched.

"Our" Mary's Happy Married Life.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Dr. Hamilton Griffin, of Mary Anderson, Mary Anderson Navarro, arrived from Europe last night. Dr. Griffin said that his stepdaughter was devoted to her domestic life. There is no truth in the statement that she is again to go on the stage. She is in excellent health and spirits.

CABLE BREVITIES.

There is an epidemic of forgery and coining in Germany.

The authorities at Odessa are now urging the Jews to remain and cultivate the soil.

At Eastbourne the mob again routed the Salvation Army and destroyed their musical instruments.

The British military authorities are at a loss to fathom the extent of disaffection in Burmah against British rule.

Prince Galitzin is on his way to Cashmere, in British India, and his journey is supposed to be in connection with the Pamir situation.

A dispatch from Paris says that it is untrue that France has decided not to participate in the Chicago fair.

Teed Wins Over the Economites.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26.—Dr. Cyrus R. Teed, late of Chicago, has succeeded in forcing the Economite society, at Economy, Pa., to adopt his peculiar "Koresh" views. Dr. Teed was given a hearing by the board of elders. Dr. Teed's ideas were explained by Trustee John Duss, who said that the Koresheans and Economites had many points in common. Dr. Teed made a lengthy statement himself concerning the system, and it was finally decided by the board to support Dr. Teed in whatever way they could. They would give him their coaching or "credit," as Dr. Teed expresses it.

FACTS FOR THE HOME.

WHICH EVERY DUTIFUL HOUSEKEEPER WILL READ AND PROFIT THEREBY.

Our Homes Become More Beautiful and Comfortable — We Live Better and Happier Through Information Like the Following.

Pure mutton tallow is one of the most useful and inexpensive of medical agents. For that class of sores and wounds where a cooling, healing application is indicated, its value is beyond compare. Many an obstinate sore or ulcer has been healed permanently by pursuing the following simple method: Wash thoroughly, but gently, once or twice a day, with a soft cloth, and cover with a coating of the tallow. This should be spread upon a piece of linen or cotton, the tallow being sufficiently thick to prevent the cloth backing from adhering to the wounded or diseased surface. The importance of the utmost cleanliness in dealing with all troubles of this nature should by no means be overlooked.—Good Housekeeping.

SOME HOME-MADE FURNITURE.

Quaint and Beautiful Designs That any Amateur Carpenter Can Construct.

Here are two articles of furniture designed in a style that offers no insuperable difficulties to the amateur carpenter who is fairly an adept at handling the ordinary tools. In many districts far removed from large cities, one finds handy carpenters who, under careful direction, can carry out work of this sort economically and satisfactorily. The final touches of the decoration, whether carving, painting, repoussé work, or fret cut metal, can often be made by the skilful amateur, even if he be unable to construct the "carcase" of the piece of furniture they are destined to adorn.

The whatnot shown in our first design might be decorated with thin metal cut with a fret saw and applied with a real purpose of bracing the whole thing together. The sage-plate and look escutcheon are clearly indicated; but angle pieces, to clasp the whole together, as work band of metal at the base of the cupboard or locker, would be both effective and practically desirable. If would be excellent; if wrought in oak and left unpolished, carving might be speedily introduced with equal success. If it were finished in black, dull crimson, or dull green enamel colors, painted ornament might be in good taste and extremely decorative in its effect. As the whole is noticeably Japanese in design, such decoration should be not more frankly naturalistic in its treatment than that employed by Japanese artists. Conventional wild roses in cream and salmon rose on a dyll green ground; groups of cupids and wreaths on an ivory ground, or gold of different shades upon a dull crimson, offer these varieties of treatment diverse, and all capable of being successfully undertaken, at no great cost.

The chair is a very quaint form, so clearly explained in the drawing that further description would be needless.—Art Amateur.

A Don'ts" For the Sewing Room.

Don't have white walls in the room where you sew if it is also a sunny room, or, if you must have them, wear a shade over your eyes on bright days.

Don't sew too long at a time without taking a rest, even a brief one. Have a change in your sewing room and once during the afternoon drop everything and stretch yourself out upon it with eyes closed and every nerve and muscle relaxed, if only for five minutes by the clock.

Don't keep the same chair too long. It will rest you wonderfully to change your seat in the room occasionally, if you have a long day's sewing to do.

Don't strain to finish an article as so many thrifty women do, simply to put it away that night. When you are getting cross at the children, don't care whether dinner is to be a comfortable meal or not, and hope John will be a little late in coming home—it is time you folded away your work. To go on is to make drafts upon nature which that honorable mistress will surely want honored in the future.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

To Remove Stale Smoke.

To prevent the disagreeable odor of stale smoke in sitting-rooms, stand a pan of cold water in the room over night. Where persons smoke daily, the servant should be instructed to stand a bucket or pan of water every night in the sitting-rooms, and to open the windows as widely as possible in the morning.

A raw egg swallowed immediately will be generally found to carry down a fish bone that cannot be removed by coughing.

SOME FISH STORIES.

Mendacious Enough They Do Too Close Seltzers Them If Not Likes.

A fisherman lately returned from the Columbia River says that the water of that stream is so clear that the salmon can see you with both eyes, and Parnaldo can tell when they have done that they wink the other eye and swim away.

At a little parlor fair in Illinois last week there was a small pond rigged up in which there swam a sunfish, a perch, a trout, a catfish, and a half-dozen other varieties of scaly inhabitants. On payment of one dollar any visitor to the fair was permitted to cast a baited hook into the pond, and if he guessed rightly the name of the fish he caught he was given a glass of lemonade free. The pond cleared thirty-four dollars, at an expense of two glasses of lemonade.

The mackerel is not an intelligent fish which is singular, because, as I am informed by an old sea captain who knows, he is always in a state of panic. Perhaps if he took an occasional vacation the mackerel would learn more.

A little boy who lives in Yonkers is confident that there are sardines in the Hudson River, because, while fishing from one of the piers the other day, he hauled in a sardine box.

Another little boy known to the writer, is also a funny sort of a person as regards fishes. He cried for ten minutes one day because he caught a shiner in a pail that he and his papa caught. He is only four years old, however, and is not as learned as he will be two years hence.

The crew of the whaler Judson are in great glee over an unexpected catch recently made by them in a hurricane. They were cruising at anchor when the storm came up, and so terrific was the wind that the anchor dragged. A whale, seeing it, supposed it to be a great submarine monster, and proceeded to fight against its supposed enemy. At the first attack the whale's tail was severely injured, and the great fish, writhing about, opened its jaws and snapped at the tremendous bit of iron just as trout snaps at a baited hook and with the same result. The sharp fluked arm of the anchor caught the whale firmly, and held him fast. The next morning, when the anchor was hauled in, the whale was found, still struggling to get away, but without avail. The great creature was quickly killed, towed to the side of the vessel, the rope was run to the capstan, greatly assisting in the operation, cut up, and the oil secured Altogether this is said to have been the most marvelous catch of recent years.—Harper's Young People.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

How Did the Rat Get In? Or Is the Story a Yarn?

A story comes of a lad who was discovered "alive and kicking" in a soda-water bottle. The bottle lay in a pile of other bottles in a corner of a second floor. One day the owner of them found a bottle rolling around in an excited manner—for a bottle—and he found the reason to be—a rat.

It was a big rat, too, far bigger than the neck of the bottle. The men studied the subject awhile, and at last displayed the bottle on his store counter, where it was examined by hundreds of people.

"How did the rat get into the bottle, he could not get out?" That was the question.

The wiseacres who pondered the question decided that the rat went in "for fun" when he was small, and grew large because his mother—for a well-known custom of rats—would not let him through the bottle's neck. As I earnestly believe in this explanation myself, for I think if a mother rat and some enough to do that she would have had some enough of her children to do the would naturally have said to him:

"Come out of that bottle, you stupid creature, or I don't stay there until you're so big you can't get out!"

What do you think?

Cleanliness of the Head.

Keeping the head perfectly clean is a great deal to health. A distinguished physician, who has spent much of his time at Quarantine, said that a person whose head was thoroughly washed every day rarely ever took contagious disease, but when the hair was allowed to become dirty and matted it was hardly possible to escape infection.

Many persons find speedy relief for nervous headache by washing the head thoroughly in weak soda water. We have known cases almost wholly cured in ten minutes by this simple remedy.

A friend finds it the greatest relief in case of "cross head," the cold symptoms nothing leaving the eyes after one thorough washing of the hair. The head should be thoroughly dried afterward and the draughts of air should be avoided for a little while.—Salem Gazette.

Autumn.

The leaves are turning brown and yellow
The apples are so ripe and mellow—
For Autumn's come with wind and rain,
We wish sweet Spring was back again.
The trees will soon be bare and cold,
For all the leaves will end and fold;
They fly off, whirling round and round,
They sink to flutter on the ground.
But Hickory nuts in Autumn grow,
And walnuts will to and fro;
It is great fun in Autumn weather
To go out nutting all together.

How Baby Got the Chicken.

"I want some more chicken," said four-year-old Frances at the dinner table.

"I think you have had as much as is good for you, dear," replied Frances's mamma.

"I want more." And Frances pouted.

"You can't have more now; but here is a wish-bone for you, and the mamma can pull. That will be fun. You pull one side and I'll pull the other, and whoever gets the longer end can have her wish come true. Why, baby, you've got it! What was your wish, Frances?"

"I wish for some more chicken," said Frances, promptly.

She got it this time.—Harper's Bazar.

Making Taffy at Home.

Excellent taffy may be made by taking one quart of molasses and half a pound of butter and boiling the two until the mass thickens. This will take about half an hour. Then stir with a spoon until, on taking out a little taffy, it becomes hard on immersion in cold water. Take a half tea-cup of vinegar, pour into the mass and stir for half a minute. Then pour the taffy into buttered tins, or dishes, and set aside to cool.—Ladies' Home Journal.

One often tires of lemon and vanilla flavoring, but if there is added to a tea-spoonful of lemon extract a third of a tea-spoon of vanilla, it will seem as if a new flavor had been discovered.

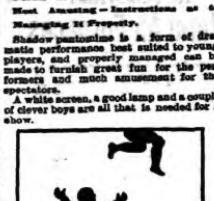
FUN FOR THE CHILDREN.

NOW COME THE LONG EVENINGS AND PARLOR AMUSEMENTS.

Shadow Pantomimes Are One of the Simplest Forms of Entertainment and the Most Amusing — Instructions as to Managing It Properly.

Shadow pantomimes in a form of dramatic performance best suited to young players, and properly managed can be made to furnish great fun for the performers and much amusement for the spectators.

A white screen, a good lamp and a couple of clever boys are all that is needed for a show.



THE PERFORMER'S SHADOWS.

The "screen" should be tightly stretched on a wooden frame, and should consist of the sheet of muslin used for transparencies, which may be had very wide without a seam. For lack of this a fine sheet will make a very fair substitute; but if this latter be used it should be wetted, in order to render it more transparent. In any case care should be taken to secure a closely woven material, as any rays of light shining between the threads would have a very bad effect. All lights should be put out on the spectator's side of the screen, and the opposite side lighted by one lamp only. This should be a low flat lamp, fitted with a burner of tolerably large size, and burning the very best kerosene oil. This lamp should be placed in a box or case purposely made to receive it, and which should be closed on every side save that looking towards the sheet, and should be only so high as just to admit the lamp, and to allow of some inch of guard over the chimney, to prevent the top of the box being scorched by the intense heat. The box should be substantial enough to prevent its being readily kicked over, and, if practicable, screwed down to the floor. The inside should be lined with bright tin, or, better still, a concave reflector should be fixed at the back of the box, just behind the light. Gas may be used, if preferred, but it must be remembered that to run for the shadows sharp and well defined, all the light must proceed from a single source; but, though essential is it that all the rays should originate in one single point that where a flat-flame burner is used, it is found necessary to turn its edgeways to the screen.

The chief thing the performers must learn is to keep themself turned sideways between the light and screen. If he turns ever so little to try to catch sight of his features, the profile is a profile no longer. For like reasons, the actors must avoid standing one in front of another, or their shadows will instantly be confused. If the action requires that two actors should pass each other, they should do so as rapidly as possible, for as they are required to turn round, they must do so with an instantaneous "right about face," bringing the features again into profile from the opposite side.

The point that most puzzles the uninitiated with reference to a shadow pantomime is the extraordinary manner in which the characters make their entrances and exits. Instead of coming on at the side, after the ordinary fashion (though this is sometimes done by way of variety), they generally enter by dropping down, apparently from the ceiling, and ceased by flying up there again in a most weird and uncanny manner. This curious effect is produced by jumping over the light, and the reader will now see the object of the substantial box or case we have described.

As outline is the only consideration, the make up of the performers is an easy one, pasteboard is the material. From swords and axes to razors and coal scullers all can be made from it, a bump on the back or a false nose and chin can be made from it, all you have to do is to cut out the desired feature (say a nose) in duplicate. Glue together the portions forming the projecting part of the nose, and the unglued portions will form a convenient clip to embrace the natural organ. To secure the pasteboard features in position, you may either use a piece of plaster, or a thread passing round the head and tied behind. Hands, as for instance beer poured from a jug, are represented by pawdust or sand, a paper-bagful of which, stuck just inside the waistcoat, will enable a wounded combatant to bleed in the most copi us and affecting manner.

A curious effect may be produced by holding objects cut out in pasteboard first a right and then a left to the screen, and then gradually shifting them round till they are parallel with it. In the former position the article throws merely an upright streak of shadow on the screen, these gradually developing to its full form and dimensions.

Salt Is Good.

The pastor in his pulpit stood,
His text beginning with—"Salt is good;"
And little Albert, four years old,
Listened to all that the pastor told.

Then reaching home, he helped himself
To a lump of salt from the kitchen shelf,
And tasting it, to his papa said,
As he wisely shook his little head.

And puckered his mouth and winked his eye

"The minister said that salt is nice;
But really I don't find it is,
Else Bible salt can't be like this."

He Knew All About Babies.

"Oa, I know all about babies," said Hallow to the young mother, who was afraid he would let her little one fall; "I was one myself once."

His Views.

The traveler stood looking at the glories of Yosemite for the first time. He had journeyed after many days to the Sierras. Before him in solemn grandeur rose the Cathedral Rock, the Three Brothers and the Sentinel Dome. The Bridal Veil falls, shimmering in the southern sun as the waters descended the tremendous precipice, lit up with varied tints the somber majesty of the scene, while El Capitan, mighty, overpowering, unapproachable, seemed to frown sternly over all. The traveler became conscious he was not alone. At his side, apparently lost in wonder, stood a stranger looking at the marvelous scene.

He addressed the stranger.

"Is not this stupendous?"

The stranger bowed his head, as if he felt the inability of words to describe his emotions.

"Do you think," pursued the traveler, "that this terrific gorge was caused by some titanic upheaval from below? Or is it the result of glacial action? What are your views, if any, sir?"

"My views," blandly interposed the stranger, opening a valise he carried in his hand, "are only $1.50 a dozen and cheap as we can make them. Permit me to show you a few samples."—Chicago Tribune.

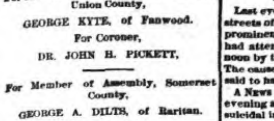
The Weather.

The weather promises to be clear and colder, with a cold wave.



—One week from to-day will be election day.

—Saturday will be sentence day in the Union County Court.

—"Blue Jeans," is booked to appear at Music Hall Nov. 5th.

—The Newark Presbytery was in session in this city yesterday.

—The Union county petit jurors were yesterday discharged until to-morrow.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session next Monday evening.

—If you do not register to-day you will lose your vote. See that your name is down.

—Next Saturday will be Hallow'een. Look out for your gates or they may be missing.

—There will be a "shoot" at the Campbell Club House to-morrow, commencing at ten o'clock.

—Register to-day. It is your last chance. The hours are from one p. m. until nine p. m.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. indulged in a practice game on the Oil, ympia alleys last evening.

—Grand Chancellor John Ulrich of this city last night instituted a new lodge of the Knights of Pythias at Roselle.

—The Union county court will continue in session until ejection day for naturalization of the foreign born citizens.

—The Ladies' Aid Society connected with the Hope chapel are arranging for an entertainment to be given early next month.

—Special services for the month of October will be held in St. Mary's Catholic Church to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—A public meeting in the interest of the education of the negro will be held in the Crescent avenue church this evening.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Hope Chapel held an Evangelistic service in the chapel last evening.

—A large elm tree on Grandview avenue, near Somerset street, North Plainfield, was struck by lightning last night and split.

—The Plainfield Building and Loan Association held a meeting last evening. Business of a routine nature only was transacted.

—Anchor Lodge F. & A. M., will hold a regular communication this evening at which time a M. M. Degree will be worked on one candidate.

—All the latest styles in suitings for men and boys, all kinds of cloths, and a complete line of overcoats and Winter goods at Werners. Read his advertisement.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—All young men who desire information about the bowling section of the Y. M. C. A. are requested to meet Mr. C. C. Dilts at the Olympia alleys this evening.

—Every Republican in North Plainfield should see to it that his name is on the registry list before nine o'clock tonight. If he cares enough about the G. O. P. to vote next Tuesday.

—The case of Frank Hand, which was to have come up for trial before City Judge Codington this morning, was adjourned over for one week. He is charged with disorderly conduct.

—There should be a good turnout to greet Geo. A. Dilts the candidate for Assembly from Somerset county, at the G. Grant Club Headquarters, North Plainfield, Thursday evening, 29th inst. See advertisement.

—A thunder storm in October is very rare. But nevertheless, a storm, accompanied by thunder and lightning visited this city last evening. Some of the flashes of lightning were very vivid and caused the bells on a number of telephones to ring.

—The employes of the Central Railroad in the vicinity of this city and Dunellen are soliciting subscriptions for Frank Wagoner, a fellow-employe, who fell from a tree and fractured his right arm while gathering chestnuts on Sunday. The accident occurred about a week ago.

—They have a ghost story sensation at Warrenville, where the lurid imagination of the more ignorant element of the vicinity have conjured up a tale of nothing less than murder, and the spirit of the supposed murdered victim, whose name is given and who it is said has been missing since a Fair in which pistols were used last Summer, appearing in human form on moonlight nights. We will not waste space on such stuff, further than to say that the tales told do credit to the imagination at least of the unsophisticated.

ALMOST A FATAL MISTAKE.

Mrs. Champney Took Chloral Thinking It Was Bromide.

Last evening it was reported on the streets of this city that the wife of a prominent young physician of Dunellen had attempted suicide Saturday afternoon by taking an over-dose of poison. The cause assigned for the rash act was said to have been jealousy.

A NEWS reporter visited Dunellen last evening and found the story as far as suicidal intent was concerned to be untrue. Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Champney moved to Dunellen about two years ago and have been residents of that borough ever since. They reside on Church street, where Dr. Champney practices medicine.

Mrs. Champney is subject to severe headaches and she takes bromide to relieve the pain. Saturday afternoon she was suffering from a severe headache and during her husband's absence she went to his medicine chest and took a vial therefrom, which she supposed, contained bromide. She swallowed a large quantity of the drug and a few moments afterwards she became unconscious.

When Dr. Champney arrived home he found her in that condition and he summoned Dr. Brakeley to his assistance. It was then ascertained that the young wife had taken chloral instead of bromide and that she had taken enough of it for twenty good-sized doses. Dr. Hedges of this city was also summoned and the three physicians did all in their power to restore the unfortunate woman to consciousness, but they did not succeed until Sunday morning at ten o'clock. When questioned on the subject Mrs. Champney said she had taken the drug by mistake.

Their neighbors scout the theory of attempted suicide as they say the young couple have always lived happily together. They have two children, the age of the oldest child being fifteen months. They formerly resided in Brooklyn and went from that city to Dunellen. Mrs. Champney is now thought to be out of danger.

LODGE ENTERTAINMENT.

Wetumpka's Friends at Music Hall Last Night.

Under the auspices of the popular Wetumpka Lodge, K. of H., No. 3,401, "Our Boys" were presented last night at Music Hall, by clever amateurs from the Annamath Dramatic Club.

The evening was stormy, but not withstanding that fact, the managers extravaganza highly gratified with the audience and the results.

The acting of the amateurs in some instances would have been a credit to professionals.

A Colored Man Assaulted.

A colored man named Betts complained to Policeman Glose yesterday afternoon that he had been assaulted in Stiger's saloon. He said he was intoxicated and went there to call on a family and that when he knocked on the door, some person not yet unknown to him suddenly opened it and struck him a stinging blow in the face, knocking him down. In reply to an inquiry as to where he had left his hat he said that when he was knocked down it fell off of his head and that he was so frightened he did not attempt to recover it. The policeman accompanied Mr. Betts to the alley, but was unable to ascertain who it was that assaulted him. He recovered the hat, however.

Burglars Visit Railway.

Burglars entered the residence of Mr. George Macpherson, a printer, of Maple avenue, Railway, Sunday night, but were disturbed by the dogs, as nothing was found missing. The house of Mr. Sydney Johnson, President of the Johnson Railroad Signal Company, was visited by burglars Monday morning, and who stole some cash and a gold watch and chain from Mr. Johnson's pockets. The police think it is the same gang of thieves who lately operated at Plainfield.

The Case Postponed.

The case of Timothy McCarty, a resident of Evona, vs. the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which was set down for trial before Justice Nash to-day, has been postponed until Nov. 5th. Mr. McCarthy has brought suit to recover damages from the company, he claiming that a spark from a passing locomotive set fire to his barn, which was destroyed about a year ago.

Taken to Elizabeth.

Harry Devine, the colored man who was arrested in this city yesterday morning by Acting-Captain of Police Lynch, on the charge of burglarizing residences in Elizabeth, was taken to that city last evening by an officer.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

DEMOCRATIC RECORD.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE PARTISAN LEGISLATION OF 1889.

Something Every Intelligent Voter Ought to Know, Especially in Connection with the Record of 1890 to Follow:

"The conspiracy by which the people of New Jersey have been robbed of their rights and their money," says Hon. John Kean, Democratic State Executive Committee, "and made the bound and helpless victims of boss rule, is conspicuously marked by the acts of the Legislature of 1889, when there was a subservient Democratic majority in both branches. The following is a list of the most obnoxious of these partisan acts:

DEMOCRATIC PARTISAN LEGISLATION, SESSION OF 1889.

(1) Taking from State Board of Education and giving to the Governor the appointment of the State Superintendent of Public Schools, and increasing his salary from $5,000 to $6,000 per annum. (Public Laws, session of 1889, page 15).

This act also legislated the then Republican superintendent of public schools before the expiration of his term, and put a Jersey City ring politician in his place.

(2) Act compelling the paying of Grand Jurors $2.00 a day. (P. L. 1889, page 95.)

(3) Creating two new Vice Chancellorships to be held open to be filled thereafter (P. L. 1889, p. 98), created for the special benefit of Governor Green.

(4) Providing salaries of $300 each for several unsalaried members of committees of the house. (P. L. 1889, p. 106.)

(5) Providing salaries of $600 a year each to Court Criers of first-class counties. (P. L. 1889, p. 105.)

(6) Authorizing the State Superintendent to prepare plans for the construction of school-houses for which $500 per annum was appropriated. (P. L. 1889, p. 135.)

(7) Authorizing Boards of Freeholders to appoint County superintendents of Public Works at salary to be fixed by the Board. (P. L. 1889, p. 135.)

(8) Changing the election of Chosen Freeholders in counties of the first-class from wards and townships to gerrymandered Assembly Districts, and increasing their pay to the fixed sum of $1,200 each per annum. (P. L. 1889, p. 162.)

(9) Act authorizing the Mayors to appoint all City Comptrollers, City Treasurers and City Collectors, to take the place of all incumbent officials, $3,000 per annum; also the appointment of Tax Commissioners, Corporation Counsels, Street and Water Commissioners, Boards of Finance, etc., to exercise powers then exercised by Boards of Aldermen. (P. L. 1889, p. 187), imposing ring governments on Newark and Jersey City.

(10) Ending terms of pilot commissioners upon the appointment of their successors by the Governor. (P. L. 1889, p. 284.)

(11) Taking from the Governor, Chancellor and Chief Justice the appointment of trustees of the State Reform School for Boys and vesting it in the Governor. (P. L. 1889, p. 284.)

(12) The same as to the State Industrial School for Girls. (P. L. 1889, p. 285.)

(13) Taking appointment of Commissioners of Fisheries from Joint Meeting and vesting it in the Governor. (P. L. 1889, p. 286.)

(14) Abolishing Board of Managers of Morristown Insane Asylum and vesting the appointment of their successors in the Governor. (P. L. 1891, p. 290.)

(15) Vesting the appointment of five State Prison Inspectors in the Governor. The Bonds heretofore executed to the Treasurer, Comptroller and three appointed by Joint Meeting. The act recites the terms of the latter. (P. L. 1889, p. 287.

(16) Vesting the appointment of the Secretary of the Bureau and Labor in the Governor and taking it from the clerks. (P. L. 1889, p. 293.)

(17) Creating office of Superintendent of the State House and Grounds, to be appointed by the Governor at $2,000 a year. Empowered to employ as many assistants as he chooses at such salaries as the Governor, Attorney-General and Treasurer or a majority of them, shall approve. (P. L. 1889, p. 300.)

(18) Empowering the State Superintend to employ assistants at an annual cost of $3,000. (P. L. 1889, p. 307.

(19) Fixing the salary of the Mayors of Newark and Jersey City at not less than $5,000 nor more than $6,000 per annum. (P. L. 1889, p. 314.)

(20) Taking from Joint Meeting and vesting in the Governor the appointment of Supervisors of the State Prison. (P. L. 1889, p. 321.)

(21) Authorizing Prosecutors of the Pleas in certain counties to appoint two detectives at $4 per day. (P. L. 1889, p. 366.)

(22) Fixing the pay of county Superintendents at not less than $600 or more than $1,200 per annum.

(23) Fixing the salary of Law or Presiding Judges of Orphans Court at $7,500 per annum. (P. L. 1889, p. 393.) A total increase in this item alone of $10,000 in the pockets of the Governor.

(24) Fixing the pay of Chiefs of Police in Newark and Jersey City at $3,500, and Captains at $3,000 per annum. (P. L. 1889, p. 572).

(25) Fixing the salary of Marshal or Sergeant-at-Arms of any city having such an officer, at $1,500 per annum. (P. L. 1889, p. 573.)

(26) Taking designation of the newspapers to publish the laws from the Governor (Democratic) and vesting it in the Governor, Comptroller and Secretary of State. (Two Democrats and one Republican.) (P. L. 1889, p. 473.)

All these various schemes for piling new burdens upon the taxpayers, for the shape of new offices for the spoilsmen, increased compensation for those already in office and investing the executive with increased powers, were links in the chain by which the conspirators riveted their fetters upon the people of New Jersey to ring rule. They were compelled to halt in 1890 because there was a Republican majority in the Senate during that year. But they devoted the interval to a more elaborate preparation of their programme of spoliation, which they carried into effect at the session of 1891 with a bold indifference to the protests of decency and a blind and servile obedience to the dictation of the chief beneficiary of the deal in the history of New Jersey or elsewhere.

The record of 1891 will follow in another issue.

Young Republicans Meet.

The Young Men's Republican Club of this city held a meeting in the Republican Headquarters on East Front street last evening. A large number of members were present and fifty-two candidates for membership were elected. The meeting was one of the most successful yet held by the association. It was decided to hold the meeting every Monday evening and the room will be open on that night. The outlook of the coming State and local elections were discussed.

IN COURT.

Prisoners Arraigned and Plead—Trial Commenced—Adjournment.

The Union County Court of General Quarter Sessions commenced at Elizabeth at 10 o'clock yesterday, Judge McCormick, Wiley and Hyer on the bench. The following prisoners were arraigned:

Louis Fink, of Westfield, charged with indecent assault, pleaded not guilty. His trial was set down for November 6.

William Tevlin, who pleaded not guilty on Friday to committing an assault on Edward Hale, retracted his former plea and pleaded non vult. He will receive sentence next Saturday.

Michael Mitchell, August Schultheis, Charles Schultheis and Charles Goughran, charged with indecent assault, retracted their plea of not guilty and pleaded non vult to the second count, that of assault and battery.

The case of the State vs. Catherine Tulis was then called and a jury impanelled.

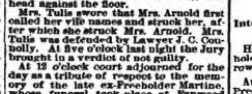
Mrs. Tulis is charged with having on July 12th committed an assault on Mrs. Magdelena Arnold by striking and kicking her several blows about the head and body.

According to the plaintiff's story, Mrs. Tulis assaulted her on account of some matter which she forgot beneath her doorway, which she accused Mrs. Arnold of throwing there.

Isaac Thomas, a near neighbor, testified to having seen the assault from his doorway, and that Mrs. Tulis was the aggressor. She had Mrs. Arnold down on the floor of the hall beating her about the head.

Mrs. Tulis swore that Mrs. Arnold first called her vile names and struck her, after which she struck Mrs. Arnold. Mrs. Tulis was defended by Lawyer J. C. Conbolly. At five o'clock last night the Jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

At 12 o'clock court adjourned for the day as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late ex-Freeholder Martine, whose funeral took place at Fanwood yesterday.



Sheriff Hicks of Union county was in this city yesterday on official business.

Mr. Henry Van Middlesworth of Elmwood place is visiting friends at Bound Brook.

Mrs. John J. Kenney has returned to her home on East Second street from a pleasant visit to friends in New York city.

Mr. Michael Seeder has resumed his position as driver for Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, after a prolonged illness.

Mr. George Rickert of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, has almost entirely recovered from the effects of a fractured collar-bone.

Mr. James C. Pope of West Fourth street has not as yet entirely recovered from his lameness occasioned by a sprained ankle.

Mr. James Whalen, a former clerk in the post office in this city but who now resides in Newark, is visiting his parents on West Sixth street.

Mr. Linn Edsall, son of Mr. Seely Edsall, the dry and fancy goods merchant, is confined to his house on Sandford avenue with typhoid fever.

The Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, the pastor of the Park avenue Baptist Church, is at Mt. Holly, attending the Baptist State Convention. He will return Thursday.

Nelson Van Winkle, the young man who was thrown from the Plainfield Coffee Roasting Company's wagon during the runaway Saturday afternoon, so severely injured his right leg by the accident, that he is now compelled to use crutches.

Judge Martine of New York, Senator Marsh, County Clerk Crowell, Surrogate Parrott, Assemblymen Carroll, Kyte and Lane, Tax Commissioner Henry R. Cannon, Judge McCormick, Ex-Sheriff U. K. Thompson, Ex-County Collector Patrick Sheridan, Ex-Surrogate James J. Gerber, Ex-Freeholder Wm. M. Oliver, Ex-Senator Livingston, Ex-Surrogate Addison Clark, Ex-Chief of Police John Keron of Elizabeth, and members of the Democratic County Executive Committee, attended the funeral of the late Cornelius W. L. Martine, which took place from his late residence in Fanwood yesterday afternoon.

THAT BULL CASE.

The Second Round in Favor of the Bean-Shooter.

Last Friday a jury awarded Margaret Falconer and James Stewart, owners of a bull injured by David Moore, who shot beans out of a gun at it, $60 damages.

Mr. Moore then brought a return suit for damages done his crops by the trespassing bull and other animals belonging to Margaret Falconer and James Stewart, by reason of the above finding on yesterday. The plaintiff was awarded $60 damages and costs. Wm. M. Stillman was counsel for the plaintiff.

Now they stand even; the bull's wounds have healed, and the lawyers are happy.

The Twelfth Annual Convention.

The Twelfth Annual Convention of the Union County Sunday-School Association will be held in the Presbyterian church, in this city, Thursday, Nov. 5th.

There will be three sessions—morning, afternoon and evening. At each session especially helpful addresses and conference will be held, and it is hoped to make this the most instructive convention yet held in the county.

Among the speakers announced are: Rev. Daniel R. Martin, Newark; Rev. E. B. Cobb, Elizabeth; Rev. S. D. Loomis, Newark; Mr. J. Benton, Camden; John Y. Foster, Newark.

The Society is officered as follows:

President—M. Dunham.

Corresponding Secretary—J. M. Dudley.

Executive Committee—R. W. Woodward, Rev. E. W. Caddell, W. D. Wood, Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., J. M. Whitson, Isaac Faulks, J. R. Connolly.

—Register to-day and on Nov. 3d vote for George Kyte of Fanwood for member of Assembly.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE WILL INVALID.

So Says the Court of Appeals of New York State.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 27th, (Special.)—In the Court of Errors and Appeals here this morning the will of the late Samuel J. Tilden was declared invalid. About $18,000,000 was involved. The will bequeathed to each of the contestants $100,000. Ex-Mayor Randolph of Plainfield has been employed for several years by the Executors of the Tilden Trust to look after the accounts.

THIRTY HOUSES DESTROYED.

A Cyclone Visited Canneaught, Ohio Last Night.

CANNEAUGHT, Ohio, Oct. 27th, (Special.)—A cyclone struck this place last night and thirty houses were demolished. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

An Earthquake.

CHARLESTON, S. C. Oct. 27th. (Special.)—An earthquake visited this place and Columbia last night.

DUNELLEN NOTES.

Interesting Items from a Neighboring Borough.

Hayden Connell, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a meeting in the new school to-morrow evening.

An addition is to be built to the First Presbyterian church, which will be used as a Sunday-school room.

Four hundred and fifty-five names have been registered at Dunellen for the coming election.

James H. Todd lies dangerously ill at his home in this place.

The Electric Light Company is putting in a steam engine.

There is to be a Democratic mass meeting here this evening. The speakers announced are the fellow, Robert Adrain of New Brunswick and Mr. James E. Martine of Plainfield.

A large number of people from this place attended the entertainment given under the auspices of Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor, in Music Hall at Plainfield, last evening.

The necessity of a regular appointed marshal to patrol our streets is becoming more apparent every day. At night and especially Saturday nights the streets are taken possession of by a number of drunken rowdies, who make the night hideous with their unearthly yells and vulgar expressions. Only last evening as a young man in Dunellen was walking along the main thoroughfare a rowdy, who was under the influence of liquor attempted to hit him.

QUEEN CITY LODGE.

A New Lodge of the I. O. O. F., Instituted in this City Last Evening.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was instituted in Perseverance Lodge Room last evening. All the Grand Officers of the State were present and the affair was a grand success from beginning to end. The degrees were conferred by the "work" teams of Plainfield and Lodge No. 124. The following officers were elected and installed:

NobleGrand—David L. Abbott.
Vice Grand—L. S. Pocock.
Secretary—Lewis R. Blackford.
Recording Secretary — Mr. Chamberlain.
Treasurer—James C. Field.

The lodge starts off with about fifty members. Another meeting will be held next Monday evening. A large delegation of Odd Fellows from Elizabeth and Elizabethport were present. At the conclusion of the work the members sat down to a banquet.

—Those who wish to take up the study of short hand should apply at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-day or later this evening.

—In spite of the storm thirty-nine students attended the mechanical drawing and bookkeeping classes at the Y. M. C. A. last evening.

—The members of the Boys' Club were treated to a very enjoyable entertainment at their rooms on North avenue last evening. Notwithstanding the storm there was a large crowd present.

—Capt. William B. Ostrom will give an interesting account of his experiences as a sailor at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Thursday evening of this week. All young men whether members of the association or not are invited to be present.

—A woman in company with a small boy appeared before Justice Nash yesterday and swore out a warrant for the arrest of another boy, who she alleges hit her son in the head with a stone, inflicting an ugly scalp wound. The warrant will be served this evening.

—Mr. C. B. Martin, the proprietor of the carousal at the Rink, wishes to deny, through THE NEWS the report that several young girls were barbecued in the Rink Saturday night. He says the place was locked up by him at about 1:30 o'clock, and that the report of the girls complained about the place to the police, as reported in THE NEWS of yesterday, and tried to secure the arrest of the proprietor of the persons connected with it but the girls refused to testify.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Justin McCarthy says, "All my colleagues and I care to remember now is Mr. Parnell's noble endeavor to promote the interests of Ireland." Yes, but Parnell is dead. Words of good will and overtures of reconciliation come best before people are in their graves. Perhaps others than Parnell's enemies may pause to think of this a moment.

The American Bottlers' association has had a meeting in Philadelphia. There are some few things which, if they would bottle up, the members of this organization would deserve well of their country. One is the chronic quarrel between New York and Chicago. Another is the Jersey mosquitoes, that are certainly the worst every year by year, while just another is the man who goes about prophesying wars and plagues and the disrupting of the foundations of society.

Yet another north pole expedition. This time it is Ekroll, a Norwegian, who will start in the spring of 1893. Peterman Land is the most northern point of Franz Josef Land. Peterman Land Ekroll will make as his first objective station, meantime leaving abundant supply stores at a place on the east coast of Spitzbergen. From Peterman Land Ekroll will steer for the north pole without delay. His idea is to make the utmost speed, which, indeed, he will need to do. The unique feature of the Ekroll plan is that the explorers will travel both by sledge and boat. Six sledges will glide over the snow and ice where such gliding is practicable. Where not, the sledges will change their form as if by magic and be turned into one large boat, into which explorers, dogs, provisions and all can be stowed, and the travelers can then row and sail the boat until land or hard ice is reached, when the boat in turn will be metamorphosed into the sledges again. It is quite possible that the winding up of the Nineteenth century may see the north pole reached and the mystery of it solved.

How Many Can You Answer?

The New York Library school has been founded at Albany for the purpose of educating librarians and their assistants in a proper knowledge of their duties. There are four professorships or branches of instruction, as follows: Bibliography, cataloguing, classification and library economy. We suggest that an additional chair for teaching library assistants, and even boss librarians themselves, courteous manners in their dealings with the public would fill a long felt want, perhaps more important even than cataloguing and bibliography.

The library school proposes to instruct cataloguers, reference hunters and bibliographers not only for special service in libraries but also for the service of the general public. Here are some questions such as are asked of the candidate for admission to the library school:

First—Give the authors of the following works: "Ivanhoe," "Elsie Venner," "English Traits," "The Jung Frau von inbraun," "The Light of Asia," "Prisoner of Chillon," "Hiawatha," "Sister of the Dutch Republic," "The Rivals," "Undine."

Second—Mention as many works as you can of the following authors: Balzac, Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Bacon, Charles Kingsley, Lessing, Pope, Romaens, Victor Hugo, Wordsworth.

Third—Mention two persons (living or dead) prominent in each of the following groups: Capitalists, political economists, philanthropists, discoverers, philologists, geologists, botanists, architects, artists, musical composers actors, lawyers.

Fourth—Mention ten decisive battles of the world, locating them by country and century.

Fifth—Mention ten of the large railway systems of the United States.

That Housekeeping Club.

It is with regret that the reviewer of current events feels called on to chronicle the failure of the Decatur (Ills.) housekeeping club. After an experience about equally divided between light and shadow for a year and a half it went under, and the premises were turned into a boarding house.

It proved, however, that food of excellent quality can be served to a club of persons at about half a dollar less per week than they pay in the average boarding house for meals that are far less satisfactory. That much is to be set down as gained.

The housekeeping club failed because its members would go off for long summer vacations, when, of course, their table dues were not forthcoming. It failed for another thing, because it was almost impossible to get a housekeeper who knew how to economize and mind it. When such a rare creature did appear at length, other causes of discouragement turned up. Servants were almost impossible to get, at least those who were worth anything, that, too, though the cry of the starving millions ascends to heaven daily in this land, according to our friends, the anarchists. Then, too, there were families that grew tired of club living and wanted to return to housekeeping. So much for the Decatur Co-operative Housekeeping club.

There is one experiment, however, that has never yet been fairly made by persons who have business heads on their shoulders. It is easy to understand that most families would prefer to eat at home privately to going out to meals. Where is the club that will have furnished to its members in their homes warm, appetizing meals at regular hours daily, from a central kitchen, at prices within reach of persons of moderate means? This is the "coop" enterprise that would go if started right.

WARNER MILLER TALKS.

His Speech in Support of Fassett and Vrooman.

GOV. HILL ON THE STUMP ONCE MORE

Pertinent Extracts from Speeches by New York's Executive, Senator Hiscock, J. Sloat Fassett and William Sheehan.

The Lively Campaign Nearing Its End.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A large and enthusiastic Republican mass meeting was held in Madison Square garden last night. Fully 12,000 persons were in attendance. Hon. Warner Miller presided and a long list of distinguished Republicans was named as vice presidents, among them being Levi P. Morton, Cornelius N. Bliss, Elihu Root, Colonel Cruger and Judge Noah Davis. Mr. Miller, in opening the meeting, asked the Republicans of this city to do their full duty, and he assured them, as the representative of the interior counties, that the latter would do theirs. "In years gone by," continued Mr. Miller, "the Republican party has grown weary. It has said, 'It matters not how much we endeavor.' But this year they are determined to win." Then he said: "Mr. Miller then fiercely assailed Tammany Hall. He said if the Democrats were successful in the state this fall it would mean that Tammany Hall would control the national organization next year.

Tammany Hall Attacked.

In paying his respects to Tammany Hall Mr. Miller said: "The Tammany organization attempts to divide Republicans as well as Democrats by calling them Democrats as well as Republicans. By what power does it constitute itself a committee of government of a great city like New York? By the leading members of Tammany Hall assess themselves for these large sums of money each year to keep this organization up to date. They succeed in maintaining this organization by seeking to increase the number of offices in this city when they know that we are now overloaded with them. They seek also to increase the salaries paid to these office holders.

"This Tammany organization can only retain its life by taking so much from the people by political manipulation. Such an organization is corrupting in its influences. It has been Tammany's habit, and is its habit today, to levy assessments on all men whom it puts up for office. It is a matter of public knowledge that the Tammany leaders levied assessments on judges who were nominated to the extent of $10,000.

"The men who do this don't hesitate to ask contributions from every industry in this state. I do not hesitate to charge that it is the common practice for those who are drawing salary from the city to compound felony by receiving weekly allowances from Tammany. Tammany puts a heavy hand on the liquor men and upon every sparkling wine that is made, and makes them pay a private license. It levies a like tax on every house of ill fame in the state." [Tumultuous applause.]

Senator Hiscock Speaks.

Senator Hiscock was then introduced and spoke chiefly upon the World's fair issue. He quoted Mr. Flower as saying that he (Hiscock) had not drawn an honest breath in the World's fair matter. "I am sure," said the speaker, "that those who know Mr. Flower will not consider his words with any seriousness, and where I am known I do not think they will have any deleterious effect upon my character." He blamed Governor Hill for the loss of the fair and said it was because congress could not trust the powers that govern this city with the disbursements of the funds of the fair. Congressman Payne, Colonel Erhardt and others also spoke.

Governor Hill at Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 27.—A driving rain storm did not prevent the immense concourse of people welcoming Governor Hill here last night. At the hotel he received a perfect ovation and at the opera house there was only a seat to be had a half past 7 o'clock. The Union college boys gave their cheer, and to a query, "What's the matter with Hill?" sang out, "He's all right, he's a lala." Governor Hill spoke briefly upon the World's fair issue and the tariff in his usual strain. He then said:

The Governor's Speech.

"Considerable has been said during this campaign about economy in public affairs. I have yet to see the intelligent reason advanced why the Republican senate, under the lead of Senator Fassett and at the instigation of Mr. Platt, refused to submit to the people of the state the constitutional amendment at the regular annual election to be held this fall, but insisted upon the submission at a special election to be held next June, at an expense to the taxpayers of the state estimated by the secretary of state to be the sum of $60,000.

"The people did not want any special election and the Republicans knew it. The Prohibitionists had not requested any special election at that time, but they were content that the amendment should take the usual course and be voted upon at the regular annual election. The bill failed because of this disagreement between the two houses. If the assembly had concerned with the senate it would have cost the taxpayers of the state over $200,000 uselessly and unnecessarily. The Republicans knew that the Democrats would not consent to a special election at such an enormous cost to the taxpayers and hence they favored it, and thereby prevented all action upon the amendment. It was a trick, a low, unworthy trick, and one which they have often played."

The governor said Mr. Fassett was silent on this question and upon all excise matters. "Where does he stand?" the governor demanded. "He has not said a single word upon this subject since he began his series of harangues before the people. He stands upon the general platform that does not disclose their true position. It is an evasion, a cheat, a fraud. It is disgusting and contemptible to the people. If they refuse to discuss the tariff question, they might at least discuss the excise question, because that is conceded to be a state issue.

"Does he approve of the various measures which the Republican party has passed in recent years—the Sunday high license bill, the Vedder tax bill, and the prohibition amendment—or does he repudiate them? The parrot cry of 'Wicked Tammany Hall,' which he has so unreasonably bare throughout the state will no longer be available to conceal his views upon tax question."

Fassett in Queen's County.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Oct. 27. Queens county sent thousands of voters into their pretty town last night to welcome Senator Sloat Fassett and John W. Vrooman. As Mr. Fassett appeared upon the platform bonfires from 2,000 throats greeted him. Mr. Fassett said: "Our campaign is almost concluded. For three months the issues have been placed before the people, and our friends the enemy have tried to run away from them. Hill is notoriously treacherous to ex-President Cleveland and Governor Hill.

"They want to talk national issues, while we are fighting the corruption of Tammany Hall. What has congress to do with a high or low license question? or with the methods of governing the state of New York?

"We say the issue is, 'Shall Tammany rule the state?' You must decide one week from tomorrow. If you want Tammany Hall to rule the state, if you want the same system of blackmail that prevails in New York city, you can vote for its ticket.

"Edmund Burke said he feared a wildcat in his bedroom far more than any number of lions roaming back of the Algerian hills. I fear the Tammany tiger of the bedroom far more than I do any score of any number of low tariff lions in 1892. [Great applause.] Today the question is: Shall the party of Chase and Sherman, Lincoln and Grant, Harrison and Blaine—[tremendous cheering]—or the party of Croker and Gilroy, Scannell and Stokes, Martin and Fellows, be placed in control of the state? Does any one pretend to defend Tammany's record? Yes, Governor Hill is an apologist for it, but Hill is in the hope for the White House.

Here a man shouted, "How about the World's fair?" "I will say to my friend in the dark over there that the congress of the fifty-first [Cheers.] Democrats as well as Republicans. By what power does it constitute itself a committee of government of a great city like New York? By the leading members of Tammany Hall assess themselves for these large sums of money each year to keep this organization up to date. They succeed in maintaining this organization by seeking to increase the number of offices in this city when they know that we are now overloaded with them. REDMOND IRISH POLITICS.

A Bomb Explodes in The National Press Office.

REDMOND WILL SLAP HEALY'S FACE

The Leader of the Parnellites Says He Will Personally Punish Timothy If the Latter Does Not Cease Abusing Him.

The Anti-Foreign Chinese Movement.

DUBLIN, Oct. 27.—Great excitement was caused in this city last evening by an attempt to blow up the office of The National Press, the organ of the McCarthyites.

The members of the staff of the newspaper were just on the point of beginning the night's work when a bomb fell in the area in front of the windows on Abbey street, where the editors' rooms are situated.

The bomb exploded with a tremendous report, but fortunately there was no one in these particular rooms at the time, and consequently no one was hurt.

A Close Call for the Editors.

If the missile had been intended to injure anybody in the editorial rooms there is no doubt the effort would have been preeminently successful, for the window glass was broken, the casings shattered and the furniture in the room badly damaged. The offices in the basement were also badly damaged, and, indeed, windows in all the adjoining houses were broken. The police, however, have arrested no one, enormous crowd quickly collected. For a time there was much excitement. Notwithstanding every effort was made to search out the culprits, the authorities thus far are without any clue whatever.

Redmond Will Slap Healy.

John E. Redmond, annoyed at certain statements made by Mr. Healy, says that if the latter continues to abuse him he will publicly slap his face in the streets of this city, even if he gets six months' imprisonment for so doing. Davitt has decided to contest the seat for North Kilkenny.

John O'Connor claims that he has been followed when calling at the residences of voters while campaigning for the Parnellite candidate, John E. Redmond, by Canons O'Mahony and other priests, who openly denounced him as being a "czar of Kitty O'Shea's men" and who told the people to hunt him from their houses.

A Lively Time at Black Rock.

BLACK ROCK, Oct. 27.—Redmond and John O'Connor, M. P., with bands and a crowd of partisans, left Dublin for Black Rock in answer to Canon O'Mahony's challenge. The anti-Parnellites were waiting for them with trailing coats and shillalahs. The anti-Parnellites showered sticks and stones and mud on their opponents.

The Parnellites, who were armed with stout blackthorns, charged and routed their opponents in the fight. Many held their meeting, while their enemies skulked away with bruised and bloody heads. The meeting was then dispersed, and, after it the Parnellites returned jubilant to Cork.

Sixteen Were Drowned.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The British steamer Boston, from Cardiff for London, has arrived at the Kilsalaf docks having been in collision with the British bark Charlwood, 750 tons, Captain Salmon, from Antwerp for Valparaiso. The Charlwood foundered almost immediately after the collision, with a loss of sixteen lives. Three men were killed on board the Boston at the time of the collision, and the steamer's bows were badly stove in.

The Charlwood was almost cut in two. Nevertheless, Captain Hiscocks stood on the poop and coolly gave orders for the lowering of the lifeboat. The women and apprentice boys entered the boat, which was about to put off, when the bark gave a violent lurch forward. The davits struck the lifeboat and made it capsize, and the women and boys were thrown into the water. Their shrieks were heard for several moments, until most of them were swept out of sight under the waves.

A seaman named Jones seized the daughter of the captain, aged thirteen years. She was the darling of the crew. Jones held her across a plank until the boats which had instantly put off from the Boston came to the rescue. The captain of the Charlwood, his wife, son, a governess and the steward are among those who all the bark's officers and six of the seamen were drowned in spite of the desperate efforts made to rescue them.

China's Anti-Foreign Crusade.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 27.—The anti-foreign movement continues in the Hunan province. Attacks are being made on the houses of the viceroy's magistrates and generals. The government seems or is unable to prevent the spread of the uprising and its supposed anti-foreign character. The following is the substance of an important document which has been displayed on the walls everywhere:

"Down with the European Pigs."

"We, the inhabitants who are desirous of preventing the violation of our country, let us prepare a plan of defense, so that every district may rise up arms and assemble its forces. Every great district should furnish 99,000 men, every lesser district 15,000, every small district 10,000. Let us chase away the foreign devils, derrière mouthed European pigs. Having the power, money and men, and being brave, we can destroy them.

"It will be much better to burn the dwellings, churches and mission buildings than to confiscate them for the purpose of increasing the revenue. We will extinguish fires dangerous to Chinese dwellings. Let us stamp out the cults of Jesus, the heavenly pig. Let us punish the converted Chinese, the traitors. Let us banish the families of the guilty on the ships of the American fleet. Germany comes flying to our aid."

Thirteen Thousand Miners on Strike.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 27.—Delegates representing all the railroad coal miners in the Pittsburg district, now on strike, have decided to continue the strike for ninety-two cents per ton. Three thousand railroad miners at Latrobe, Masontown and Irwin will be called out today to help win the fight, together without about 900 men working in the Connellsville district, making in all about 18,000 railroad miners on strike. The railroad coal operators will not pay more than seventy-nine cents a ton.

Hospital Nurses Accused.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The Herald says nurses in the Presbyterian hospital are charged with the most shocking brutality in their treatment of patients. Sick and dying are declared to have been beaten, bound and cursed.

TO SUM UP SOYER'S CASE.

The Senate Will Dispose of It Before Taking Up the Others.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 27.—In the senate the remainder of the testimony taken by the state treasury investigating committee not reached at Friday's session was read, after which Senator Grady, of Philadelphia, surprised the Democratic senators by offering a resolution authorizing counsel for State Treasurer Boyer to proceed with their arguments in this case before the examinations of the other officials mentioned in the proclamations of the governor to the senate. As the case of Auditor General McClamant had been started, the Democrats opposed the resolution. The calling of the roll showed the absence of a quorum and the senate adjourned until 8 p. m. At the night session the resolution was adopted by a party vote.

Senator Ross, Democrat, of Bucks, offered a resolution providing that the question of the senate's jurisdiction in the investigation could not again be raised or discussed before that body.

Senator Ross contended that the adoption of the rule providing for the taking of testimony was an assumption that the senate had jurisdiction in the matters before it. As it had been stated that two of the counsel were going to withdraw and discuss the power of the senate to address the governor for the removal of the state treasurer and auditor general Senator Ross would move the question of jurisdiction settled. It would work no hardship or injustice to the defendants to have immediate action.

Senator Gobin, Republican, of Lebanon, took the position that there should be no limit as to the action of counsel regarding the question of jurisdiction. The assumption of jurisdiction was not a decision. The attempt to deny the right of counsel for the accused was a species of gag law.

Senator Ross, he said, had intimated that the majority of the senate might shut out John Bardsley and William Livezey, the remaining counsel, and witnesses whose testimony was of great importance. As to Bardsley, he thought more than the remaining counsel him out of the penitentiary for the purpose of producing him before the senate as a witness. Senator Gobin said there was no further use of wasting the people's time, as both were out of the jurisdiction of the senate. As to his wishes, he greatly desired the presence of Bardsley and a full statement from him in the interest of a thorough investigation. Remarks against Senator Ross' resolution were also made by Senator Grady and for it by Senator Greene, after which it was defeated by a party vote, and the senate adjourned. The attorney general was not present at the senate session of last night, and hence was required him to appear before the supreme court at Pittsburg.

He Was Steamed to Death.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—About 10 a. m. James E. Graves, aged sixty, an employee of the Standard Stave Cooperage company, East Boston, was overcome by steam and was accidentally locked in. The steam was then turned on. Graves' cries for help could not be heard outside. For about ten minutes he suffered the agonizing death. A fellow workman opened the door to get some staves. Graves' breast and arms were so horribly scalded that in some places the flesh fell off. He cannot live.

Innocent, but Six Years a Prisoner.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Governor Hill has signed a full pardon for Edward Kohout, who has been in prison at Sing Sing six years for a crime of which he is innocent. There is no doubt that Kohout and his brother, were sent to prison for life for firing the tenement 404 East Sixty-fourth street on Oct. 23, 1885. Four persons lost their lives in the fire and Kohout brother confessed that he and another man were guilty, but that Edward was innocent.

Block System for the "Nypano."

MEADVILLE, Pa., Oct. 27.—The New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railroad company has decided to run their trains under a block signal system, the same as the Pennsylvania. The road is to be divided into four divisions for dispatchers, from Salamanca to Corry, Corry to Meadville, Meadville to Pymatuning and from Pymatuning to Akron. Twenty-four electric telegraph operators and thirty-seven elevated signal towers will be required.

Bids for Ocean Mail Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Bids were opened by the postmaster general under the act of March 3, 1891, providing for the proposed ocean mail service to foreign ports of the United States and foreign ports. The postmaster general under the law is authorized to enter into contracts for a term not less than five years nor more than ten years with American citizens for carrying the mails on American steamships. Thirteen bids were received.

A Gold Brick Thief Caught.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Oct. 27.—William Mattson, who is a gold brick on Aug. 7 from the Wells-Fargo Express company at Rohawk, Cal., has been captured here. He sold the brick for $800 in Denver and was tracked to this city by Detective Thomas Campbell, of Buffalo. Mattson was found living with his wife, whom he had married a few weeks ago.

Oelrichs Buys the Bancroft House.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 27.—Herman Oelrichs, of New York, has purchased a summer residence here, the Bancroft house, of the late George Bancroft, the historian. The house was occupied by Mr. Bancroft for a quarter of a century. Mr Oelrichs will tear it down and replace it with a modern villa.

A Warrant for President Fones.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—City Treasurer W. Redwood Wright has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of L. G. Fouse, president of the Mercantile association, charging him with criminal libel for stating in a letter that Wright was accepting official fees in violation of the law.

CUMBERLAND, Pa., Oct. 27.—A terrible explosion of dynamite occurred at the quarries of the Cumberland cement mill, by which four men were seriously if not fatally injured. A workman dropped his miner's lamp into the dynamite.

REDHOT FROM THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

George F. Slosson Defeats "Winner" Jacob Schaefer at Billiards.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The great billiard match between Jacob Schaefer and George F. Slosson for $1,000 a side and the championship of the world, plays last night in Chickering hall before a crowded house. Both men were reported as being in fine form and a good, square game followed. Schaefer was the favorite in the betting. Dudley Kavanaugh, of New York, was chosen referee and Budd Schofield scorer and timer. Slosson was in good form at the start and cleared the white ball. He led off with a run of 94. Schaefer followed with 20, and missed on an easy shot.

From this point on Slosson played a steady, painstaking game, without any remarkable brilliancy until the twenty-third inning, while Schaefer's play showed remarkably poor form, and his admirers watched him in dismay slip up time and again on easy shots.

Slosson made the run of the game in the twenty-fourth inning. At this time he scored 173 points by careful nursing and some brilliant round the table shots. His effort was greeted with great applause. After this the game was over but in doubt, and Slosson finally won it by a score of 300 points to 262 for his opponent. Highest runs—Slosson, 173; Schaefer, 68. Average—Slosson, 23 8-36; Schaefer, 11 7-35. Time of game—Three hours and 38 minutes.

Direct Again Defeats Hal Pointer.

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Oct. 27.—The new kite shaped track of the Columbia Driving park was the scene of the great match between Direct and Hal Pointer for a purse of $5,000, best three heats in five. The superiority of Direct was clearly shown. He would take the lead and hold it all the way around. Direct won the first heat by a length, the second by half a length, with Pointer off his feet, and the third by a length. Time, 2:09, 2:08, 2:08¾.

Latest Styles in Hair Dressing.

ARE'NT THEY CHARMING?

We give sketches of some particularly artistic and novel designs in hair dressing:

No. 1 and 4 is a new form of the Greek style; the hair is arranged in a soft fringe in front, and forms a long shaped loop at the back.

No. 3 shows an extremely novel and becoming style, than which nothing could be prettier, especially for a young girl. It is called the "Jersey Coil," and the hair, instead of being twisted high on the head is brought quite low down on the neck, with an exceedingly graceful effect.

No. 2 is a style particularly suitable for a middle-aged lady, who, while objecting to a fringe, equally dislikes the hard appearance given to the face by the hair being brushed quite flat. It is called the "Marguerite" parting, and consists of a pretty waved bandeau, parted in the middle, while at the back the hair is rolled up in the pretty and becoming fashion shown in the sketch.

Doerflinger's Big Shortage.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 27.—The amount of School Board Treasurer Doerflinger's shortage is growing and will probably reach $20,000. Added to the $18,000 first missing altered drafts aggregating $15,000 have been discovered. Besides this, defects are reported in the Dexter Spring and Trust company, Building and Loan association and the estate of Archibald Wallace, of which Doerflinger was executor.

The Siberian Exile Petition.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—The Siberian Exile Petition association has secured the signatures of 80,000 American citizens to the petition requesting the czar to be more merciful to the Siberian exiles. CHILI MUST SHOW CAUSE

Egan Demands Reparation for the Baltimore Outrage.

ANOTHER ARMED TAR DEAD.

He Was Stabbed in Twenty Places When Attacked by the Murderous Chilians. The Firm Attitude of the United States Is Applauded by Foreign Residents.

SANTIAGO, Oct. 27.—John Turnbull, another of the Baltimore's wounded men, died yesterday. He had received no less than twenty stab wounds, several of them penetrating his lungs.

Acting on instructions from Washington, Minister Egan after making a brief but pointed summary of all the facts involved in the recent trouble formally demanded reparation from the government of Chili.

An Immediate Explanation Demanded.

Mr. Egan expressed in distinct terms the feeling of great indignation with the state department at Washington and in fact the whole affair, and informs the junta that this is not a formal suggestion; that his government expects some kind of satisfaction for the assault upon the Baltimore's crew and demands an immediate explanation of the whole affair and reparation for the injuries inflicted.

Egan's Action Applauded.

The opinion prevails among foreign ministers that the junta will immediately make the reparation demanded. The sympathy of the foreign residents is entirely with Captain Schley, and Minister Egan's action gives great satisfaction.

Secretary Blaine Investigates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Secretary Blaine has taken in hand the Chilian correspondence and has devoted almost his entire time since his return to the state department to its consideration and to mastering the details of the situation. He had not been long at his desk before he received a call from Secretary Tracy. The two cabinet ministers went together to the White House and were in conference for nearly an hour with the president.

The subject under consideration was the state of the Chilian dispute. Neither Secretary Blaine nor Secretary Tracy cared to say anything for publication in regard to the conference or the future course of the administration.

An Order for the Navy.

Shortly after the secretaries had left the White House, however, an order was received at the navy department to prepare at once a list of all vessels with their description which can be got into Chilian waters within ninety days, and this indicates that the government will be prepared to make a show of naval strength if it shall be needed.

There will be no hasty action of any kind. The administration will wait patiently for Minister Egan's report of the result of the examination which is now being conducted by the Chilian authorities and will give every opportunity for the Chilians to make a satisfactory explanation if possible. Nothing further can be done by our government until it is evident what Chili's intentions are.

Now that the only et has become a matter for diplomatic interference there is no occasion to act precipitately in the matter.

It is hoped now that a peaceful conclusion will be reached, although the administration does not hesitate to let it be known that such a conclusion will depend entirely upon Chili's future action.

It is believed, however, that the method in which the position of the United States has been defined in the dispatches to Minister Egan has been such as to bring about prompt and satisfactory action without unnecessary irritation.

Why He Died Quick.

A male young Detroiter fond of his horse and fond of his joke was quizzing a quaint old fellow from the country the other day whom he had met for the first time.

"I understand you've got some pretty good horses, sir," he ventured.

"Yes," said the old one warily, "I've got some good ones."

"Anything rapid?"

"Not overly. You see I ain't raisin for speed any more."

"No; why not?"

"'Cause there ain't much in it for me anyway. I done fairly well till about four years ago, when I backed a fine 3-three-old agin a mule one of the boys owned, and seein that I'm kinder discouraged like."

"Backed a horse against a mule?" repeated the young man, innocently surprised.

"Jest so."

"And what was the result?"

The old man's eyes twinkled.

"Hout what was to be expected," he said with a chuckle. "The dern mule kicked the 3-year-old full of holes in two minutes."

Fourteen men laughed all at once, and the fifteenth, who was the Detroiter, went away by himself for as much as half an hour.—Detroit Free Press.

THE WORLD'S FASTEST TRAIN.

The Empire State Express Now Claims That Honor.

BUFFALO, Oct. 27.—The Empire state express is the fastest regular passenger train in the world. There can be no doubt of that. It made a record on its first trip from New York to Buffalo yesterday that puts it far in the lead of all fast trains.

Leaving the Grand Central station in New York at 9:00:15, it thundered through the Mohawk valley and Syracuse, darted like a gigantic animated streak through towns, villages and cities, flashed through fields and forests so quickly that the beautiful autumnal tints of the foliage on either side seemed a mere conglomeration of colors, and finally came to a stand in Buffalo, having run the 440 miles in 8h. 39½m., half a minute faster than the schedule time. This is an average of fifty-two and a half miles an hour.

This achievement is all the more remarkable when the weight of the train is considered. The engine and cars weighed a total of 398 tons, nearly a hundred tons more than the famous Flying Scotchman, which maintains an average of 51 6 10 miles an hour between London and Edinburgh, a distance of 400 miles. At one point, between Batavia and Buffalo, a speed of seventy miles an hour was reached.

There was no jar, no violent swaying from side to side, no swinging of the wheels from the rails on sharp curves. It was a gliding motion, as if the train were actually flying through the air or propelled by some mysterious motive power over the seat of oil.

The train was drawn out of the Grand Central station by engine No. 870, Engineer Archie Buchanan. The engine and tender weighed just 100 tons. Next behind was a combination buffet smoking car weighing 32 tons. Then came two standard New York Central coaches, both weighing 54 tons. The Wagner buffet drawing room car, Luxor, weighing 40 tons, came next, with the Mariquita, Vice President Webb's private car, the weight of which is 47 tons, in the rear. The Mariquita was used for the accommodation of the officials of the road and their guests. Buchanan was relieved along the road by Engineers Thomas Dormody and Charles Hogan.

He Was Buried Alive.

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 27.—Farmer George Heidecker, of Green township, apparently died very suddenly of what was supposed to have been heart failure two weeks ago. The body was buried four days later and when disinterred for transfer showed plainly that Heidecker had been buried alive. The body had turned around, lying on its face, and it and the interior of the casket bore traces of a terrible struggle with death in the most awful shape. The distorted and blood covered features bore evidence of the agony endured.

The New German Minister.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Dr. von Holleben, the new German minister, is a bachelor of fifty-six. In 1873 he entered the diplomatic service, receiving the appointment of secretary of legation for China and Japan. In 1878 Dr. Holleben was appointed to Buenos Ayres, and about six years ago was transferred to the important post of minister to China and Japan. It is hardly likely that Dr. von Holleben will come here before next spring.

Theodore Stevenson's Failure.

COURTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Theodore Stevenson, one of the largest real estate and insurance men in this vicinity, has assigned, with liabilities placed at $150,000. The failure was caused by his inability to rent 150 houses and to the depreciation in the value of real estate. It is feared that other failures will follow Stevenson's suspension.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. We have always found them as good as we have. WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and saved our lawn mower to our entire satisfaction. WM. MCCABE, Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for Mrs. Samuel Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand lawn mower.
HENRY HALL, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends. We have sharpened many mowers to our cure, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as we can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants.

LIFE, DEATH AND ETERNITY.

And what is Life I pray you tell;
A stepping-stone to Heaven,
Where those who meet shall meet to part
And mingle not again;
Where friends are severed one by one,
And sever not again.

And what is Death? I hear you say,
A pall, a bier, a knell,
A saddened dirge a funeral knell
And friends who watch and bear?
Ah, no, my child! 'Tis but a night
Of quiet, peaceful sleep.
When morning brings the golden light
And darkness ceases to keep.

Eternity! Say, what is it?
A cold and darkened tomb,
Where hope is vain and hopers sit
And wail long hours their doom?
Ah, no, my child! One common breath
Will waft you to its shore—
Where sickness, sorrow, pain and death
Are felt and feared no more.

—Will S. Monroe.

A COWARD AND A HERO.

It was the 16th of December, before Bon-Tay. For two days we had splashed in the mire of the rice fields, the water up to our knees. I knew we would get used to it, but it was terrible at first the same. Nevertheless, we marched steadily on, as regular and attentive as if we were on drill.

I tell you this is true; I am an old trump, I have been nine years in the service and six with the rank of sergeant, and the number of young soldiers I have trained and commanded "right about face" is incalculable, but never have I seen men march like these, shoulder to shoulder, as near as I dare say a line; and, that, I tell you, in two feet of mud. Bspristi! but it was superb. I was jubilant, and yet a little tired, to see how well the enemy could keep step when they chose. Ah, well; I had nothing to complain of that day.

Half-past 4 was a bit too soon, I thought, and yet a droll place to halt in. No matter. I filled my pipe, and looked around to see where we were. Rice fields to the right, to the left, and behind us a thick slush made by our trampling feet.

A little corporal who had a tongue well hung, indeed, too well hung, called out to me: "Sergt. Bertrand, Sergt. Bertrand, no need to light your pipe. Wait a while, they will light it for you."

The jackanasses! As if I didn't know we would soon be under the fire of the enemy.

Suddenly I heard them calling the roll of my company, and saw my brave fellows break ranks and trot like rabbits across the rice fields to meet the baggage master, who was returning with a great package under his arm.

Letters! Now I ask you, was this a good time to distribute letters? There they were running like so many madmen. I was the only one to remain tranquil. It is true I have no one to write to me, no family—no friends, nobody—all alone in the world, like an old bear. Heaven help me! At length I saw my men return to their places holding up their hands to keep the letters from being soiled by the mire, as carefully as if they were guarding the last words and testimony of their dying mother.

Ah! Jacque has a letter. "News from home, my lad?"

Jacque is sergeant of my company. I am chief of the first section, he of the second. A handsome young fellow with a bright boyish face, a beardless chin, and cheeks as smooth as a girl's. Nevertheless I had a little grudge against him. It is always vexing to see these brats of twenty-two promoted alongside of an old trooper like me, but for all that he is a nice boy, and I am sure would go through fire and water for him. He is well connected, of good family, and often receives letters with the seal of the Order of Honor. That is his business, not mine.

I watched him out of the corner of my eye as he ran through his letter. Then I saw him wipe away a tear, a little tear, which glistened on the end of his eyelash.

I pretended not to see it, even joked a little, to make him laugh.

"What has she written to you, Jacque? What says my lady fair?"

He turned without a smile, and gravely said: "I have no lady fair, Bertrand. It is from my mother."

"Ah!" I fell as if I had made a fool of myself, and said no more, but Jacque continued:

"Do you see these letters, Bertrand? It would be better not to receive them in times like this."

That was my opinion, as I have already said. It was not good to allow them to break ranks, the scamps; they ask nothing better. But through politeness to Jacque I said: "It is always pleasant to receive good news from home, no matter where. I hope you had nothing disagreeable."

Jacque shook his head.

"Oh, no; to the contrary." And that was all. Really Master Jacque was not talkative this morning. His eyes were fixed on the horizon, as if he thought we was nothing to be seen but a bit of blue sky. I wondered what he could see over there.

II.

At last—"Forward, march!" I repeat, "Forward, march!" for my section. Jacque, no doubt, was still dreaming and did not hear the word of command, for I heard the Lieutenant behind me say:

"Ah, well, Sergt. Jacque, lagging behind—already?"

I hoped to hear a reply of some kind, no matter what. When an officer so far forgets himself as to speak in that way to a subordinate, I like to see a little indignation. Parbleu! you dare not speak out loud; that is against the rules, but a murmured word under your breath is a solace to your self-respect.

But Jacque said not a word; he simply repeated, "Forward, march," in a dragging tone, as if he were weary. That is to say, it was not the tone a French sergeant uses when he commands, "Forward, march!" They never mumble those two words, but shout them out with enthusiasm. What is the matter with Sergt. Jacque this morning? He is not like himself.

Ah, that was a rough day, I tell you. When night came, we were still in the water, but up to our waists this time. And all around us little field-pieces were spitting fire, like so many demons. But we marched steadily on, and at last were within 500 metres of the walls of the citadel. Not a gun shot, not a movement; the rascals were saving their powder until we were nearer. I said to myself, "Wait, old fellow, you will have something to warm you up by and by; don't be discouraged."

When, behold, we are again commanded to halt. The Captain steps in front of the ranks, and demands in a low voice—all the same it was distinctly heard—"A subofficer willing to undertake a secret and dangerous mission."

Naturally I stepped forward. Now I have the misfortune to be a little too well armored as the Captain, an old roughskin I assure I who had seen my Lieutenant in Africa.

"Not you Bertrand. I am very well, and when I want you I will tell you. Be kind enough to remain quiet. I want a subofficer who might leave no trace behind him, who might, laughing the bullets, fall flat on the ground, every now and then, as if crushing in a shoulder, carrying away an arm or breaking a leg. My dear fellow, I want Jacque left there, all my comrades—Jacque among the number, but he was the last. Just as the work was finished a ball struck him between the eyes. Just as he raised his arms to shout against "Hurrah!" he fell dead, face foremost.

IV.

Perhaps it was not very proper, what I did next morning, but truly! It was too much for me—that packet of letters that Jacque gave me as he went to his death. I would not keep them. I thought, "a boy who acts like a coward and a few hours after dies like a man. It is not natural; there must be something under this;" and I felt I had the explanation there under my hand in those letters. They burned me. It was impossible to keep them. And I could not: then—then, I drew out the packet.

Upon my word there was only one letter, the one he had received that morning. Nothing else. Ah, blood of blood! what a letter! He was right, poor boy. One ought not to receive a letter like that just before a battle.

As for me, I cried like a baby, and was scarcely able to read it for the tears in my eyes. It was from his mother, and here is what the good woman wrote to her boy as she ended her letter:

"Now, my precious Jacque, take care of yourself for my sake. Remember you are all I have in this world, and if any thing should happen to you I would surely go mad. It is true the time passes very wearily when one is waiting, but I try to be patient, to forget the present, and only think of the future when you will return.

"Above all things, my precious boy, be prudent. Do whatever you are commanded to do, like a brave soldier, but do not expose yourself unnecessarily. I forbid you. No, my darling Jacque, I forbid you nothing. I implore you, before entering into any engagement, to think of your mother, who is always thinking of you, and do not risk too much. Promise me this, will you not? And remember, a man is not a coward because he loves his mother."

The letter fell from my hands. I understood all. He had thought of his mother, the brave boy, and waited until he was directly commanded to go.

And, no doubt, that morning when he was looking for me to find a bit of blue sky where there was nothing to be seen, he was thinking of his mother and of that promise he had sworn to keep.

And that is why Sergt. Jacque, who died like a hero with his face to the enemy, was considered a coward twice in one day.

Paine Tooth Cause a Blockade.

A trifling accident in the Washington street tunnel, Chicago, caused a long and serious blockade. A man sitting on the front seat was seized with a violent fit of sneezing, and sneezed out his artificial teeth, which flew over the dashboard onto the track. Everybody laughed, and all got out and helped hunt for the chewers. Other cars crowded in, but the teeth could not be found. The car moved slowly ahead and the next train of the Milwaukee avenue line pulled up. They were finally found in the vestibule of the Milwaukee car. The eyetooth on the right side had been broken by the fall.—Baltimore Sun.

A MIDNIGHT EPISODE.

Tragedy on an Elevated road, Where Did He Get the Ladder?

(Time, midnight. Place, the shady side of the Bilkus dwelling. Ladder against side of house. Ardent youth half way up ladder. Infuriated maiden leaning out of upper window, conversing in agitated whispers with ardent youth. Horses and closed carriage in charge of discreet driver at convenient distance around the corner. Moon disappearing behind friendly cloud. Coast clear. Landscape wrapped in repose. Bilkus mansion similarly wrapped.)

Bessie Bilkus—Sh, Arthur! Not so loud! Is everything ready?

Arthur Chugwater (burning with lover-like zeal, but unable to keep his teeth from chattering)—Everything is—b-b-b—ready, dearest! B-b-b-b—come, Bessie! It's ch-ch-chilly, and—

"Oh, Arthur, I'm afraid!"

"Afraid, d-d-darling? You can't fall. I'll catch you."

"Sh! I don't mean I'm afraid of falling, Arthur, but suppose papa should"——

"Isn't—b-b-b—papa asleep by this time?"

"Yes; I'm sure he's asleep, but suppose he should wake up!"

"Oh, Arthur, I'm afraid!"

"Afraid, d-d-darling? You can't fall. I'll catch you."

"Sh! I don't mean I'm afraid of falling, Arthur, but suppose papa should"——

"Isn't—b-b-b—papa asleep by this time?"

"Yes; I'm sure he's asleep, but suppose he should wake up!"

"Oh, Arthur, I'm afraid!"

"Afraid, d-d-darling? You can't fall. I'll catch you."

"Sh! I don't mean I'm afraid of falling, Arthur, but suppose papa should"——

"Isn't—b-b-b—papa asleep by this time?"

"Yes; I'm sure he's asleep, but suppose he should wake up!"

"Oh, Arthur, I'm afraid!"

"Afraid, d-d-darling? You can't fall. I'll catch you."

"Sh! I don't mean I'm afraid of falling, Arthur, but suppose papa should"——

"Isn't—b-b-b—papa asleep by this time?"

"Yes; I'm sure he's asleep, but suppose he should wake up!"

"Oh, Arthur, I'm afraid!"

"Afraid, d-d-darling? You can't fall. I'll catch you."

"Sh! I don't mean I'm afraid of falling, Arthur, but suppose papa should"——

"Isn't—b-b-b—papa asleep by this time?"

"Yes; I'm sure he's asleep, but suppose he should wake up!"

"Oh, dear, no! But I—I'm so"——

(Impatiently.) "So am I—f-f-f—dearest, and it's getting colder every minute."

(Leaning a little farther out.) "Are you sure, Arthur, you love me as well as ever?"

(Impetuously.) "Love you, Bessie! Why —b-b-b—Great Scott! I"——

"Sh! Don't whisper so loud, Arthur. Have you got the license?"

"We don't need it—ch-ch-ch—license to get married in Wisconsin. Got your wraps all on, Bessie?"

"Yes."

"I haven't! I—b-b-b—left my overcoat in the carriage and it's getting"——

(Uneasily.) "Oh, Arthur! I've just happened to think!"

"What is it, dearest?"

"Suppose we shouldn't find a minister after we get across the line?"

"Not find a minister? Suffering Moses Wisconsin is full of preachers!"

"And suppose—hark!"

"What is it?"

"I fancied I heard something!"

"It's—b-b-b-b—one of the horses whinnying. Hurry, dearest! The train leaves in half an hour, and it will take us nearly twenty minutes to"——

"But, Arthur, I'm afraid it isn't right!"

"Bessie, see here"——

"It will just break papa's heart! I know it will! You'll always be good to me, will you, Arthur?"

"Be—ch-ch—good to you! So help me"——

"Sh! Arthur! Don't swear!"

"Hurry, Bessie, for the love of"——

(Venturing out on the ladder.) "Well, Arthur, I'm coming. But remember"——

(Assisting her down the ladder.) "Oh, yes, I'll remember! Careful now! Steady! There! We're down!"

(Clutching his arm wildly.) "Oh, dear! I feel as if I must go back! Where—where did you say the carriage was? It will break papa's heart and mamma will faint. I know she will!"

(Recklessly.) "Let her faint! Come, darling, b-b-b—it's only a short walk to the carriage."

(Wildly.) "Must I go? Must I break the heart of an indulgent father and blight the life of a tender mother? Must I leave this cherished home where I have always been"——

"Come, darling!"

"Where I have always been"——

Papa Bilkus (thrusting his head out of the upper back window and speaking in a cold, hard, businesslike voice)—Don't forget your trunk, Bessie.—Chicago Tribune.

A Skeptical Patient.

The other day a stylishly dressed gentleman called on one of the leading dentists in Paris. He was introduced into the consulting and operating room.

"Monsieur, I am Count Z——." Exchange of bows. "I want a complete set of teeth put in."

"Nothing more simple."

"Beg your pardon, not quite so simple. I have a few stumps left that require pulling out first. But hitherto I have always shrunk from the operation. I am dreadfully tender and the very thought of the instruments makes me"——

"But, count, you won't feel anything."

"Certainly, I have heard that you employ anæsthetics; that is why I came here."

"They are infallible."

"Infallible, you say?"

"Most assuredly."

"I have been told that before, but can you prove it?"

"Prove it? Look here, I will myself inhale the fumes of the liquid contained in this bottle and you will see"——

"That they render you insensible?"

"On everything. You may pinch me, do what you like with me"——

"You don't say so!"

"You may take my word for it."

And the dentist put on his mettle, sat down, took a whiff out of the bottle and fell asleep. When he awoke, the noble patient had disappeared, and carried off with him the dentist's watch and all the money he had in his drawer.—Chronique.

Foiled Again.

A wealthy Austin dude is in the habit of giving lectures on art to which he invites his friends, who would rather take medicine than attend. Gilhooly in particular is very expert in making excuses, but last week the dude got the best of him.

"You will be on hand at my lecture Thursday night, will you not, Gilhooly?"

"There is nothing in the world I would like better, but I have an engagement for Thursday night. If it was any other night of the week nothing could keep me away," replied Gilhooly, looking as sad as if he was giving up an oyster supper.

"I thought that was what you would say. I don't believe my lecture until Friday night, so you are foiled again."—Texas Siftings.

A Valuable Tonic.

Charlie has just learned to read, and he tries his new accomplishment at every opportunity. The other day he was slowly spelling out from a newspaper the advertisement of somebody's patent medicine:

"'I—think—with—sorrow—of—the—years—of—suffering—I—spent—before—I—took—your—wonderful—tonic. How—much—pain—I—might—have—been—spared.' What does that mean, Harry?"

"Don't you know, Charlie?" replied the older brother contemptuously. "That? Why, that means if he had taken the tonic before he had the suffering he'd have been dead long ago!"—Harper's Bazar.

Making Sure of a Meal.

"I'm going with Tom Trotter, the Yale-ward football player, to the reception tomorrow night."

"How can you go with such a great, overgrown boy?"

"Why, just think how he can break through the rush line for supper!"—Harper's Bazar.

Untrustworthy.

Fame has its own peculiar bitterness. "Isn't it pleasant to go back with laurels to your old home?" asked some one of a celebrated artist, who replied, quizzically: "It would be, except that many of my townsmen think me a house painter. That is a worthy trade, but still it is not my trade." Yet such a sting is not the sharpest to be inflicted.

A few years ago there lived a famous almanac maker, named Partridge. One day, while traveling in the country, he stopped for dinner at a tavern, and afterward called for his horse, in order to continue his journey.

"If you will take my advice, sir," said the hostler, "you will stay where you are, unless you want to be overtaken by a heavy rain."

"Nonsense," was the reply. "It doesn't look in the least like rain."

He proceeded on his way, and was thoroughly drenched by the shower in which he had refused to believe. Turning back, he was met by the hostler with a broad grin.

"Well, sir," said the man, "you see I was right, after all."

"Yes, you were right, and now you must tell me how you came to know about the rain."

"Well, sir," replied the man, "you see we have a book at our house called 'Partridge's Almanac,' and whenever that fellow promises us a fair day we know it will rain. Now this day is put down in the almanac as 'settled fine weather.' I looked at the prediction before I brought your horse out, and that was how I could put you on your guard."—Youth's Companion.

BREVITIES.

—The call for the Republican Primaries will be published to-morrow.

—The Republican City Executive Committee held a meeting last evening.

—The Salvation Army is now holding meetings in the old Council chamber on West Front street.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, will conduct a series of meetings at Elizabeth commencing about December 20th.

—S. H. Hadly will speak to men in the M. E. Church next Sunday at 4 p. m. Rev. B. Fay Mills tried to get him to Plainfield last Fall.

—Crescent Division Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias will shortly institute three new lodges of the Uniformed Rank in this vicinity.

—A team chosen from the members of the Crescent League is to go to New York to-morrow night and bowl a game with the Ivanhoes of that city.

—The members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R., held a regular encampment last evening. Business of a routine nature only was transacted.

—The Ancient Order of Foresters of America are arranging for a grand ball to be held in the hall of the Gesang and Turning Society next month.

—Don't fail to attend the meeting of the U. B. Grant Republican Club which is to be held in Spencer's Hall North Plainfield, to-morrow evening.

—At a meeting of Wetumpka Lodge, No. 2401, Knights of Honor, which will be held to-morrow evening four candidates for membership will be initiated.

—William Betts, the colored man who was assaulted in Stiger's Alley Monday evening, is said to be unable to identify or ascertain the name of his assailant.

—A meeting of special interest will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Reports of the late convention will be given by delegates.

—The annual meeting of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society will be held in Reform Hall, Tuesday, 29th inst., at three o'clock. A large attendance is solicited.

—Yesterday afternoon Policeman Lynch and three suspended two pedlers who were peddling picture frames without a license. They were shortly afterwards released.

—First Assistant Chief J. Erwin Waters of the Plainfield Fire Department is the happy possessor of a badge presented to him recently by the men of the Assistant Force of the Omaha Fire Department.

—The new singing class is to meet Friday at eight o'clock p. m., at the Unitarian rooms, at No. 4 Second place, to meet Mr. Hazzell, the teacher. The class was originally limited to forty, but owing to the large number of applications, it has been decided to extend the number to fifty.

—There was a call—by whom we do not know—for a Republican meeting at Republican headquarters last night. The call was not made through the usual channels, and there were only seven persons present, including two reporters. Of the other five, three were private citizens, one of these being ex-Councilman Bellis. Two were Republican officials—City Clerk Coward and Councilman Seymour. The call for a meeting has been generally commented upon today, particularly Smith's presence where only Republicans were supposed to be found.

—Mr. J. B. Miller, who was virtually born into the hotel business, says he means that Hotel Elkwood shall become one of the best conducted hotels of New Jersey; that it is as such gaining in public favor and he has elegantly furnished, and each room supplied with steam and electric bells; that the "Restaurant and Bar" is largely patronized and praised by the traveling public and our merchants who often find it a great convenience to have a fashionable place to take lunch during the day or after business hours; and that he has a handsome billiard parlor and bowling alleys attached as a part of the hotel.

AN ALLEGED HORSE THIEF ARRESTED.

A Rig Valued at Six Hundred Dollars Recovered at Summit.

On Monday last the police were notified to be on the lookout for a horse and wagon valued at $600 which was stolen from Newland Sunday evening while the owner was at church. This morning they were informed that the thief had been caught at Summit by Detective Kelley. He proved to be William Brady of Neshanic. He was accompanied by Frank Hunt and both of them were arrested they were trying to dispose of the stolen property. The rig belonged to a Mr. Strykers of Neshanic. The prisoners were locked up.

The arrest in company with chief John Keron of Elizabeth identified the harness and buggy.

The original horse had been exchanged for a poorer one and the prisoners refused to divulge the whereabouts of the stolen horse, but late last night Detective Kelly succeeded in locating the animal. The animal had been traded to a man named Bell, residing between Panwood and Westfield, who had given Brady another horse, a cow and fifty dollars to boot in exchange for Mr. Stryker's horse.

Brady claims to have purchased the rig from a notorious horse-thief near Skillman station. Both prisoners had been arrested once and claim to have just arrived from St. Louis.

The owner of the stolen property valued the rig at $600 and offered a reward of $100 for the return of his property and the capure of the thief.

BAKER—MULFORD.

The Wedding at the Methodist Church Last Evening.

One of the prettiest Autumn weddings thereabouts, at which the culture and beauty of Plainfield were well represented, occurred last evening at the Methodist Episcopal church. The entrance to the church presented a very inviting appearance, being canopied and carpeted in the conventional style. The place was filled by an eager assemblage long before the ceremony was begun.

The contracting parties were Miss Laura Frances Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Salmon Crowell Baker, of West Fifth street, and Mr. Arthur Harrison Mulford, of Sandford avenue.

Precisely at 7 p. m. the bridal procession entered the church to the inspiring strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Freeman, organist of Grace Episcopal church. The procession proceeded up the main aisle, led by the ushers, Messrs. Clarence L. Murphy, Theodore J. Miller, Warren S. Burt and Mr. Woodhoff, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Marie Stewart, bearing a fragrant and handsome bouquet, the tall and stately young bride, leaning on her father's arm, bringing up the rear.

At the chancel, which was beautifully banked with autumn leaves, the bridal party was met by the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Kingsley of Massachusetts, an uncle of the bridegroom, when the impressive marriage service of the M. E. Church was begun by the officiating clergyman. The bride was given away by her father. Mr. Wilbur T. Hall was the best man.

After the ceremony at the church, a reception took place at the bride's home, about ninety guests being present. Mr. and Mrs. Mulford left on an early train for Philadelphia, from whence they will go to Washington, Old Point Comfort, and other points. On their return they will reside on Sandford avenue.

Out for a "Wash."

Gazelle Engine Company No. 1 took their apparatus out for a "wash" last evening. They tried the hydrant at the corner of Grant avenue and Fourth street and found the water pressure so high that it bursted the large suction used in drawing water from the fire wells. Two hundred feet of hose was then attached and a very creditable stream was thrown without the aid of the steamer. After the "wash" the members of the company adjourned to the home of Engineer Wm. Grannatt and were served with hot coffee and sandwiches.

A Love Feast.

In Vincent Chapel this evening, instead of the regular prayer-meeting, will be held a love feast. This kind of a meeting has been peculiar to the Methodist Episcopal church since its origin, although the meeting is very much like that held by the early Christians which they called an Agape, or Feast of Love. Prayer and testimony are the simple meal bread and water, after which the time is occupied in song, prayer and Christian testimony. It is a meeting for believers only.

Nearly Lost a Digit.

Gilbert Howe, a boy residing with his parents on LaGrande avenue met with a painful accident Monday afternoon. He and a companion were engaged erecting a small house to play in, young Howe was holding a board for his companion to split, when the hatchet used in splitting the board slipped and nearly severed the index finger from Master Howe's right hand. A physician dressed the wound and he thinks he will be able to save the finger.

Registration Day.

Yesterday was the last registration day previous to the coming November election. The Boards of Registry were in session between one p. m. and nine p. m. The total number of names registered is as follows:

Elston on Trial.

The trial of Charles Elston, who was arrested at Broad Brook about a month ago on the charge of robbing the store of Mr. O. M. Dunham on West Front street of about three hundred dollars worth of jewelry, and who was recently indicted by the Union County Grand Jury, is on trial to-day at Elizabeth. Acting-Captain-of-Police Lynch and several witnesses went to Elizabeth this morning to testify.

His Wheel Collapsed.

Saturday afternoon Mr. A. H. Dudenhoefer of Somerset street, North Plainfield, in company with a friend went out for a drive. When near Westfield the horse stumbled and fell. When the animal got on his feet again he suddenly shied and one of the front wheels of the buggy collapsed. Mr. Dudenhoefer was thrown headlong from the carriage and painfully injured about the head and shoulders.

Arrested for Assault.

Special Policeman Mattox last evening arrested Charles Wright, and "Bert" and Samuel McCauley on a warrant issued by Justice Nash on complaint of Mrs. Cole. The complaint charges the defendants with assaulting her young son with stones thereby inflicting a deep gash in his head from which the blood flowed profusely. The prisoners plead not guilty and Justice Nash set their trial down for Monday next.

DEMOCRATIC RECORD.

BILLS FOR PUBLIC PLUNDER PASSED LAST WINTER.

By Them Over Half a Million a Year Taken out of the Taxpayers' Pockets to Reward Heelers, Ballot-box Stuffers and the Like.

Yesterday, we gave the Democratic record in the New Jersey Legislature for 1890, when they had full control.

The following list of the most prominent of the acts of the Democratic Legislature of 1891, will show the people of the State how unspeakably shameless were the partisan orgies of that session. We quote from Chairman Kean's appeal to the voters of New Jersey:

KING PARTISAN LEGISLATION, SESSION OF 1891.

"Act creating the new Department of Banking and Insurance, the Chief to be appointed by the Governor for a $3,000 a year salary and authorized to employ "such clerks, agents and employees as may be necessary." (P. L. 1891, p. 12.) Another at $2,500, another at $800, a typewriter at about $600, and double the present list for other employees, the Commissioner to be dismissed by the Governor whenever he should manifest a spirit of independence.

Taking the terms of office of City Clerks and Street Commissioners in the cities of the second class at three years, (P. L. 1891, p. 135,) made to serve the case of incumbents.

Authorizing the appointment of Assistant Prosecutors in all counties of 6,500 inhabitants at annual salaries of $1,200, $1,600, $2,000, and $2,500, according to population, in every county consisting of Sussex, Essex, Monmouth, Mercer, Passaic, and Union. (P. L. 1891, p. 143,) increasing their salaries $15,000 per annum.

Establishing three Police Courts in each city of the first-class, Justices to be appointed by the Governor at a salary of $2,500 each. (P. L. 1891, p. 159.) Peter O'Donnell and Thomas Dowd and Frank Kimberly, all ringsters, were promptly appointed.

Taking the Deaf Mute Institution from the charge of the Board of Trustees and vesting it in the partisan State Board of Education. (P. L. 1891, p. 164.)

Act repealing the clause "not more than two shall be members of the same political party" in section two of the act creating the State Board of Assessors. (P. L. 1891, p. 165.) Ex-Senator Scott, a Republican, was turned out, and a Democratic henchman appointed.

Act providing for the election of City Treasurers in cities of the second class for five years. (P. L. 1891, p. 166.)

Abolishing the Board of Trustees of the State Normal School, and constituting the State Board of Education of the Trustees of the School Fund, Governor, Secretary of State, President of Senate, Speaker of House, Attorney General and Comptroller, and eight members appointed by the Governor. (P. L. 1891, p. 168.)

Abolishing Boards of Managers for Trenton and Morristown Asylums and vesting the appointment of a single Board for both Institutions in the Governor. (P. L. 1891, p. 165.) Ring partisans appointed.

Creating a State Board of Taxation, three members appointed by the Governor at $5,000 each, all partisans removable at the Governor's pleasure. (P. L. 1891, p. 189.)

Constituting Boards of five Street and five Water Commissioners in cities the first class, to be appointed by the Mayor at salaries of $2,000 each. (P. L. 1891, p. 249.) Applies to Newark and Jersey City, subverting Governments by people.

Authorizing the Governor to appoint and commission as many special policemen as he may think necessary for guards of the State Institutions. (P. L. 1891, p. 215.)

Congressional gerrymander. (P. L. 1891, p. 237.)

Assembly gerrymander. (P. L. 1891, p. 239.)

Increasing salaries of Mayors of second class cities from $1,000 to $2,000 a year. (P. L. 1891, p. 295.) Applied to Elizabeth.

Providing that members of Boards of Freeholders in Somerset, North Plainfield, in company with a friend went out for a drive. When near Westfield the horse stumbled and fell. When the animal got on his feet again he suddenly shied and one of the front wheels of the buggy collapsed. Mr. Dudenhoefer was thrown headlong from the carriage and painfully injured about the head and shoulders.

Arrested for Assault.

Special Policeman Mattox last evening arrested Charles Wright, and "Bert" and Samuel McCauley on a warrant issued by Justice Nash on complaint of Mrs. Cole. The complaint charges the defendants with assaulting her young son with stones thereby inflicting a deep gash in his head from which the blood flowed profusely. The prisoners plead not guilty and Justice Nash set their trial down for Monday next.

DEMOCRATIC RECORD.

BILLS FOR PUBLIC PLUNDER PASSED LAST WINTER.

By Them Over Half a Million a Year Taken out of the Taxpayers' Pockets to Reward Heelers, Ballot-box Stuffers and the Like.

Yesterday, we gave the Democratic record in the New Jersey Legislature for 1890, when they had full control.

The following list of the most prominent of the acts of the Democratic Legislature of 1891, will show the people of the State how unspeakably shameless were the partisan orgies of that session. We quote from Chairman Kean's appeal to the voters of New Jersey:

KING PARTISAN LEGISLATION, SESSION OF 1891.

"Act creating the new Department of Banking and Insurance, the Chief to be appointed by the Governor for a $3,000 a year salary and authorized to employ "such clerks, agents and employees as may be necessary." LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Bank Officials Indicted.

New York, Oct. 28th, (Special).—The Treasurer of the Kingston, New York, National Bank, was indicted to-day by the Grand Jury. There are five counts against him, including grand larceny and perjury. The assistant treasurer was also indicted.

The Late James Wilson, who died on the morning of October 20th, was born in the city of New York, March 29, 1807. At the age of 18, he went to Paterson, N. J., to clerk in the grocery store of C. White. In the Spring of 1827, when only 20 years of age, he went into the grocery business for himself, and in May of that year was married to Miss Ann Eliza Hopper, with whom he lived for more than sixty-two years. Mr. Wilson had attended occasionally the Presbyterian church prior to 1839, but he said that up to that time he was careless in matters of religion. One sudden death or a friend caused him to see the necessity of preparing for death. He began a life of prayer, but could not find the full peace he sought. In the Summer of 1839, when he was converted at a Methodist Episcopal camp-meeting, held at Ramapo, and in the Methodist church in the invitation of his friend, Mr. Horatio Moses. There he heard a sermon preached by Rev. Pilmore, a local preacher of that day, from Isaiah 44:3—"I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground. I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring." Under the influences of this sermon he was converted, and on Oct. 24, 1831, was received into full membership in the Methodist Episcopal church in Paterson. For his conversion he, in common with many others of that day, despised the Methodists. This people were then looked upon as the lowest of the Protestant churches in numbers, and are surpassed by none in the intelligence of its religious service.

Shortly after this owing to closing of the mills in Paterson, he met with business reverses, and was compelled to close out his entire stock in trade, and accepted a appointment of the eastern end of the railroad which was opened between Paterson and New York. After a short time he moved to Paterson, to Bergen Hill, and from the latter point to New York the cars were drawn by horses. Mr. Wilson had charge of the horses and mules. This new position required him to live in Jersey City where he removed in the Spring of 1838, and lived there for 53 years until 1891. While a resident there he was active in its church and a real leader in every good word and work. He was long a pillar in the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church in that city.

In 1860 he moved with his family to Plainfield, and here for 31 years lived a happy, useful life. Rev. Mr. Fox first came here, from 1872 to 1887, he taught a large Bible class in the Methodist Sunday School. He was greatly beloved by Mr. Fox and his faithful service, because of failing eye-sight. He was a true friend of the poor, and by his noble Bi-spirited man, who loved all of God's children, and greatly respected the other parishes of Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson had two children, one son and one daughter. The son died in early life.

The daughter, Mrs. McIntosh, died a number of years ago leaving her two sons, Louis and Harry McIntosh, to be reared. To be cared for by their grandparents, and right well were they faithful to their trust. They were indeed parents to the orphan boys, and those young men keenly feel the loss of him whom they always called "Father."

At the funeral last Thursday afternoon, the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, the Rev. Dr. Mellor, officiated. For fifteen years, from 1876 to 1891, he was leading the scripture, and leading in prayer for the mourning family. Rev. Wm. Day, long a friend and for the pastor of the church, was present and spoke appropriately and tenderly of the departed. Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Presiding Elder of the district, who for twenty-five years the next door neighbor of the deceased, made the funeral address. Mr. Wilson as a neighbor. He made the remarkable statement that in the twenty-five years he lived next door to the deceased, he had never heard Mr. Wilson say a word or saw him perform a deed, which was not in perfect accord with the Christian profession. A company of mourning friends who filled the large house, were present to show their respect to their long-cherished friend. Mr. Wilson leaves behind his devoted wife, who patiently and resignedly bears up under her heavy affliction. She knows she will meet her husband again and she believes "Victor B," care of Evening News. 28 6

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Minnie J. French returned home yesterday from the Woman's College at Baltimore, Md.

General Eli Long and family are expected home to-day from Pen Yan, N. Y. They will occupy their residence on Grove street.

Mr. and Mrs. John McNally have returned from their wedding trip to Washington, D. C., and company couple will reside in Plainfield avenue.

Miss Nellie, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Samuel H. Jacobus, a former resident of this city, died at her home in Boston Monday, after a short illness with diphtheria.

Mr. John McCarthy of Evona and Miss Mary Ann Metcuchen were married this afternoon at four o'clock in the Catholic Church at Metuchen. Miss Casey's sister was the maid of honor and Mr. Thomas J. Hughes of this city acted as best man.

Mr. F. P. Haffner, the popular member of the Elks' Lodge, recently received for securing the most new members within a stated time, a handsome emblematic pin. It is ornamented with diamonds, and the owner is justly proud of it, both because of its beauty and handiness.

Mr. C. J. Feytel, one of the workers of Wetumpka Lodge, whose neat speech before the play the other evening was well applauded, has long been a prominent leader of the order. Wetumpka Lodge is a strong organization. In spite of a heavy, persistent fire of disabled members, over a year ago, left and formed with twenty-six charter members, a new society named Easter Lodge, the Wetumpkas have constantly increased. At the time of the split there were but 68 members. Now it has nearly reduced the number to 50, which has now increased to the present figure, 128. The Easter Lodge has not been so fortunate. From 96 is increased, so a member says, to 32.

Negro Education.

A number of persons were present at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church last evening on the occasion of the public meeting held in the interest of negro education as represented by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute at Tuskegee, Alabama. A quartette of colored students rendered several negro songs and two of the students addressed the meeting. One told how he was getting his education and at the same time learning the printing business, and the other told how he was learning the blacksmith trade and at the same time studying. Booker T. Washington, the Principal of the Institution also addressed the audience.

Devine Committed.

Harry Devine, the colored man who was arrested by acting Captain of Police Lynch in this city Monday morning and who was taken to Elizabeth to answer to the charge of burglarizing a house in that place, was before a magistrate yesterday morning. Mrs. Brown, the owner of the house where the burglary was committed identified Devine as the accused and in default of bail he was committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

To Go to Phillipsburg.

Early next month Octycia Lodge, Uniformed Rank of Phillipsburgh will give a grand reception at that place. Crescent Division Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias of this city have been invited to participate in the festivities. Octycia Lodge is the one to which was awarded the first prize on the Knights of Pythias Field Day, which was celebrated in this city last month.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

EDITORIAL NOTES

About Great New Truths.

It may be, as Mr. Henry Wood informs us in The Arena, that disease is caused by wrong thought, and that if we would only think exactly the right kind of thought at all times, then humanity would be well henceforth. It may indeed be that "thousands of years of chronic fearing, sinning, selfishness, anxiety and unnumbered other morbid conditions" have caused the physical degeneracy of the present race. It may likewise be, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the evil mental conditions hereinbefore mentioned "are all the time pulling down the cells and tissues, which only dwell harmonious and wholesome thought can build up."

But when Mr. Henry Wood gibes at us for not accepting at once this great new truth he wakes us up to say a word in our own defense. Let Mr. Wood consider a moment how often and how cruelly we poor mortals have been fooled and driven off our base by great new truths which seemed just as fair and angelic as his. Several times during each seven of his lifetime comes some splendid discovery which is going to do away with human pain and misery henceforth. There, for instance, was but, no. We will not mention it, on second thoughts. Neither will we mention half a dozen other great new truths and inventions that were going to redeem the race by lightning express. We bit at them all, we tried each in turn, and it was no go. Each had a grain of good in it, which the wise extracted for what it was worth, and smiled a melancholy smile at their own gullibility and weakness, as they passed on and left the vast pile of husks which just before had been to them a great truth.

If Mr. Wood's mind cure is true it will stand, no fear of that. Whatever is true gets a foothold sooner or later—generally later—but it gets it. Yet let not the advance apostles of the new cure be out of patience with a poor, put upon humanity for not accepting it all at once. Mankind would like to believe it, no doubt. But humanity has been getting solemnly and soundly deluded at intervals ever since the serpent fooled Eve in the Garden of Eden, and it is naturally a little shy of new discoveries. In a time of life, especially of those that cannot be demonstrated physically, like scientific inventions.

Woman in the Methodist Church.

Although the last Methodist church general conference refused to admit women as lay delegates, yet if the signs of the times mean anything it will not be many years before eloquent women are actually preaching in Methodist pulpits. This is the conclusion to be drawn from the discussion at the ecumenical council of that church in Washington.

The most curious fact to be noted was that the visiting brethren from Great Britain and Ireland were the ones who apparently went farthest in their liberal ideas. Several of these poured hot shot into the camp of their American confrères, for rejecting the lady delegates at the general conference.

Rev. Thomas Hunt, of England, remarked that he wished there were women delegates there in the council as well as men. Rev. William Gorman, of Belfast, Ireland, said this women were kept out of certain councils of the church where their gifts were most needed. If woman in the pulpit was obnoxious, it could be easily remedied by pulling away the pulpit and letting woman stand. Rev. J. H. Siles, of England, upbraided the American Methodists for rejecting women delegates to the general conference, while Mr. Falkinson, M. P., spoke in favor of women preachers.

Professor J. P. Landis, of Dayton, O., was one of the American ministers who went in for Methodist women as preachers. Nearly all the other preachers who spoke at all on the subject were likewise in favor.

The colored Bishop Turner, of the African Methodist church, has left for his charge in western Africa. Bishop Turner is full of enthusiasm for the great black republic which he hopes still to live to see to Liberia, a republic built up largely by civilized and enlightened colored people from America. In Africa is also negro's true home, says Bishop Inman. He still agitates the movement for a line of steamers to ship colored people to Liberia, claiming that there is the place where they will come into their kingdom and grow to greatness among the nations of the earth.

A victory is something to celebrate, but what does anybody want to celebrate a defeat for? We ask the question, not with any invidious hidden meaning, but merely for information, in view of the fact that the defeat of General Arthur St. Clair by the Indians has just reached its hundredth anniversary celebration at Toledo.

Halle, Germany, has a working women's union. Lately the police broke into one of the meetings, abolished the organization and confiscated its funds because the members had ventured to discuss woman suffrage. Girls, marry a German nobleman and go and live in Germany—do.

The evil that you dread comes upon you. Therefore never dread any evil.

CHEERS FOR CLEVELAND

The Ex-President and Governor Hill Speak.

FASSETT TALKS TO THOUSANDS.

Big Meetings Held by Both Parties in New York, Brooklyn and Other Places. Lively Times in the Political World as Election Day Draws Near.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—A big Democratic ratification meeting was held at Madison Square Garden last night. Fully 20,000 persons were present. Every Democrat of prominence in this city was on hand and many of them received enthusiastic receptions as they took their seats on the platform. Ex President Cleveland and Governor Hill came in for the lion's share of the applause. J. Edward Simmons, president of the Business Men's Democratic club, presided. Mr. Bourke Cockran introductory address he presented Grover Cleveland, who again received a very flattering reception.

Mr. Cleveland's Speech.

Mr. Cleveland said he was glad to believe that the business men of New York understood that this political campaign is not a struggle for party spoils, but one with all their fellow citizens, but that there are features in it which especially concern them. He could not say that business men were inclined to keep aloof from public affairs, and their indifference and inactivity have resulted in a loss to our public welfare. He was firmly of the belief that if a few business men could be substituted for professional men in official places the people would positively gain by the exchange. The time has arrived when business men have not been quicker to see that their neglect of political duty is a constant danger to their personal and especial interests. Cheers. He said:

Business Men Aroused.

They may labor and plan in their counting houses or in their exchanges, but in the meantime laws may be passed by those ignorant of their business bearings, which in their operation will overthrow all the labor and defeat all this planning. I have expressed the belief that the business men of our city are aroused to the fact that there are questions involved in the campaign in this state which concern them and their welfare in a special way. This is indicated by this immense demonstration. The city of New York as the center of all that makes our state Empire State, and as the great board from which life giving currents flow to all parts of the country, cannot be indifferent to the questions, both state and national, which have relation to the state campaign now nearly closed.

What the Proper Issues Are.

Much has been said about the issue which should be discussed in the prosecution of this campaign. It has been contended that the canvass should be confined to state issues, and it has been claimed that national issues should in most prominently considered. I conceive the truth to be that both are proper subjects of discussion at this time, and in the presence of this assemblage, called together to consider the business of the state, I am content to proceed with the fact that the best test to employ by way of determining the importance of any topic in the pending campaign is to inquire whether it is connected with the good of the country and with the business of the state and whether it will be at all influenced by the results of the canvass.

Can any one doubt that the political verdict which the people of New York will give in November next will affect her position in the great national contest of 1892? Can any place one year hence in this view the proper administration of the state's affairs as more materially not only all our people, but the commerce and the business of our city, should be considered? Can the welfare of sound currency cannot be separated from the business interests of our state, and they should be put in peril by the success of the Republican party in stirring their thought and setting their opinion.

Concerning Tammany Hall.

Applying this standard, it is entirely plain that an economical administration of state affairs and the numerous other subjects having relation to the honest, economical and efficient state government are in a business sense important and legitimate

But all these questions the New York Democracy is right, and we are willing and anxious to discuss them in any place and at any time. But our opponents are content to be satisfied the discussion of subjects legitimate to the canvass and affecting the welfare of our city and state, and exhibiting such weakness and fear as certainly ought not to escape notice, are shrinking throughout the state from discussion of the gorous proclivities of a certain political organization whose members support the principles of candidates for the legislature only. It would be quite easy to show that even if all they allege against this organization were true the party opposing it would be guilty of the same or a similar offense and be equally open to the charge that it is gaining a party advantage not other wise possible.

Flower's Business Career.

In conclusion I desire to declare my fear that the business men of New York will be thus deluded. They will not only approbated the opposition of the people and of their duty to invest in soberly passing upon them, but they will also appreciate the fact that the ticket they are asked to support as a party to support expressly recognizes them.

It is headed by a man of business, who is certainly entitled, by his conditions, and who is so creditable as their representative that I believe that no business man has escaped attack during a campaign in which every attack having any pretext whatever has been made. I will not mention the names of the other members of our candidates some of whom are my old and near friends because I think I may not do so than you personally, to say that they are all entirely worthy of support.

Governor Hill Speaks Too.

Great cheering followed the conclusion of the ex-president's address, and the cheers were renewed when David B. Hill was introduced. The governor began by complimenting the big magnificent demonstration augured well for the success of the party. "This is a most peculiar campaign," he continued.

"I have never known a campaign to retain its peculiar features like this. On the one side is arrayed the great Democratic party, placing before the people great and vital issues. Our opponents are conducting a sort of guerrilla campaign. They ignore all national and state issues. They propose to discuss idle rumors and every local matter which strikes them. You would judge from hearing the Republican orators that we were in the midst of a municipal election in New York."

Governor Warner Miller.

The governor remarked that Warner Miller, who arrived from Europe but recently, had complained about the government of this city. If he didn't like it he could return to his home in Herkimer or go back to Europe. If Warner Miller compared our city pavements with those of European countries he wanted to compare the roads of Herkimer county with those of the rural districts of Europe.

"In this campaign," said Governor Hill "the Republicans give us no facts, no figures; they have unearthed no corruption, notwithstanding their vaunted investigating committee, whose report was a complete vindication of the government of this city. I assert, without fear of contradiction, that this city has never been so well governed as during the past eight years. You are confronted with the fact this fall that your tax rate next year will be lower than it has ever been in the last thirty-five years."

Governor Hill remarked that his party was not afraid to speak upon any issue. He would not say a word about tariff reform. The Republicans tried to shirk the question, and McKinley was wroth with the leaders in this state on that account.

The governor then spoke of a letter which the Republican party proposed to circulate today, and he pronounced it false and misleading. He especially denied the statement therein that Tammany and the County Democracy wished the defeat of Flower.

Among those seated on the platform were Roger Q. Mills, of Texas; General Daniel F. Sickles and other Democrats of national reputation.

Fassett in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 28.—Mr. J. Sloat Fassett addressed 8,000 persons last night at the Academy of Music. He made two speeches earlier in the evening in the eastern districts of Brooklyn. Fassett began his forty minutes speech by saying that in one week citizens would be dictated their choice

OUR CASE AGAINST CHILI

President Harrison's Instructions to Minister Egan.

WHY DOES TRESCOTT KEEP SILENT

The Executive Says This Expression of Unfriendliness May "Put in Peril the Maintenance of Amicable Relations Between the Two Countries."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The following is a copy of the telegram which by the president's order was sent to Chili on the 23d inst.:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Oct. 23, 1891.

EGAN, American Minister, Santiago, Chili:

Immediately upon receipt of information of the assault made on the 16th inst. in the streets of Valparaiso upon a number of American sailors belonging to the United States man-of-war Baltimore, now in that harbor, the commander of the vessel, Captain W. S. Schley, was directed to cause an immediate and thorough inquiry to be made into the origin and incidents of that tragic affair and to communicate the results of such inquiry to this government and to you. His report, under date of yesterday, has just been transmitted to this department by the secretary of the navy, who advises me that a copy of the report was forwarded by Captain Schley to you.

The Only Redeeming Incident.

You will observe that the board of officers selected by Captain Schley to investigate this affair report that all our sailors were unarmed and gave no provocation; that the assaults upon them were made by armed men, greatly superior in number, and, as we must conclude, animated in their bloody work by hostility to those men as sailors of the United States. You will also notice that the character of some of the wounds indicate that the public police, or some of them, took part in the attack, and you will also observe that other American sailors were without any apparent fault arrested and for some time held by the authorities. The friendly offices of a few of the public officers to give succor to our men furnished the only redeeming incident of this affair.

No Word of Regret from Chili.

This cruel work so injurious to the United States, took place on the 16th inst., and not an expression of regret or a purpose to make searching inquiry, with a view to the institution of proper judicial proceedings, has the government of the guilty parties has been, so far as I am advised, offered to this government.

You will at once bring to the attention of the government of Chili the facts as reported to you by Captain Schley, and will inquire whether there are any qualifying facts in the possession of that government or any explanation to be offered of an event that has very deeply pained the people of the United States not only by reason of the resulting death of one of our sailors and the pitiless wounding of others, but even more as an apparent expression of an unfriendliness toward this government, which might put in peril the maintenance of amicable relations between the two countries.

Hope That Chili Will Settle.

If the facts are as reported by Captain Schley this government cannot doubt that the government of Chili will offer prompt and full reparation. You will furnish the foreign office a full copy of this dispatch and report promptly to this government.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Palo Alto Trots an Exhibition Mile in 2:10.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 28.—That good old campaigner, Palo Alto, beat his record yesterday in a beautiful exhibition, doing a mile in 2:10. He made first rate time without skip and with very little urging. The quarters were made in 32, 31¾, 33 and 33½. The large number of prominent horsemen present believe Palo Alto will beat the world's stallion record of 2:09¾, held by Allerton. Senator Stanford has ordered his trainers to prepare the horse for such a trial, to take place within a few days.

Yale Freshmen Compete.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 28.—The results of the annual games of the Yale freshmen follow:

100 yard dash; won by W. Swayne, Jr., in 10 4-5 seconds. 220 yard dash; won by E. W. Allen in 23½ seconds. Mile run; won by H. B. Tyler, time, 5m. 39s. Half mile run; won by R. B. Beardsley; time, 2m. 21 2-5s. 440 yard run; won by E. W. Allen in 1 minute. Pole vault; won by E. Hart with a vault of 8 ft. 6 in. Putting shot; won by D. Lyman with a put of 31 ft. 2 in. Two mile bicycle race, safety; won by G. R. Brewster in 7m. 39s.

Hall After Maher's Scalp.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Jim Hall, of Australia, has challenged Peter Maher, champion heavyweight pugilist of Ireland, to fight to a finish for the largest purse any responsible club will guarantee and a side bet of satisfactory dimensions under Marquis of Queensberry rules, the Irish champion not to weigh over 170 pounds. If this is not satisfactory Hall will box Maher six rounds for the gate receipts, Maher not to weigh more than 178 pounds.

A Pacing Wonder at Independence.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Oct. 28.—The racing at the kite shaped track was very interesting. For the first time since pacing records have been noted a yearling made a mile below 2:40. This was accomplished by Stella, a bay gelding from the Jewett farm at Buffalo. He paced the mile in 2:39½. Ralph Wilkes, a 2-year-old, eclipsed his best record by 1 second. His time was 2:18.

James Palmer O'Neill Resigns.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 28.—The irresistable James Palmer O'Neill has resigned his position as president of the Pittsburg league club and will enter the insurance business. Director William Kerr will probably be elected his successor.

Maher Challenges Corbett.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Billy Madden, acting in the interests of Peter Maher, the Irish champion, has covered the $1,000 recently deposited with a New York newspaper for Jim Corbett, with a challenge to meet any tiptop heavyweight.

Hirsch Homes for Jews in Argentine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The Argentine government has sold a tract of land in the Grand Chaco, the northern part of the republic, to Baron Hirsch for the establishment of a Jewish settlement. One million dollars in gold has been paid for 1,000 square miles of territory.

Those Charges of Cruelty.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The Herald says that much more evidence of cruelty in the Presbyterian hospital has come to light, and the executive committee convened itself with saying that the charges had not been properly made.

They Replevined the Skeletons.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Deputy Sheriffs Mulvaney and Hamilton have seized a number of human skeletons on a writ of replevin secured by the New York Bank of Deposit to satisfy a loan made to Sandy, Doles & Co.

He Died Game.

A man from the west was telling about the manner of dealing out justice to thieves in that section.

"There was Coyote Bill," he said, "the worst in the business. He came into my place one night, stole a pair of boots, an overcoat and fifty dollars, then went to Hardin's stable, stole a horse and got out by midnight."

"Did he get away?"

"Not much. We were after him in three hours, and by noon we had him shot full of holes; but he was no coward, and he shot three of our party before we finished him."

"Anyhow, he was game and died with his boots on; put it a fellow who was none too good himself."

"No, he didn't," said the story teller in flat contradiction; "they were mine."—Detroit Free Press.

Creating an Impression.

Chollie (glancing at bill of fare)—I'd order quail on toast if they had it, Bella; but they haven't, apparently, so I guess we'll have some plain—

Waiter—We have quail on toast, sir, although it isn't on the bill.

Chollie (auto voce)—Shut up! -Life.

RIOTING IN IRELAND.

Broken Heads Follow a Hostile Meeting of the Opposing Factions.

CORK, Oct. 28.—Desperate fighting has taken places in the streets of Cork between the Parnellites and the Clericals. The result is that a number of members of the two opposing parties are being nursed in the hospitals and elsewhere, for severe wounds incurred during the frays. A girl who was an onlooker during one of these political encounters was seriously wounded about the head and face by stones.

At Limerick two boys quarreled while discussing the question of the leadership of the Irish parliamentary party. Finally one of the lads struck the other over the head with a stone, fracturing his skull, for refusing to answer whether he was in favor of the late Charles Parnell or Mr. Healy.

When Messrs. William O'Brien and John Dillon arrived in Cork they were met by a deputation composed of members of the National federation and a large number of priests. An enormous crowd lined the route to see the procession. While the procession was in progress a body of Parnellites attacked the bandsmen of the McCarthyites and tried to demolish their instruments.

Mr. O'Brien, in his speech at the Assembly rooms, said that he was willing to give fair play to his opponents, but, he added, he would not yield to "brickbats and dynamite bombs." A remark which was received with loud applause. The Parnellites, he said, might blow up the offices of the newspapers representing the views of the McCarthyites, but, he exclaimed, "they cannot destroy the spirit that animates that party." After the Cork county committee had adjourned Dillon and O'Brien passed through the city, accompanied by the procession which met them at the railroad station. Suddenly the McCarthyites were attacked by a large mob of Parnellites, and both sides fought desperately with sticks, clubs, shovels and pikes.

A detachment of mounted police spurred their horses between the two lines of combatants, striking right and left with the flat of their sabers. A large number of wounded were stretched, bleeding and groaning, in the streets before the troopers restored order.

Thirteen Dollars for Ten.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Commissioner Raum, of the pension bureau, has been informed by Minister Ryan that national bank and legal tender notes of the United States bear a premium in Mexico of 30 per cent. A ten dollar legal tender or national bank note of the United States will buy thirteen Mexican dollars.

Coy at the Scene of the Murder.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Oct. 28.—Murderess Coy was taken to the scene of his crime and pointed out to the officers where he had buried Whalen's coat and vest. The articles were covered with blood. Coy then took the officers to the house where the murder occurred and showed how the crime had been committed.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

A large fire in Evansville, Ind., destroyed property of the Evansville Street Car company valued at $50,000.

Rev. J. S. Morgan, of Mulberry Grove, Ills., is searching on foot for his son, aged three years, stolen, as supposed, by tramps Aug. 18, 1890.

The rush of goods through the port of Laredo, Tex., into Mexico to avoid increase of duty on many articles is great, it is said.

General Beauregard, at St. Louis, has denied that he is in any way connected with the Louisiana lottery, except to see every month that the drawings are conducted fairly.

The grand jury of the United States district court at Boston has found indictments against New Orleans officials of the Louisiana lottery for improper use of the mails, as alleged.

In accordance with the anti-trust law United States District Attorney Reynolds, of St. Louis, has decided to commence an active campaign against the St. Louis Apothecaries' association.

It is authoritatively stated from Brownsville, Tex., that none of the alleged revolutionists executed by General Lorenzo Garcia, commanding at Camarro Mier, Mexico, were American citizens.

Lewis Duffy, a fireman on the steam whaler Grampus, has arrived at San Francisco from Ounalaska, and confirms the report of the cremation of the news that the crew of the Grampus have been massacred by the natives. He says that the crew showed hostile women.

The steamer Sovereign, bound for Buffalo, has been wrecked in Lake Superior, with a cargo of 30,000 bushels of wheat.

Thirty houses were blown down and damage amounting to $100,000, caused by a tornado at Conneaut, O., Monday evening. The tornado also blew down wires in Cleveland, and delayed navigation on Lake Ontario.

DANGER IN THE GOLDEN ROD.

Other Flowers That Have Its Unfortunate Fire Destructive Propensity.

She wild spanish thing was growing on the corner by school house No. 2 in the shape of golden rod she was promising enough for the time for in the corner. Only in the hedges and meadows is it dangerous, and simply makes malaria if there is the slightest tendency in that direction, and even if that danger is escaped the tiny particles of pollen pass into the atmosphere and bring on influenzas and all sorts of eye troubles. So leave the golden rod alone and instead gather great bunches of mountain saibberries and bittersweet to light up, with their gorgeous red and yellow coloring, some dark corner. They will last all winter long, and may be dusted freely without the fear of breaking them off, and then, where the golden rod betrings memories of low lying meadows, where flies drown stick to your gown and burdocks to your stockings the pretty spicy berries recall hillitops and the hillside pasture stone wall where you sat to rest after the climb. Perhaps you brought home some cigarette and milk weed pods in the July Shinsopeel and they are lovely, but as soon as they "fluff out" they will blow over the house and dirty up everything. In order to prevent such a catastrophe invest a dollar in invisible gray back hair nets. They only cost four cents each, so your dollar will buy enough for the family. Now arrange your clematis as you wish it to stay and over each bunch of flowers and each pod slip a hair net, then forget all about them. Some morning they will be found all fluffed out, but not scattered on the floor, neither filling the atmosphere, but safe in the hair net, looking soft and pretty. The net will be quite invisible and will hold them securely till you are tired of them.

TID-BITS.

Grease may be removed from silk by applying magnesia on the wrong side.

Balsam of fir, as well as varnish, can be removed from the hands by applying a little lard.

Put old rubber rings of cans into weak ammonia water, and they will again become elastic.

A penny or a large silver piece will remove paint from glass readily. Just wet it and rub the glass.

New tins should be set over the fire with boiling water in them for several hours before food is put into them.

A tablespoonful of powered borax in a pail of water will keep fine white flannels from turning yellow in washing.

Never sun feather beds. Air them thoroughly on a windy day in a cool place. The sun draws the oil and gives the feathers a rancid smell.

When putting a facing on a dress skirt use two threads, one on the top and one on the bottom of the facing. This saves time, and does not wrinkle the goods so much.

Hot cider vinegar will remove paint stains from window glass, or nearly full-strength oxalic acid used with a swab will produce the same effect. In using the latter care must be taken that it does not touch the hands or the paint.—Housekeeper's Weekly.

Ham With Tomato Sauce.

Trim and fry nicely three slices of ham. Remove from the dish as soon as done. Have ready some thinly sliced tomatoes and a spoonful of chopped onion. Place these in the pan from which the ham was taken, fry for a few minutes, add a cup of water and a little finely chopped parsley, season with pepper and salt, and when nicely done pour the tomatoes around the ham, thicken with a little flour, adding water should it become too thick. Turn into the dish and allow it to simmer for five or six minutes. Serve, pouring the sauce over ham.

Soyer's Tomato Sauce.

Cut up a dozen large tomatoes in a stewpan, and add to them half an ounce each of celery, one ounce of ham or bacon, the same of butter, a teaspoonful each of sugar and of salt, a pinch of pepper, and stew for one hour. Then add a gill of good beef broth, boil a half-hour more and put in jars. When taken out for use, thicken slightly with flour while heating.—Good Housekeeping.

Pumpkin Pie.

Stew the pumpkin with just enough water to prevent burning. When soft rub through a colander, and to each large teacupful add one egg, milk or cream, two eggs, one cup sugar and flavoring to taste.

Pretty Letter Designs.

FOR EMBROIDERY WORK.
—Harper's Bazar.

To Boil Potatoes Properly.

Take potatoes as nearly as possible of one size. Wash them well and clear them of earth and dirt with a rather stiff vegetable brush. Then lie in cold water for an hour or two to extract the black juice with which they are impregnated. Do not put them into boiling water like greens, but into fresh, cold water with a little salt in a kettle closely covered. They are to boil most rapidly, and do not add more water than will merely cover them, as they produce themselves a considerable quantity of fluid. When done instantly pour off any water remaining and place the vessel containing the potatoes on the back of the stove. Remove the cover and "let the steam completely evaporate. The potatoes are thus rendered dry and mealy.

SAMPLE OF JERSEY JUSTICE.

Twelve Good Men and True Say a Man Has the Right to Abuse His Wife.

From time to long time the quick "Jersey Justice" has been the proud synonym for —well, for lots of queer things. There was added to its archives recently a verdict which will astonish Jersey, and which will create a sensation among all the married people in all the other States. Patrick Mullen was arraigned before Justice Krueger, of Carlstadt, on a charge of wife-beating. A jury was drawn and lawyers from Hackensack defended Mullen and Harry Wallace, of Passaic, appeared for Mrs. Mullen. After an enormous amount of evidence had been given in behalf of the plaintiff, the jury went out. They soon returned and said that they had agreed that a man had a perfect right to abuse his wife. He did not have to murder her, but he could beat him, then he could obtain a divorce.

The result of this verdict will probably be that in a short time there will be more married women in New Jersey and few married men in the other States, unless the justices of the latter should adopt this ruling as a precedent, in which case we should have more paragraphs in our newspapers similar to the following, from the cable news of the week:

VIENNA.—Four women have been arrested at Szentlazmak, Hungary, on the charge of poisoning their husbands and selling poisons to other women for a similar purpose.

PARIS.—A woman named Lombard has been arrested in the city for an attempt to murder her husband by pouring molten lead into his ear while he was asleep.—N. Y. Advertiser.

Solid Advice to Women.

Two mothers, each with a young baby and no nurse, were discussing how they managed it. "I should say worn out," said one. "I get no rest for my rests. I make it a point as soon as my baby is sound asleep for his morning nap, to drop everything and lie down myself." "Oh," said the other, "while my baby takes his day nap is the only chance I have to gather up the loose ends about the house."

In these two methods of management lies a wide and deep philosophy, says the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette. Ten years from now it will be safe to predict that that second mother will have lines in her face and have wrinkles on her brow that have no business to be there, and, equally that mother No. 1 will still be fresh and blooming. Women are beginning to understand that it is the continuous, unrelieved strain that tells. It is doubtful if many of them, particularly the busy workers, fully appreciate that it lies within their own reach to modify this condition. "I never stand when I can sit, and I never sit down when I can lie down," says a woman who has discovered the value of brief rests, and her sisters, if they try, may similiarly find innumerable opportunities, now overlooked, to ease the strain of their daily occupations if ever so briefly. Most women stand before their dressing bureaus to do the hair—an unnecessary waste of strength. Even if the hair be done in a simple one—taking a brief time to accomplish—those few moments will amount in the end to a good sum of rest.

The Woman of It.

She'll darn her husband's socks all right
With never ceasing care,
But when her stockings show a hole
She buys another pair.

HERE IS SOME RECREATION FOR THE LONG EVENINGS.

Bright Stories for Children—Bright Sayings of Little Ones—Conundrums to Brighten Their Wits — Amusement Blended With All.

Dolly's Diary.

Eight o'clock! I call her.
Jump up, Dolly Dear;
I must wash and dress you,
Breakfast time is near.

Half-past eight! My darling never screams nor cries,
When the soapy water
Gets into her eyes.

Nine o'clock! While combing
Dolly's lovely hair,
Off came her ringlets,
Leaving her head bare!

Half-past nine! Dear Dolly
Perched on the piano;
And I read upon her
Pretty face! Alas!

Ten o'clock! I'm going
To bind Doctor Fell.
I'll take Dolly with me;
He'll soon make her well.

A FEW CONUNDRUMS.

Questions That Will Brighten Your Wits, and Answers to Amuse.

1. He loved her. She hated him, but, womanlike, she would have him, and she was the death of him. Who was he?

2. Why is life the greatest of riddles?

3. If a church be on fire, why has the organ the most chance of escape?

4. Why should a sailor be the best authority as to what goes on in the moon?

5. What does a cat have that no other animal has?

6. When is a man behind the times?

7. What is the difference between a baby and a pair of boots?

8. Use me well, and I'm everybody; scratch my back, and I'm nobody.

9. What word becomes shorter by adding a syllable to it?

10. Why is buttermilk like something that never happened?

11. Why is the letter O the noisiest of all the vowels?

12. Why is a member of Parliament like a shrimp?

13. Why is a pig a paradox?

14. Why do black sheep eat less than white ones?

15. Why is a barn-door fowl sitting on a gate like a penny?

16. Why is a man searching for the Philosopher's Stone like Neptune?

17. Why is the nose placed in the middle of the face?

18. What is worse than "raining cats and dogs?"

A Clever Cat.

Several years ago a gentleman was out driving in the country when he noticed trotting across a clover field a pure white cat with a live mouse in her mouth. As he watched she suddenly stopped, then gave a great leap and landed with both forepaws together upon some object on the ground. Now she hesitated—What to do she knew not; finally—was it instinct or reason—she threw the mouse in her mouth into the air. As it fell she caught it by the head—the only way a cat will eat its prey—and so devouring the one was able comfortably to pick up No. 2 from under her feet and trot on.

A Few Curious Things.

A French woman's baby was so small that she used her shoe for its cradle.

Astronomers say that a shot fired on the equator of Jupiter would travel with the rotary motion at a speed forty-six times greater than that of a cannon ball fired at the earth's equator.

KILLED BY A FALL.

JOHN FITZGERALD, A STONE MASON'S, TERRIBLE DEATH.

He Was Working on the New Grace Church, Fort Forty Feet and Died at Muhlenberg Hospital as One O'clock this Afternoon.

At about nine o'clock this morning, John Fitzgerald, a stone mason, while working on a suspended scaffold on the new Grace church, suddenly lost his balance and fell to the ground, a distance of about forty feet. The mason who was working on the same scaffold with him and a number of the other workmen went to Fitzgerald's assistance. When they arrived where the unfortunate man laid they found him in an unconscious condition. They tenderly picked him up and carried him to a building nearby and several of them went in search of doctors.

Dr. Berg was the first to arrive and shortly afterwards five other physicians put in appearance. After hastily examining Fitzgerald they ordered his immediate removal to the Muhlenberg Hospital. Their orders were complied with and Fitzgerald died there at about one o'clock this afternoon.

There were no visible marks on the unfortunate man. He was injured internally. While awaiting to be transferred to the hospital his groans, from the pain, were heart-rending.

Fitzgerald's parents live in Philadelphia. He is unmarried. He was employed by the firm of Pryor & Sons, who have the contract for the masonry on the new church. At the time Fitzgerald fell he was engaged in what is known in the mason's trade as 'pointing.'

Messrs. A. M. Runyon & Son have charge of the remains.

Fitzgerald is the third man who fell from the new building since the work of construction began. The others were very fortunate, however, one breaking his arm and the other escaping with a few cuts and bruises.

He Thought It Over.

Mr. H. M. Moore, of Massachusetts, said recently: "Of course it takes money to run a Young Men's Christian Association well! What is money good for but to do good with? I think every man should make his will, and make himself his own executor. I can tell you how much the richest man in Haverhill will leave. He will leave all he has got. A lawyer in New York willed money to churches, benevolent institutions, etc., locked up his safe and went to bed. In the night he began to think that these institutions would be better off if he were dead. In the morning he began writing checks, and using his money while he lived."

Foot Ball Saturday.

There will be a game of foot-ball Saturday 31st, in the Crescent field at three o'clock, between Leal's school and Rutgers' grammar schools.

Too Many Flat-Headed Adders.

Borough Councilman Hegeman has a house on Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, not very far from Greenbrook. During the past ten days he has been visited by a number of flat headed adders. Thirteen of the reptiles have been killed in his door-yard several of them three feet in length.

Stetson Acquitted.

The trial of Augustus Steison of Rahway, who was indicted by the Union County Grand Jury on the charge of cruelty to animals, came up in the Union county Court yesterday. After hearing the testimony the jury retired and a few moments afterwards returned with a verdict of not guilty.

Their Caps Stolen.

The boys of the Bryant school have in two instances recently had their caps stolen from the cloak room. The latest was the taking of Willie Pike's new cap. It is a clever way of securing seasonable hats, but quite annoying to the parents who have to make good the loss. Who is to blame?

Two Candidates Meet.

This morning the Hon. George Kyte of Fanwood, the Republican candidate, for member of Assembly and Mr. Sidney B. Flower, the Democratic candidate accidentally met near the corner of Park avenue and Front street. They greeted each other cordially and had a pleasant chat.

The Fall Reunion.

The special Fall re-union of the Congregational church and Society will take place in the church parlors Friday evening, beginning at 7.45. A musical entertainment has been arranged by Mrs H. T. Barnes. Refreshments will be served and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

Pumpkin Pie Sociable.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue Chapel will give a pumpkin pie sociable on Tuesday evening, Nov. 3rd. A very pleasing programme has been arranged.

For Metropolis Members.

The next meeting of the Metropolis, Tuesday, Nov. 3, will, on account of the Casino being engaged, be held in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.

A MILK WAGON UPSET AND BOTH DRIVER AND HORSE INSURED.

It All Happened Before Daylight,—The Horse Ran Away After a Collision and Got Stalled in a Pond,—Split Milk.

Before daylight this morning Edward Schenck, a New Market milkman, met with a painful accident near his home in that place. He started for this city to supply his customers with milk. It was very dark and he had not proceeded far when his horse ran into a wagon loaded with crushed stone which had been left standing by the roadside. The collision frightened the animal and it began kicking and rearing and finally succeeded in overturning the wagon, throwing Mr. Schenck out and painfully injuring him. The frightened animal then broke loose from the overturned wagon and ran away. It eventually ran into the New Market pond where it was captured.

The wagon to which it was attached was badly wrecked and the animal was so badly injured that it cannot possibly live.

The milk with which the wagon was loaded was emptied by the roadside when the vehicle was overturned.

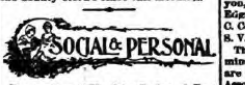
A $10,000,000 MORTGAGE.

By the Lehigh Valley Terminal Railway Company

On August 27th, by virtue of articles of agreement and merger, the following railroad companies were consolidated and formed into the Lehigh Valley Terminal Railway Company. The Roselle and South Plainfield Railway Co., the Newark and Roselle Railway Co., the Newark Railway Co., the Jersey, Newark and Western Railway Co., the Newark and Passaic Railway Co., the Edgewater Railway Co., and the Jersey City Terminal Railway Co.

In order to secure funds for the completion, maintenance and operation of this system, the Lehigh Valley Terminal Railway Company has given a mortgage for $10,000,000 to the Central Trust Company of New York. The loan is issued in five per cent. gold redemption bonds of $1,000, each payable in fifty years.

The mortgage was filed for record in the County Clerk's office this morning.



The mother of Mr. John Dodge of East Front street, is very ill at her home in Somerville.

Mr. George A. Dilts, the Republican candidate for Member of Assembly from Somerset county will address the Republicans of North Plainfield in Spencer's Hall this evening.

Mrs. Magne of West Third street was very pleasantly surprised last Friday evening, it being the occasion of a beautiful wheel chair presented to her by kind friends. Mrs. Magne desires to return many thanks for the useful gift.

A beautiful red rose, which must have been side-tracked somewhere in the parent branch during blooming time, was in full blossom on a rose bush this morning in the yard of Mrs. George Lewis of Mountain avenue, North Plainfield.

Rev. N. Bowers of Basking Ridge met with an accident Sunday morning. He was on his way to preach at Stirling, and was driving a colt in a sulky. A lot of dogs frightened the young horse and he ran away. Mr. Bowers was thrown out and severely hurt, and is now confined to his bed.

Stricken on the Street.

At about 10:30 a. m. Friday, as Miss Amelia Sloan of Plainfield (accompanied by her mother) was walking down Main street, she noticed that her mother could not speak, and suddenly was unable to walk herself. Mrs. Ed Hudson, who was passing in her carriage stopped, and the lady was carried to the home of her niece, Mrs. John Vanderveer, a mile east of Somerville, where she and her daughter had been visiting. They had just walked to Somerville when the old lady was stricken. Dr. Wagoner was summoned and pronounced it a case of paralysis. At the latest report her condition has not changed.—Somerville Messenger.

Elston Pleaded Non Vult.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday the case of Charles Elston, who was indicted by the Union county Grand Jury for stealing about three hundred dollars worth of jewelry from Mr. O. H. Dunham's store of West Front street, was set down for trial in the Union county Court yesterday. When the case was called Elston pleaded non vult. He will be sentenced next Saturday.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

TWO MEN INJURED, AND EIGHT CARS WRECKED THIS MORNING

A Brakeman Runs in the Smashup.—A Conductor Struck on the Head by a Standpipe.—Both Seriously Injured.—Particulars.

At an early hour this morning a freight train on the Central Railroad broke in two near the Greenbrook tanks.

There is a heavy grade there and the second section collided with the first. The result was that eight cars were wrecked. A brakeman, whose name we are unable to ascertain was seriously injured.

At about seven o'clock this morning as the fast fruit train from Philadelphia, bound west, was passing the Greenbrook tanks Conductor Ely was struck on the head by one of the standpipes and seriously injured.

He was brought to this city and Dr. Prites dressed his wounds. He was taken to his home in Philadelphia on the 9:31 train.

NEW JERSEY BAPTISTS.

The State Convention—The Election of Officers and Delegates.

At the sixty-second annual meeting of the New Jersey Baptist State Convention at Mt. Holly yesterday twenty-six delegates were present, who attended the session there thirteen years ago. The Publication Society reported that last year it issued 7,954 pages of tracts and 13,750 books on religion. The Home Mission Committee reported diminished contributions for the year. For foreign missions only $11,036.17 was collected.

Rev. H. A. Griesemer read the report of the committee on temperance, in which it was said: Intemperance makes 600,000 public paupers and 300,000 criminals annually. The manufacture of alcoholic beverages wastes each year 40,000,000 bushels of grain, and fills 100,000 drunkards' graves.

The following officers were elected: President F. W. Ayer, Camden; vice-presidents, Revs. D. J. Yerkes, Plainfield, and W. V. Wilson, Port Monmouth; secretary, Rev. J. C. Buchanan, Pemberton; board of managers, Rev. E. A. Armstrong, James Buchanan, T. Burroughs, Rhuston Cone, W. W. Case, T. S. Griffiths, J. F. Leaming, J. W. Lyell, I. W. Mulford, J. H. Parks, A. W. Rogers, D. F. R. Runyon, P. A. Runyon, J. A. Sagebeer, A. H. Sombower, C. Edgar Smith, A. H. Watson, R. E. Jones, C. Cook, T. M. Eastwood, Reuben Knox, S. V. Hulse, T. Heisig, H. B. Zimmerman.

The report of the committee on denominational interests showed that there are 88 churches in the West New Jersey Association, with a membership of 8,314; Camden Association, 28 churches and 6,328 members; Trenton Association, 35 churches and 6,781 members; Central Association, 25 churches with 4,886 members; East Association, 26 churches and 6,468 members; North Association, 25 churches and 6,956 members, making a grand total of 254 churches in the State, with a membership of 41,633. During the year 2,231 persons were baptized.

Revs. Hahn, Chancellor, Tilley and Conklin were appointed delegates to the meeting of the New Jersey Baptist State Educational Society.

The following were appointed to arrange for a foreign missionary mass meeting next year, which is the centennial anniversary of the establishment of these missions: W. W. Boyd, A. H. Sombower, F. J. Cross, E. T. Tomlinson, C. A. Cook and T. S. Griffiths.

Plainfield is a Healthy City to Live In.

The following is an abstract from the report of Mr. O. B. Lecard, as secretary of the Board of Health for the past year:

PREVAILING DISEASES.

During the past year the prevalent diseases have been consumption and heart failure among adults, proving fatal; measles and scarlet fever among the children, though not of a serious character.

The total number of deaths for the twelve months ending Oct. 1, 1891, has been 420 from all causes, being a small proportion in a population of about 12,000.

Pneumonia carried off 39 of this number; 18 died from consumption; 26 from heart failure; apoplexy 5; paralysis 5; accidents 7; Brights disease 4. The other half of the death record was claimed from almost every young and those advanced in years.

VITAL STATISTICS.

A careful and thorough collection of all vital statistics has been made, and from the register the following figures are compiled:

88 marriages solemnized; 388 births reported, being 109 males and 119 females. 200 deaths, as stated, embracing 27 children of 5 years and younger, 62 persons between 5 years and 60 years, and 81 over 60 years.

WORK DONE.

The year just closed, Oct. 1, 1891, has witnessed a quiet but continuous work in looking after the sanitary condition of Plainfield. The Health Inspector has reported 685 personal inspections made of dwellings, properties, and about 100 mandatory requirements for the removable of nuisances detrimental to health. During the past twelve months 660 cesspools have been emptied and 345 privy vaults cleaned out.

The collection of kitchen garbage is attended to by regular licensed persons, and refuse matter generally, to prevent any accumulation which might be deleterious to health.

In these ways and many others the Board has endeavored to promote a fair degree of healthfulness, by averting the causes of preventable disease.

A man named Moore, was arrested last night on complaint of his wife, who charged him with turning her from the house. Policeman Frederickson made the arrest. Moore will be given a trial this evening.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the most popular medicine which should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Advr.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Maud S, the trotter, will come of age next March. She will be 18 years old.

An organization of ladies is preparing a "revolutionary exhibit" for the World's fair. This is dreadful.

What is the most horrible moment in a human life? When the photographer says, "Now, look pleasant."

It has been officially decided that letter carriers must not be in the habit of betting on horse races. This, for reasons not necessary to mention.

If farmers are sometimes reduced to the strait of burning their corn for fuel, they need not thus dispose of the husks, for the paper mill has started up in the west to take care of them. A good quality of paper is now manufactured from the husks, which will in consequence become in time valuable.

The largest warship in our navy at present is the Miantonomah, a heavy fighting vessel of the monitor type. It is armored with iron and steel plates. The Miantonomah, by sheer force of its weight and size, could run down and crush any ordinary naval cruiser that it could come near enough to. It is meant for sea battles and coast protection. In the spring there will be two more of the same type completed, the Terror and the Puritan.

To Be a Journalist.

Many young people are turning an eager eye to the newspaper press, and many are writing letters asking what they shall do to be successful journalists. Well, in the first place, be very sure you would rather write for newspapers than do anything else for a living.

Next get a thoroughly good education. Find out all you can about every distinguished individual, every nation and government, every social, economic and political question of your own time, and everything else you can add besides. You cannot know too much. Read a good, reliable newspaper through every day. Know as much as possible.

When you begin to write, first have something to say. This is important. Put it into the fewest, plainest words you can. Keep your eyes open for the humorous things. Train yourself to be able to write anywhere, at any time, under all circumstances. You can do this. Do the best you know how and never allow yourself to fret and fume or talk overmuch about your task. Keep good tempered. The newspaper writer who does the most and the best work is the one who makes the least fuss about it.

What are your chances of success? If you are really determined and make yourself a first class journalist, you will finally get a place.

Scary Women.

Late dispatches contain two little stories which should commend themselves to the general attention.

Two handsome, rosy young Irish girls were on their way across the ocean to join their brothers in Brooklyn. The brothers were well to do and expected to take care of their sisters. But when the ship on which the girls were was three days out a heavy storm arose. The scene was terrible enough, and most of the passengers were more or less alarmed. But one of the pretty Irish girls was so frightened that she became a raving maniac, scared into insanity by the storm. When she reached New York the steward was obliged to return her to Ireland under the law requiring that insane persons shall be shipped back to the country whence they came. It made no difference that her grief stricken brothers stood ready to provide for her and pay all her expenses. Back she went, being confined meantime in a dark, little, unventilated cell on the ship.

The other story relates to a women whom one would think had sense and self control enough not to be frightened like an idiot or an infant at what seemed slightly mysterious or unfamiliar, namely, farm women. But a Connecticut farmer's wife, whose husband was away for the night, was so scared that she went into convulsions and remained so, her death being hourly expected, at the time the telegram was sent, along with that of her two daughters, aged fifteen and eighteen, respectively. The girls were scared out of their senses, like their mother, and could do nothing but utter screech upon screech, and these, like her, go over in convulsions. One knows not whether to laugh or to feel in despair of woman's ever learning common sense when he is told that the direful fright of those women was caused by a helpless little chimney swallow that had fallen down the pipe into an empty stove in the mother's room. It fluttered and made an unusual noise, and these farm women went into convulsions.

Can woman ever hope to amount to anything morally, intellectually or physically when she is scared to death by a chimney swallow? It is pitiable, this tendency to quail in the unreasoning panic that characterizes so many of the female sex. It is carrying the proverbial weakness and helplessness of woman to a most ridiculous and uncomfortable degree. In the bringing up of little girls, if the attempt is not hopeless, it should be insisted on strenuously that they first find out whether the object of their terror is anything more than a chimney swallow before they tumble over in convulsions.

CHILI IS VERY DEFIANT.

Not Responsible for Attacks on Yankee Jack Tars.

BOYCOTT AGAINST THE BALTIMORE.

The Valparaiso Authorities Even Refuse to Guarantee the Safety of Her Officers While They Are Ashore—Minister Egan Amazed at Chili's Strong Language.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Oct. 29.—This city was in a fever of excitement last night caused by a report that the Chilian legation in Washington had been attacked. The government has replied to Minister Egan's demand for reparation for the recent attack upon the Baltimore's crew. It is a refusal to accept responsibility for the affair. Mr. Egan has notified the state department at Washington and last night was in consultation with Consul McCreery and Commander Schley.

The Baltimore Boycotted.

Decisive action is looked for very quickly. The authorities of Valparaiso have gone so far as to refuse to guarantee the safety of market boats coming to that city from the United States warship Baltimore or the safety of officers of that vessel coming ashore at night. Minister Egan is said, has notified his government that the crew of the Baltimore are practically boycotted and no American sailors are permitted to land at this port.

State Department Surprised.

It is understood that Minister Egan expressed much surprise at the very strong language in which the Chilian government's reply is couched.

Monti Confers with Secretary Blaine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The first visit of Senor Pelico Monti to the state department was merely preliminary to a somewhat extended conference which was arraigned for a second visit. Senor Monti was accompanied by Julian Foster. They repaired at once to the diplomatic waiting room next to Secretary Blaine's office. Senor Monti was admitted, but Mr. Foster failed to display the "open sesame" of the secretary's invitation and the door was closed against him.

In a few minutes Senor Montt's card was conveyed to Secretary Blaine and the new Chilian minister was conducted into the private office. For fully three-quarters of an hour the junta's representative and the secretary of state remained in conference. When Senor Montt came out he found himself surrounded by a crowd of newspaper correspondents. To one and all he had this stereotyped answer: "I beg your pardon, but I have nothing to tell. You must ask your department."

No Ill Will Against Chili.

There was little satisfaction to be obtained from the department. Secretary Blaine refused to see any newspaper man, and keeps his secret of the conference in the inner chamber locked within his bosom, to be given out when he elects.

The fact that he has received the junta's representative is considered very significant. It is believed that it is the beginning of the end. It shows Chili that the great government of the United States bears no ill will against the little sister republic, but at the same time is not willing to take all the sauce and insolence in which the latter country seems to indulge.

He Probably Made Promises.

Senor Montt is wiser than some of his compatriots and has lived long enough in the United States to appreciate to the advantage of her favor. It is believed that a great part of the conference was used by Senor Montt in excusing the conduct of his fellow citizens in Santiago. He would raise and in assuring Secretary Blaine that full justice would be done and suitable statements made by Chili for the evil that has been done to their flag.

The credentials of Senor Montt as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary have not yet arrived. It is now understood that when he receives them no time will be lost in presenting him to the president.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Corbett Will Fight Maher if Mitchell and Slavin Refuse.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Jim Corbett says: "If my deposit at The Herald office is not covered by Charles Mitchell or Frank P. Slavin before Dec. 15, I will fight Peter Maher for $10,000 a side and the athletic club offering the largest amount for the contest, providing the purse is not less than $15,000 for the winner. My desire is to meet Mitchell or Slavin. They have both proved themselves in the champion ship class. Mr. Mahay has not."

Billy Madden has opened Nihlo's Garden for next Saturday night, and will give an athletic entertainment in which the winding will be a scientific four round bout between Peter Maher, the Irish champion, and Jack Fallon, the Strong Boy of Brooklyn.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 29.—Louis Jester, champion lightweight of Ohio, knocked out Harry Courtwright, of Scranton, in a contest for points at the Athletic rooms at Wilkesbarre. Nine rounds were fought.

Lord Hawke's Men Sail.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Lord Hawke and his English cricket team departed for Liverpool on the City of Rome yesterday.

Beckley Signs with Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 29.—First Baseman James Beckley has signed with the Pittsburg League club.

The Hebe Stops a Drawbridge.

NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 29.—While the steam barge Hebe, with 200 tons of coal, was passing through the draw bridge at Westport, she grounded and was left standing on a rock until the tide receded. Until the draw can be closed communication between the two sides of the river must be made by rowboats.

Death on the Crossing Again.

BUFFALO, Oct. 29.—Michigan Central passenger train No. 9 struck a wagon driven by J. H. Elienbaum, Sr., at Niagara Falls, and Mr. Elienbaum was killed. He was a prominent resident of Niagara.

A Contract Labor Importer Fined.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—Jacob Dick pleaded guilty to the charge of importing six musicians from Bavaria in the United States circuit court and was fined $100 and costs.

THE DETROIT IS AFLOAT.

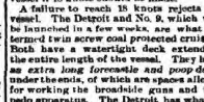
Her New Cruiser Successfully Launched at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 29.—The steel cruiser Detroit, the largest vessel ever constructed in a Baltimore shipyard, was successfully launched from the Columbia iron works. She slid into the water gracefully and without a hitch. The Detroit presented a beautiful appearance lying on the ways, gayly bedecked with bunting. From her fore gaff the Union Jack and at the stern the American colors were proudly unfurled to the breeze. At the bow of Uncle Sam's new vessel was a handsome figure head of the little sponsor, Florence N. Malster, the four-year-old daughter of the president of the Columbia iron works. Until the launch it was expected that Secretary Tracy, of the navy, and other heads of departments would arrive from Washington to witness the launch. They did not, however, put in an appearance.

The Detroit is one of three sister ships of 3,000 tons each, for which bids were accepted in November, 1889. It is a point of interest that this 3,000 ton vessel is almost identical in displacement with the two Chilian cruisers, President Errazuris and President Pinto, built in France, of which much has been heard. The new Detroit is 257 feet on the load water line and has an extreme beam of 37, with a mean normal draft of 14½ feet. The Detroit is only guaranteed to make 17 knots an hour, whereas the Chilian vessels are 19 knot ships. Congress limited the cost of each of these ships to $750,000 for a guaranteed speed of 17 knots. Certain allowances will, however, permit the contractor to receive an additional $100,000 on each vessel if it shall be made.

A failure to reach 18 knots rejects the vessel. The Detroit and No. 9, which will be launched next week, are what are termed twin screw coal protected cruisers. Both have a watertight deck extending the entire length of the vessel. They have the extra protection of a coal deck laid under the ends, of which are spaces allotted for working the broadside guns and torpedo apparatus. The Detroit has what is termed a central gun deck.

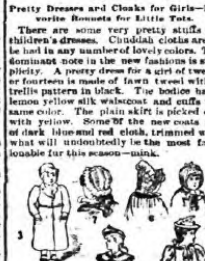
Especially interesting is the cofferdam protection along the entire machinery space, to be filled with cellulose. The Detroit will be the first to use navy to carry this water excluding belt, whose efficiency has been practically tried in several navies. Cellulose is manufactured from the fibers of cocoanut husks and has the property of absorbing eight times its weight of water. The French government proved by tests that when built with a lining of cellulose would be practically unsinkable. There will be 800 cubic feet of cellulose in the cofferdams in the Detroit.



CHILDRENS STYLES.

Pretty Dresses and Cloaks for Girls—Favorite Bonnets for Little Tots.

There are some very pretty stuffs for children's dresses. Cluddish cloths are to be had in any number of lovely colors. The dominant note in the new fashions is simplicity. A pretty dress for a girl of twelve or fourteen is made of fawn tweed with a trefle pattern in blue. The bodice has a lemon yellow silk waistcoat and cuffs the same color. The plain skirt is picked out with yellow. The cloak is made of dark blue and red cloth, trimmed with what will undoubtedly be the most fashionable fur this season—mink.



CHILDREN'S CLOAKS, FROCKS AND BONNETS.

We give a few new designs in children's cloaks and bonnets. The tall young lady in sketch 1 of the second row has on a pretty cloak made of Scotch plaid, with Tam O'Shanter hat to match trimmed with blue silk and a quill. The deep cape looks nice lined with silk to match the ground color of the plaid. The paletot in the second sketch is of fawn tweed, with a frilled collar lined with brown silk, and a brown ribbon girdle. The felt hat is fawn, trimmed with wings and ribbon the color of the plaid.

Lambs' wool cloth in white, gray or light blue is a good deal used for coats for quite little children. The small boy in sketch 3 in the top row has on a coat and hat made of that material. For a tiny girl the Puritan costume in sketch 4 of the second row is rather pretty. It may be made of Indian cashmere or soft cloth.

The Puritan, the Charity and the Smocked bonnet seem to be the favorite shapes for little tots two or three. These are sketches 5, 6 and 7 in the top row.

Millionaires at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—The National Guard concurrently decided to-night to hold a national encampment in this city from Aug. 5 to Aug. 20, 1892, during the World's fair. Resolutions were also adopted making the adjutants generals of the several states a committee on transportation and asking that the cost of the encampment be borne by the national government. Only regular army soldiers and regularly enlisted National Guards will be allowed to participate.

Outrander and Trumpbour Indicted.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The grand jury has presented ten indictments against Jacob Outrander, late cashier, and Jacob Trumpbour, the defaulting treasurer and assistant treasurer of the Ulster County Savings institution, for grand larceny and forgery, to all of which they pleaded not guilty. The grand jury failed to find one scintilla of evidence against others than Outrander and Trumpbour.

John Dillon Stoned.

DUBLIN, Oct. 29.—John Dillon was stoned while passing through the streets of Cork last evening, and one man struck him a heavy blow on the leg with a stick, injuring him severely. The troops in garrison at Cork are under arms and ready for any emergency. In addition to enforcements of constabulary have been drafted into the city in anticipation of some lively election disturbances.

SENATOR QUAY SPEAKS.

The $8,877 Certificate His Own Campaign Contribution.

BARDSLEY SIMPLY DISCOUNTED IT.

The Pennsylvania Senator Submitted to His Statement to Tax Collector David Martin, of Philadelphia—Mr. Quay Says That He Did Not Even Know Bardsley.

BEAVER, Pa., Oct. 29.—Senator Quay was seen at his home regarding the Bardsley certificate of deposit. He said that he had discovered that the date on the certificate, Nov. 29, was presumably correct. He also said: "I have very little recollection of this transaction. I know that I have a check for $1,000 for the campaign and a note for $9,000.

Not at All Worried.

"Mr. Bardsley had nothing to do with the matter unless he discounted the note for the people in Philadelphia, and I know nothing personally about Bardsley's connection with this matter." The senator was in a very good humor and did not seem to worry any about the matter. He is of the opinion that the date of the certificate given in the circular was a forgery. He said so because the transaction had occurred, he remembered, within ten days prior to the election of 1889, and the certificate was dated October.

His Statement of the Affair.

"In October, not November, 1889," he at first said, "I gave a note to gentlemen representing the Republican city committee of Philadelphia for $9,000, which is to raise that amount of money for the campaign of that year. Of what was done with it I know nothing personally, except that the note was afterward returned to me concealed paid, as I understand, by the Republican state committee. The Bardsley draft is for the amount of the note less the discount. I presume that Bardsley procured the discount of the note for the holders, taking a certificate of deposit in his own name, which was forwarded to me for indorsement, and that I deposited the certificate here and sent my check for the $9,000 to Philadelphia."

On being told of the transaction at the Beaver bank Mr. Quay found that the date was Nov. 29, instead of October, as he had thought.

Shapley's Plea for Treasurer Boyer.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 29.—Attorney Shapley argued all day to prove that the senate of Pennsylvania had no constitutional power to remove his client, Henry K. Boyer, from the office of state treasurer by the resolution passed during the governor as contemplated in the proclamation calling the senate into session.

Mr. Shapley quoted the bill of rights the constitution of 1790 and 1838, the parliamentary practice in congress, the constitutions of all the other states, reports of the trials in cases of like controversials in the states of Texas and New Jersey, and, finally, the debates of the constitutional convention of 1872, in defense of his position, which he maintained in his own forcible language: "I believe you have no more constitutional authority over them in this form of proceeding than you would have to try them in the senate for being them or kill them in any other way."

The attorney's sole argument was as to the question of jurisdiction, and if a majority of the senate were to accept his conclusions there would be no use of continuing in session longer than to record the senatorial decision by a call of the roll. The attorney general stated that he would make no argument of the question of jurisdiction for reasons which he had made known to the committee, and he would not, however, at the request of the senate, present a summary of facts as shown by the evidence, and for this purpose directed to be accordingly entered upon the record all the counsel for the defense had spoken

Ex-Collector Martin Explains Tax.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 29.—Senator Quay arrived in this city from Beaver last evening and repaired to his hotel. About the same time ex-Collector David Martin arrives from Philadelphia and is also in the senator at the hotel. Mr. Martin came to consult the senator regarding the attempt of the Democratic party to make political capital out of the certificate of deposit found among the Keystone bank papers. A reporter called at the hotel and talked with both Senator Quay and Mr. Martin on the subject of the certificate. Mr. Martin, when asked to explain the transaction, said: "Senator Quay gave me the note for $9,000 to Charles Porter and myself in Philadelphia to raise money on it wherever we could. We first tried two or three gentlemen without any success.

How Bardsley Got It.

"We then took the note to Bardsley and asked him if he could not get it discounted for us. Bardsley said he could, and took the amount, which was cashed at the Third National bank of Philadelphia, less the discounting of the note—$891. A certificate of deposit was made out to Senator Quay at Beaver, who sent on a check for $8,000. Senator Quay had no dealings whatever with Bardsley in the matter. Mr. Porter and myself transacted the entire business. The note was afterward paid and I took it to Senator Quay in Washington."

Senator Quay Not Surprised.

Senator Quay said: "I have never been acquainted with Bardsley, and would scarcely know him if I saw him. I was not even acquainted with him politically, nor ever had any political dealings with him. He was not a party man, for whenever he ran for treasurer it was a citizens' candidate."

Senator Quay had with him the check that he sent to Philadelphia in return for the certificate of deposit. The check has no special significance except as the senator said, it is confirmatory of the statement of the whole transaction.

Blackmailer Walsh Held.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—William W. Walsh, alias R. K. Williams, and George W. Smyth were arraigned on a charge of attempting to extort money from Lawyer Henry W. Box, of Buffalo. Walsh, who wrote letters to Box claiming to know compromising documents in Box's alleged daughter, was held in $10,000 bail. Smyth was detained as a witness.

Murderer Caldwell Pleads Guilty.

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 29.—William Caldwell (colored), who killed an unknown German tramp at Floria last spring, pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree. Sentence was deferred.

Max O'Rell Arrives.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Mr. Paul Blouet, better known to Americans as Max O'Rell, is at the Everett House with Mme. Blouet and his daughter, Mlle. Marie Blouet.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

News of Street Parades Made to Address Political Meetings.

ALBANY, Oct. 29.—Fully 2,000 people crowded Hamann's Bleecker hall last night to hear Messrs. Fassett and Vrooman speak. The enthusiasm was the greatest if any place yet visited. Mr. Fassett when introduced said, alluding to the Union college boys pull, "I accept the omen and believe that the cardinal principles of the state are represented as against Tammany Hall." The speaker alluded to the great display of enthusiasm and said that he believed that the spirit of it all was the cause of good government against bad. The party of good government, was certainly the Republican party. The people were looking after their own interests and Tammany Hall, which stood for bad government, would find it out. There was no issue for discussion except national issues. They were discussing them-selves in the sale of every sort every garment and every mechanical instrument.

Other children were found in the same apartment, crouched around a small fire, almost frozen and half starved. All the poor little ones were stunted in growth and were weak and sickly in health. The sanitary condition of the establishment was abominable to the last degree. The accused clergyman was committed for trial.

CATHOLICS ARE JUBILANT.

Parochial Schools in Manitoba Declared Lawful by the Supreme Court.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 29.—The Manitoba school act received a bad blow when the supreme court at Ottawa rendered judgment unanimously holding that the Roman Catholics of Manitoba can maintain their separate schools. The decision to the effect that the public school act passed by the Manitoba legislature prejudicially affected the rights and privileges of Roman Catholics in respect to their system of denominational schools, and it therefore violated the act admitting Manitoba into the Union.

Premier Greenway stated to a United Press correspondent that the case would be appealed to the imperial privy council in London. The Roman Catholics here are jubilant over the victory.

PROFESSOR SMYTH THE WINNER.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court Decision in the Andover Case.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—The decree of the board of visitors in the famous Andover case has been set aside by the supreme court of Massachusetts on the ground that the trustees are not made parties to the original proceedings. The merits of the case are not passed upon.

This is virtually a victory for Professor Smyth, who was charged with heterodoxy by the board of visitors, who have joint control of Andover Theological seminary with the trustrees. As the board of trustees is friendly to Professor Smyth, no further action will probably be taken.

Ogden Gone, but Not Forgotten.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Oct. 29.—Harris Ogden, a reputed wealthy resident of Millville, has disappeared, and his neighbors are mourning the loss of $20,000. It is said that a few months ago Millville went with him. His wife and family are much prostrated with grief. Ogden owned the "Model Dairy" farm.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is cheap and efficient. For all diseases of the blood, bilious disorders, constipation and kidney complaints it is a sure and a veritable renewer of youth.—Adv.

SAM AND EVA BELIEVED.

Elder Thornton's Castaway Tale Declared True

PASTOR JUNOR MAKES HIS REPORT.

He Thinks Editor Carter, Who Claims He Saw the Couple on a Train, Dissembles the Story Because He Got Left on the Castaway Item.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 29.—Sam Thornton and Eva Jewell's story of their sail on a log is true. At least that is the verdict which the Mount Olivet Presbyterian church, after weeks of serious consideration of the famed Thornton-Jewell case, has submitted to the expectant public. Wicked tongues that have wagged over the romance of a Coney Island bathhouse last August, when Sam and Eva were carried out of their depth and found a convenient log to float them out to an unregistered Spanish bark, which subsequently landed them upon the shores of Florida, must cease their wagging. The committee of the Mount Olivet Presbyterian church of Brooklyn reported that "the charges against this harassed couple, these unsullied members of the presbytery, were not proved."

Pastor Junor Believes Them.

Pastor Junor went to Florida, looked up the romance and believes the couple's statement. Editor Carter, who says he saw them on a railway train gazing through the bars of a whisky flask, is not believed.

What Sam and Eva Said.

He begins by reciting the circumstances of their temporary disappearance, which took place Aug. 27. He takes Elder Thornton's word for it that they went bathing to the surf, that a wave caught Miss Jewell and carried her into deep water.

She could not swim and Samuel had hard work in keeping her from drowning. Samuel says they lighted a log, around which Eva wrapped her arms, and both were carried out to sea and remained floating on the log for two hours, when they sighted a sailing ship bound for Yucatan. They were taken on board and the sailors gave them clothing in which they arrayed themselves and cast off their bathing suits; after a week they were landed on the shores of Florida twenty miles from Jacksonville.

Afterwards they were driven to that city by a sailor, and Sam telegraphed to Elder Thornton's brother. A man approached Mr. Thornton and asked if he did not know him. Mr. Thornton promptly replied that he did not.

"Why, I came from Pensacola with you on Sunday last," he said.

"Oh, no," said Mr. Thornton, "you are mistaken." The elder believes that the man's name was Carter and thinks he was a reporter, but did not wish to talk with him.

Corroborates the Story.

Following Elder Thornton's statement in Pastor Junor's report comes the advertisement by Hancock M. Pender, of the John Hancock Life Assurance company, who says that Thornton asked him to accompany Miss Jewell's father to Coney Island. Next comes Miss Jewell's statement, which corroborates Thornton's in every detail. That of Mr. and Mrs. Burns follows. It declares that Eva was a man and woman float out to sea the eventful day while they were in bathing at Coney Island and that they finally recognized Samuel and Eva at the pier.

How They Acted at the Hotel.

Pastor Junor states that from the description which the elder gave of the road he had traversed from the coast inland he followed closely and found that it agreed entirely with his own observations. He next attaches the statement of Mrs. P. H. Love, proprietress of the St. John's hotel in Jacksonville. She avers that Sam was dressed in sailor's clothes which were too small for him, and that Eva had on woolen garment which was far too large.

They told their story to Mrs. Love, who kept watch on them and found that they conducted themselves in accordance with the delicacy which she told her they occupied.

Pastor Junor explains the attitude of Editor Carter. The Metropolis, by the timeliness and clearness with "scooped" by a rival paper. The Times Union, on the arrival of the castaways, and tried to discredit the story.

So the Metropolis came out with the Pullman car conductor story the next day, the pastor describes his call upon Carter, who declined to see him. Then it was that Pastor Junor also claims to have received telegrams from a man who saw a boat put out from the unknown ship to the shore and from a person who saw a white man and woman drive over the road from the coast to Jacksonville.

THREE HUNDRED WERE KILLED.

A Japanese Town Destroyed and Others Wrecked by an Earthquake.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 29.—Mino, the capital of Hondo, Japan, has been almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake. Telegraph wires are down and particulars are hard to obtain, but it is known that a large number of lives have been lost.

At Okaka, a city of 80,000 inhabitants, 300 persons are known to have been killed, and thousands of buildings destroyed.

Many Kegs of Powder Explode.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 29.—The giant mill of the Ohio Powder works, four miles north of this city, exploded, killing two men, Joseph Maggi and Ben Somano, and completely demolishing the mill. The mill contained 500 kegs of powder, and the bodies of the men were scattered over a two acre field.

Cashier Hutchison Dead.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Oct. 29.—F. C. Hutchison, cashier of the Allegheny National bank of Pittsburg, who was thrown from his carriage near the Garden of the Gods last week, died of his injuries. His body will be taken east.

CABLE BREVITIES.

The English board of agriculture has given notice that it believes that the report that Russia intends to prohibit the export of wheat is well founded.

The Grenadier Guards, at Windsor, have given another exhibition of insubordination.

During the floods in northern Italy a factory was swept away and twelve people drowned, while at Rianzone a rock loosened by the storm, fell on a house, killing five.

It is reported that the pope will take decisive action before Sunday on the question of leaving Rome, and the alternatives question of a modern vivendi with Italy. At present, indications point to the latter course.

MILLIGAN AND CARSON ACQUITTED

The Reformed Presbytery Does Not Base a Libel Against Them.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—At the session of the Reformed presbytery Dr. Milligan acknowledged his connection with the east end convention in Pittsburg. That conference merely declared what it thought to be the principles of the church. The Rev. Mr. Milligan said that the paper was not a libel against them.

Dr. Carson then addressed the conference in a similar manner. At the conclusion of the statements Rev. J. H. Thompson, of Newburg, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That after hearing the explanations of Brothers Milligan and Carson, the presbytery feels satisfied that there was no violation of the laws of the church or their part and that no further action be taken in the case before the court.

A good deal of opposition developed to this resolution, and Dr. Thompson finally amended it so as to read: "The Presbytery feels satisfied that there are no grounds on which to base a libel against these brethren." In this form the resolution was passed by a vote of 11 to 6. Rev. Dr. Foster, who had strenuously opposed the acquittal of the accused, says he thinks that he would prefer formal charges to be made.

Is Schulze Jack the Ripper?

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—Schulze, the alleged Jack the Ripper, is much broken down by his imprisonment, and it is believed that he may confess. The London police have made a request for the production of Schulze, including the testimony of the butcher, to be forwarded in the original, or in copies, to London, on the ground that the crime of Schulze closely resembles the East End horrors.

Arrested for Libel.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 29.—A. Theon Ballentine, a druggist here, was arrested upon complaint of his partner, George C. Johnson. He claims that Ballentine, who had sold his drug store, was making arrangements to leave the state without accounting. Ballentine was placed under $2,000 bonds.

The Missing Wesleyan Student.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 29.—The Middletown Herald says that it is now thought that J. W. Narramore, the Wesleyan student, left town because of heavy debts he could not meet. Narramore was working his way through college and could have secured financial assistance had he sought it.

LACK OF INTEREST IN THE HOME.

Training of Children Is Often Neglected and Regretted Too Late.

There are many elements of good counsel given to wives and mothers upon the making of a home. But did it ever strike you how much depends upon the aid and encouragement received from other members of the household? The greatest difficulty the zealous mother experiences is to satisfy the individual tastes which the members of her family cultivate, with little regard to the means which exist for their gratification.

The development of material things has come far beyond the ability to acquire them, on the part of the majority, and the pursuit of the luxuries of life opens wide doors for children, hoping to win affection and gratitude, often find neither, but only a spirit of unrest and of mostly dissatisfaction, which is cherished as a virtue, as an evidence of finer taste, and dulls the sense of filial duty and unity of interests.

No home can exist permanently or pleasantly unless each one contributes his or her quota to its growth and happiness. A man who takes himself out of his home, who spends all his little moneys upon it and all he can upon himself, puts a double burden upon his wife, and makes a path upon which at least some of his children will walk, in their own detriment and that of the family. There are now large numbers of lonely women and men too who have brought no families, but have no honored or remembered place in any home, because their children have scattered or taken possession of the little means they have acquired, and left a little dissatisfaction upon those beside the hearthstone so necessary to the comfort of old age.

This may or may not be the fault of one or both of the parents themselves. The great effort of American parents, and seemingly a very praiseworthy one, is to give their children more than they ever themselves possessed. The result of this is a life long struggle, and too often this release from all obligation on the part of the children, who are brought up with ideas beyond their means, and realize the failures far more than the efforts of their parents. Evidently the modern spirit should have its limitations, and the sacrifices not be all on one side, if a just equilibrium is to be preserved.

A great element of interest in a home is doing something for it. Where every one exercises his or her ingenuity to add to its beauty or comforts, there is a sense of personal ownership and possession and enjoyment that is never otherwise experienced. We have lost something in acquiring modern conveniences and specialties in trade, and getting rid of the habit which formerly kept boys and girls formerly of being "handy" about the house. Hard earnings are employed in sending boys to college, when they come home, cannot drive a nail straight by which to hang up a picture, and should consider themselves robbed by being asked to help put up a stove. Many girls teach school or try to find some other way of earning money, who never cut a shirt or even an article of their own clothing, and could not make one correctly if life hung upon it.—Cor. Housekeeper.

Duty of a Mother.

Now, when the capability of women to compete with men in occupations formerly closed to them is being discussed on every side, it is becoming obvious to many that the education of girls for domestic life and homemaking is not being stimulated or encouraged to its proper development in the minds of many young girls. It is due, in part to the lamentable existence between mothers and daughters in some families. The foundation of this state of affairs probably dates back to childhood, for she who does not listen and sympathize with a little child's troubles is preparing for this future lack of confidence which has wrecked many homes.

No one would expect a young woman to make a success of any pursuit or profession unless she had received a thorough training for it. Then why do parents with cares for children, hoping to win affection and gratitude, often find neither, but only a spirit of unrest and of mostly dissatisfaction, which is cherished as a virtue, as an evidence of finer taste, and dulls the sense of filial duty and unity of interests.

No home can exist permanently or pleasantly unless each one contributes his or her quota to its growth and happiness. Where every one exercises his or her ingenuity to add to its beauty or comforts, there is a sense of personal ownership and possession and enjoyment that is never otherwise experienced. We have lost something in acquiring modern conveniences and specialties in trade, and getting rid of the habit which formerly kept boys and girls formerly of being "handy" about the house. Hard earnings are employed in sending boys to college, when they come home, cannot drive a nail straight by which to hang up a picture, and should consider themselves robbed by being asked to help put up a stove. Many girls teach school or try

Bedspreads and Portieres.

A pretty material for bedspreads and portieres is bargarven art cloth. It comes in white, cream and colors, and in four different styles of mesh. In colors it is fifty-two inches, and in cream and white it is seventy-two inches. It is handsome and durable. Where it is required for draperies no cloth can be better than this, as it adjusts itself in soft, graceful lines, and it would be almost impossible for the most awkward hand to give the folds a "stiff" appearance. For table mats it is "a treasure." Make the mats about 9¼ inches larger than the body of the mat is desired, and ravel out this extra width when the working of the mat is finished for fringe.

A pretty way to add color to the fringe is to darn from the edge of the cloth before the mat is raveled; darn in about three inches at the widest place and 9½ inches at the narrowest; regulate the width of darning so that the inside line shall be a series of points or squares; this is easily done, as the meshes regulate the stitches in the same way canvas does. When the edge is raveled the colored threads will be pretty with the white. If more color is desired, any pattern may be darned, or cross stitched the same as it can be on canvas.

This cloth is well suited for bedspreads. A pattern chosen should be a large open

Dinner at the Bank Door.

"As for ordinary family sickness, I believe," says a physician, "that most of them come from slops. Yes, it is the nasty habit of opening the back door a pailful and a dipperful, now and then, of greasy water, and a handful of parings and the general waste of the kitchen that breeds fevers and billious attacks. They poison the air and mix part in the soil, but that is the key to the mischief. The soil gets full after a time and ferments, and the hot sun breeds poisonous gases which surround the dwelling. This is true not only of the cheaper, poorer houses and careless families, but well to do, intelligent people have spoils behind their homes saturated with slops. Slop holes and filthy drains are so common in cities that the wonder is there is not a general pestilence.

"No amount of supervision can prevent a great deal of filthy evil. But in the country it should never be allowed. All that is not carried off by the regular drain should be carried out to trees and poured in small quantities here and there as a fertilizer. Trees will take up a large amount of water and be grateful for it. If there is a stand of water, which is, of course, to be frequently emptied and the contents carried away to be sowed on the land, the slops may be thrown in there. But there must be simply constant intelligence in the disposal of waste. Nowhere are drains more needed about a house than about the back door."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Announcing Engagements.

When a couple are engaged there is no doubt any sensible reason why all the world should not know it, and therefore the fashion of announcing engagements just before a prominent ball, and having the ladies and gentlemen congratulated by their friends is to be commended. To be sure, the "I'll be too much of a good thing" spoken, the thought of these public congratulations would be embarrassing; but if the fashion tends to prevent precipitate or unsuitable betrothals, it will serve good purposes. The girl who might say yes when asked to marry, with the mental reservation that if anything better comes along she will contrive not to keep her word, will think twice about it if she has to go through with such a form.

Engagements are now frequently too lightly entered into, and too lightly set aside. The engagement should be nearly as sacred a contract as the marriage itself, and it should be such an engagement that both parties would be proud to have it known among all their common acquaintances. In general, when the engagement is, as all engagements should be, serious, there is everything to gain and nothing to lose by having the facts known.—Demorest's.

Where the Gentlewoman Never Fails.

A gentlewoman never fails in the small avenues of courtesies. Instinctively she respects the feelings of others, and having the golden rule by heart, it is from her heart that all lovely, love compelling graces flow. "In her mouth is the law of kindness," and she has the ready tact which takes advantage of every opportunity to render the lives of others happier.

And every morning, with "Good day," Makes each day good.

Her winning smile and gentle ministrations, her soft voice and unfailing sympathy, insure her always a ready welcome position and something of the perfect love of order without its caricatures.—Harper's Bazar.

Diamonds and Their Owners.

"No amount of money can make, or buy, or borrow the diamond that will look right on a person who is not to the manner born. Money can buy the diamonds, but it cannot buy the taste to wear them. Money can buy the clothes, but it cannot buy the style. Money can buy the carriage, but it cannot buy the form that fills it. Money can buy the horses, but it cannot buy the hands that drive them. Money can buy the footman, but it cannot buy the air with which he opens the door. Money can buy the title, but it cannot buy the dignity that should belong to it. Money can buy the manor, but it cannot buy the associations that should cluster around it. Money can buy pictures, but it cannot buy the eye that understands them. Money can buy books, but it cannot buy the brains that digest them. Money can buy medicine, but it cannot buy health. Money can buy luxuries, but it cannot buy happiness. Money can buy a watch, but it cannot buy time. Money can buy a clock, but it cannot buy eternity. Money can buy a bed, but it cannot buy sleep. Money can buy food, but it cannot buy appetite. Money can buy amusements, but it cannot buy pleasure. Money can buy a companion, but it cannot buy friendship. Money can buy a dog, but it cannot buy fidelity. Money can buy a servant, but it cannot buy loyalty. Money can buy a house, but it cannot buy a home. Money can buy a church, but it cannot buy religion. Money can buy a heaven, but it cannot buy a way to get there."—Exchange.

Miss Braddon at Home.

Miss Braddon leads a quiet and almost a secluded life at Richmond Hill. Most of her leisure is spent in the saddle, and she is still in harness, figuratively speaking, as an author. Of late years she has not often sought the literary circles of which she was formerly an ornament. She very rarely appears in public and never at any gathering where there is a crowd. Her constant companions, when his engagements will allow of it, is her son, Mr. Gerald Maxwell, the actor. Miss Braddon's general health is excellent.—London Star.

To Preserve Meat.

Meat of any kind may be preserved in a temperature of 80 to 100 degs. for a period of ten days after it has been soaked in a solution of one pint of salt dissolved in four gallons of cold water and one-half gallon of a solution of bisulphate of calcium. By repeating this process the preservation may be extended by the addition of a solution of gelatine or the white of an egg to the salt and water.—Yankee Blade.

Convent Hair.

"Convent hair" is an article well known to the trade and highly prized. When a young woman takes the veil in the Roman Catholic church her hair is cut off, and the tresses are sold for the benefit of the convent. As the hair is cut pretty close to the head the tresses are usually long, and thus "convent hair" has a special value.—Chicago Herald.

Most people in cleaning lamp chimneys use a bristle brush with wire handle or a cloth wrapped over a stick, both of which are liable to scratch the glass, making it break more readily when expanded by the heat. A sponge on a stick of the lamp chimney tied to the end of a slender pine stick is better than either.

In membranous croup, the difficulty of breathing is continuous; in ordinary croup, it is spasmodic. Give an emetic and warm bath, wrap the patient in blankets, and open the window.

Don't make your thick sauces greasy nor your clear ones tasteless. Those who want grease can fat pork, while a drink of water is better than something which tastes of nothing at all.

galia maker and manufacturer of Masonic goods, conducts a business in New York that yields a profit as well as support for herself and family.

Perfect mutton will be firm and juicy, a rather dark red in color, and with a good deal of hard, clear white fat, much more in proportion to the lean than in beef.

Rub cold tallow from a candle on an ink spot; allow it to remain twenty-four hours and wash as usual. Properly done, this method is sure.

Coal put in brown paper bags can be

Girls, Save Your Nervous Forces.

Why do women expend so much force on useless things? You will observe—if you are observing—that some delicate, nervous woman will have an umbrella in her hand, upon which she will expend enough nervous force to move a house. She will have a bag or bundle, to which she clings with a deadly grip, and perhaps a mantle or a part of her dress is held tightly in her cramped hands. She does not know that she presents the appearance of one who wrestles with an invisible fate. The rigid back and rigor with which a woman clutches her pocketbook is so much waste power, and the lines of her face answer to the tense cords of her muscular system. Many a woman who broke a saucer and carried the pieces in her face all day.

Girls, don't expend all your strength on these unequal forces. Adapt your muscles to the size of the weight you are about to lift. Life would be a grand thing if our faces were properly adjusted and the true balance of power established, and moral equipoise reached.—Detroit Free Press

The Egg Timer.

An excellent little regulator acting after the fashion of metronome has been invented for the benefit of the woman who "never can boil eggs just right." It is a most useful and necessary constrivance, and can be set to boil eggs from two to five minutes or any intermediate time. It is made on exactly the same principle as the spasmometer, though it is smaller, the different notches on the pendulum indicating the minutes. The apparatus being wound up when the eggs are put into the saucepan of boiling water, the pendulum is set in motion, and a bell rings when the egg has been boiled to the desired degree, stating "lightly soft," "lightly hard" or "quite hard." It is called the "egg timer, with bell."—Chicago Tribune.

The Way to Serve Fried Oysters.

Only the best and largest oysters should be chosen for frying. Dip them, one by one, in flour, then in beaten egg, season with salt and then bread-crumbs, or cayenne, dip again in powdered butter cracker and fry them in boiling hot fat, deep enough to float a doughnut. Turn them in frying and cook them in all for four minutes. Drain them thoroughly, lay them for a moment on coarse brown paper to absorb any fat that may cling to them, and serve them at once in a folded napkin on a hot dish accompanied by quarters of lemon and waferlike slices of brown bread daintily buttered.—Exchange.

One Kind of a Saving Woman.

But from all trencher scraping and table saving, preserve us from the housewife who audibly counts noses and measures capacities before her guests; who wonders if there will be enough to go around, and if there will be any left to warm over for to-morrow's breakfast; who talks of the cost of this and the price of that until everything has a metallic taste, a flavor of money; who gives directions to set the rest of the chicken in the pantry, and to tell the servants to eat the cold corned beef. Yes, the old bachelor was right; a saving woman carriages at the table.—Exchange.

—James Powers and Catharine Baird were prisoners in the police court this morning charged with disorderly conduct. Their trial was set down for this afternoon. They were put on trial during this afternoon, adjudged guilty and City Judge Codington sentenced them to the county jail for sixty days.

An Old Woman Missing.

Mrs. Jane Smith, a woman about fifty years of age, who has been a servant in Mr. Carl Knerth's home on West Second street for some time past, has been missing since Tuesday last, and her employer feels considerable anxiety for her safety. She left the house that evening, saying she would not return until the next morning, and nothing has been heard of her since her departure.

GREETING MR. DILTS.

THE SOMERSET COUNTY CANDIDATE FOR ASSEMBLY.

He Addresses the U. S. Grant Republican Club Last Evening, and Is Most Cordially Welcomed.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club and others met in Spencer's Hall last evening.

Mr. H. K. Carroll was chosen chairman and Mr. H. Newton Spencer, secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and Mr. Carroll, in introducing the candidate took the occasion to make a few remarks on the political outlook in the felicitous manner for which he has such a happy faculty.

Mr. George Dilts, the nominee, when the applause for him subsided, made remarkes of a nature which pleased his audience.

He assured his hearers that he had not sought the nomination, and were he to consult his own feelings he would prefer to be defeated, but, in view of the shameless Democratic legislation last year, he felt he was only doing his duty as a citizen to strive to secure a better state of affairs. He felt greatly encouraged by the outlook at the other end of the county, but knew that everything depended upon North Plainfield. That was the key to the situation, and he hoped every good citizen of the township, whether Republican or not, would give him his vote next Tuesday, assuring them all that if they did it it would make his election sure and that they would never have occasion to regret it.

Messrs. Hubert Morrison, Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, brother of the nominee, this being the first political meeting he had ever been at, Councilman Backle and Hegeman, and Messrs. Goodwin, Martin and others were called upon and their remarks that were well received by the large and enthusiastic assemblage, and when the meeting adjourned it was spoken of as a "roaring success."

BITTEN BY A VICIOUS DOG.

A Young Son of Patrick Motley's Attacked by the Canine.

At about six o'clock last evening as a twelve-year-old son of Mr. Patrick Motley of West Second street, was driving cows along Liberty street, near Sixth, a vicious dog belonging to Mr. Patrick Moran, who resides at the corner of Liberty and Sixth street, jumped over the fence and attacked the boy. The little fellow's clothing was badly torn and he was bitten in several places. His father took him to a physician and his wounds were dressed.

Mr. Moran was notified to have the dog shot and shortly after seven o'clock last evening Thomas Martin caught the vanished cur in an out-of-the-way place and shot it. The boy's injuries are not considered dangerous.

A Musical Treat.

Music lovers will be pleased to know that Mr. John Cheshire, harpest to H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburgh also to the German opera and Philharmonic orchestra, will give a Harp Recital in the Casino on Thursday evening. Novelties in operas and Nocturnes in Plainfield under the auspices of Mrs. W. L. Pattion, his former pupil, who is giving two recitals at her residence in the Industrial Training Department of the Plainfield Boys' Club.

The following comments both in Europe and America show him to be an artist of the highest order. He is a host in himself and proves the most excellent living harpest. Mr. Cheshire will be assisted by Miss Cheshire, a brilliant pianiste, and their duets, with harp and piano, are delightful to listen to.

The Mendelssohn quartette of New York will also assist and with such an array of first class talent, the event can be only success. Each member of the Mendelssohn quartette is a soloist, and already a great favorite in Plainfield.

Captain Ostrom's Talk.

A very enjoyable talk given by Capt. William B. Ostrum, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., at the Association rooms last night. The Captain related in his usual happy manner some of his early adventures on the sea. In the course of his remarks gave his hearers some sound advice; the talk being well attended. On Monday evening Mr. Franklin T. Smith, teacher of science in the public school, will give an illustrated talk upon "The Chemistry of Flam."

A Rig Stolen.

Last evening Mr. Oscar Woolley of Westfield, in company with several friends drove to Roselle to call on some acquaintances. He left his horse to a post and proceeded to the house of their friend. When they were ready to return to their homes they found their rig but it was missing. After a long search they came to the conclusion that it had been stolen and reported the matter to the authorities. The rig belonged to a Westfield liveryman.

Divine Pleaded Guilty.

Harry Devine, the colored man who was arrested in this city Monday morning by Acting Captain of Police Lynch on the charge of horseclarizing a house at Elizabeth, was on motion of Prosecutor Stanard, put back to the conclusion of court yesterday afternoon to plead to the charge. Devine pleaded guilty. He was remanded for sentence.

His Remains Taken Home.

Two brothers of the late John Fitzgerald, whose death resulted from a fall from the motor House Episcopal church yesterday, arrived in this city this evening. They visited the undertaking rooms of Messrs. A. M. Runyon & Son and identified the remains. This morning the body was sent to Germantown, Pa., for burial.

Convicted of Criminal Assault.

Joseph Hoffman, who was indicted by the Union county Grand Jury for criminal assault on an eleven year old girl named Cora Dilts, was yesterday convicted of the crime. Mr. Clarkson Watts of this city was the foreman of the jury that convicted Hoffman.

The Court Adjourned.

The Union county court adjourned at four o'clock yesterday afternoon until Saturday morning at ten o'clock, when the prisoners convicted at the present session will be sentenced. The petit jurors were discharged until Monday morning.

HON. GEORGE KYTE.

the Third Assembly District Republican candidate for the Assembly, in which he has already served one term to the general satisfaction of his constituents, is a native of Demarara, South America, his father having been a planter and merchant of that place. Mr. Kyte came here in 1846, and brought to this country when he was two years old. The family settled in Brooklyn. Our candidate attended the Boarding School of Rev. Dr. Harris, at White Plains, N. Y., where he had for his companion Robert, the son of Admiral Boggs, Lemuel S., son of Gideon Welle, afterwards Secretary of the Navy under President Lincoln, Michael, son of Hamilton Fish, at one time Governor of New York, later Secretary of the State under President Lincoln; John C. Calhoun, grandson of the distinguished Southern Statesman, of the same name, William, the son, and Mayhew, the grandson, of Bishop Fainwright, the grandson having been killed later on the U. S. Revenue Cutter Barrlett Lane, during an engagement with the confederates, in which he distinguished himself.

Mr. Kyte afterwards attended the Polytechnic school at Brooklyn, where he had John, son of Admiral Worden for a classmate. Mr. Kyte left the Polytechnic to become a soldier, enlisting at seventeen years old, in the 56th, N. Y. Vols. for three months. The regiment was hurried to Gettysburg, but did not arrive until after the great battle. It was then hurried back to Baltimore. His help quell the riots. The term expiring the regiment was discharged, when Mr. Kyte re-enlisted for two years for the Seventh Battery, remaining in active service until the close of the war.

He became a citizen of New Jersey in 1869, locating at Fanwood, where he at once became identified with the work of improving the locality. His reputation spread, and he was elected year after year to one office after another, which he never been defeated for any office he has run for before the people, and his record is that of a clean and effective painstaking official, and wise counsellor. He has never been found wanting, and hence his continued success.

He is particularly interested in the matter of public road improvements and was among the first to take advantage of good roads.

He has been a member of the Board of Freeholders for the past five years.

He is connected with the Masonic Order, being Knight Templar of the Royal Arcanum, and is exceedingly very popular.

He was the only Republican candidate elected on the ticket two years ago by a majority being 193. That was an extraordinary bad year, due largely to Republican indifference, which is the only thing that will endanger his re-election by the usual Republican majority. All Republicans must turn out, however, and not be fooled by the off-year canard of some friend of the enemy. There is no off-year. It is every Republican's duty to vote.

THE ANIMAL KILLED.

It Was Suffering Intense Pain and a S. P. C. A. Officer Disposed of It.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday, the horse belonging to Mr. Edward S. Collins, which ran away on Tuesday was so seriously injured that it could not live. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Wm. A. Coddington, a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, went to Dunellen, and after seeing the terrible sufferings of the poor dumb animal he ordered that it be killed immediately. His orders were obeyed.

The facts of the accident were reported yesterday. Before daylight yesterday morning Mr. Scheock started for the city with a load of vegetables and milk. When near the round house at Dunellen his horse became frightened at a post and proceeded to the house of their friend. When they were ready to return to their home they found their rig but it was missing. After a long search they came to the conclusion that it had been stolen and reported the matter to the authorities. The rig belonged to a Westfield liveryman.

Notes From Pond's.

By an almost unanimous vote it was decided at a meeting held Aid Society of the Pond Machine Tool Works a shop society has been formed, the purpose to be dedicated from the employees' pay in the office of the works. In that way all hopes will be avoided.

William Mayhew, a melter employed in the foundry of the Pond Machine Tool Works, is confined to his home suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

Mr. Mark McComus, an employe of the Works, received a telegram from Harrisburg, Pa., yesterday stating that his mother-in-law was dying. Mr. and Mrs. McComus left for Harrisburg last evening.

Sermon to Young Men.

At the Seventh-day Baptist church, to-morrow at 4 o'clock evening, Dr. Lewis, will preach the annual sermon to young men. All strangers will be welcomed.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an honest preparation, which no family should be without. It is a positive cure for Malaria, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and all diseases peculiar to females.—Adv.

SIDNEY E. FLOWER.

The above is a cut of Mr. Sidney E. Flower, the Democratic candidate of the Third Assembly District of Union County. He and his opponent to the best of their recollection never met each other until yesterday, when they had a pleasant chat. Both are old soldiers, comrades and members of the same Grand Army Post. They will to-day see the first true likenesses published of them, if the common ink and common paper necessary to use in daily newspapers will permit. Neither of the engravings we have made appear as well as they appear in the proofs.

Weile we are aware of the intentions of Mr. Flower to support Mr. Kyte from the Legislature, after such a good record as he has made, and however good will Mr. Flower's intentions we cannot afford this year to take any chances. He would necessarily be under the influence of the gang that disgraced the State last Winter. The people know the record as published a few days ago in THE NEWS, and we don't think they will care to countenance a party with such a record and probably make matters even worse by voting for Mr. Flower or any other Democrat. Mr. Flower is a wide awake business man at home. He is a decent Democrat, as Democrats go. He was born in Boston, in 1851, spent some of his early school at school in the Hampshire Hills in Massachusetts, until eleven years old, went from with his father to Michigan, and enlisted at eighteen in the First Michigan Cavalry, serving through the war, was captured once by Mosby's guerrillas, succeeding later in escaping. After the war he served with his regiment in a campaign against the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, and altogether has been in 42 general battles and some 300 skirmishes.

He has never held any political office, is a member of numerous secret societies, and is married. He is an artist by profession, and although he has resided in Plainfield for only 2 years, has become back and forth here for many years professionally.

No one has ever heard either he or Mr. Kyte say an ill word of each other. Mr. Flower has never been in the field of politics, and if he was always in as good company as we place him to-day we might not blame him for trying to secure the office by any possible chance to get elected. We can respect him, however, even though we do not believe in his politics.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Mr. John M. Crane of West Eighth street expects to sail for Europe early next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bullman have returned to their home on First place from their wedding tour.

The Misses Graves of Brooklyn are the guests of Mrs. Thos. B. Poulton at Rockview avenue, to whom they are related.

Mr. Daniel Niles has entirely recovered from his recent serious illness and has again resumed his position as clerk at Laing's Hotel.

Miss O'Rell is to be the guest of Mrs. W. L. Patton of Ninth street, during his visit to lecture in this city, as elsewhere advertised.

Captain of Police George W. Grant has almost entirely recovered from his recent serious illness and expects to be able to walk out next week.

Mrs. W. H. H. Cahlf, formerly of this city but now of Monticalo, is visiting Mrs. Asa Collier of East Fifth street. Mrs. Cahlf was a niece of the late ex-Mayor John H. Evens.

Miss Crane, daughter of Mr. John M. Crane of West Eight street, entertained a number of her young friends at a whist party at her home last evening. The evening was passed very pleasantly by the young people.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Knerth of West Second street, celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday evening, by entertaining a number of the members of the Knerth's mother in Brooklyn, N. Y., and a most pleasant evening was spent.

Mr. Lewis Kline, of Craig place, North Plainfield, went to Bound Brook yesterday on a fishing expedition. During the day he succeeded in catching a nine-pound carp. The fish is the largest that has been taken from the Raritan River at that point this season.

Anson W. Anderson, Jr., the son of Dr. A. W. Anderson, formerly of this city, died at the home of his parents, on Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, Tuesday, of cerebral meningitis. The remains were interred in this city yesterday afternoon. Mr. Anderson have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

Tuesday, Oct. 27th, Mr. George W. Moore of East Fourth street was forty-nine years old. He will always remember that birthday anniversary particularly, for on it he received a telegram announcing the death of his sister, Mrs. Harriet Campbell of Hackensack, Conn. He started away at three o'clock yesterday morning, arrived there safely, and got home again at half-past nine o'clock last night. Mrs. Campbell's death was caused by heart trouble, and leaves a son and daughter, both married.

Dowd Acquitted.

Thomas Dowd of this city who was on trial in the Union county court Wednesday charged with assault and battery on a woman at Cranford, was acquitted by the jury.

MR. CHASE INJURED.

A RIB FRACTURED, ANOTHER INDENTED, AND ONE LEG WRENCHED.

Struck by the Pole of His Carriage, Through a Horses Plunge While Being Harnessed.—The Scene Says He Will Recover.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. R. F. M. Chase of "Edgewood Villa," Somerset street, was getting ready for an afternoon drive. His coachman was harnessing the spirited horse of Mr. Chase's splendid team and a colt but recently broken to harness. Mr. Chase stood in front of the horses to see that the task was being done right. Something startled the colt and it made a plunge forward. Just caught for the pole to strike Mr. Chase in the ribs. The blow was severe enough to fracture one rib and indent another so as to make it very painful, and also to wrench his leg so that the muscles were severely strained.

Notwithstanding the severity of his injuries Mr. Chase was helped into a dog-cart, to which one of his horses was promptly harnessed, and was driven to the office of Dr. Probasco, who, after an examination, informed him of the extent of his injuries and directed that he return home and get to bed immediately. Mr. Chase will be confined to the house for the next two weeks at least, the doctor saying that it will take eight days before the fractured rib will begin to knit under the most favorable circumstances.

Mr. Chase had a further examination yesterday, and it was found that he was doing as well as could be expected, although he suffers much pain. He has the best wishes of his host of friends for his speedy recovery.

THE NEW JERSEY LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

The Plainfield Library Represented by Its Esteemed Secretary.

Promptly at 2.30 in the assembly room of the Union Library at Trenton on the afternoon of the 28th the meeting of the New Jersey Library Association was called to order. Though but a year old this society numbers some sixty members, composed of librarians mostly, but with a goodly showing of library trustees and others interested in library works. The president of the association, Librarian Mr. Hill of Newark was absent, and during the absence of the head of the association which met this year at San Francisco. The meeting was, therefore, presided over by Mr. Cole of Jersey City.

After the reading of the minutes of the preceding meeting the following short, informal notes by different members on various practical features of library work, were read. Librarian Cole of Jersey City spoke of his system of delivery stations, putting the library within reach of all, and of the enormous increase of his circulation thereby. Reports were also made by the secretaries of the smaller libraries, among others those of Passaic, South Orange, Plainfield and Salem reporting that while each had a board so large a work as that being done at Jersey City, yet each was doing as much as could be done with the means at their disposal. Many, however, complained that while the increase of work in the matter of circulation, yet the income from subscription was not increased in proportion. Many, however, as it is in many things is strangely behind in the matter of library work, and that in this way soon arouse from its indifference in this respect, as it did on the subject of road, and very soon the public treasury sufficiently large sums so that the public libraries may be put on a footing to receive proper charitable assistance any more than the public schools. It was suggested that it be recommended to the law of the State of New Jersey, regarding the establishment and management of free, public libraries, that be printed in all the newspapers, as the surest way of getting at the public, in order to more generally establish libraries in places where there are none, and that those already established might become generally supported.

After the election of officers for the coming year, a vote of thanks to the hospitality extended was given by the Rev. Mr. Thompson, which was eagerly listened to, as it was the first time that a brief history of education in this State, speaking of its colleges, free schools, and libraries, and of early settlements, etc. He showed how well this movement had succeeded where it had been tried, and how it had cooperated with the public library since the aim of both is the same.

Upon motion a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Thompson for his interesting and instructive lecture. No further business coming up, the convention then adjourned.

Explaining Mr. Feytel's Speech.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—There appears to be some misunderstanding regarding the remarks made by Mr. Feytel at the entertainment of Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor, given in addition to the 2,000 insurance of a deceased member, one hundred dollars to the family, which is paid immediately upon notification of the member of the lodge and in case of the death of a member's wife a like amount is paid to the family defraying the funeral expenses. And there is but one other lodge in the State of New Jersey that offers the same advantage as mentioned. A MEMBER OF WETUMPKA.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The United States surveying party in Alaska finds that the richest of the gold fields of the Yukon do not belong to us, but are on the British side of the line.

Professor Le Conte says that no bird over fifty pounds can raise itself in the air and fly, and that therefore the hopes of those who plan flying machines are vain. Nevertheless, Dr. Lardner, the most learned physicist of his day, devoted many pages of a scientific essay to proving that steam could not propel a ship across the ocean.

It is a ghastly unreality that has devised a gallows whereby the condemned criminal hangs himself. The machine was first made use of in a hanging at Canyon City, Colo. The fatal platform is so adjusted that when the victim steps upon it a heavy iron ball is released which falls, jerking the condemned person into the air with force, breaking his neck. Thus no officer is obliged to spring the fatal drop.

Citizen George to the Pope.

Last spring Pope Leo XIII issued an encyclical to the patriarchs, primates, archbishops and bishops of the Roman Catholic communion throughout the world. Its subject was the labor question, and in it his holiness condemns most strongly the land doctrines of Henry George and his school. In return Henry George has recently issued on his own account a document to Pope Leo. He calls his encyclical "The Condition of Labor; an Open Letter to Pope Leo XIII." In benevolent and gloves expressions Mr. George shows himself a father.

He begins by stating the position of the single tax and antiland ownership party, which is in brief this: Earth, like air and water, belongs to the human family in common. Public revenues are expended for the good of all, therefore they should be raised by taxes on the common property of all—namely, land. His own labor and the products of his own labor, houses, clothing, machinery, etc., belong to the individual, are his private possessions, and therefore should not properly be taxed. Wherever people come together in great communities there land becomes more valuable. It is not labor that primarily makes this land valuable, but the presence of many people, all wanting to occupy the same locality. Therefore such land should be taxed in proportion to its value in such places.

Then Mr. George "goes for the pope." He says his holiness continually confuses private ownership in land with private possession of land. The single tax advocates believe in private possession of lands, but not in private ownership of lands. The benefits his holiness mentions as accruing from private ownership grow out, in fact, from the individual possession of land which in the ideal state can be transferred from one lessee to another, and otherwise passed from one person's occupancy to another's, without enabling the individual possessor, as the owner now does, to lay up an immense fortune at the expense of the general community, to whom all the "unearned increment" of the land rightfully belongs, not to the individual. By allowing individuals to not only occupy but also to own land, the poor grow poorer and the rich grow richer. The country becomes barren and untilled, the cities are crowded with poor who are unable to find work, cheated out of their rightful inheritance by the great landlords.

Mr. George complains that his holiness classes single tax advocates with the socialists. He finds no faith in any kind of socialism, state or otherwise, to better the condition of the poor, so long as they are cheated out of their rightful share of the common property in the soil. He does not even believe the state can do as much as his holiness thinks it can in the regulation of hours of labor, wages, etc. Leo XIII quoted Scripture to justify private ownership in land. Henry George quotes it back again to show that such ownership was expressly forbidden, and in the Mosaic code, which provided for the reversion of land every fiftieth year, also in the following passage from that code:

The land also shall not be sold forever, because it is mine, and you are strangers and sojourners with me.

As Americans we may point with pride to the fact that our own Henry George can quote Scripture with the best of them. His likewise quotes Professor Thorold Rogers to the effect that under the feudal system in the Thirteenth century, "there was no class so poor, so helpless, so oppressed and degraded as are millions of the Englishmen in our boasted Nineteenth century." As to Pope Leo's encyclical on the labor question, it merely "gives the Gospel to the laborers and the earth to the landlords."

Mr. George believes the kingdom of heaven will reign on earth when mankind adopt simply the political economy taught in the golden rule:

We see that the law of justice, the law of the golden rule, is not a mere counsel of perfection, but indeed the law of social life. We see that if we were only to observe it there would be work for all, leisure for all, abundance for all; that such retribution would tend to give to the poorest not only necessaries, but all comforts and reasonable luxuries as well. We see that Christ was not a visionary dreamer when he told men that if they would seek the kingdom of God and its right doing they might no more worry about material things than do the lilies of the field about their raiment; but that he was only declaring what political economy in the light of modern discovery shows to be a sober truth.

CRACKED HEADS IN CORK

Mr. William Redmond Badly Clubbed by the Police.

O'BRIEN BRUISED BY A MISSILE.

This Hostile Meeting Is the Worst That Has Occurred Between the Factions. The Parnellites Attack a Meeting at Which William O'Brien Was Speaking.

CORK, Oct. 30.—The rioting was renewed last night in more desperate form than before. William O'Brien had been invited to address a McCarthyite meeting in the suburbs of Cork. The McCarthyites were armed with stout sticks, and many of them had their pockets well filled with missiles, prepared to resist any attack of the enemy. A solid bodyguard closed around Mr. O'Brien to protect him in case of an onslaught. Meantime the Parnellites were not sleeping. They gathered in the heart of the city in an enormous crowd, with banners, torches and bands, the bands playing "Croppies Lie Down," "Mc'Kiernan's Dream" and other stirring airs of '98, mingled with "God Save Ireland" and "The Conquering Hero Comes," the last being an allusion to Mr. William Redmond, who sat in an open car waving a handkerchief and shouting words of encouragement to his followers.

Attacked by the Parnellites.

The Parnellites marched on until they reached the anti-Parnell meeting. A cry of defiance went up from the McCarthyites and at this challenge the Parnellites broke whatever semblance of rank they had and dashed wildly upon the enemy, brandishing blackthorns and howling at the top of their voices. Sticks descended on skulls, combatants grasped each other and rolled in the dirt, and blows and kicks were exchanged with an energy that meant victory or horrible combat.

O'Brien Struck by a Missile.

Stones flew hither and thither, and O'Brien, where he stood attempting to be heard and to say something to quiet the furious encounter, received a severe blow in the rear from a missile that was thrown. The struggle was hand to hand, and men could be seen now and then staggering out of the melee covered with blood. Among the combatants could be seen the big form of Jack O'Connor, his blackthorn waving like the plume of Navarre, but cracking a McCarthyite cranium every time it descended.

Charged by the Police.

The police had not anticipated any serious riot at this point, owing to its remoteness from Parnellite centers. It was some time, therefore, before they could effectually interfere. But at length, having been hastily reinforced, they charged upon the combatants, striking right and left with their batons. The McCarthyites fell back; but not so the Parnellites.

William Redmond Knocked Out.

These obstinately held their ground. Jack O'Connor boldly facing the police and refusing to give way. William Redmond was also still undaunted, and the police, treating them as the leaders of the onslaught, at length set upon them in earnest and gave them a terrible drubbing, that disabled them. With the leaders knocked out, the mob practically fell back, and the battle was over for a time. It is said that the number of bruised and broken heads was even greater than in Wednesday's fight, and probably a good number will not be able to do any more rioting until after election. Late last night O'Connor was having his wounds hastily dressed, and declared his intention to be in the field again today. The Parnellites look upon him as their champion and would be depressed by his absence.

DEAD IN THE MISSISSIPPI.

The Steamer Oliver Beirne Lost with Possibly Twenty-five People.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 30.—The steamer Oliver Beirne, of New Orleans, Captain Thorwegen, burned to the water's edge at 8 a. m. at Milliken's bend, above Vicksburg. Twelve persons certainly and possibly twenty five perished, some by drowning and some by fire. The boat had left the landing at the bend and had not proceeded far down stream when the cry of fire was raised. Instantly a panic prevailed among the hundred or more passengers, cabin and deck, some of whom jumped into the river and swam ashore.

The pilot stood to his post like a hero and headed the boat for the Louisiana shore, getting near enough to permit many to escape. The boat had over 700 bales of cotton aboard, which floated out in the stream and were the means of saving several lives.

So far as known the victims were Sam V. Eutrical, the clerk, of New Orleans; two children of Dr. Worrell, of Baton Rouge; Mrs. Powers, a nurse; a daughter of Mrs. Adams, of Omaha; five cabin boys and two colored chambermaids. Several roustabouts are missing.

The Oliver Beirne was one of the finest and largest boats upon the river and was used chiefly as an excursion boat.

Of Incendiary Origin.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Oct. 30.—There is ground for belief that the fire that destroyed the Oliver Beirne was of incendiary origin. At Milliken's bend there were about seventy-five bales of cotton to take on. The waste had some trouble with the colored roustabouts and many of them quit work and made open threats against the mate and the boat. At 5:30 the cotton in the deck room was discovered on fire, and the boat was a mass of flames in a short time. Captain Thorwegan was the last to leave the boat, having to slide down a guy rod from the upper deck. Pilot Massey left the wheel by the same route and jumping into the river. He was severely burned. The mate descended by a rope, holding a little child by its clothing.

Has Recognized Governor Bulkeley.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 30.—Judge Child, of this place, who is commissioner of deeds for the state of New York, was notified recently that his commission would expire on Oct. 30, and that he must have a recommendation from the governor for its renewal. The judge forwarded a recommendation from Governor Bulkeley and has just received the commission. This is the first time Governor Hill has recognized Governor Bulkeley.

Milan and Natalie May Be Reconciled.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Ex-King Milan, of Servia, and his divorced wife, Queen Natalie, are both in the city, and as King Milan is in want of money and the ex-queen in rich reconciliation is thought to be within the probabilities, especially as both are ever ambitious to figure in society.

Sacrificed a Mare with a Sore Thing.

This is the discomfort he went to a friend at the race track just before he invited every one in sight in to have a drink:

"Put thirty dollars on for me. Missed train."

This is the reply received as he was ordering the third round and telling every one that he had a dead sure twenty to one shot in the second race:

"Put thirty dollars on what?"

This is the answer he made all haste to send:

"On Stick-in-the-Mud to win the second race. Don't fail."

This is what the ticker said as he told the bartender to put half a dozen bottles on the ice:

"Second race—Stick-in-the-Mud first, Old Hoss second. Time, 1.51¾."

This is the dispatch he received as he was about to order the first of the half dozen bottles opened:

"Too late. Why didn't you give me the name in your last telegram?"

This is the reply he sent as he walked out of the hotel barroom and started in the direction of a government pier:

"Can you give me the name of a good asylum for idiots and feeble minded sports?"—Chicago Tribune.

HOEY'S PROPERTY COVERED NOW.

The Adams Express Company Files Another Lis Pendens.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Oct. 30.—Counsel for President Sanford, of the Adams Express company, has just filed with the county clerk at Freehold a third lis pendens, which virtually covers every foot of property owned by ex-President Hoey. In the two former lis pendens filed by Mr. Sanford's attorney in the interest of the Adams Express company mention was only made of certain tracts of land supposed to be owned by Mr. Hoey. The document filed makes specific mention of the twenty odd pieces of property now held by Mr. Hoey.

The search of Mr. Hoey's property ordered nearly two weeks ago by the Adams Express company will be completed today, and it will at once be sent to New York for use in the heavy litigation which is expected will soon begin.

Attorneys for the Adams Express company have also served a notice upon the officers of the Long Branch Banking company warning them not to loan any money to Mr. Hoey on his note with the mortgage given to Michael Quick and Frederick C. Hoey as trustees as security for such loans. The mortgage is for $8,000, and sets forth that it was given as security for notes that may be given by Mr. Hoey.

The Lead Trust in New Jersey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—A motion was made in the supreme court here to prevent a reorganization of the National Lead trust in New Jersey. Thomas H. Uncles, a stockholder, claims that the contemplated reorganization would depreciate the value of certificates. Representatives of the trust stated that it was intended to organize a corporation from the trust to conform to the law. Judge Ingraham intimated that the plaintiff could not prevent the trust from being reorganized.

Quick Work with Blackmailer Welsh.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—William H. Welsh, the bookkeeper who was arrested Tuesday charged with attempting to blackmail Henry W. Box, a lawyer of Buffalo, was indicted by the grand jury, and pleaded guilty before Judge Martine, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to state prison for three years and six months.

The Odds on Flower.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Democratic bettors were offering odds of 100 to 70 on Governor Flower. Republican bettors ask for 100 to 60. Many thousands of dollars have been wagered, but not so many as in previous years.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

There is an epidemic of typhoid fever in the Rhode island state prison.

LOVE'S LESSON.

One evening as they sat beneath
The moon's soft rays in pain,
Moved by an impulse born of love
He kissed her through her veil.

Next evening, as before, they sat
Beneath the star-decked dome,
Yet not exactly as before,
She'd left her veil at home.

—Tom Masson, in Life.

DEACON TIDD'S MULE.

Sleepytown isn't a hundredth part as big, but it is several hundred times as slow, as Philadelphia. It used to boast a weekly newspaper, but it has none now. The Sleepytown Weekly Truthteller suspended publication suddenly several years ago. Its suspension did not make much impression on that part of the world lying outside of Sleepytown, and as the Sleepytown people themselves were not anxious that the true cause of the death of the Truthteller should become known they have never before been given publicity.

The editor of the Truthteller might not always have been a truthteller in private life, but in his strictest rule in his business life was that nothing but what he believed to be true should be printed in his paper. Plain, ungarnished statements of facts, therefore, constituted the principal part of the reading matter of the paper, and the inhabitants of Sleepytown believed it to be the greatest newspaper in the world. The Superintendent of the Sunday school took fifty copies to give to his Sunday-school children, declaring that it was better fitted than any of the Sunday-school papers to instruct them in right ways, and that its editorial articles were as good as sermons.

But at length the editor determined to retire and spend his remaining days away from the distractions of the Truthteller office. He was anxious to find somebody who would carry on the paper in accordance with the principles laid down by himself and adopted by the Sleepytown people, and, as it proved, unluckily, he found his successor in the person of a young newspaper man from the reckless West, and the most reckless corner of the reckless west at that. This young man's countenance gave no hint of the wonderful possibilities for romancing that lay within him, and the old editor was charmed with his appearance and gladly gave into his hands the reins of the Sleepytown Truthteller.

The new editor was for making it a daily at once, but the retiring editor said he had tried that when he was younger, and had proved that a daily paper in Sleepytown was an impossibility unless it was filled in to a great extent with fiction and romance, of which he and the Sleepytown people did not approve. $5 it became a weekly, and a weekly it must remain.

"Now, although you are from the West," said the old editor, "I believe from your face you never wrote or would countenance any such stories as I have sometimes been pained to see printed in Western papers. I trust you will adhere to the principles on which the Truthteller was founded and has gained its entire success. Tales of wild and unseemly adventures and weird romances may do for other papers and other towns, but not for the Truthteller and Sleepytown."

The new editor promised that he would strive to keep the Truthteller on the plane on which it had been placed by its founder.

If you have a persuasive tongue you may induce one of the old inhabitants of Sleepytown to tell you what caused the death of the old editor, and how the old populace, arising in its wrath and might, rode his successor out of town on a rail. Possibly he may show you a copy of the Truthteller which appeared the first week after the new editor took charge, and which was also the last copy that ever appeared. You will then need no further explanation as to the matter.

It must be recorded here that Sleepytown is one of the three villages connected by what is known as "the round road," which runs up hill and down dale, like a switchback. This road Deacon Tidd had driven twice a day for twenty years, carrying the mails between the three villages. All this time he had driven the same mule. It was a remarkably intelligent animal for a mule, and, as the Deacon had never driven it anywhere except over the mail route, it had become so accustomed to it that, if turned loose and started on the mail route road, it would go over and over it at a slow trot until stopped.

Just before the new editor took charge of the Truthteller this hitherto moral mule developed the kicking habit to an alarming extent. Monday of the week in which the paper changed hands the mule disappeared. The Truthteller came out Saturday. Heavily leaded on its front page was the following weird tale, under headlines that took up half a column:

"The mystery of the disappearance of Deacon Tidd's mule has been solved, through untiring efforts on the part of the editor of the Truthteller and the repentance of the Deacon's companion in the outrage. Let the inhabitants of Sleepytown give the verdict. It is for us to give only the facts.

"Deacon Tidd has said that the mule broke its leg while kicking, and that he was forced to shoot it. Deacon Tidd, it is true, was the cause of the unfortunate mule's death, but he took no such human means as ending its agonies with a shot. Angered because his faithful but somewhat erratic beast had kicked through the dashboard of his mail cart, while on his usual rounds last week, and forgetting the many years of unselfish service rendered by it before the lamentable tendencies of its race gained mastery over its own natural good qualities, Deacon Tidd perpetrated a most diabolical scheme of torture.

"With the aid of the man whose repentance has enabled us to give the complete details, Deacon Tidd first took the shafts out of his mail wagon and fastened the front axle so that it could not turn more than two inches each way. He then fastened one of his longest haystack poles to the bottom of the wagon so that it projected twenty feet in front at an angle of forty-five degrees. At the end of the pole he had arranged a strong pulley, through which he ran twenty feet of half-inch rope. One end of the rope was fastened to a fifty-pound weight.

"Now came the most difficult part of the plan. The mule was brought out, and the Deacon ordered his assistant to fasten the loose end of the rope to its tail. The assistant declared this was not exactly in his line, and, as the Deacon declared he would not attempt it himself, it looked as if the mule might be spared. But the Deacon had a bright thought, and sent his assistant to the druggist's for three ounces of chloroform. This he held under the mule's nose, with the aid of a long pole, until it almost fell asleep. Then he quickly fastened the rope in place.

"When the mule regained its senses it slowly stood up. The Deacon cut the cord that had held the weight close to the pulley, and the rope whizzed through the pulley until the downward course of the weight was stopped by the greater weight of the mule and the strength of its tail. There it dangled just within kicking reach. The mule, feeling the great tug at its tail, naturally let fly with both feet, striking the weight fair and square. It swung back toward the wagon, and then just touched the mule's hindquarters. As it swung back toward the wagon again the mule once more planted both heels on it. This time it struck it with force enough to drive him ahead two feet.

"The mule now began to kick in earnest and the weight to swing with about the rapidity of the piston rod of a locomotive. Deacon Tidd and his assistant sat in the back part of the wagon out of the way of all danger, and feeling pretty secure, because they knew that the mule, whatever happened, would stick to the round road.

"The weight was now urging the poor animal ahead ten feet at every stroke, and the pole was creaking and bending under the strain put upon it. 'Golly,' said the Deacon. 'I am glad I took the night time for this here experiment, because I wouldn't like ter have none of the mule-headers er my church see me in this rediculerus position.'

"The mule was now being propelled at a tremendous speed by the weight which was making at least seventy-five strokes to the minute, and sending the mule twenty feet at each stroke. Being unable to understand the mysterious but compelling power which was exerting itself so forcibly, the agonized animal now began to run and kick, too. In twenty minutes the Tidd homestead came in sight, and the limit of the round road having been made.

"Here the Deacon discovered his only mistake. He had fastened the mule to the weight and the weight to the pole by means of the pulley dangling overboard through which the rope ran, and the pole to the wagon, but had neglected to fix any contrivance by which he could, from his seat in the wagon, effect a separation, and thus let the mule go on alone and the wagon slow up.

"The speed of the second trip around was terrifying. Deacon Tidd's hair flew out straight behind. His assistant had jumped for a haystack, which he struck with such force that he was buried up to his neck. The Deacon saw his head sticking out, and concluded that he would cling to the wagon.

"Mrs. Tidd and the children, hearing a peculiar, rushing sound every few moments, and missing the Deacon, at length came to the door. Thrice they saw the form of the Deacon on his wagon, following twenty feet in the wake of a something with glaring eyes, blazing nostrils, and apparently a hundred heels playing out in the direction of their husband and father. After this they only heard the rushing sound, and saw a cloud of dust appear and disappear at fifteen-minute intervals. They brought out the family Bible, and on the doorstep prayed earnestly that the Deacon might escape from the horrible being that had him in tow.

"Just as the gray of the morning came the dust cloud began to appear less frequently, and soon thereafter the form of the Deacon could again be made out. As daylight broke the Deacon's family recognized the strange object which was carrying him over his mail route at such a tremendous speed, or rather what was left of it, for now the weight was hammering away at the hind quarters of the mule alone, the front portion of his body, never having been so much toughened by exercise, having worn out and dropped off somewhere about the fifteenth trip around. Finally, just as the Deacon was in front of his own door, the mule's tail parted, its hind legs ran off down the road, and the wagon, with the Deacon, came to a stop half a mile further on.

"After having in this heartless manner caused the death of an innocent creature, the Deacon walked slowly back to his house and immediately assembled his family for prayers to give up thanks for his wonderful escape."

On reading this tale in the Truthteller the old editor dropped dead, and in an hour after the edition made its appearance the inhabitants of Sleepytown called on the new editor with their verdict, which was that, although he deserved hanging for violating all the traditions of the town and the Truthteller, if he would promise never to return, they would merely see him out of town on the uncomfortable vehicle before mentioned.—N. A FAMOUS GOOSE STORY.

The Missing Leg and How It Was Accounted For.

"Wust scrape I ebber got into with ole Marsa John was when Rosey. She was a harricane in dem days. She come into de kitchen once where I was helpin get de dinner ready, an de cook had gone to de spring house, an she says:

"'Chad, what ye cookin dat smells so nice?'

"'Dat's a goose,' I says, 'cookin for Marsa John's dinner. We got quality,' says I, pointin to de dinin room do'.

"'Quality!' she says. 'Spec' I know what de quality is. Dat's for you an de cook.'

"Wid dat she grabs a carvin knife from de table, opens de do' ob de big oven, cut off a leg ob de goose, and dis'pears round de kitchen corner wid de leg in her mouf.

"Fo' I knowed what I was Marsa John come to de kitchen do' and says, 'Gittin late, Chad, bring in de dinner.'

"You see, major, dey ain't no up and down stairs in de big house, like it is here; kitchen an dinin room all on de same flo'.

"'Well, sah, I was scared to def, but I tuk dat goose and laid him wid de cut side down on de bottom ob de pan 'fo' de cook got back, put some dressin and stuffin ober him and shet de stove do'. Den I tuk de sweet potatoes an de hominy an put 'em on de table, and den I went back in de kitchen to get de baked ham. I put on de ham as some mo' dishes, an Marsa says, lookin up:

"'I t'ought dere was a roast goose, Chad?'

"'I an't yerd nothin 'bout no goose,' I says. 'I'll ask de cook.'

"Next minute I yerd ole Marsa a-hollerin:

"'Mammy Jane, an's we got a goose!'

"'Lord-a-massy! yes, Marsa. Chad, you wu'thless nigger, an't you tuk dat goose out yit!'

"'Is we got a goose?' says I.

"'Is we got a goose? Didn't you help pick it?'

"I see whar my har was short, an I snatched up a hot dish from de hearth, opened de oven do, an slide de goose in just as he was, an lay him down befo' Marsa John.

"'Now see what de ladies'll have for dinner,' says old Marsa, pickin up his carvin knife.

"'What'll you take for dinner, miss?' says I. 'Baked ham?'

"'No,' she says, looking up to whar Marsa John sat; 'I think I'll take a leg ob dat goose—jess so.'

"Well, marsa cut off de leg an put a little stuffin an gravy on it wid a spoon, an says to me, 'Chad, see what dat gemman'll have.'

"'What'll you take for dinner, sah?' says I. 'Nice breast o' goose, or slice o' ham?'

"'No. I think I'll take a leg ob dat goose.'

"I didn't say nuffin, but I knowed bery well he wa'n't a-gwine to git it.

"But, major, you ouchter seen ole marsa lookin for de under leg ob dat goose! He rolled his eyes on de dish, de way I cut way, an den he jabbed dat ole bone handled carvin fork in him an hel him up ober de dish an looked under him an on top ob him, and den he says, kinder and like:

"'Chad, whar is de udder leg ob dat goose?'

"'Is didn't hab pone,' says I.

"'You mean to say, Chad, dat de gooses on my plantation on'y got one leg?'

"'Some ob 'em has an some ob 'em an't. You see, marsa, we got two kinds in de pond, an we was a little hurried today so Mammy Jane cooked de one 'cause I ketched it fust.'

"'Well,' said he, lookin like he look when he found fire you in de little room, 'I'll settle wid yo after dinner.'

"Well, dar I was shiverin an shakin in my shoes, an droppin gravy an spillin de wine on the tablecloth, I was dat shook up; an when de dinner was ober he calls all de ladies an gemmen, an says: 'Now come down to de duck pond. I'm gwine to show de nigger dat all de gooses on my plantation got mo' den one leg.'

"I followed long, trapesin after de whole kit, an b'lin, an when we got to de pond"—[here nearly went into a convulsion with suppressed laughter—"dar was de gooses sittin on a log in de middle ob dat ole green goose pond wid one leg stuck down so—an de udder under de wing."

Chad was now on one leg, balancing himself on my chair, the tears running down his cheeks.

"'Dar, marsa,' says I, 'don't you see! Look at dat ole gray goose! Dat's de berry match ob de one we had to-day.'

"Den de ladies all hollered an de gemmen laughed so loud they yerd 'em at de big house.

"'Stop, you black scoundrel!' Marsa John says, his face gettin white an he a-jerkin his handkerchief from his pocket. 'Stop!'

"'Major, I hope to have my brains kicked out by a lame grasshopper if ebery one ob 'em gooses didn't put down de udder leg!'

"'Now, you lyin nigger,' he says, raisin his cane ober my head, 'I'll show you—'

"'Stop, Marsa John!' I hollered; 'tan't fair, 'tan't fair!'

"'Why isn't it fair?' says he.

"'Cause,' says I, 'you didn't say "Shoo!" to de goose what was on de table.'"—Century.

The Weather.

From partly cloudy to cloudy, preceded by fair conditions, with no decided changes of temperature, followed by rain.

To the Voters of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The time has come, when the people of New Jersey should throw from their necks the galling yoke of Leon Abbett, the present governor.

He has under control absolutely the Democratic party, which through its representatives in the Legislature, is pillaging the taxpayers of this State.

He has virtually abolished government by the people in the large cities of the State.

He has created many new bureaus and commissions, at an enormous cost to the people.

He is fast abolishing the freedom of the Democratic press, by forcing every newspaper of his party into a State of servile dependency.

He is recognized as the moving spirit behind the infamous ring in Hudson county, which is plundering Jersey City, which cost at least 8,000 illegal ballots in 1888, and which is disgracing the name of New Jersey.

He has appointed men to responsible positions, who are allied with the evil classes of the State, and who do his bidding when he demands it of them.

He is fast making the judiciary of the State partisan, which no governor has ever had the audacity to do, and placing men upon the bench who are his political cronies.

He receives $10,000 salary as governor of the State. One of his sons receives $2,000 as his private Secretary, and $1,000 as counsel to the Dairy Commissioners another son receives about $5,300 as counsel to the Tax Commissioners and a brother receives $2,200 as clerk in the office of State Comptroller, making a total of $22,000 which the people pay for the Abbett family government of this State.

He compelled the last Legislature to pass very many laws of a partisan character, which was for the purpose of taking a large amount of money from the taxpayers to go into the pockets of the friends of the Abbett government—to pay for offices newly created by his last infamous Legislature.

He uses his power as Governor in all parts of the State to elect only those men to the Legislature who will wear his yoke and enact such laws as he orders them to enact.

He had under his control absolutely the member of the last Assembly from Somerset county, whom he caused to be elected Speaker, and who used his office as Speaker in forwarding the passage of the partisan laws which disgrace the statutes of this State.

He has ordered the renomination of this same man, Jas. J. Bergen, as Member of Assembly, and if he is re-elected, he proposes to re-elect him Speaker, if his party is in the majority, and again demand that he put on his yoke and bow in humble submission to his will.

He is ready to order passed, and sign after passage, every bill which is in the interest of the liquor power of the State, and make him popular with that class of men.

With these startling facts before you, all of which can be fully verified if you will consult the laws passed by the last two Legislatures, can you aid either by staying away from the polls or voting for men (who glory in waving the Abbott collar) for the Legislature?

George Kyte and George A. Dilts are the Republican candidates. They are honest, fearless young men, and will do all they can, if elected, to stay the tide of Abbett's power, which is to-day threatening the welfare of this State.

It is a duty you owe to good government to vote for them next Tuesday.

A Successful Operation.

Last Thursday afternoon Dr. Donohue, assisted by Drs. Matthews and Welch, removed a scirrhus cancer weighing about one and a half pounds from the left breast of Jane Steel, of South Round Brook. She had an operation performed over 30 years ago for the same trouble. She is doing as well as can be expected.

Nothing is more appropriate as a gift than cut glass. A remarkable display of Dorflinger's American cut glass may be seen at 36 Murray street, New York.

ASSAULTED A WOMAN.

Frank Steers Arrested Yesterday on Complaint of Mrs. Geoghan.

Mrs. Martin Geoghan went before City Judge Codington yesterday afternoon and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Frank Steers, a former employe. In her complaint Mrs. Geoghan alleges that Steers knocked her down, and in other ways shamefully maltreated her. The man is powerfully built and very muscular. He looks like a giant. The warrant was placed in the hands of Policeman Giese and he found Steers in Charles Bock's saloon. When he was landed in the station house Steers asked Mr. Giese if he proposed locking him up. When answered in the affirmative Steers cried like a child. This morning he was arraigned before City Judge Codington.

He pleaded guilty to the charge and a fine of five dollars was imposed.

BREVITIES.

—The new $2 silver certificate just issued has a carmine seal an inch in diameter.

—To-night is All Hallow 'een. Take off your gate, or it may be missing in the morning.

—According to reports, the coffee crop has been preposterous and that article will take a tumble.

—The Somerset County Court will sit for naturalization purposes Monday from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m.

—The Sunday afternoon service at the Church of the Holy Cross has been changed to 4.30 p. m., one half hour earlier.

—There will be a five minute talk about penmanship every Monday evening at the close of the bookkeeping class of the Y. M. C. A.

—Some men sleep well because they have good consciences and others sleep just as well because they haven't any conscience at all.

—The annual re-union of the 15th Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, will be held at Washington, New Jersey, on Thursday, October 22d.

—The fastest time ever made on any race course in America was made at Cambridge, Mass., last week. Nelson trotted a mile in 2.06¾.

—S. H. Hadley who will speak to men in the M.E. Church to-morrow at four p. m., was at one time a professional gambler and for fifteen years rarely went to bed sober.

—Don't fail to vote Tuesday. Your vote may elect Mr. Kyte. It will certainly help to elect him anyhow. If you reside in North Plainfield the same advice will apply for Mr. Dilts.

—Mr. J. M. Schenck, whose advertisement appears in another column, has just completed the erection of a $1,000,000 steam pump for the Raritan and Somerville Water Company.

—Few people, perhaps, are aware that the "horse chestnut" is so named because each year's growth develops a perfectly formed horse shoe on every limb, representing the seven nails, and the perfect hoof of a horse.

—State Senators will be elected this year in seven counties in New Jersey—in Passaic, Sussex, Hunterdon, Hudson and Middlesex, now represented by Democrats, and in Burlington and Cape May, now represented by Republicans.

—A movement to abolish the present coroner system in New Jersey is agitating the medical men and the undertakers of this State. It is proposed to introduce to the next Legislature a bill establishing in this State the Massachusett's system.

—The singing class conducted by Mr. Hazell had it first meeting last night. It is a complete success, forty-eight members having promised. As the number is limited to fifty, there remains only two vacancies, for which applications must be made before the next meeting, Nov 6.

—There were 205 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 230 in the preceding week and 164, 251, 220 and 207 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 9,885 against 8,351 in 1890.

—Numerous farmers propose this Fall to prevent the over-running of their lands by hunters, by a rigid enforcement of the law. Some have already published the warning, and it will be well for gunners to pay attention. The tramping over grain fields, breaking down fences, and other annoying and expensive practices indulged in by the thousand and one hunters who go roaming over the lands of our farmers has grown to be a serious matter.

—Up in Mr. Kyte's district a disgruntled individual is making a most ridiculous effort to make a few wheelmen to vote against that gentleman. It appears that Mr. Kyte is a member of the town committee; that in the discharge of his duty he caused the arrest of this particularly bumptious individual for riding on the sidewalks, in violation of the ordinance. This same fellow was one of the first to advocate such an ordinance, and he suggested that all fines be used to improve the road between Fanwood and Scotch Plains. Now that he is caught and fined he whines like an overgrown baby, accuses Mr. Kyte of inconsistency, appeals to wheelmen to vote against the honorable assemblyman, and makes a fool of himself generally. He is sending out type written circulars as full of falsities as he is full of wrath, but the cause of his squealing is too well understood to have any effect on the election. Mr. Kyte's work in securing the county roads is too well known to be underrated, and his special activities and fearless town committeeman is too well appreciated in his district to be affected by the vaporings of the unhappy and extremely wrathy wheelman who was the first to be caught in violating the very ordinance by which he hoped to catch others. The more this wheel man vaporizes the greater will be Mr. Kyte's majority, if it has any effect at all.—Elizabeth Journal.

A PITIFUL SIGHT.

Two Aged Prisoners Sent to Jail for Drunkenness and Disorderly Conduct.

It was a pitiful sight to witness in the city court yesterday afternoon when James Powers, aged 85 years, and Catherine Baird, aged 79 years, were standing at the bar of justice to receive their sentences on the charge of which they had been convicted, that of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Both of the prisoners were charges on the city and lived in the poor house on West Fourth street, in the Liberty street in and Plainfield avenue. A few days ago Overseer of the Poor J. Oakley Nodyne gave Powers an order for a pair of boots. Powers got the boots and immediately took them to a pawn shop and pawned them. He then purchased two quarts of liquor. He also purchased whiskey, and it was that that made the prisoners. In sentencing them City Judge Codington severely reprimanded them and they were sent to Elizabeth for sixty days each.

Another woman named Mrs. Patrick Cahill. She had been in company with Powers and Mrs. Baird and was the first one of the trio arrested. She is the mother of five children. She has been a prisoner in the police court in this city on several other occasions. She was also severely reprimanded by City Judge Codington and given forty days in the county jail.

Policeman Lynch took the prisoners to Elizabeth yesterday afternoon. When he arrived at the county seat Mrs. Baird became obstinate and refused to go to the jail but Mr. Lynch finally persuaded her to accompany him and she was lodged behind the bars.

Max O'Rell.

Max O'Rell who will appear at the Casino on Thursday evening, November 5th, under the auspices of the popular organization, the Hillside Tennis Club, is now on his third and last American tour. His public has grown largely since he first lectured in this country, and he is undoubtedly the most successful foreign lecturer who has spoken on the American platform.

M. Blout is one of the most charming lecturers of the day. He has keen wit, delightful satire and plenty of sweet good humor. His new lecture, "America as Seen Through French Spectacles," which he will render on Thursday evening the next shows his rare appreciation of the ridiculous, and his sunny nature, and it will be a surprise if the people of Plainfield do not take advantage of the opportunity offered them at this time to hear this distinguished man. No foreigner has ever aroused the enthusiasm of the press and public of this country as has "Max O'Rell."

The Hillside Tennis Club has given much pleasure to its members and friends during the past Summer and no doubt their appreciation will be shown on this occasion by filling the Casino at this, the first public entertainment given under its direction.

The Champion Pool Player.

For some time past there has been considerable dispute between Messrs. J. J. Gallagher and Edward J. Harding as to which was the champion pool player. A few evenings ago it was decided to settle the question by playing a serious of five games of pool, the winner of the most games to be considered the champion. The rivals adjourned to the rooms of the Manhole Young Men's Arcanum and the contest began. At the conclusion the score board showed that Mr. Harding had succeeded in defeating his opponent five games straight. He received the congratulations of his friends.

"Johnny, Get Your Gun."

Quail and rabbit can be lawfully killed on November first. When that day falls on Sunday the killing cannot lawfully begin until the second day of the month. Some of our exchanges put the lawful time limit in this manner, from the last day of October to December 16th inclusive. This is a wrong construction of the law, which says: "Open season for quail and rabbit between October 31st and December 16th."

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Miss Julia Philpitt, of East Second street, is visiting in Williamsburg, N. Y.

Mr. A. M. Vanderbeek is slowly recovering from his recent serious illness.

Firman Long entertained a number of his friends at his home on Summit avenue, last evening.

Ex-Speaker James Bergen, the Democratic candidate for Assemblyman in Somerset, was in this place on a visit to North Plainfield last evening. He wore a slouch hat drawn over his eyes as if afraid of be identified and is said to have approached several said to be shaky Republicans and made overtures which were accepted with contempt. To the credit of his opponent, be it said, he does not resort to such low, underhand methods.

Every seat, and practically all the standing room of Library Hall, was occupied Thursday evening with an audience of ladies and gentlemen who had assembled to attend the second lecture of the Young Men's Christian Association for the present season. Preceding the lecture the orchestra of the association, with its full band of eleven men, rendered a programme of choice selections. Robert Anderson, chairman of the lecture committee of the association, then stepped to the front, and in a few choice words, introduced Mr. Robert Rushmore, of Plainfield, N. J., who, for over an hour and a quarter, held his audience with an interesting description of "Life in Texas Among the Cowboys." His description of the life on the ranch, the method of catching and training horses and the peculiar experiences enjoyed by the cowboys in this work, kept his audience in the best of humor during the entire evening.—Trenton True American.

A HAT FACTORY DESTROYED.

150 Persons Thrown out of Employment.—Loss $50,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 31st (Special.)—The large hat factory belonging to Joseph Mercey was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at fifty thousand dollars. One hundred and fifty persons are thrown out of employment.

AN AWFUL CALAMITY.

Twenty-four Thousand Lives Lost.

YOKOHOMA, Japan, Oct. 31st. (Special.)—There is a great flood here. It was attended with awful loss of life. Since Wednesday at least 24,000 people have been drowned.

Celebrated His Twentieth Marriage Anniversary.

Last evening about 125 persons met at the home of the Rev. Peter Tubbs, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Millington, in celebration of the twentieth marriage anniversary of the pastor and wife. Social congratulations and a bountiful repast occupied the early evening, after which appropriate remarks by Rev. J. L. McNair of Bernardsville, and Dr. Rankin of Basking Ridge; Deacon Stelle, then, with a few appropriate remarks, presented the pastor with a purse containing $460—which had been quietly contributed.

The pastor in accepting the same feelingly alluded to his twenty and a half years labor at Millington as pastor, and proposed giving a part of said sum presented him as a start to a building fund for a new lecture room to be added to the church which he had long felt had been needed. The pastor's generosity was electrifying, and then and there a large portion of the funds needed was pledged. Friends of the pastor were present from Sterling, Liberty Corner, Montclair, Basking Ridge, Bedminster, Plainfield and other places throughout the State, among whom was City Judge Codington and wife.

A Fight With a Raccoon.

Yesterday morning David Lowrie of North Plainfield had a terrible fight with a raccoon at the foot of the mountains. Mr. Lowrie had tracked the animal to its hole and when he attempted to capture it the animal fought desperately. Mr. Lowrie was badly bitten on the hands and arms. He found it necessary to kill the animal before he could capture it. It was one of the largest that has been seen in this vicinity for a number of years.

A Reception.

On Thursday evening next the Rev. Father Smith, the pastor of St. Mary's church, will tender a reception to all who assisted in making the recent fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church, such a grand success. The reception will take place in St. Mary's Hall.

Bowling.

The Westfield Athletic Club bowling team and the Fanwood team rolled a game Thursday night which resulted in a victory for the Westfields by a score of 1,459 to 1,380. The game took place at Westfield.

—A swindle which has been carried on successfully of late in some sections is thus explained: Persons visit the town and call from house to house asking to see sewing machines, and if the machine is a certain kind they take out the shuttle and put in their pocket, refusing to give it up unless the owner pays them for an alleged infringment on the patent.

Republican Primaries.

The Republican voters of the city of Plainfield will meet at the places and dates mentioned below to elect delegates to the city convention to be held in the Republican Election Hall, East Front street, Monday, November 9th, 8 p. m., for the purpose of nominating three Councilmen-at-Large, Assessor, Collector, Treasurer, two Chosen Freeholders, two Commissioners of Appeal and one School Trustee.

The First Ward will meet at the Republican Association Hall, East Front street, Thursday, Nov. 5, at 8 p. m., and is entitled to ten delegates.

The Second Ward will meet at the Bryant School Building, East Sixth street, Wednesday, Nov. 4, at 8 p. m., and is entitled to twelve delegates.

The Third Ward will meet at the Casino, Seventh street and Arlington avenue, Wednesday, Nov. 4, at 8 p. m., and is entitled to eleven delegates.

The Fourth Ward will meet at Carey's auction rooms, 76 West Front street, Wednesday, Nov 4, at 8 p. m., and is entitled to thirteen delegates.

Each ward will nominate one member of the Common Council, Constable, one Justice of the Peace and three members of the City Executive Committee.

C. A. BAYNOR, Secretary. E. N. ERICKSON, Chairman.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Charles Chilled.

Boston has on hand a breach of promise suit that will probably cause more embarrassment to the wealthy bachelor immediately concerned and more fun to the square inch to heartless outsiders than anything that has transpired since the fatuous Baby Bunting Arbuckle suit in Brooklyn. When a wealthy bachelor of fifty promises marriage to a poor and pretty girl of half his age he must always provide in his mind for two things: First, the possibility that he himself will want to call it off, and second, the fact that poor girls who are engaged to wealthy bachelors suffer far more frightfully from broken hearts than other women do, and that cash, and cash only, and plenty of it, can set the jilted damsel's affections running in the normal way again.

Mr. Charles H. Ingersoll saw a pretty cashier in a Boston restaurant one day. She was behind her desk. He was presumably transferring some woollen toothpicks from the little vase on the desk to his pocket when their eyes met, and I was transfixed then and there. He loved her at first sight. He made some pretext to address her, still transfixed by her soulful eyes, and presumably took some more toothpicks. He came again to that restaurant. No hash ever tasted as sweet as that hash. No wooden toothpicks were ever sharpened like those on the pretty cashier's desk. An acquaintance followed, then shortly an engagement and marriage. Would that we could dwell upon the halcyon days that came after and renew our youth! But we dare not. We hasten on.

Charles wrote to Annie—we will call her Annie, Annie Bausch, for that was her name—basketfuls of love letters. There is where she had him and has him still. If he had not written those fatal gallant letters—but let us not anticipate. He bade her be careful of her health and keep up a good fire. In one of the letters laid before the public occurs this exquisite bit of wit:

My pet, if you had a husband whom you tenderly loved and who loved you as fondly in return, and some should be taken from death, do you think that in such a case you would hope he had gone where they keep good fires.

Ha! ha! ha! Let us laugh while we can, darling. It was all the joyous, harmless fun we can out of these things, my pet. Keep up your spirits, dearest.

And Annie—alas that we should live to write it—Charles' love coded off. When Annie's parents asked him about what season of the year he expected to make her his fair bride, he up and answered, "Never." But Annie has the bagful of red hot love letters still. They are now her only consolation and she will use them. She has sued for $50,000.

This story teaches elderly bachelors not to go cooing around pretty girls in the twentieth unless they mean business.

Fruit and Flower Shows.

One source of pleasure and profit we Americans mostly miss is the autumn fruit and flower shows which French horticulturists annually place before the public. In these displays the finest fruits and flowers that ripen in mid-autumn are collected and arranged in the artistic manner which so captivates the eye in France, in city or country, wherever anything is exhibited for sale.

The National Horticultural Society of France held recently a fruit and flower show in Paris so magnificent that it attracted attention outside of the country. The fruit consisted chiefly of grapes, pears and apples. In the cultivation of pears France undoubtedly leads the world. Pears, so monstrous in size and so perfect in shape and color that they looked like wax fruit, greeted the eye, side by side with splendid apples and grapes. A correspondent of the London Telegraph declares there were single grapes of a black variety that were as large as walnuts. Grouped artistically with these fruits were dazzling dahlias, gladioli and begonias, the whole forming a vision of brilliancy and beauty to last the beholder a lifetime.

It is a poor way for benevolent organizations to prove their usefulness by coming before the public everlastingly as money beggars, getting an audience penned up in a hall and practically forcing them to contribute before they can escape. Charitable and benevolent contributions that are not voluntary are worth nothing. Giving for others' good, real or alleged, is something people certainly ought to be allowed to do as they please about.

The city of New York pays out annually for education as much as four of the less populous southern states all together. The sum required for the present school year is $4,687,802. In spite of this, however, the public schools of the big city are inferior in excellence to those of smaller places both east and west.

"I should like to see America strike out a literature of her own," says Edwin Arnold, "paint her own pictures and carve her own statues. This is why I admire Walt Whitman. He seems to me the most genuine living American writer."

It is all very well to talk about being dirty. [illegible] one of the virtues of this [illegible] grass and [illegible] Americ[illegible] could wear.

FOUGHT FOR HER HONOR

Pretty Minna Rauhauser Butchered by a Young Brute.

JAS. WALDEN SHOT ON THE STREET.

Two Terrible Tragedies in New York. Jealousy Makes a Murderer of William Miller and a Murderess of Walden's Alleged Wife—Both Victims Are Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Passion had two victims lying dead in their own blood last night, and the police of this city have two cases, each fraught with more or less of mystery, to investigate. Minna Rauhauser, a girl seventeen years of age, was found on a bed in a room of her mother's house, 207 West Sixty seventh street, with her throat cut. James Walden was twice shot by a woman, under the shadow of the Metropolitan Opera House. He died one hour later. The man who killed Miss Rauhauser is still at large. The woman who shot Walden is under arrest.

Killed While Defending Her Honor.

Minna Rauhauser lived with her widowed mother, who was away from home when the girl was killed.

She was a beautiful girl and was brutally murdered while bravely defending her honor. William Miller, a young man who had boarded with the family for six years, is supposed to have committed the crime. He has disappeared and seems to have got a good start on the police, as the bloody deed was not discovered until after 6 o'clock last night and then the crime was several hours old. The girl had evidently been brutally assaulted by the brute who killed her before he finally took her life. Her body was found lying stretched, face upward, upon the bed in the room he had occupied. Her throat was cut from ear to ear, presenting a horrible sight. She had not died without a struggle.

It Was a Horrible Scene.

The confused and torn condition of the girl's clothing and of the bed clothing, the manner in which the furniture was disarranged attested the fact that the bloody finger stains upon the whitewashed wall told the story of a terrible struggle between the criminal and his fair victim. Beside the bed the police were found the bloody clothing of the man who did the killing. After the foul deed he had stripped himself of his blood stained clothes in the presence of his victim, and after putting on another suit had made his escape. The weapon which the murderer had used—an ugly two bladed, keen edged jackknife—was found beside the dead girl. It was covered with blood.

A general alarm was sent out by the police last night, and all the chiefs of police of neighboring cities were notified of the crime.

He Was Insanely Jealous.

Miller is twenty-four years of age, and was employed as a pianomaker in the factory corner of Little Twelfth street and Eleventh avenue. He occupied a little hall bedroom with John Rauhauser, the widow's nineteen-year old son. The other members of the family were Rose, twenty-five years old, and Minna, the murdered girl.

Miller became infatuated with Minna, and while there had been no declaration of love between them, Miller has been intensely jealous of her, and has complained when she accepted the attentions of any other young man. In spite of this, she has been the belle of the neighborhood.

Yesterday morning Miller left the house with John Rauhauser, but he must have returned soon thereafter alone. There he found Minna in her room, dressed and lying on the bed, as she was not feeling well. It is believed that he overtook her as she left her and that she repulsed him. He drew a knife and stabbed her.

She ran from the room, and he followed her as he forced her back into the room. She struggled desperately. He cut her head back and cut her throat, leaving in the cut the spinal column to connect the head with the body.

He Was a Cool Fiend.

Before leaving the criminal washed his bloody hands in the sink in the rear room, and rifled the bureau drawers of about fifteen dollars in money. On his way out he met Mrs. Smithwaner, a tenant, and coolly asked her the time of day. This was about 10 o'clock. Rose found the girl her work, reaching the house about 6:45 last night. The discovery of the crime followed.

The Shooting of James Walden.

In the shadow of the Metropolitan Opera House, at 8 o'clock last night, James Walden, the son of Edward Walden, a horse dealer at Eatontown, N. J., fell to death at the hands of a woman who claimed to be his wife. The dead man was not quite twenty-one years old. The woman who fired the shots gave her name as Annie Walden, and said that she was twenty-two years old, and had been married to Walden about two years. Prior to that time she was known as Kittie Delmar, alias Kittie Graham. She is a victim of the opium habit.

She was born and lived until she reached womanhood in Pawtahpaus. Then, when twenty years of age, she married, it is said, a prosperous young business man. Her fondness for a gay life led her to desert her husband. She met Walden and he claims made him marry her while he was under the influence of liquor. Recently they returned to New York and, renting a front flat on the first floor of 239 West Forty-fifth street, lived happily together. His attentions to another woman infuriated Kittie.

Come Back or Die.

The tragedy occurred at an hour when Fortieth street near the theater was thronged with people. The first intimation any person had of it was when the woman was heard to cry angrily, "Come back and live with me or die." Scarcely had the words been uttered when two pistol shots followed in quick succession. Walden staggered and then fell into the street. The couple had been noticed by a police man, who thought they were engaged in a quarrel. When he heard the shots and saw the man fall he rushed up, seized the murderess, who still held the revolver in her hand, and put her under arrest. Walden died in the nearest drug store. He was taken to the station house the woman told Captain Reilly that she had shot her husband in the heart, and that she did not think she very sorry for it. She used no tears, but as she was taken back to a cell there was evidence that she would soon break down.

Sixteen Lost on the Retvan.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 31.—Captain Thorregan, of the steamer Queen Bourne, which rescued near Vera Cruz, says the fire was caused by sparks from a passenger's pipe dropping among the bales of cotton on deck. Seven persons are known to have been lost.

RECIPROCITY, THEN ANNEXATION.

Wilfred Laurier's Right Hand Man Says Quebec Wants to Join Us.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—The Chronicle publishes an interview with Hon. Charles Langelier, M. P., from Quebec, who passed through St. Louis. Mr. Langelier is one of the foremost of Quebec Liberals, being leader of Wilfrid Laurier's right hand man. Being asked his opinion of the Chapleau resignation he said: "I think Mr. Chapleau has demanded no more than is his right in his province. With Langevin disposed of Quebec has no cabinet representation, except Caron, and he is not a man. Without Chapleau the government cannot carry the first division of the house."

Relating to the feeling in Quebec about annexation, Mr. Langelier said: "I don't care to give my own views precisely, but if a vote were taken on annexation, Quebec would be for it by 100,000 majority. The French Liberals are particularly in its favor. The first step toward annexation must be reciprocity, then comes annexation, which is inevitable."

Wider Reciprocity with Spain.

MADRID, Oct. 31.—In view of the recent treaty with France, which gives Spain the advantage of the French minimum tariff, the Spanish government is now inclined to negotiate an extensive treaty with America, opening American ports to Spanish goods, chiefly wines, in consideration of which concession Spain would consent to the imposition of merely nominal duties on petroleum and agricultural machinery imported from the United States.

SENATOR QUAY WANTS TO KNOW.

He Asks Comptroller Lacey How Democrats Got the Certificate.

HEAVER, Pa., Oct. 31.—Senator Quay says that suit will be brought at once against The Beaver Star, a new Democratic paper of this place, which published a facsimile of the Harrisburg certificate. The senator sent the following telegram:

To Hon. E. S. Lacey, Comptroller, Washington.

I beg to be informed at your earliest convenience by whom, by what authority or upon what a certificate of deposit for $5000, dated Nov. 26, 1888, indorsed by John Bardsley and by one Schell, was the paper of the Keystone National bank an incubator in the custody of the United States, was duplicated by the Democratic state committee, to be photographed, lithographed and published throughout the state by the Democratic press, as is now being done.

M. S. QUAY.

Comptroller Lacey telegraphed disclaiming any knowledge of the origin of the check or delivery of the Quay-Bardsley check to the Democratic state committee. Mr. Lacey is endeavoring to ascertain how the Democratic state committee secured the famous check.

The Daily Star, the paper sued by Mr. Quay, speaks editorially of the matter as follows: "We never expected sugh great good fortune to overtake us so early in our career, but if it is the Lord's will and Quay's we certainly ought to be satisfied. If the honorable senator wants a little dirt from The Star himself and the public generally in court we are willing to take our part in the play."

FASHIONS

AN AMERICAN WOMAN.

How the French Represent Her on the Stage.

An Anglo-Frenchman, under the name of MAX O'RELL, has been posing fun at our women. We present herewith a sketch by the Frenchman Marx of Mme. Ludwig in her representation of an American woman at the Comédie Française in Pari

MME. LUDWIG AS AN AMERICAN.

Who will not say that she is a combination of true American dignity, and this is the type of American the Frenchman sees traveling through his gay capital. The costume: Ladies wear in the evening dress a gown of white silk striped with pale blue, and a bonnet of white lace embroidered with large pearls, which form a kind of diadem in front, with bows of pale turquoise blue and black velvet and black leaflets.

To Those Who Trim Their Own Hats.

The following hints will be found useful to those who trim their own hats and bonnets, and thus "adapt" a style in a way for which American woman are celebrated. Suppose, to be sure, a very great change in style from the summer—except in one or two points, when the difference is very decided. For instance: Bonnets are still increasing in height in front and being lowered in t a back. They are very pretty, the last French models in this style. Velvet and ribbon are much used in the combination; thus a gray felt bonnet has the brim raised over the forehead; beneath the brim folds of velvet, above the brim more folds of velvet, and a slightly raised at the back and bent into plaits, in which the velvet strings are drawn down; cross at the back and tie under the chin. A bonnet of stone-colored cloth has a fluted, raised brim beneath it, resting on the hair, bands of cream satin; a cluster of black ostrich feathers set on one side, the tips curling over the brim, and the wide strings are of cream satin.

CHILI IS STILL DEFIANT

Mate Riggin Was Killed by a Policeman.

MINISTER EGAN'S RECALL RUMORED

The Anti-American Feeling Is Constant, Increasing at Valparaiso, Yankee Warships Are Being Prepared for Business and the Situation Is Threatening.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—It is said here that Patrick Egan is to be recalled as minister to Chili immediately after the November elections, not on account of the Baltimore episode, but on demand of the Chilian government, according to statements of gentleman in this city who is in constant communication with Valparaiso, Santiago Lima and other South American ports in Chili and Peru. The circumstances as related as follows by the gentleman referred to:

What the Junta Is Angry About.

Immediately upon the accession to power of the Junta de Gobierno, after the down fall of Balmaceda, that body cabled to Senor Pedro Montt in Washington direct ing him to assume charge of the Chilian legation at Washington as soon as the Consgressional party should be recognized by the United States. Neither the state department nor the Chilian legation at Balmaceda at Washington would recognize the cable credentials of Senor Montt but told him that when duly written instructions were received from Chili the legation would receive him from Montt as Chili's representative in the United States. The fact of Montt's appointment was also communicated to Minister Egan in Santiago, with the request that the latter inform the department of state by cable of Montt's action.

It is not known that Egan ever cablec this to Washington, so that Montt had to await the receipt of his formal credentials as minister from Chili upon their arrival by the Colon via Panama a few days ago and lose no time in presenting them to the state department on Wednesday last.

Demanding Egan's Recall.

At the same time that Senor Montt was cabled to regarding his appointment as minister he received instructions through the same channel to demand, in Chili's name, the recall of Minister Egan as a persona non grata to the present Chilian authorities. This request of Chili was also shelved so as to await the arrival of Montt's credentials, and it is believed in Chili as well as in Washington that Egan knew that the Chilian government did not want him, and used the slow process of the mail to inform the state department of Montt's appointment as minister. He acted upon the same authority that Chili has again demanded Egan's recall, and that the state department will reply to the Chilian government after the elections have taken place.

MINISTER EGAN.

The Report at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—It is stated here on good authority that Minister Egan has been recalled by a cable dispatch sent Thursday by Secretary Blaine. This rumor cannot be definitely confirmed officially, but it is said to be correct. The Chilian trouble was the main topic of discussion about the state and navy departments during the day, and the opinion almost generally expressed there was that a demonstration of force will be made at once. A rumor that gained considerable credence was to the effect that instructions had been sent to available vessels to hold themselves in readiness for sailing orders. Naval authorities assert that our naval force is strong enough to impress Chili with a sense of the power that lies in the maintenance of her defiant attitude, this country having the disadvantage, however, of not possessing convenient coaling stations. Very few persons of prominence who were asked for an opinion about the present aspect of affairs would allow their names to be used.

What Senator Edmunds Says.

Senators Edmunds and Cullom were among the exceptions. The former had an interview with Secretary Tracy in the morning. He told a reporter that he was sure this government would be firm and just and would do the right thing in the right way. He said he hoped the Chilians would be reasonable enough and sensible enough to act properly. Senator Cullom said that the situation looked ugly and he would be made public by the state department soon.

Asked to Wait a Reasonable Time.

As nearly as can be ascertained this government proposes to wait a "reasonable time" for Chili to conclude the inquiry which is now said to be under way. This "reasonable time" will not be a question of months but of days. If no report is soon received from the Chilian government and there is reason to believe that it is intentionally delayed, this government will again make a request for an explanation, and if no reply is forthcoming steps may be taken toward a suspension of amicable relations. It is expected, however, that the report will be promptly made. No one in government circles in Washington expects that the Chilians will acknowledge that they are in the wrong. Any amount of testimony will probably be brought to show that the sailors were murdered in a street row, in which both the Chilians and the Americans were equally to blame.

Senor Montt's Advices.

The comparative conciliatory representations of Senor Montt to Secretary Blaine have done much to relieve the situation. Senor Montt is a diplomat. It is not yet finished. The trouble began in Clay street and it became a tumult at about 7 p. m. Regular soldiers, police and the special guard of the tendents restored order. The combatants—thirty Americans and eleven Chilians—were examined before the judicial authorities. They fought with knives, stones and everything they could lay their hands upon. There was one killed on each side. It is said that there were 60 American sailors from the Baltimore on shore at the time of the tumult.

In explanation of the small number of Chilians arrested in comparison with the number of Americans it is stated that the Chilians were at home and able to conceal themselves. The American sailors, on the strangers and in uniform, were easily distinguished and readily captured.

Chili Has Lost Her Head.

SANTIAGO via GALVESTON, Oct. 31.—The Chilian authorities show no disposition to recede from the defiant attitude which they assumed in the answer to the communication from the state department at Washington in regard to the assault on the crew of the Baltimore. Pedro Montt, the representative of the provisional government at Washington, has sent a cable dispatch urging the junta to adopt a conciliatory policy and to move with great caution, but his advice had apparently had no effect.

Up to date there has been no signs of an apology for the assault on the Baltimore's men and no reply has been made to Minister Egan's request for an immediate investigation of the affair. While the American and other foreign residents fully realize the gravity of the situation, the Chilian public appear to have no conception of it.

Riggin Was Killed by a Policeman.

Several foreigners who witnessed the recent fight are ready to testify that Boatswain's Mate Riggin, the one man who was killed outright in the fight, was shot by a policeman.

The funeral of Turnbull, the man who died from wounds received in the attack, was not attended by any of the Chilian officials except an escort of police, who were sent as a perfunctory order. Captain Schley of the Baltimore, applied to the intendente of Valparaiso to protect the men of his ship who were obliged to go ashore. The intendente replied that he was unable to give any advice relative to the Baltimore men coming ashore. He evades the question of protection altogether. Captain Schley does not intend to cease attending to his necessary shore work, even if he has to arm and protect his own men.

Anti-American Feeling Growing.

The anti-American feeling is growing in bitterness, and all the American officials in Chili are apprehensive that further trouble is brewing. Minister Egan, Captain Schley of the Baltimore, and William B. McCreery, United States consul at Valparaiso, were in close consultation throughout the day.

The reply of the Junta, they think, means practically that Chili is indignant at the demands made by the United States government; that she will take her own time to consider the matter, and that when the junta reaches a conclusion that government will settle the matter without reference to the views of the United States on the subject.

The reply of the junta, they further say, fails to express any regret for the murder of a Baltimore's men, nor is there in that document any expression of regret at the conduct of the police in using their bayonets in arresting the Baltimore's men. Seventeen of the latter will be remembered, were more or less severely wounded with bayonet thrusts.

Still Another Outrage.

It has just become known that there is another feature of the Valparaiso outrage which demands explanation. The municipal and government officers of Valparaiso, who made an investigation of the attack upon the sailors of the Baltimore, compelled the United States men-of-war-men who were confined in prison to sign a statement written in Spanish, representing the police from all responsibility as to their arrest.

As the papers had to be signed as one of the stipulations for the release of the blue jackets, the men, naturally, did as they were requested.

Great Activity in our Navy Yards.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 31.—There has not been so much excitement and hustle at the navy yard in years. All of the workmen available are at work, and the preparations of Uncle Sam's war ships for sea is being pushed night and day. Orders were received from Secretary Tracy yesterday that no more subsistence to the Chilian scare. Rear Admiral Gherardi's flagship, the Philadelphia, was ordered to be made ready to sail Tuesday, and work was ordered to be expedited on the Concord and the Bennington.

The Kearsarge's crew, too, were ordered to hurry their preparations for departure.

The marine guards of the receiving ship behind closed doors between Commandant Henry Erben. Rear Admirals Gherardi and Walker and other officers of the various men-of-war which may be made available for prompt action. The changes on the double turreted monitor Miantonomah have been going on for several weeks past are now nearly completed, and the officers at the navy yard say she is one of the most formidable vessels afloat.

At San Francisco it is reported that the Mohican, Mohawk and Comanche are rapidly being put in readiness for service with the Southern Pacific squadron. The Newark is preparing for distant service at the Charleston yard, and the government stations at Boston and Norfolk are said to be unusually busy.

CLOSE OF THE CAMPAIGN

Both Parties Are Claiming to Have Iowa.

CHICAGO LADY VOTERS IN BAD LUCK

The Supreme Court Refuses to Compel Election Officers to Receive Their Votes for the Reason That the Votes Have Never Yet Been Refused.

DES MOINES, Oct. 31.—The political campaign drawing to a close has been hotly contested by both parties. Chairman Mack, of the Republican state committee, says that estimates based on reports from seventy-four counties give Wheeler, Republican, a probable plurality of 12,000. Chairman Fuller, of the Democratic committee, places the probable Democratic plurality at from 11,000 to 13,000, based on reports considered conservative. Boies, the Democratic candidate for governor, 15 is estimated, will run from 4,000 to 6,000 ahead of his ticket.

The People's Party Vote.

The People's or Farmers' Alliance party, it is estimated, will not receive more than 15,000 votes, which will be drawn from the Greenback and Union Labor elements. The Prohibition party has a ticket in the field, but apparently, will not poll a large vote. Most of them, it is predicted, will vote with the Republicans. This vote amounted to 2,000 two years ago, but, it is said, will not exceed 1,000 this year.

Mr. Fassett Attacks Governor Hill.

SCHENECTADY, Oct. 31.—J. Sloat Fassett and John W. Vrooman spoke here. They were given a rousing reception. Mr. Fassett apologized for his hoarseness by saying that he had spoken for two hours in the afternoon "to two acres and a half of Republicans in Herkimer county." Mr. Fassett then spoke at length of Governor Hill's campaign speeches and fiercely assailed many of the latter's utterances. He said: "Governor Hill was here the other evening and talked about Jefferson and Jackson. I don't know what he knows about them, but you can conceive of Jefferson and Jackson indorsing Tammany Hall." Mr. Fassett said that the Democratic convention had been upon the silver question. "Why," said he, "you could not trust silver in a plank in a Tammany convention." He referred to Governor Hill as the "micrescopic statesman," and said that he reminded him of a cake of soap in a tub of water—when you put your hand upon it it isn't there. Next year he declared, if Governor Hill is in exist, ence I shall be glad to talk to him on national issues.

"Time is wasted to talk on national issues in this campaign. They are just as far out of the campaign as Governor Hill is. He is governor, United States senator and leader of Tammany Hall. He is a very fascinating target, and it would be a pleasure to crush some of the peanuts of his political arguments." Nearly all of the address was an attack on Governor Hill's campaign speeches and on Tammany Hall. Mr. Fassett admitted that he made one mistake in the campaign through inadvertency, but in said the governor Hill had made forty and hadn't corrected a single one.

Governor Hill and Tammany Hall.

ALBANY, Oct. 31.—Governor Hill spoke to a big meeting here last night. He said:

Mr. Fassett's whole campaign seemed to be alone of New York, a place he does not live in, and it was certainly irrelevant to the campaign of the state. The statements about New York were false.

The governor alluded to the fact that New York city paid for its own armories, and paid at least a third of all of the state fees. He believed that Tammany Hall needed no defense at his hands. Tammany, instead of being extravagant, had kept up with the march of improvement and had last year reduced the expenses of the city by over $2,000,000. It should be recalled that it was Tammany Hall that at the beginning of the war equipped and sent to the front a regiment of 1,000 men. Did any Republican organization do that?

Governor Hill said that Rochester was a Republican governed city and it was only lately that its city treasurer filled his private pockets from the public purse to the tune of $30,000. That did not happen often in this Democratic state, he added, but it did happen often in Republican Pennsylvania.

Blaine's Best Wishes for Fassett.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Until last night it was hoped that Secretary Blaine would be able to address a Republican meeting in this city on Monday. That hope was dashed by the following letter received at state headquarters last night:

I cannot leave Washington to address a Republican meeting in New York on Monday, the last day of the canvass. Important engagements here forbid. But I trust that my presence is not necessary to show my earnest desire for the election of Fassett and Vroman and my sincere hope that every Republican will report at the polls on Tuesday next. If the general assurings of the voters shall be at all equal to the brilliancy of Mr. Fassett's canvass we may feel the fullest confidence in a Republican victory in New York.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

What T. C. Platt Says.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Ex-Senator Platt said last night of the canvass: "There is not a man at headquarters here who has watched this campaign who is not confident of success. I am confidently expect to see Mr. Fassett elected as I expect to rise on election morning. It is impossible for Flower to get over 52,000 plurality in New York city. He will not receive over 40,000 in Kings, Suffolk will go Republican, and Flower's plurality in Queens and Richmond cannot reach 3,000. We shall come in the Harlem with a plurality which will exceed 80,000."

The Female Vote in Illinois.

OTTAWA, Ills., Oct. 31.—The supreme court has denied the motion of Mary A. Ahrens for leave to file a petition for a writ of mandamus against the election commissioners of Cook county compelling them to instruct the election officials of the various precincts under their jurisdiction to receive the vote and ballot of women in the ground that they were women. The decision handed by the court were that there had been no actual refusal to receive the vote of the relator, therefore the court could not act.

A Big Vote in the Bay State.

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—The redhot campaign in Massachusetts is nearing a close. Forty rallies were held last evening in the state. Both sides are confident. The registration is heavy and indications point to a big vote.

Feeling His Way.

To the average beholder he would readily have been taken for a man of all work, doing odd jobs from door to door, thrifty and respectable, and that's what a Hastings street woman thought he was as he popped in at the back gate and approached her with confidence.

"Good morning, ma'am," he said quietly. "Have you any wood to saw today?"

"No," she replied not unkindly; "it was all sawed yesterday and put away."

"Any coal you want taken in the cellar?"

"No, but we may have some tomorrow."

"You have no grass to cut, I suppose?" he ventured next.

"On, no," she said; "it's too late for that now."

"Are there any ashes or garbage you want carried out?"

"No, we have that done by contract."

"And there's nothing at all about the place you want done?"

"Nothing today," she said sympathetically.

"No work of any kind?"

"Not a lick."

"Then heaven for that ma'am!" he ejaculated fervently; "give me some cold meat and bread and a piece of pie. I'm nearly hungry enough to have worked for it."

The tramp's diplomacy and tact won the battle and he got the grub.—Detroit Free Press.

A CASE OF TOO MANY COOKS.

Secretary Foster's Reason for Not Sending More Experts to Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Acting Secretary Spaulding said that the treasury department had refused at this time to appoint experts to examine the Spring Garden National bank of Philadelphia for the good and sufficient reason that four experts under the Philadelphia committee of fifty were now examining the books, and two sets of experts could not work on the same books at the same time. After these experts have finished their work and made it public if the councils' committee still wants its experts to examine the books and will pay them as the committee of fifty had done no objection will be raised by the treasury department.

Russian Fiends Kill Hebrew Girls.

ODESSA, Oct. 31.—A letter from Starodub brings reliable information of the recent anti-Jewish outbreak. The story is a terrible one. During the attack on the Jews in their homes five young Jewesses were outraged so cruelly by ruffians that they succumbed to their injuries and died. The number of deaths altogether resulting from the fanatical barbarity of an ignorant Russian mob was not less than twenty.

A NEW BICYCLE CHAMPION.

William Martin, the Plucky Lodi Irishman Who Broke the Record.

WILLIAM MARTIN.

William Martin, the plucky young fellow from Detroit, who by riding 1.466 miles in six days, broke all previous records for long-distance bicycle riding, was born in Dublin, Ireland, about twenty-six years ago. He was brought to America while a boy, and his people settled in Detroit, where young Martin learned the cigar making business, which a few years ago, he changed for that of a soldier. He enlisted in the regular army, and undoubtedly the regular life, and the attending hardships of soldiering out West gave him the constitution and wonderful endurance which he displayed in winning the race from some of the best known bicycle racers in the world.

When it is remembered that he was a green hand at bicycle racing, that he has never before taken part in a race that lasted over three or four hours, and above all that he had his leg broken only a few weeks ago, his work is certainly astonishing. He had champions to contend with, men who had been specially trained for the race, and he hadn't trained an hour when the start was given. He beats the best previous record 1961 miles. He will probably receive about $1,200 for doing it, which is at the rate of a little less than $1.00 a mile for every mile traveled.

Mr. Belmont's Future on the Turf.

The statements which have been so freely made that August Belmont intends to force a new race horse on almost as great a scale as his father must be accepted with considerable modification. It is true that the purchases in the name of Mr. E. C. Potter, of New York, were made at the request of members of the family, but Mr. Belmont in an interview recently emphasized the fact that had he or his brothers wished to sustain the prestige of the Nursery Stud, not a single animal would have changed hands—in fact they would never have been offered.

The only reason, he said, why the mares Princess, Susquehanna, Fides, Bella Donna, Lady Margaret, Magnetism, Feu Follet, She, Seniorania and Felicia have been retained in the family is that at some future time either Mr. August, Mr. Perry, or Mr. Oliver Belmont might regret that nothing remained to remind them of the once incomparable stable of their father.

Of the mares mentioned, Mr. August Belmont purchased all but Magnetism and Susquehanna, the former being taken by Perry Belmont, and the latter, with her weanling filly, becoming the property of Oliver Belmont. Besides the remaining mares that August Belmont purchased the Nursery Farm at Babylon, L. I., and the unexpired lease of the farm in Kentucky. But whether he will race the mares' progeny—whether he will sell them or keep them for the stud—is not yet determined.

Furthermore, even if he is represented on the turf it will not be in his father's familiar colors, for the reason that they will be borne by horses racing in the name of his brother, Oliver, and this in spite of the fact that a Mr. Washburn, hailing from Fordham, and represented by the questionably powerful stable racing under the name of the Sand stable, at Gloucester Gutenburg, has had the bad taste to announce his intention of henceforth appropriating the reversed maroon and scarlet. Who Mr. Washburn is, what equine pluns he own, even turf history does not divulge.

Does Not Like America.

Were the celebrated query, "How do you like America?" put to R. L. Curtis, the English champion amateur walker, his response would not be complimentary to the land of the free. As a matter of fact, Curtis is thoroughly disgusted with America, and intends to get back to Merrie England as fast as possible. The story of his coming here has some interesting points. When the Manhattan A. C. picked out Nicoll to go to England with the Cherry Diamond team, Ed Lange was exceedingly wroth. He raised such a howl that the club decided to send him along also, and he crossed the briny for the express purpose of beating Nicoll, a feat he failed to accomplish. Still, Lange was determined to see his long antagonist defeated, and he induced Curtis to come to America, the plan being that the latter was to start in every race in which Nicoll did, to the great humiliation of the latter. Curtis came over full of anticipation of glory on the cinder-path, a lucrative situation, and other desirable things.

Affairs have not turned out so really as he expected. He failed to get any work at bricklaying, which is his trade, his waiting has been a disappointment and the Manhattan A. C. has not manifested any great degree of interest as to whether he remained here or sailed back to England. In this exigency Lange washed his hands of the foreigner, and the funds part of the whole business is that Nicoll, whom Curtis came over specially to beat, is doing the good Samaritan act and lending a helping hand.

English Bicycle Records.

The English wheelmen are still lowering the bicycle records. Lewis Newland of the Bromley Bicycle Club made an onslaught upon all records up to 100 miles at the Herne Hill track on October 12, and succeeded in creating new figures from 64 to 100 miles. Newland was unsuccessful in lowering any records up to the sixty-fourth mile, but after his sixty-third mile rode in remarkable form. His records are as follows:

Miles.	H. M. S.	Miles.	H. M. S.
64	2 41 1-5	82	4 28 50 4-5
65	2 49 3-5	84	4 32 30 3-5

CURLY YOUNG FOLKS

A CHAMPION OF LUNCHEONS.

M. de Lesseps, the Famous Canal Builder, and His Nine Jolly Boys and Girls.

M. de Lesseps is the famous Frenchman who built the famous Suez canal between the Mediterranean sea and the Red sea. This great hundred mile ditch was dug through the closer isthmus that connects Asia and Africa. Before this was done European ships had to sail down all the western coast of Africa, around the Cape of Good Hope and up the east coast through the Indian ocean to reach India and China. Now the Suez canal saves half of this sea voyage, for the European ships can go "cross lots."

THE DE LESSEPS FAMILY.

A few years ago M. de Lesseps tried to build a canal on our American continent, across the Isthmus of Panama, but this time he did not succeed. This famous canal builder is also famous as the father of a large and beautiful flock of children. What jolly times the nine de Lesseps boys and girls must have together—no need to wait for little neighbors to come before the game can begin; no need to go away from home for playmates. M. de Lesseps seems likely, too, to become a children's hero, for he is the champion of luncheons. I am told he has given orders that every one of his nine little men and women shall have luncheons as many and as large as they like.

Ah, what is that? I hear the cake loving girls and the gingerbread hungry boys shouting: "Hurrah for M. de Lesseps!"

Wait a bit—do not be hasty. The de Lesseps luncheons are not cake and gingerbread luncheons. The de Lesseps luncheons are bread and butter luncheons—no cake, no cookies, no pie, no gingerbread.

Ah, I hear the cake and gingerbread children cry, "Oh! oh! oh!"

M. de Lesseps says that any boy or girl hungry enough to eat plain bread and butter needs a luncheon and will not be harmed by it. Perhaps he is right.—Little Men and Women.

Tale Bearing.

It is much easier to start an evil report than to stop it. Even after a rumor has been proved false the harm it has done cannot always be undone. Before repeating a bit of gossip it would be well to ask ourselves three questions. First, "Is it true?" Second, "Is it kind?" Third, "Is it necessary?" This practice would be sure to save us many bitter memories and regrets.

The pious Philip of Neri was once visited by a lady who accused herself of slander. He bade her go to the market, buy a chicken just killed and still covered with feathers, pluck it with a certain distance, plucking the bird as she went.

The woman did as she was directed, and returned anxious to know the meaning of the injunction.

"Retrace your steps," said Philip, "and gather up, one by one, all the feathers you have scattered."

"I cast the feathers carelessly away," said the woman, "and the wind carried them in all directions."

"Well, my child," replied Philip, "so it is with slander; like the feathers which the wind has scattered, they have been wafted in many directions. Call them back now, if you can."

Hints for Amateur Athletes.

Golden Days gives some advice to amateur athletes in which occur the following hints: 'A hundred yard race is an excellent sport, and the distance is quite long enough to test the swiftness of the ordinary boy. It can either be run as a scratch race or a handicap, and the distance must be accurately marked.

"A half mile run or a mile walk is the extreme limit that should be attempted by amateurs. A hurdle race of a hundred yards is also quite long enough and is a pretty sight. The hurdles should be eight feet wide and never more than two feet in height for amateur sports. They should also be fitted with stands to prevent them toppling over, and neatly whitewashed the day before they are required.

"Another interesting race is known as the 'Atlanta,' taking its name from the Hamiltonian legend, and apple or potato should be placed half way on each competitor's course. The object of the winner is to stoop as he passes in his rapid run and bring the apple with him to the winning post. To do this neatly, without losing much speed, requires a nicety of calculation, filled with keen sight and sturdy limbs."

A Rainy Day.

Pitter, patter, moist weather—
Tears and raindrops fall together.
Smiles and sunbeams hidden quite;
Only frowns and clouds in sight.
—St. Nicholas.

Interesting Facts About the Toad.

Boys and girls are not always well informed concerning the usefulness of the toad. If he does not carry a jewel in his head he is quite as valuable as if he did, for he does a work no gardener can do in clearing a garden of its insect pests. Many a gardener builds this little gnome small dwellings of bits of stone in the nooks of his flower beds, and cherishes him as a valuable assistant, destroying larvæ, worms and flies as he does with neatness and dispatch.

A very remote cousin of the garden toad, commonly called the tree toad, explains a writer in the Detroit Free Press, is really a frog. He looks so much like the old bark and lichens on the trees he frequents that it is difficult to discover him. The song with which he helps the cricket break the peace of summer nights is apt to be a true prophecy of rain.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

AFRICAN DWARFS.

A Curious Race That Has Existed in the Atlas Mountains for Thirty Centuries.

At the recent oriental congress a most fascinating subject was dealt with in a paper by Mr. Hallberton. It seems that in the Atlas mountains, only a few hundred miles from the Mediterranean, there is a race of dwarfs under four feet high, who are regarded with such superstitious awe by the Moors that for some thirty centuries their existence was kept a profound secret. Some of them, however, have apparently knocked about the world at odd times as smiths, tinkers, acrobats and practicers of the light gypsy crafts; but they have always avoided towns where Europeans are. They shave their faces; they are not good Mohammedans; some say they are Christians, and some that they worship "Dideo Isiri." It is possible to connect a branch of them with the troglodytes of Herodotous, and to identify another with some dwarfs represented on the monuments of the fourth dynasty of the Pharaohs. Somewhere in the bowels of Mount Atlas they seem to have run a prehistoric mines the Birmingham of the bronze age. There are all kinds of stories about them—to say nothing of the oddest fact of all—that the surrounding peoples decline to repeat the stories. These dwarf races, whether in Central Africa or elsewhere, are no doubt responsible for many of the legends about trolls, which in some form or another are found all over the world.

Bonnet Rouge or Cap of Liberty.

Among the miscellaneous relics and curiosities shown at the royal naval exhibition were examples of the bonnet rouge or cap of liberty put on the mastheads of the FRENCH CAP OF LIBERTY. 1793.

French republican vessels at the end of the last century. The cap is carved in wood, painted red and white, with tricolor cockade in front.

The one chosen for illustration is from the masthead of the French frigate Cleopatre, captured by the English frigate Nymphe, Captain Edward Pellew, afterward Viscount Exmouth, on June 19, 1793.

The First Clock.

The first clock at all answering to the modern notion, in so far, at any rate, that its motive power was due to wheels and weights, or at least one weight, is said to have been made by Gerbert, a Benedictine monk, who afterward became Pope Sylvester III for Magdeburg cathedral. This was in the year 995, but in all probability the clock did nothing more than strike a certain number of times at certain hours, and was not provided with a dial to show the time of day. Nor was it necessary that it should, for the object was to call the brethren to their devotions, and they soon learned to know the hour by the number of strokes struck. Such a clock had no dial or face. During the reign of Edward I the first genuine clock in England was placed in Westminster abbey. It must have been quite a wonder, and it remained alone in its glory for many years. In the Fourteenth century Peter Lightfoot, a monk of Glastonbury abbey, made a clock, which is now preserved in the British museum. No clock in England possessed the faintest claim to accuracy before that of Hampton court was set up in the year 1540.

The Origin of Chess.

The origin of chess is shrouded in mystery. There is but little doubt, however, says The Inter-Ocean, that its birthplace was in India, and that it is an offspring of a game called chaturanga, which is mentioned in oriental literature as in use fully 300 years before the Christian era. From India chess spread into Persia, and thence into Arabia, and ultimately the Arabs took it into Spain and the rest of western Europe. The game was in all probability invented for the purpose of illustrating the art of war. The Arab legend upon this point is that it was devised for the instruction of a young despot by his father, a learned Brahmin, to teach him that a king, notwithstanding his power, was dependent for safety upon his subjects. The Greek historians credit the invention of the game to Palamedes, who they claim devised it to beguile the tedium of the siege of Troy during the Trojan war.

A New Code of Ethics in Dress.

The latest apostle of the beautiful in dress has arisen to promulgate a new code of ethics by which a woman's gowns shall be a chronicle or dress directory of her emotions and conditions. The holy and dignified estate of matrimony shall find expression in a black garment; while love, its precursor, too often only its precursor, is robed in a garment upon which the torch of hymen, from poppies in crimson and gold, is symbolical of love's hypocrisy. Health wears a gown of Nile green with a border of lotus flowers. Life is garbed in white crape with silver antique tracories. Death is glorified in garments wherein the golden light of the sun and the silver sheen of the moonbeams mingle in the mysterious symbol of death.

Queen Victoria's Horses.

The cream colored horses that draw the queen of England's carriage upon state occasions have been kept exclusively for the use of the royal family since the time of George I, because of a curious superstition that from time immemorial been in the especial service of the electors of Hanover. For ordinary use Her Majesty employs four dark gray horses, driven by servants in dark livery, but the cream colored steeds, known as the "sacred Hanoverians," are seldom seen by the public except when they are exercised in the early morning, or when the queen appears at some great public function. Their association she was drawn by such horses as these attached to the "gilded ark" built in 1761. This is seventeen feet long and weighs four tons, says Harper's Bazar.

Sweet Potato Pie.

Mash smooth three boiled sweet potatoes and beat them up light with one whole egg and the yolk of another; a scant cupful of milk, a little salt and nutmeg. Bake in one crust and cover with a meringue made of the white of the egg, beaten up with two spoonfuls of sugar.

This Date in History—Oct. 31.

Nov. 1 being All Saints' Day, the preceding evening is All Hallow eve. About 25 B. C. Marcus Agrippa built a temple to "All the Gods," and in the Seventh century it was purified and dedicated to "All the Saints."

What the Preaching Is For.

There is a story that some children had a discussion concerning the services in one of our fashionable temples. One youngster, who had reached the mature age of seven, said:

"I'd just like to know what preaching is for."

"Oh, don't you know?" inquired his five-year-old sister. "It's to give the singers a rest, of course."—Hebrew Standard.

Proof Positive.

"The teacher wanted to box my ears this morning," remarked Johnny Fizzletop.

"How do you know that he wanted to box your ears?" asked his mother.

"If he hadn't wanted to box my ears he wouldn't have done it, would he, eh?"—Texas Siftings.

FEELING

That there is needed in Plainfield an establishment where garments can be gotten up in an artistic, perfect-fitting manner, at N. Y. prices, I would inform friends and the general public that I have opened one, as below, and will keep for inspection a fine line of sample cloths.
